So don't forget, you lecture-happy followers of the Wildcats, next Thursday is the time to release those inhibitions, and help stir up the appetites of Leonard's Lion Eaters. The parade will start at 7:30.

Labor Relations Club Meeting

Last Tuesday afternoon at 4:00 P. M., in the Commerce and Finance Auditorium, the Industrial Relations Club held its first meeting of the Fall Semester. John L. Wooley, newly-elected president of the club, called the meeting, in order to begin plans for a well rounded schedule of speaker and discussion dates.

The purposes of the organization is to study labor problems in American industry, and to round out the knowledge gained from text books by meeting personally, labor leaders, goverment officials and leaders of management.

Members of the Freshman class and upperclassmen desiring membership in the club attended this meeting.

Wildcats Rally To Defeat Gaels In First Hometown Appearance

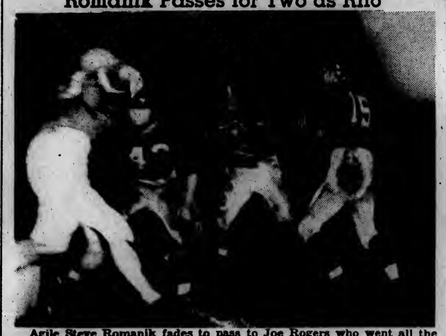
St. Mary's Scoring Result of Fumbles

Romanik Passes for Two as Rilo and Geppi Star Offensively. Gaels Hold Temporary Lead.

By JIM GALLO

Performing before a hometown crowd for the first time this season, Jim Leonard's Wildcats had to come from behind to defeat the Galloping Gaels of St. Mary's College. It was a new experience for this year's Villanova gridders, for in each of their three previous starts, they had succeeded in grabbing an early lead and holding it.

For a while it looked as if it might be the same old story. After an exchange of punts, Steve Romanik put his backfield in high gear for a 75-yard scoring attack. Johnny Geppi started things off by racing 18 yards to the 43. At that point Steve stepped back and pitched one downfield to Joe Rogers, who carried it the rest of the way for the first score. Clavin converted and the 'Cats held that seven point lead until the end of the first quarter.



Johnny Bogan opened the second period by hauling in a Romanik heave on the Gaels' 23. The big St. Mary's line held for three plays but stood helpless on fourth down as Joe Rilo pulled out from right end to score on a perfectly executed end-around play. The deception was perfect and the speedy sophomore end crossed the double stripe untouched. Clavin again came through and the fourteen point lead looked good.

Within five minutes it was an entirely different ball game. The rampaging Wildcats were suddenly besieged with a chronic case of fumblitis. The pigskin popped out of the hands of three different backs, each time inside the Villanova 30-yard line. The Californians were quick to capitalize on every misplay. Atkinson, a lefthanded passer, took a pitch-out from his quarterback, ran wide to his left, and threw to McGeehan for the first of three quick touchdowns. After recovering the second Villanova fumble, the aGels knotted the score as Bare circled left end and Cassara booted his second PAT. St. Mary's moved ahead of the Mainliners on a once-in-a-lifetime pass play. Jarvis aimed a pass at Bare. Tom Clavin was right there to break it up, but the ball bounced into the air, Bell grabbed it and ran for the tie-breaking score. Cassara's placement was wide.

Trailing by one touchdown, the Leosardmen launched an aerial counterattack from their own 21. Two Romanik passes, to Bogan and Rilo, moved the ball across midfield. With the minute hand of the clock making its last swing of the first half, Danny Brown went

Leonard's Lads Face Tulsa Friday Nite At Shibe Park

Hurricanes Up For Wildcat Tussle

Villanova's Wildcats reach the halfway mark in their quest of an undefeated season next Friday night when they square off against the University of Tulsa's Golden Hurricanes. While the Hurricanes have yet to prove they are even a strong wind this season, word from the West has it that Buddy Brothers and his crew are up for this one and are out to make the 'Cats meow.

Let those onlookers who doubt the Oklahomans can even make a game of it be reminded that mapy a better team than Villanova has been upset by teams with poorer records than Tulsa. The soothsayer warns "beware the eve eve of the ides of October."

When the Crimson and Gold faces the Blue and White under the arcs of Shibe Park they will be seeking their second win in five starts, having defeated McMurray State 27-26 in their season opener.

First Meeting

It will be the first meeting between the two teams which now must become rivals. The Tulsans will go into Friday evening's contest with one though in mind, that if they beat the Wildcats the season can be considered a success no matter what they do in the rest of their contests.

Last year's record was Tulsa's poorest since 1917 despite the fact that Coach Brothers' boys plied up one of the finest offensive records in Hurricane history. And everyone seems more optimistic in 1949. For one thing, Coach Brothers has five new coaches which leads most observers to believe that the Hurricane of '49 will be one of the best-coached teams in the country.

The representatives of the Missouri Valley Conference can field an all-veteran two-deep lineup augmented by several star spangled sophomores.

Four of these sophs, graduates of a team that crushed yearling crews of Oklahoma and Oklahoma A. & M. last year are expected to gain first-string posts before the season is over.

Seasoned Lineup

Tulsa's strongest positions appear to be center, end and halfback. The fullest post is in the doubtful category with Herb Roberts, 1947 letterman, Joe McGraw, two-year letterman, Jack Egan and Sophomore Bill Lewis battling for top honors.

Tulsa's greatest depth is probably at the halfback posts, where the two Whitman brothers and "Dub" Graves will be vieing for the regular berths. In addition, Coach Brothers can call on two promising sophomore boys, Bob Stringer and J. C. Roberts, as well as letterman Denver Grigsby and Sophomore Junior Baber. S. J. Whitman, as a sophomore, was Tulsa's leading ground gainer in '48 and played 345 minutes in 10 games.

At the ends, Eulsa has four returning lettermen. Fred Smith and Kenny Click will make a strong bid for regular jobs followed closely by Ray Tallent, Bill Holbrook, Forrest McLane and five sophomores. The tackle positions find five lettermen checking out uniforms. Russell Frizzell, 230-pound senior, capable of playing outstanding football, may provide the answer to Tulsa's tackle strength with his play in '49.

Tulsa's center position seems well protected. Senior, Billy Joe Cagle, is back aided by Jim Grahm, outstanding line-backer. Flanking the pivotman are two able lettermen, Arnold Burroughs and Roger Lehew.

Ross Makes Norwegian Tour On U. S. All Star Track Team

Wildcat Cinder Ace Competes in Summer International Games Between Teams From U. S. A. and Scandanavia.

By BILL COONEY

Long ago in the dim and misty past known as last summer, when most Villanovans were spread far and wide doing whatever Villanovans do in that happy time, one of their number was carrying the fame of the Blue and White to other lands. We refer, of course, to Browning Ross, who spent the summer touring Norway with the United States track and field team.

This trip came about as the result of Brownie's achievements in the NCAA and NAAU Championships early in June. At the NCAA games the speedy Wildcat was fourth in the mile. His time, however, was the best he has done yet for that distance outdoors, a fast 4:14.1. A week later he took third in the 3000 meter steeplechase in the NAAU championships. By virtue of this performance he was selected to run on the American team in a dual meet against a Scandanavian team composed of men from Finland, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, and Iceland. Running the steeplechase with him were Forest Efaw and Curt Stone, the ex-Penn State star. It was in this same distance that Ross represented the Uned States at the Olympic games las year.

Results Very Close

The squad flew across and Brownie's plane, at least, gave a good omen of things to come, for it set a new record for the New York to Oslo hop. The contests were held at Oslo, and the Statesiders needed all the omens in the book, because only on the third and last day did they pull it out of the fire to win by a scant six points.

After the meet the team was broken into small groups. These groups then went on tours of the various countries under the sponsorship of the national federations of athletic clubs within those countries. The whole idea was to give athletes in those lands an opportunity to meet foreign competition and promoe internaional good will at the same time. It was also a special treat for Scandanavian sports fans, for track over there is more popular than baseball is on this side of the big posd.

Brownie teamed up with Frank Fox, Seton Hall's great middle distance star, and Bob Mathias, the young decathoion champ and sensation of the Olympics. They were later joined by sprinter Chuck Peters of Indiana, Mal Whitfield, of Ohio State, and Yale's Whale Vic Frank.

The boys followed a very tight schedule on the route. Traveling by car, train, bus and even sometimes by boat they covered Norway from Oslo in the south to Trondheim which is almost at the Arctic Circle. Ross alone ran 23 races in 16 days.

Ross Loper Alle Distanser

The above sentence reads, as all good Norwegian students know, Ross runs all the distances. This was the comment of one amazed sports scribe in Bergen, who could not get over the fact that our Brownie competed in all events from the 200 metre dash to the 5000 metre grind. In the lands where runners specialize in only one type of event, that poor writer was just baffled. Ross did very well on his mixed athletic diet it sems, for here are some of his times converted to the English system: mile, 4:16.2; two miles, 9:22.4, and the half, 1:55.8. The performance that impressed the newsman most, however, was the night Brownie won the 3000m, the 800m, and then took second to Peters in the 200m.

One feature of European racing which Brownie liked very much was the fact that they run their meets early in the evening. The coolness of the hour and the absence of a breeze make it the best time of the day to compete. In Trondheim, though, the coolness was a bit overdone, as the boys were forced to wear gloves while running; although it was in the middle of July. Nothing kept the

THREE SITES NOW AVAILABLE FOR TAG FOOTBALL CONTESTS

By BILL KLUCSARITS

Spiraling passes and booming punts fill the autumn air, as football reigns supreme in the intramural sports parade. At a meeting held yesterday in Alumni gym, most of the halls agreed to put up teams inthe proposed afternoon league. The schedule will have to be issued on a week to week basis to the team captains because of weather and class difficulties.

Fields for league play have been set up on Austin Field, Mendel Field and the Doms Field. The latter is located between Simpson and Fedigan Halls. Because of the size of the first two fields more than one gridiron will be laid out in these areas. Games inthe interhall league will have first choice inthe use of the fields. Independent games and intra-hall games may be played at any time as long as they do not interfere with the league schedule. If enough games can be played, to determine standings, a playoff will be held in November.

Basketball Preview

If all goes well, the basketball league will get under way a week from tonight for the resident loop. From this corner it looks as if Alumni Hall must again be installed as the pre-season favorite, with Barracks 1 and 4 providing the chief threat. Austin, which gave Alumnithe chief competiiton last season has been crippled by transfer losses. Big John Farley, all-star center, has moved to Alumni to team up with Buckley, Barry, Diot and Celz. Buckley has won the Most Valuable Player award for the last two seasons.

The Barracks team retains their three "Tom-boys",—Flynn, Falkowski and Madonia and have been strengthened by a few transfers from other halls. Austin has been hardest hit. In addition to Farley, they lost Capt. Joe Doris, who moved off campus and Joey Crossin, who transferredto Fedigan. Both of these men were starters. To add to Father Kemme's woes the status of Bill Lemmer, All-Star forward and league-leading scorer last season, is indoubt until the end of the 150-lb. season. The other teams in the loop will be reviewed in this space next week.

Gael Game Good and Bad for 'Cats.

Intramural Committee Needs New Man

By HARRY RANGE
Sports Editor

Our column of this week will be written with mixed feelings concerning the St. Mary's game. That is to say, we feel both very good and very bad about Friday nite's tussle under the Shibe Park arcs.

First, the bad part. By a series of fumbles and capitalization of breaks on the part of the Gaels, what should have been a Wildcat win by four touchdowns was turned into a close game. It was really an unfortunate thing that this should have happened in the homecoming game since there were many at Shibe Park who had heard of the sensational play of the Mainliners on the road and had expected a better showing. It was a tough break, but enough crying.

After the game we were talking to some of the players and it was the general consensus that this was the bad game that the team had to get out of its system. It was termed by one as he "hump" at the middle of the season.

With a four and "oh" record under their belts, everyone knows that this Wildcat club is tops in these parts, and certainly the greatest that Villanova has ever seen. Coach Leonard's boys have the goods and with the "bad" game out of the way we can see this 1949 season being the finest in the history of the Main Liners.

From the way the last four paragraphs have sounded you'd think we were writing an obituary instead of a column about a club that had just won its fourth straight. There was some great football played by Villanova players although much of it was overshadowed.

On the ground the Cats gained 182 yards while aerials netted 199. These totals brought the season's offensive record up to 1491 yards, an average of better than 375 yards per game.

Steve Romanik's passes were perfect when he had the necessary blocking and Joe Rogers' and Joe Rilo's TD catches were great. We also got a big charge from the end-around play from Romanik to Rilo which scord the second touchdown.

It was also good to see Pete D'Alonzo plowing through the Gaels for much yardage.

Thinking ahead to next year we noticed how many Sophs and Juniors were in regularly and were playing a bang-up game. Such boys as Franny Dunn, Nick Liotta, Johnny Geppi, Mickey Frinzi, Pete D'Alonzo and Joe Rilo.

As we told you last week the band had a great routine planned for half-time as was proven by the applause of the crowd. Even the referee was fooled by the injured drummer.

In the first issue of the VILLANOVAN a request was made for a freshman member of the Intramural committee. As fet there has been no satisfactorf response from the Frosh and the committee has asked us to make another call.

The Intramural Committee, composed of Father Dunne, Bill Kluczsarits, and the Mondscheins, has done a bang-up job for the past two years and we would like to thank them now for ourselves as well as the whole school. At times it appears to be a thankless job but if it weren't for them there would be no Intramurals at Villanova. Everyone sincerely appreciates the committee's work and offers best wishes for another successful year.

Track fans will want to be sure not to miss Bill Cooney's fine account of Browning Ross' Scandinavian tour. The full story can be found in this very same edition. You can get the straight word on a great athlete who has carried the Wildcat colors from South Jersey to the Arctic Circle.

St. Mary's

into the game for the first time. Evidently, St. Mary's scouts had seen Dan snag passes, because he had three-man coverage as he started downfield and hocked short. Meanwhile, the fleet-footed Rilo outraced the safety man and took Romanik's pass on the run to tie the score. It was an excellent example of decoy, and a beautiful play. Clavin's third conversion gave the 'Cats a halftime lead.

The second half was characterized by tight defensive play. Tom Clavin's linebacking can only be described as great, Pavalko, Lanigan, Liotta, and Marallo alternated at the guard slots and held the center of the line against the Gaels' thrusts. The throwing arm of Jarvis was a constant threat to a one-point lead, and Schmid, Dunn, and Frinzi was kept busy batting down the California quarterback's many last half aerials.

It was not until the closing minutes of the game that either team was able to strike pay-dirt. Geppi went over on a fast 33-yard dash to wrap it up for the Wildcats' fourth straight of the cecurrent campaign. Clavin had a perfect night with four-for-four.

The 'Cats' performance was definitely not up to the standards set in the first three games. Yet there were many bright spots worthy of note. Geppi continued to rip off large chunks of yardage on his lightning-like thrusts. Romanik is still hitting receivers with deadly accruacy and the Villanova passing attack will be an ever-present threat in every ball game. The work of Rilo, Dunn, Kerwin, Liotta, Simeone, and Marallo showed plenty of sophomore strength.

TANKMEN AWARDED MEDALS IN FIRST MEETING OF YEAR

Last Thursday afternoon a meeting of the Intramural Swimming Club was held for the purpose of enrolling new members, and to explain to them the activities of the club, and to award medals to those who won them last year. Officers were elected, as were captains, and organizers for the various halls appointed.

Many Freshmen turned out as Ed Connolly explained the various activities such as water polo games, and swimming meets between the resident halls and Day-Hops. He also expressed his desire to see the club blossom out and become an intercollegiate organization. Added to the scope this year are classes in water safety and life-saving in association with the American Red Cross.

The following were awarded medals for their respective victories: Ed Connolly, Joe O'Brien, Gene Egan, Joe Gallen, Jake Moran, Jerry Stabile, Ed Zerbe, Dick Spence, Joe Mullin, Roger Hanagn, Charlie Snow, George Thompson, Al Gorbea, Bill Rath and Dick Ferry.

Ed Connolly was unanimously elected President, Joe O'Brien, Vice-President, Dick Spence, Secretary, and Jake Moran, Treasurer. An account of last year's spendings was reported to the gathering by Joe O'Brien, and an organizer was appointed to the various halls. These men are not the captains, who will be elected by the different teams before the initial meet.

Phi Kappa Pi To Hold Meeting

Phi Kappa Pi, the engineering fraternity, will hold its first meeting of the year this Thursday afternoon 5:00 P. M. in 215 Mendel Hall it was announced by President Michael J. Nowlan. All upperclassmen who are interested in joining the fraternity may join at this time with initiations to follow in January.

Immediate plans for the Owl Hop, Dinner Dance Initiations, and smoker will be discussed. This will be the first year since pre-war days that the Owl Hop will be held although it was a traditional dance at one time. Tentatively it is known that the Hop will be held in February.

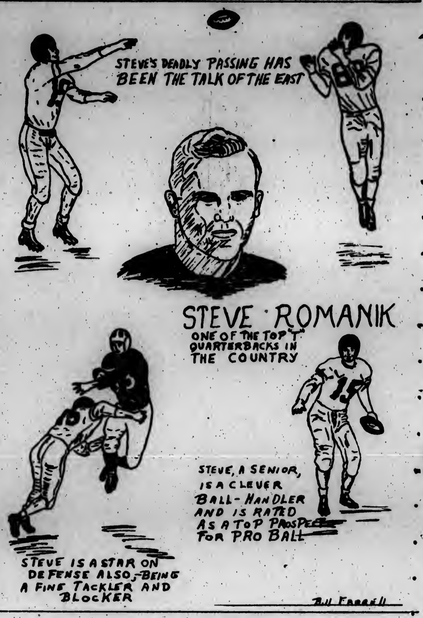
Cats Should Be In Shape

Barring any injuries during scrimmage this week, the 'Cats hope ta field a complete squad for Friday's fray. Last week Jim Caufield, defensive star of the Penn State game, was sidelined for the full sixty minutes due to injuries, while Dan Brown and Ralph Pasquariello were only in for one or two minutes for the same reason.



Jack Moran was hit hard in the left leg in the opening minutes of the second half of the St. Mary's game and was out of action for the rest of the contest. But the injury was not too serious and Jack is expected to be back at defensive half against the Golden Hurricanes.

Ross Makes Tour

These touring groups received many excellent prizes. Ross himself received everything from silverware to ski boots. One of the odder gifts bestowed on him was a whale's tooth given him by the Sandfjord club. Sandfjord is noted for its great whaling industry, so it was quite appropriate. Banquets were also held after every meet which were very fine, but the lats hours the Americans kept led them sometimes to wish that the Norwegians were not the hospitable people that they are.

As The Staff Picks 'Em

Last week, the Villanovan inaugurated a feature in which the sports writers try to pick the winners of the next weekend's games. For a first attempt, the scribes did pretty well for themselves guessing right on 122 out of 180 picks for a percentage of .678. The individual winner turned out to be Ray Keats who picked 15 out of the 20 games correctly.

Of the 20 games played, only three fooled everybody. They were the San Francisco-Detroit fracas, the North Carolina State-Davidson game, and the contest between Georgetown and Wake Forest. Two writers picked the Army-Michigan upset correctly, while three forecast that Penn State would trounce Boston College.

Ray Keats turned out to be the best score picker, selecting the exact score of two games. They were: Oregon 21—Washington State 0, and Heidelberg 40—Capital 0. Keats modestly claims he was just lucky on these two.

Since last Saturday was a day of upsets, our writers look forward to their picks for next weekend with more confidence and hope to improve their percentage.

Soph Cotillion

Bob Quinn was made general Chairman of the affair.

As a result of the meetings of the committees, Quinn was able to announce that ticket sales will begin this week. Since the number is limited to 600 by school regulations, an advance sale will be held for Sophomores only. Boosters for the program are also being solicited, and Quinn urged that all members of the Class support this sale. As mentioned above, the exact theme has not yet been disclosed, but the Chairman would say that the preparations indicate a good show, and he hinted that a choice of one of the young ladies as "Miss Soph Cotillion" might be made a part of the entertainment program.

Count Villan III Dead

During the past summer, the heat apparently became too much for the mascot, Count Villan III. He passed away in the quiet of the summer unlike his predecessors who died in the heat of rallies or games.

During the summer session of 1947, Gunter P. Kaiser, Class of '49, decided that Villanova ought to have a live mascot. With this thought in mind he approached Rev. E. B. McKee, O.S.A., Vice-President of the college. Upon approval, Kaiser contacted the Florida State Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission; after several exchanges of letters the wildcat was accepted, under the terms of the Commission as set forth by Commissioner Ben C. Morgan, namely that the cat be known as a Florida wildcat.

When he arrived, he was promptly housed in a 5' x 5' travelling cage, and, with the help of the Engineering department's dolly was a guest at the various games for two seasons. The Count was spirited away by Georgetown students two years ago and held captive for two weeks, and was later returned at the Villanova-Georgetown football game.

His lordship had been 26 pounds of tough, hard fight.

The Library Corner

The big time best-seller lists are being led by Catholic books which can be divided into two classes. There is the class represented by THE SEVEN STOREY MOUNTAIN and PEACE OF SOUL. The other group contains THE GREATEST STORY EVER TOLD and YOU CAN CHANGE THE WORLD.

The first group stress without qualification that the super-natural is required if we are to right the mess we are in. The books in the second group are inspirational in nature.

THE SEVEN STOREY MOUNTAIN, by Thomas Merton, has been on the best-seller list for nine months. Fulton Sheen's book PEACE OF SOUL has been on the best-seller list for five months. THE GREATEST STORY EVER TOLD, by Fulton Oursler, has also enjoyed wide popularity and has been on the best-seller list for over six months.

The above mentioned books are also the most popular at Villanova. At present, a student desiring one of these books must wait at least two months because the reserve list is quite long.

Four new books that are already in great demand are THE WATERS OF SILOE, by Thomas Merton, CALL IT TREASON, by George Howe, BURNT OUT INCENSE, by Rev. M. Raymond and THE GOLDEN WARRIOR, by Hope Muntz. Students interested in reading any of these books are urged to come to the library and fill out reserve slips; they will be notified when the books are available.

Review Excerpts

Merton, Thomas The Waters of Siloe

The meaning and purpose of life in a Cistercian monastery, and a history of the Order throughout the world, with particular reference to its growth in the United States.

Raymond, M. Rev Burnt Out Incense

An historical novel, delineating the establishment of the Cistercians at Gethsemani, Kentucky, in 1848, to modern times. Father Raymond has written this account for those who cannot see with Merton's perception, for those who wonder what draws so many men—lawyers and farmers, doctors and carpenters, ex GI's and poets—to join this order of silent Contemplatives whose members offer themselves as incense to be burnt out in the service of God.

Howe, George Call It Treason

Winner of the Christopher Award. This is a fast-paced novel of the cloak-and-dagger variety, with moral significance. Based on an authentic episode of World War II, it contains the activities of G-2 during the invasion of Europe.

Muntz, Hope The Golden Warrior

Historical novel about the Norman conquest of Britain and the events which led up to it. The characters are heroic animated by simple but intense passions; and they are seen in a multitude of episodes

WVIL Schedules Broadcast Year

WVIL, the campus radio station went on the air yesterday, beginning its third year of continuous student staff and controlled production. As was promised by Production Manager Keenley and Program Manager Breninghouse, broadcasts began on time and proceeded through the evening quite satisfactorily.

A meeting was held last Thursday evening at which the respective managers told their staffs just what they have prepared for this year. However, this was not released to the press, except that broadcasting hours may be added and that the station plans to offer to the college students better programs and more systematized production of these.

Campus listeners are urged to tell members of the station exactly what they want to hear. This information will greatly influence a certain number of the programs.

Fr. Carney Voted Legion Chaplain

Rev. Edward J. Carney, O.S.A., former teacher at Villanova, and former fleet chaplain for all mine craft of the Pacific Fleet, was unanimously elected National Chaplain of the American Legion at the national convention the past summer.

Father Carney was born in Everett, Mass., and was educated in public schools there. He was ordained in Washington, taught at Villanova, and coached ice hockey here. After working in Chicago's Southside during prohibition, he was assigned to the Augustinian Mission Band. He applied for a naval chaplaincy in 1939 and again the day after Pearl Harbor. When accepted he served with the Navy Air Corps on the West Coast and then aboard the minelayer USS Terror as first chaplain.

Father Carney is now assigned at St. Mary's Church, Lawrence, Mass., and is chaplain of Lawrence Post 15 and Voiture 533 of 40 and 8. He is past department chaplain of Massachusetts and chairman of hospitalization, and is also the author of American Legion hospital program directives.

Anchors Aweigh

Roads, Va. On arrival, the midshipmen were marched to their berthing spaces, aboard ship and were given information relevant to the cruise. Early on the following Monday, the cruise ships left Hampton Roads.

Actually, the ships formed Task Force 61, which consisted of the USS Missouri (BB62), Destroyer Division 81, and Minesweeper Division 2. The midshipmen were split evenly among the ships of the formation. As it worked out, the seniors had a higher percentage aboard the smaller ships. This, of course, enabled them to assume more responsibility than would be possible onthe larger ships. Accompanying the NROTC men from colleges all over the country were the regular midshipmen from the U. S. Naval Academy. This fact proved to lessen the alien feeling between the Regulars and Reserves.

By the time two or three days had passed by, the greenest of the Sophomores, and 3rd Classmen began to feel quite at home and consider themselves a part of this Task Force steaming its way across the Atlantic. The boys were blessed with calm weather, and as far as the reports are concerned, only a few aboard the DD's and DM's detected a faint giddiness about the abdominal regions.

The first port on the itinerary was Portsmouth, England. The force made England on Friday, 17 June, after eleven days at sea, and liberty began for the off-duty sections almost immediately. Portsmouth seems to have been quite the liberty town. The middies were invited to a luncheon given in their honor by the Lord Mayor. The place was literally opened up for our boys. Parties were given and many activities were featured for the eight-days stay in the port. One midshipman claims that the English are the heaviest drinkers he has ever seen. Many of the boys enjoyed the enviornment, but, alas, they had to leave before that custom had time to make its permanent effect upon them.

And so, as they say in the travel talks, as the middies leave they can still see the docks of old Portsmouth spreading themselves out into the harbor, and hear the faint cries of "Bon Voyage" from the throats of the natives. Probably closer to reality they can hear the grinding of ood and sand and backbone more clearly as the stone sweeps a rythmic pattern across a very large oaken deck. But then, thinks he, in a few days, Cuba, and the work is a pleasure.

"Church And State" Series For Villanova Forum's Year

Renowned Jesuit First of Four Lecturers

The "Villanova Forum," inaugurated last year and sponsored by the faculty and student body of Villanova College, will commence its second consecutive year meet Tuesday evening, October 25th, at 8:30 P. M. in the Commerce and Finance Auditorium. Reverend John Courtney Burray, S. J., Professor of Theology at Woodstock College, Woodstock, Maryland, will be the inaugural speaker of this series.

The "Villanova Forum" is quite fortunate in receiving an acceptance from Father Murray, considered one of the leading theologians in American today. He has devoted his time especially to the question of Church and State, the general theme of the series this year and a very timely subject. Father is regarded as one of the outstanding authorities in this field the world over.

Undoubtedly one of the leading thinkers in the Catholic Church in America today, Father Murray has written much in this field. He contributes to several Catholic publications in this country, including "America," "Theological Studies," "Thought," and others.

Father Murray is the author of the book "A College Course in Theology." He is also the editor of "Theological Studies."

Ordained at Woodstock June 25, 1933, he received his S. T. L. de-

WVIL Planning New Format

WVIL, the campus radio station is inaugurating a complete new variety of programs. Among the events will be a series of dramas, disc-jockeys shows in both English and Spanish, quiz programs, and live musicals which will feature campus talent from Rosemont and Villanova. "The Voice Of Villanova" is also trying to obtain permission to broadcast the forthcoming Villanova Forums.

In the past week, auditions were held for announcers and radio technicians, at which some thirty odd students made application and tried out. Classes are now being conducted for the purpose of instructing students in the fields of radio announcing and engineering.

WVIL is now in the process of having its face lifted. New carpets, repainting, and redecoration is now in the process of being completed. The station has come a long way from the linen closet in which it was originated, to the modern and comfortable studios which it has today.

A new antenna is being strung which will greatly improve reception and signal strength throughout the campus. As soon as all redecoration and improvements are completed, WVIL will again begin operations and provide listening pleasure to the students on the campus.

And After England

Holy-stoning is a tradition in the Navy. This is one way to polish a wooden deck though not always the easiest as the men in the picture above found out.

Editor's Note

This article is the second of a series of four that will cover the training period that the Midshipmen of the Villanova NROTC Unit attended this summer.

By J. A. ROWE

After an easy week in England, the middies were eager to get under way again and head for new scenes. They soon found out that Navy life isn't all liberty, however, for there began immediately all the chores so familiar to the navy man and so necessary for the operation of a naval unit. We have mentioned that ill-famed instrument, the holy-stone. Next in line come the pain chipper, the "bucket 'n swab", the paint brush, sandpaper, brass polish, and innumerable other sundries with which the struggling midshipman quickly becomes acquainted. These are necessary evils, and though on field days the griping is vehement, all turn to with a will to make the ship, their ship, a gleaming thing.

The midshipman is not kept at such task during the greater part of his training. The program provides tours of duty aboard ship which change every watch day. Such a procedure gives him a well-rounded first-hand experience in the handling of a warship. Watches are stood in every department, middies are a second watch, so to speak. The rotation method of watch standing enables each man to get a little about every post aboard. Standing watches is interesting, there is no doubt of that. However, . . . there is one, the mid-watch, which is a little distasteful to most. The mid-watch is one tradition which the Navy, of necessity, and much to the dismay of the middies, cannot eliminate. Probably the most frustrating watch is the Gold Iron Patrol, four hours of observing dials and gauges that never change. On the other hand, the Bridge, and C. I. C. watches are the most interesting of all.

SENIORS PROPOSE CHANGE IN TIME OF DINNER DANCE

Last Tuesday evening the Senior class held its first important meeting of the year with Mike Marshall presiding. The reason for the meeting was to begin plans for the important weekend in January at which time the Belle Air Ball and the Senior Dinner Dance will be held. Also on the agenda was the nomination of candidates for the position of Commerce and Finance Student Council representative.

Although not many more than fifty men attended the meeting the nominations were made and sent to the administration for approval. Since some radical changes were proposed for the Senior weekend in January, it was decided to hold another meeting at a later date at which time a more representative group would be available for a vote.

Purpose Change

The proposed change concerns the Dinner Dance to be held on the Saturday evening after the formal Belle Air Ball. Previously the Dinner Dance has been formal but now it is desired to move the time of the affair up to 5:00 or 6:00 P. M. and make it informal in order that those who wish to attend the Villanova-Valparaiso basketball game at the Palestra may do so. The other alternative is to hold the Dinner Dance as usual, that is, formal and from 8:00 P. M. till midnight. At the next meeting the class will be asked to choose between the alternatives so Seniors are asked to consider the question beforehand so that a discussion session can be held.

Sunday Record Hop Is Success

Sunday afternoon saw the first record hop of the year with attendance well over 350 held at the Field House. Girls from the various girls colleges in the vicinity were invited to attend while the boys came stag for a half dollar.

The dance was originally scheduled for two Sunday's ago but a lawn party at Chestnut Hill College conflicted with this date. The good attendance was very encouraging and it is hoped that more of the popular dances will be held. The dancing began at 3:00 P. M. and continued till 5:30.

The series of Sunday dances is sponsored through the Dean of Student Activities office and the proceeds will go into a fund which will gbe available to organizations which have no source of income of their own.

Hear Typography, Printing Lecture

Last evening members of the staffs of the various campus publications heard Mr. Charles B. Shaw give a talk on "Printer's Pleasantires". Mr. Shaw, who has travelled extensively and is a well-known authority in the printing field, spoke of printing techniques and typography. The lecture which was given in an informal, pleasant style was illustrated.

Those present found the talk both informative and entertaining and Mr. Shaw welcomed all questions at the end of his regular lecture.

Sophomore Cotillion Set For Friday Night

Informal Dance to Begin at 9:00 P. M.

A capacity crowd is expected at the Field House this Friday evening to dance to the music of the Villanovans during the Sophomore Cotillion, announced Bob Quinn, Chairman of the dance. In a statement to this paper he said that this year's Cotillion will be one of the biggest, and surely the most successful events of this year's social calendar.

Tickets are being sold fast, and Quinn urged that all who are going to the dance obtain their bid as soon as possible. Since the number of tickets that may be sold is limited, he expected that most of them would be sold well in advance and that few would be held for sale at the door.

Theme Secret

As yet the actual theme of the affair has not been made known. Bill Shilling and his workers have been busy all week, and if the work they are expending in beautifying the Field House is any criterion, the decorations alone should be enough to make the dance a success.

The other committees have been working also, as may be noted in the posters going up around the campus, the program boosters being solicited, and the tickets being sold.

Quinn also announced that there will be a short entertainment during the intermission. The program is in charge of chairmen Jack Kelly and Tom Pasha who have lined up members of the Soph Class to put on the show.

Tickets at $2.40 per couple, may be obtained from members of the ticket and arrangements committees.

Accountants Pick Election Slate

Last Thursday afternoon the Accounting Honor Society held an important meeting for the purpose of nominating candidates for election to the various offices. Since the last president elected graduated in June, moderator of the society Mr. Joseph Linsalata brought the meeting to order.

After talks by both Mr. Linsalata and Mr. Leo Schaefer concerning the importance of the organization to the Villanova accounting majors, nominations were held. Voting will take place tomorrow either in the accounting classes or accounting offices, the exact time and place to be posted.

The Accounting Honor Society is a representative group of Accounting majors in the Commerce and Finance School who meet in order that they may supplement class work with discussion and lecture by men prominent in the field today. One of the strongest chapters in the area, the Society is under the guidance of the Pennsylvania Chapter of the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants since the promulgation

VA DIRECTORS TO EASE RESTRICTIONS

Effective November 1, veteran students will be able to study for advanced degrees or change course and institution within certain limitations, and still obtain benefits under the G. I. Bill.

The modification is contained in Instruction 1-B, passed recently to replace the much-disputed Instruction 1-A, which has been cancelled.

According to Carl R. Gray, Jr., Adminstrator of Veterans Affairs, the new instruction "is more generous to veterans that was 1-A; yet it carries out the restrictions enacted by Congress in Public Law 266."

Instruction 1-B provides that, beginning November 1, a veteran who is otherwise eligible and whose conduct and progress has been satisfactory will be permitted to secure additional education or training or change his course, so long as the new course is "commonly recognized as being in the same general field as his original educational or job objective or a normally related progressive objective."

In other words, a veteran pursuing a science course may progressively follow his course to his B. B. degree, then M. S., and on to D. S., insofar as his entitlement permits."

If a veteran wants to take courses in a different general field, the new instruction "requires that he undergo advisement and guidance to determine his aptitude for, and the need of, such a course to complete his educational or job objective."

The rescinded Instruction 1-A

Italian Seminar Is Initiated

An Italian Seminar was formed last Tuesday under the capable direction of Reverend Mariano Milanese, O.S.A., eminent scholar, author and speaker. The group plans to meet once a week, Tuesday evening, at 7:30 in Room 213 Mendel Hall. Any student with a brief familiarity of the Italian language is invited to join. There is no fee or college credit involved.

The first few lectures shall deal with a broad aspect of the Italian language and its evolution. It is planned to incorporate fundamentals of grammar and develop a conversational seminar in the ensuing lectures. Such subjects as Art, Dramatics, Literature, and Italian Music shall be included in the series of lectures when the group has attained a working knowledge of the language.

Correction

Due to a typographical error in last week's edition of this paper there was a mistake in the listing of the new members of the faculty. Our apologies are extended to the men whom this mistake affected. The list should have read:

Donaghue, Louis A., M. A., Instructor, English;

Donohue, Francis J., Ph. D., Professor of Education.

Emeric Mihalik, B. S., should also have been listed in the story as a Biology Lab Assistant.

NFCCS

WE HAVE RECEIVED a report from the NFCCS as to just what happened to funds raised by the organization for student relief. Several officers of the NFCCS travelled through Europe last summer and were the guest of the students at the various schools which received aid.

The aid given to the foreign students has meant more to them than we can ever hope to imagine. Many would never have been able to carry on their education without the help supplied by American Catholic students who poured an amazing total of 350,000 dollars into the student relief fund; the largest amount ever raised by any comparative organization. This money bought books, supplies and many other items which we take for granted but would be almost impossible to do without.

The NFCCS officers who travelled in Europe found students working under conditions which ranged from inadequate housing to starvation diets. The NFCCS had earned a place of intense appreciation in the hearts of these students, but it was more than appreciation. The NFCCS has become a powerful force in all parts of Europe as a student organization, and it attained this position through the efforts of the American chapters. The foreign students realize they have our support both physically and spiritually.

The spiritual support is important to the Europeans with the atheistic influence that permeates the educational centers striving to gain more of the intellectual element in its fold. The college graduate in Europe is looked to as a leader among his people. These leaders must be Christian or the battle for Europe will be lost by the West.

The NFCCS has also been hailed by the Holy Father, Pope Pius XII as one of the most salutary organizations in the world today. In the near future we will outline a plan which has been sanctioned by the Holy Father in conjunction with the Holy Year exercises.

SENIORS

We see that the Senior Class has come up with a novel twist for the traditional Senior weekend which is held every January and includes the Belle Air Ball on the Friday evening and the Dinner Dance the succeeding evening. The move involves making the Dinner Dance informal and moving the time up to 6:00 P. M. in order that the Seniors could attend the Villanova-Valparaiso basketball game at the Palestra that same evening.

We think the plan has great merit when we consider that the varsity includes nine seniors, and, of course, it is expected they will be enjoying their greatest season. The team will be in the national picture every week and every game will be important. The girls from home will be able to say they saw the great Villanova basketball team in action even if they don't really enjoy basketball.

By JAMES GRIFFIN

How often do you think about loving God? Hold it! Before you switch to "Who Dealt?" or the editorials, we're not on the point of starting a lecture on love of God and the good habits it develops, i. e. we're not trying to sell you on extra chapel duty or morning Mass or anything nearly so difficult—at least not openly. Maybe next week if we're hard up for a column, but not now.

Thoughtless

The problem is that too many of us really do love God, but lose a good portion of the benefit we should be getting from that love for the simple reason that we don't bother to think about it very often. Maybe it's because we have the wrong idea of what love of God entails. We might think of forty day retreats and boiling oil as an integral part of really sincere love of God, because of wild imaginations we have left over from the good nuns in the first grade. And so we figure that stuff is way out of our range, and just decide to struggle along, trying our best to do what we're supposed to do, but leaving the trances to the saints.

Act of Will

But the point is that we don't have to figure on going into an ecstasy or being overcome with Puritan fever in order to love God. It isn't really a prerequisite of love of God first to have your fingers mutilated by a herd of Manchus or anything like that. All we have to do is want to love Him. Then, because love is an act of the will, we are loving Him. It's just as easy as being sincere, and a quick look at the gifts we enjoy from God each day is enough to inspire sincerity from gratitude alone, not to mention the admiration due his perfection.

And once we decide that we do love God it is a simple thing to offer Him all the little things we do each day—things we already are doing for natural reasons alone, such as going to classes, or standing in the chow line, or saying "Hello' to faculty members (very special graces for such great sacrifices as that). And all these little things when done for love of God become positive steps on our path to heaven.

Be Mindful

So let's try to remember every now and then that we do love God, and let 's tell Him once in a while, that we are doing some little thing because we love Him. The energy we invest in thinking about it seems a good bet to me, for it promises a return on a multitude of little actions of indifferent spiritual value in themselves, things which we already do anyway for their natural benefit; thus for a slight mental effort we are repaid in a drastic increase in spiritual income, and with very little exertion we are going a good way toward fulfilling one-third of our purpose for being in this world: " . . . to know Him, to LOVE Him, to serve Him . . . "

The administration, faculty, and students, and especially the staff of the Villanovan offer their deepest sympathy to the family of Joseph E. King, M. E., '48 who was killed in a tragic crash of a jet plane in Texas. We, of the Villanovan staff, remember him fondly as a beloved and willing co-worker. May he rest in peace!

MOON OVER NOWHERE

By BILL BRENNINGHOUSE

It all happened this way. Oscar was sitting in the back of his Political History of Central Hindustan 1850 to 1859 class quietly munching on his graham crackers when Professor Scrogglefurn told him to remain after class. "Twomp", said Professor Scrogglefurn, stroking his mildewed, tobacco-stained beard, " I want a man to accompany me to the moon." In a few moments the professor told Oscar about a plan to travel to the moon. Oscar could see his name in headlines on the front page of the Daily News, GOON HITS MOON. This was something he couldn't resist so he told the old professor that he would be glad to go with him to the moon.

That Night

That night in the laboratory of the learned professor he showed Oscar his plans for reaching the moon. First he and Oscar were to be dehydrated and desiriated until they were about the size of an okapi's toenail. Then they were placed into a Merganschalzer cannon by an assistant, aimed at the moon and shot through space at the rate of 2,678,456 miles per micro second. Needless to say, they reached the earth's barren satellite in a very short times, undehydrating and undesiriating as they came to a landing in a pool of moon glow. Unfortunately, Professor Scrogglefurn didn't quite undehydrate and all that was left was a big blob and mildewed beard.

Oscar Roams

Alone, and powerless to return to his home planet Oscar got up and started to roam around the dreary countryside when all of a sudden, before he knew it, there appeared the form of a beautiful girl from the mist surrounding a large crater. She was garbed only in moonbeams and tied around her waist was a sash reading Miss Lunar Eclipse 1989. She walked up to Oscar looked at him with a pair of the most beautiful eyes he had ever seen and said tenderly, "Glob Botcheldew Gloop". Oscar spoke in every foreign tongue he knew, he said, "Was ist los?" This sage comment only seemed to puzzle this wonderful moonmaid (with thanks to V.M.). She looked deeply into his eyes again and softly murmured, "Whatasmatta, bud, cantcha speak English?"

Bewilderer

Shocked and so forth, Oscar did not know what to say. She gave him little chance. In a few well chosen words she told how the people on the moon have been observing people on earth for years and how they had been hoping to get a specimen to observe. Oscar was about to say goodbye when the beauteous one snapped her fingers, signalling a troop of six-headed, seven-legged ostriches who quickly overpowered poor Twomp and dragged him to the palace of the queen. The queen was the lovely one from the crater. The palace was built of broken grapefruit crates and in the center of the palace was the laboratory of the moon's leading scientist Dr. Ronson Forslitter.

The Doc

The doctor was a happy looking gent. He had twenty eyes which spelled out MUNTZ TV on his forehead. His six hairy arms each had slimy fingers dangling from its end. When he opened his two-feet-in-diameter mouth, one could see seven rows of fangs and four coated tongues. As Oscar looked up from where he was strapped on a sticky ironing board he could see six pairs of rusty scissors, descending upon his pointed head. He tried to wriggle free, but he was bound with dried bannana peels. Just as the scissors were about to strike Oscar Twomp fell out of his seat into a heap of graham cracker crumbs just in time to hear Professor Scrogglefurn say, "And tomorrow we consider the work of Abdul Badullah the third Caliph of Central Hindustan."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Editor of the Villanovan,

Dear Sir:

On Friday evening, October 7, our football team made a very poor showing despite its 28-20 victory over St. Mary's.

It's true that the team was handicapped by injuries, that they were handling a slippery ball for the first time this season, and that the players were not "keyed up" for the game after three tremendous victories over supposedly stronger rivals. But what was the most important factor involved? As was previously indicated, the team was not "up" for this game, and if they ever needed a real show of spirit from the student body, then was the time. However, this demonstration of spirit failed to materialize.

Here was a team with a great record, playing its first home game, and yet the student body showed no real interest or spirit; gave them no encouragement, and didn't even bother to stand and cheer when the players made their appearance on the field just prior to the opening whistle.

Where is the spirit that Villanova once knew? Why is the student body so indifferent? They don't have to holler themselves hoarse, but they certainly could give the team a "lift" and create a better atmosphere by shouting out the cheers, making more noise and "talking it up" during the game.

Several of my friends who attended the game told me that their greatest disappointment was the lack of spirit among the students. One remarked, "What's the matter with those Villanova students. I've never seen such dead-heads." Did you ever attend a Penn game? Why it's a pleasure to see one, even though the score is lopsided, because the students give the game a real football atmosphere."

That's something to think about when we wonder why Villanova doesn't attract large crowds in Philadelphia.

So let's resolve here and now to give our team real support in the remaining home games, and show Philadelphia that we are really proud of them.

A Villanova Alumnus

Dear Mike:

On the article "Who Dealt," which was written by Bob Carroll, Author Carroll says that freshmen stare at upperclassmen in the classroom and at other places on the campus making them uncomfortable and "feeling like I'm doing everything wrong." You know, Mike, Bob can't be serious. As far as I can ascertain no upperclassman in any of my classes seems to think that he is an "Article on Display."

On a personal cross section of freshmen opinion (which probably does not mean much), Mr. Carroll seems to be trying to find a subject to write an article on, that will be humorous and timely. I am glad that the freshmen take this view on the matter. If we took Bob's last paragraph literally, we may have thought that we were not welcome here (but of course we know that we are) at least not welcomed by Mr. Carroll.

Truly yours,
WM. H. PHILLIPS
Dumb Freshman

Dear Editor

I have been looking and looking, but I can't find it. I understood that it would be available this fall, but maybe I was laboring under a misapprehension. Anyhow, I haven't seen it.

I think we ought to have it around here. I don't know how many would be sold, but maybe a few of us would buy. Then too, even some radio stations might use them. After hearing all the others (especially in this season), it would be pleasant to hear our own.

Dear Editor, can you tell me what the story is Any information on this subject would be appreciated.

Yours truly,
Bewildered

P.S. "It" is the album of Villanova songs (made preferably by professionals, not amateurs).

Syncopatter

by Mayer & Taten

I hate to seem overly critical of the local turntable pilots, but couldn't they at least produce one decent record show in this entire area—just to break the monotony, I mean. It's getting so I'm afraid to turn on the radio any more. The little fat boy from Roxborough keeps leaping out at me, banging out three points for Sub-normal High and interviewing one of his female juvenile delinquents. Methinks a little more music from good bands and a little less of the chin variety would do wonders for that show not to mention the nervous systems of the entire listening public.

Have you ever heard one of these bobby-soxers say hello to 30 girl friends, three entire football teams and her family all in one minute—it's fantastic!

Awaits WVIL

Believe me, after three weeks of this I'm eagerly looking forward to the opening broadcast of WVIL. The music is good, the idle chatter is held to a minimum, and no one is trying to sell me on the idea of Luxing my T-shirts, or eating Philadelphia scrapple for breakfast. On the latter, I just dare them to try—better they should sell a sack of cement to a sea gull.

According to the latest scoop circulating heresabouts, we may all be in for something new in the way of musical entertainment. It has been proposed that the student council sponsor a concert describing the evolution of American music. It would start with Dixieland Jazz, work into the blues, then proceed through the growth of Swing, featuring take-offs on the more famous band numbers of that period. Finally, Bop and Progressive music will enter the scene and finish the thing.

Bop Reaction

Perhaps they should finale a la George Shearing since he seems to be the end point of the Bop reaction. "Sid's Bounce" by Kai Winding and the Boptet is among the best yet heard. Kai, former lead trombone with the great Kenton outfit, is a pioneer in the field of bop. He and Charlie Ventura are mainly responsible for putting bop in the sales volume bracket it deserves. Listen to "Sid's Bounce", and see if you don't agree that bop is the best in jazz!

A Girl

More mail from Rosemont; and they call this work! This sweet young bit of femininity declare that she enjoys the VILLANOVAN but suggests that it could be even further improved by devoting this column to a detailed weather report. Obviously she fails to realize that were it not for this venture into the field of journalism our mothers could never be proud of us. She also mentions that, "my true Rosemont heart rebelled against a simile referred to between illiterates and Rosemont girls." A quick thumbing through my grammar book immediately showed that here was an incorrect usage of a redundant nature. Page 78 of the grammar stated that it is a common error among college freshmen and that they are inclined to make the same slip in attempting to "make a comparison between blonds and brunettes"; I'd rather have a girl. This tot of destiny also included her name, dimensions, address, etc. should I care to confer with her further on the matter. I hope to have a previous engagement but should anyone care to establish a beachhead (what a head) just call Greenwood 3-023?

New Releases

Insofar as he is coming out with some new releases in a short while, I shall let it suffice to say that the work of George Shearing is an excellent example of what bop is capable of producing in the way good relaxed jazz. Unfortunately many people labor under the delusion that jazz must be frantic to be good. This is true of only a small segment of the entire art form. The greatest part of jazz has as its object either a constant drive or a relaxed style, with the greater part falling into the latter category.

Aside

Aside from the efforts of Shearing, another artist has contributed some relaxed bop worthy of mention. "Sid's Bounce" by Kai Winding and the Boptet is among the best yet heard. Kai, former lead trombone with the great Kenton outfit, is a pioneer in the field of bop. He and Charlie Ventura are mainly responsible for putting bop in the sales volume bracket it deserves. Listen to "Sid's Bounce", and see if you don't agree that bop is the best in jazz!

DEFENDENT: OSCAR TWOMP

By BOB FORSYTH

No doubt all readers of the Villanovan are acquainted with the adventures of one Oscar Twomp, the fictitious character created by the noted journalist, Mr. William Brenninghouse. Mr. Twomp, as related by the author, is epitomy of the poor slob, who is stepped on and booted around by various classes and individuals of society, whose misfortune it is to incur Mr. B's wrath at the time of writing.

It is the purpose of this article, in case you were wondering, not to delve further into Oscar's secret life, that being Mr. Brenninghouse's perogative, but rather to offer a defense in behalf of such being as Oscar and, if possible, to offer him an incentive to continue living, despite the frustrations and privations he weekly experiences. To keep case histories straight and with the kind permission of the creator, we shall call our subject, conveniently, Oscar Twomp.

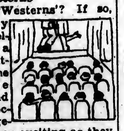
First of all it is our wish to console you Oscar, with the thought that we, though we may be a minority, firmly believe that you are fighting the cause of righteousness, and furthermore will triumph in the end, though you may not be around to witness ultimate victory. It is true that the forces, which tread on you and hold you up to ridicule, would, because you disagree with their conventions, brand you as a reactionary and even an agitator, though you are a most passive fellow. Fear them not, Oscar, for their zeal to persecute you indicates, an underlying fear of you and what you represent. This alone should give you cause to continue life's struggle.

We have felt it necessary to exhort you most vehemently to arise and carry on. Recent conversations with your author have revealed that you plan drastic measures even to the extent of suicide to relieve yourself of your burdensome troubles. Take hold of yourself, Oscar. You would be defeating your own purpose if you sought this method of escape, and the cause of poor slobs like yourself would be immeasurably hurt by this resort. Don't jump off that bridge no matter how inviting the water looks. It is probably too cold anyway. Drag your battered body back to suffer some more of the slings and arrows of outrageous fortune. The outside world has yet more terrors and you are the only man with the experience to face them. So arise, Oscar. Your disciples will rally someday.

Around The Town

By F. A. VARALLO

The first stop on our entertainment tour this week is at the Forrest Theatre where Madeline Carroll is currently appearing in the Broadway success, "Goodbye, My Fancy". This, incidentally, is Miss Carroll's first footlight visit in her American stage debut. Although her acting here has been entirely confined to motion pictures, Miss Carroll comforts herself with ease on the stage and even makes believable the chic Congresswoman and former war correspondent she portrays.



Briefly, "Good Bye, My Fancy" is a well-written, pleasant, and highly entertaining comedy. Although the play has a serious element in its flight for liberalism in institutions of higher learning, this purpose is subordinated to comedy and romance. Congresswoman Agatha Reed (Miss Carroll) had been expelled some twenty years before from Good Hope College for Women because of an affair with a professor. As the play opens, she is returning to the college as guest of honor at the Commencement exercises and to receive an honorary degree. Her old dormitory room, which had had a lot of the original furnishings restored, is the scene of all the action that transpires. The afore-mentioned professor has, in the meantime, become the college president. Although Miss Reed has been steadfast in her feelings about him, she finds that he has changed somewhat. Once the champion of worthy causes, he is now chiefly interested in his high-salaried office.

Major Crisis

The major crisis arises over a film against war which the Congresswoman wishes to show the graduating class. The trustees and the president consider the film a trifle grim for young girls and forbid its showing. This minor issue becomes in the play a focal point for academic liberalism. In the end, the Congresswoman and her allies win out. In addition to Miss Carroll's splendid performance, special recognition should also be given to a hard-working and efficient supporting cast. Don't miss "Goodbye, My Fancy" for a pleasant evening at the theatre.

Westerns

Do you like 'Westerns'? If so, you will enjoy "She Wore a Yellow Ribbon", a story of the fighting cavalry at the Stanley. Ablaze with color and action, this spectacular large-scale Western is as exciting as they come. John Wayne, captain of an outpost of the U. S. Cavalry is a weatherbeaten oldtimer about to be retired. Serving under him are Lieutenants John Agar, and Harry Carey, Jr., also Sergeants Ben Johnson, and Victor McLaglen. Agar and Carey are rivals for the hand of lovely Joanne Dru, a major's daughter living at the post. Wayne and his men are meanwhile engaged in driving back a party of bloodthirsty Indians—a gruelling task entailing plenty of fast riding.

Although we here in Philadelphia were unable to witness the total eclipse of the moon on October 6th because of the cloudy weather, we can still see an interesting demonstration of this and other phenomena in the Franklin Institute's Fels Planetarium show "The Moon and Eclipses". This feature will explain why eclipses of the sun and moon take place, and will cover much of what is known about Earth's satellite and many of the as-yet unsolved mysteries regarding it.

HIGH FINANCE?

T'other day, while I was devouring the basketball scores in the newspaper, burp!, I bumped into the doggonest bit of printed nonsense I ever seen, which reminds me, I reckon there must have been a lot of close games played the night before. I remember one where American T. & T., probably one of them technical schools, beat Allis Chalmers by only one-eighth of a point.

One and One

But to get back . . to this newspaper article—which, by the way, the editor must have thought was pretty hot stuff on account of he had it underlined on all four sides—it was a so-called balance sheet of one of them there marble-fronted "bfalutin'" banks. What it was doing on the sports page I don't know, but's that's neither here nor there. Anyhow, this dopey statement had two columns. In one column were some Assets which summed up to $11,289,476.48. Then in the other column were some more items called Liabilities, and guess what the total of these here was! It was exactly $11,289,476.48, not one penny more or less.

This amazin' coincidence was perturbing me mightily, so I asked an intimate acquaintance, who scrubs the vault every day, what was going on, and she told me that these two columns are supposed to be equal. Fine thing, juggling figgers and such just so they can call their ornery statements balance sheets and try to make us farmers think that banks are sane places. The idear! Why whenever my pa deposits his slugs at the First National back home, he always takes a bag of peanuts along with him on account of when he gets through wrestling those revolving doors he reckons he's gotta feed them monkeys in the cages.

You Figure It Out

But now, my sweet little mist, Millicent Poopoofnik, (addressing her in the subjunctive) tells me that the Assets in these statements actually do equal the Liabilities. You future financial magnates don't actually believe that stuff do you? Do you fellers mean to sit there and tell me that bank tellers are so inhuman that with all the small change they take in, they never lose so much as a penny in a crack in the floor; or that the vice-president's secretary, or whoever it is what sums up the take at the end of the day, never skips her little fingor when adding up those ten columns of figgers! Darn it, it ain't even logical!

But even supposing that bank people are always perfect and that the two columns always have the same sums, then it still peers to me that you guys are all wet. Ain't assets what you have and liabilities what you owe So if the bank pays everything it owes, it's gonna have nothing left. Now I know darn well that if I was broke I sure wouldn't tell the newspapers. How do them there money menguls expect to get any business? For shame!

However that green stuff I see floatin' around such fancy institutions ain't dyed tobacco leaves, so if they can get away with I reckon I can too. Now I'm gonna pretend I'm a bank and do up my own fancy statement.

Tea Dance

By JIM MULLINS

Phi Kappa Pi Brings Back Traditional "Owl Hop"

At the first Phi Kappa Pi meeting of the year, last Thursday, plans were made to reschedule the Owl Hop in Villanova's social season. It is planned for the 21st of February. The chairman for the dance was also chosen at the meeting. Gene Valerio, Vice-President of the fraternity, will hold down this position.

The dance will be held on the eve of Washington's Birthday which will be a holiday at Villanova. It is the last possible date on which a dance could take place because of the beginning of lent.

Plans were also made for the annual dinner-dance of the frat which will be held at one of the Philadelphia Hotels. Bruno Uberti was elected as chairman for the affair.

Also discussed were the initiations and banquet which will take place early in February and a smoker that has been scheduled for November under the direction of Bob Pope.

Michael Nowlan, President of the fraternity, conducted the meeting and made appointments to the various positions.

The Owl Hop was one of the traditions of the social season for a great many years previous to the war at Villanova. It was always held the night after the Temple-Villanova football game. Then it became part of the Inter fraternity Ball during the war years. This year the Phi Kappa Pi organization decided that they would again like to hold the affair and after long discussions with the Student Council the dance was given the go-ahead signal last night at the Council meeting.

Of the seventy-five members present at the meeting, many new upperclassmen were received into the fraternity. Their initiations will come in February. Other upperclassmen are still eligible for membership now and can join if they make the next meeting.

LABOR RELATIONS CLUB TO MAKE TRIP TO BUDD PLANT

Under the guidance of Rev. William J. Gordon O.S.A., moderator, the Industrial Relations Club will hold its next meeting in the C & F auditorium next Tuesday, Oct. 18th., at 5:00 P. M. The purpose of this meeting is to make plans for the coming year, to inaugurate new members, and to distribute new membership cards.

On the agenda for the first semester is a field trip to The Budd plant in Philadelphia, where automotive parts, railroad cars, and various other metal products are made. The following trip will take in Philco's plant in Philadelphia, and the RCA plant in Camden, New Jersey.

During the second semester will take in the famous tea and spice man's, John C. McCormick's, "Home of Multiple Management", in Baltimore, to see system of labor relations, its forms and principles.

The officers with which Father Gordon planned to supplement debates in various industrial fields are: national officers of the CIO, the A.F. of L., the NLRB, and leaders in the field of management affiliated with Johnson & Johnson, pharmaceutical and surgical manufacturer, and Ford Motor Company. These leaders will discuss various aspects of pension plan, fair employment practices, guaranteed annual wages, minimum wage legislation, and Catholic Social Principles. All new members are invited to attend these meetings, for they will benefit greatly by the various lectures, field trips, and other planned events.

Delta Pi Mu Holds First Meeting

Delta Pi Mu, the Villanova Arts and Education Fraternity, held its initial meeting of the present semester on Monday, October 10th. George Keenly, president of the frat, conducted the meeting at which elections were held for two offices and plans were made for the year's activities.

After a lively debate it was decided that new members would be accepted at the next meeting and placed on probation until February.

Whitey La Blanc was appointed to represent D. P. M. on the Interfraternity Ball committee. The Arts men are anxious to repeat last year's domination of the ticket sales for the affair.

As in the past the frat will conduct special meetings which will be addressed by prominent speakers on cultural subjects. An attempt will made this year to hold these gatherings in conjunction with similar organizations at the local girls' colleges.

The topic of frat pins was also discussed, and members will be able to place their orders at the next meeting which will be held on Tuesday, October 25th.

Ray Mac Williams and Bill Dietrich were elected to fill the vacant offices of vice-Pres. and Corresponding Sec. respectively. Other officers are Larry O'Brien, Treas.; Bob McRoberts, Recording Sec.; and Bill Fleming, Student Council Rep.

Mechanical Minds Visit Philadelphia Electric Plant

The Villanova Chapter of the A. S. M. E. will make a trip sometime soon to the Southwark Plant of the Philadelphia Electric Company. Definite plans for the visit will be formulated at a future meeting.

Membership in the A. S. M. E. is open to all Sophomore, Junior and Senior Mechanical Engineering students. Meetings of the Student Chapter are held every third Tuesday at which time technical movies ore shown in an effort to keep members abreast of the latest advances.

Student members are also eligible to attend the monthly meetings held at the Engineer's Club, 1317 Spruce Street, Philadelphia, under the auspices of the Senior Chapter, A. S. M. E. Lectures by research engineers of some of the Philadelphia area's leading industrial organizations are features of these monthly gatherings.

Ready NFCCS For Holy Year

This year The Student Relief Campaign, a student movement of the National Federation of Catholic College Students, is once again to be one of the chief activities of the Villanova branch of the NFCCS.

"Gift of the Catholic College Students of the United States," have become familiar words in every corner of the world in the past few years. Since 1947, through the efforts of the NFCCS, Catholic collegians of this country have been aiding many destitute students spiritually, physically and intellectually all over the globe. Nearly $400,000 has been raised among Catholic college students since 1947 for this worthy cause. Incomplete returns show that Villanova students donated more than $2000 last year.

Once again this year, the Villanova branch of NFCCS will conduct a fund raising drive in behalf of the war stricken students of Europe and it is their hope that the Villanova students will do their part in this, the task of feeding, educating, and clothing the Catholic youth of the world.

Rev. George McLaughlin, O.S.A., moderator of NFCCS at Villanova, also announced that plans are now being formulated for a trip to Europe for interested Catholic college students next year, in celebration of the Holy Year. No details on this venture are yet available.

THERE WAS A RALLY

Commerce and Finance Auditorium was the scene of the Pre-Tulsa rally last Thursday evening. The cheerleaders whip up a little excitement which carried over to the game.

Rally Rocks C & F

Last Thursday evening, the Students of Villanova gathered at the C. & F. Auditorium to stage the first organized indoor rally of the football season. Prior to that a torch light parade marched about the campus with the Villanova band, singing the college's songs. At the rally, the students were addressed by the head coach at Villanova, Jim Leonard. He spoke about the team's record, spirit and chances for the Tulsa game which followed the next evening.

Phil Snyder and John Witsch co-captains for the game then spoke to the fans about the prospects for the game.

Dukes Present Stiff Opposition in Tiff Set for Saturday

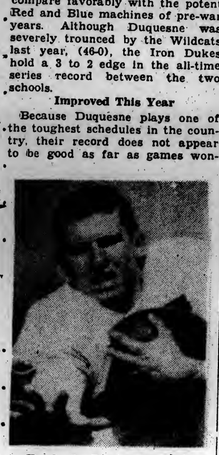
By N.

Next Saturday afternoon, at Forbes Field, Pittsburgh, the Villanova Wildcats take the field against a much-improved Duquesne University eleven as the 'Cats strive to finish the season with one defeat. It will be the sixth start of the season for Villanova and will be far from its easiest trial.

Sparked by the contagious enthusiasm of Coach Phil Ahwesh, and manned largely by experienced personnel, the Dukes promise to compare favorably with the potent Red and Blue machines of pre-war years. Although Duquesne was severely trounced by the Wildcats last year, (46-0), the Iron Dukes hold a 3 to 2 edge in the all-time series record between the two schools.

Improved This Year

Because Duquesne plays one of the toughest schedules in the country, their record does not appear to be good as far as games won-and-lost are concerned, but a quick look at their record shows them to be no pushover if comparative scores mean anything. So far the Dukes have lost to Wake Forest, 22-7, beat Muhlenberg, 14-6, fell to Alabama's Crimson Tide, 48-8, and last Saturday crushed Holy Cross — 40 to 13.



The Dukes can boast that they field one of the most improved teams in the country this year. Against Villanova they will employ a two-team system of A and B elevens playing alternate quarters. Wholesale substitutions on offense and defense are out. Instead, Coach Ahwesh's replacements will be made at key positions in accordance with play on the gridiron.

Carrying the load at the important break-away halfback posts will be Ralph Longmore, John Duchess, Len Kubiak, Jim Gilhooly, Bob Stevenson, Garry Orr, and Jim Bono. Power from the plunging back slots will be generated by fullbacks Leo Etler, Charles Rapp, Bill Dagar, and Ray Birsic. Harold Koepka, John Lahosky, or Glen Hensler will marshal the Dukes from the quarterback position.

Longmore Great

Most explosive running strength of the Dukes lies with the "A" backfield. While Duchess at left half depends on speed to take him into the secondary, Longmore at right half leans toward power and a deceptive stride to move into an open field. Fullback Etler hits hardest when the chips are down and requires only a sliver of space to crash through the line for im-

AUSTIN; ALUMNI AND DOMS TRIUMPH BKS 1 AND 4 SPLIT TWO

Intramural Football League Inaugurated

By Mondschein Inc. & Kiucsarits

Fine passing, punting and long runs marked the opening games of the '49 intramural football season, as four teams opened their schedules.

Barracks 1 & 4 met their favorite rivals from Barracks 2 & 3 a week ago and walked off with a 26-8 victory. Led by the passing of Tony Travelino, the running of Andy McElroy, and the sensational pass-snaring of Tom Madonia, Bks. 1 & 4 roared back from an 8-0 deficit to win going away. Madonia caught three pay-off passes to lead the scoring.

On Thursday afternoon, two games were played. Alumni sent Barracks 1 & 4 crashing to a 12-6 defeat in a mild upset. The Bks. were continually threatening but could only cross the boal line once. Alumni made some fine back-to-the wall stands to regain possession at crucial moments. Then they sent Wally Donnellon back to punt. Time and again his booming kicks set the Bks back on their heels and they were forced to start all over. One of the Bks. punt backfired when Capt. Don Griffin grabbed it deep in his own territory and raced it back for what proved to be the winning touchdown. The first Alumni score came on a buck pass from Seaman to Buckley. A long pass to Andy McElroy accounted for the loser's score.

A game but outclassed Bks. 2 & 3 team dropped their second decision in as many games, losing to a powerful aggregation from Austin hall, 18-0. Kenny O'Brien ran back an intercepted pass for the first score and Jack Egnar ran fifty yards behind some fine blocking for the second tally. Austin's last six-pointer came as the result of a long pass.

Capt. O'Brien, when interviewed after the game, listed his team as the one to beat in the championship race. In future games Austin will be even stronger if Bob Munday is able to rejoin the squad. Bob was kept out of last week's game because of previous commitments. Bks. 1 & 4 by no means discouraged after the loss to Alumni is the next opponent on Austin's schedule.

In the first game played on Simp-

Kittens Open Against Rutgers This Friday

Smooth-operating 150 Club Looks to Good Season with "T" Formation

By GEORGE SCANLON

Amid the crashing bang of scrimmage, the Villanova 150 lb. football team buckled down to heavy work this week. The tasks facing the coaching staff are to round the squad in shape for the opening with Rutgers, October 21, and introducing the players to the T formation.

The latter problem is a headache confronting the mentors as it is a difficult offense to master. Mickey Pendeno's quarterback charges are led by Jim Moore and Bill Lemmer. Moore has the qualities to fill this spot ably. He is a good ball handler, a cool field general, and a excellent passer, which eases Mickey's job somewhat. Another bright spot in the situation is the return to form of Bob Fitzmeyer.

Bob was injured last year and was disabled for the entire season making his loss hard felt. "Fitz" is a superb linebacker and field captain, his presence shall aid the club immensely. He is backed by two promising men, Jack Rowe and John Alter.

The Backfield candidates are grasping the intricacies of the T formation with the aid of experienced coaching and fine offensive plays. Hard-running Charlie Battino is showing power and speed in his efforts and should be a main stay of the kittens attack. A newcomer, Lou Maiero, at halfback has displayed fine all around play. Lou is a hard blocker and a deceptive pass receiver and with his blazing speed will be an asset to the club. The offense this season will stress quick opening plays and a passing game, characteristic of the popular T formation.

The battle for line positions is wide open, with no slots secured as yet. Guards and tackles loom as wide open fields for a starting berth. The end candidates appear encouraging with some fine defensive men. Jim Gallo has looked good as an offensive wingmen, along with experience kittens, Jack Loghlin, Leo Schieber and John Kelly.

A change in the schedule should be noted in that the Rutgars tussle will not be played at home but at Rutgars, Saturday, October 21.

In summing up, the 45 hopefuls are showing plenty of hussel to improve their record. The club is in good hands and the outlook on the spectators side is for a show for plenty of offense-minded football which spells touchdowns and victory.

WILDCATS, JUNIOR GRADE

Above is pictured the offensive half of the 180-pound football squad. A greatly improved ball club, the Kittens travel to Rutgers this Saturday for their initial clash this season.

Brown, Romanik and Rogers Star in Losing Cause

By LEO McLAUGHLIN

An unreported Golden Hurricane swept out of the Southwest last Friday night, into Shibe Park, and before passing through, bowled over a shocked Villanova eleven, 21-19, and left in its wake 13,000 stunned fans.

The twisting Tulsa team handed the high-stepping Wildcats their first defeat since the Boston College fray of 1948, abruptly squelching Blue and White hopes of an undefeated season. Outrushing the Mainliners, 165 yards to 132, the Oklahomans featured two long, sustained drives and one sensational punt return to complete their scoring.

Wildcats Score Early in Second Period

After completing a stalemated first period, the Wildcats sciatched first blood early in the second session, climaxing a 3d-yard drive. Jim Leonard's charges regained regained possess of the oval on a Tulsa punt, whereupon Singin' Steve Romanik, ace Wildcat quarterback, hit end Johnny Bogan with an aerial, advancing the ball to the 21. Powerhouse Pete D'Alonzo crashed the left side of the line and traveled the entire 21 yards to tally standing up. Tom Clavin failed to add the extra point and Villanova led 6-0.

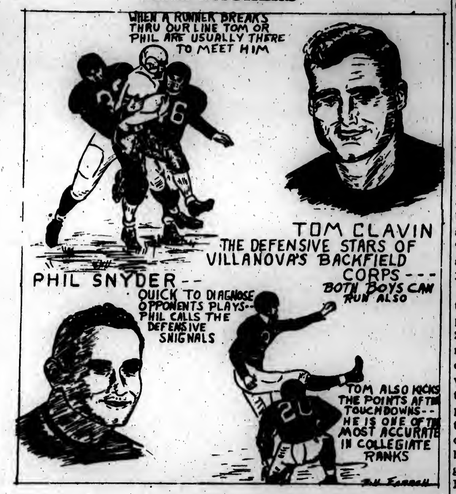
Diminutive Pete Annex, Tulsa quarterback immediately set his Golden Hurricane into action and didn't stop its twirling until it crossed the Blue and White goal line, 82 yards down field.

Fourteen plays and six first downs, featuring classy ballrunning and passing by lanky Paul Barry, 160-pounder Dub Graves, and Annex, found the Tulsa tide washing up on the Wildcat 4-yard line. After two futile attempts, Barry sailed across, and conversion specialist Cliff Boucher added the seventh point, putting Tulsa in the lead, 7 to 6.

Graves Travels 70 Yards

Stoping the Mainliners deep in their own territory, Tulsa forced Al Schmid to kick, the beginning of the most sensational run of the game. Circling under Schmid's punt on his own thirty. Graves fumbled, immediately recovered, cut to his left, then to his right, and deceptively weaving and twisting, snaked his way through the entire Villanova eleven, flying across the tally line, 70 yards later, with three would-be tacklers hot in pursuit. The impeccable Boucher converted and the Big Storm led, 14-6.

In a less dramatic fashion, the Tulsans pushed across their third and final score early in the third quarter. Barry capped an 83-yard push by skirting his right end for 7 yards. Boucher adding point number 21.



The Wildcats regained their championship form, and started their uphill battle against the Tulsans and Father Time. Romanik and Joe Rogers, injured backfield ace, combined their respective talents and placed the pikskin on the Hurricane 3 with two passes of 23 and 27 yards. Plunging fullback Ralph Pasquariello ripped through the Tulsan line and made the count, 21-12. Clavin again failed to convert.

Brown, Rogers and Romanik Shine For Villanova

Gaining possession of the ball on the Tulsa 49 by means of big Danny Brown's second sensational block of a enemy punt, Romanik again became airborne, adding another six-pointer through a pass to Joe Rogers, who scampered 22 for the Cats now 4-1 After Recent Tulsa Upset | Kittens Look Good In Early practice.

By HARRY RANGE
Sports Editor

What should have been a story about the Villanova eleven going on to its fifth straight has developed into a work on a club which lost one that never should have been lost.

We have no intention of blasting anyone, any plays, or of making any excuses. We feel that the club played a good game and should have won but it just seemed that Tulsa wasn't to be beaten.

After following the pigskin luggers through their first four games, seeing what a great club the Mainliners are, the feeling ensuing from the Tulsa contest is not one of bitterness, but one of sorrow. Villanova is the top team in the East and was destined for an undefeated season and we share the attitude of every Wildcat rooter that it was the breaks of the game and the fact that Tulsa was playing miles over their heads that caused the upset.

And what an upset it was. The Golden Hurricanes had only won one game previously in the last two seasons and that was against McMurray by a 27-26 count. Tulsa played like bowl club Friday nite and we intend to give credit where it is due.

As previously stated, they were playing miles over their heads, but they were great at Shibe Park last Friday. Pete Annex, Tulsa's hard-fighting quarterback played a brilliant game, both passing and running for much yardage. The same goes for Dub Graves and Paul Barry, who sparked the offense.

Even with this loss the Cats can go on to an 8-1 season and possibly a bowl game, but it is unfortunate that a club as good as ours should have lost such a tough one.

A bright note on the football horizon is the practice of the 150-pound club. We've been down to see the Kittens working out a number of times and the improvement over last season is remarkable. Coach Bud Kane and his assistants are doing a great job and we can see a good season in store for the Villanova lightweights.

The Kittens open the season this Saturday by travelling to Rutgers where they hope to avenge the defeat of the '48 season. As we see it, they will!

Coach Jim Elliott and his harriers will also get down to business this weekend in a triangular meet with Manhattan and New York University. In the team standings we give the edge to Manhattan, but for individual first place our bet is Browning Ross.

Brownie is one of the top hill and dalers in the nation, and if his knee trouble which bothered him against Army clears up he should go on and have a great season. We've watched him through countless hours of practice, those hard tiring hours which make him the tireless runner that all his competitors know so well. It's not hard to figure out that he takes his practice seriously when he even goes to the length of racing up and down the stadium steps so as to get ready for the hills of the courses. Here's luck then to the harriers, in this the "real" opening of the 1949 season.

portant extra yardage. Although chiefly a blocking back, Koepka is a handy man in all departments as he goes from the quarterback spot.

Prospects at center are bright too. Pete Schuetz will probably get the nod on offensive assignments Saturday, while Paul Couture will bolster the defense.

score. Clavin added and the score stood 21-19 with approximately 12 minutes of action left. The Hurricanes managed to hold the Cats, regaining possession with a minute to go to clinch the game. Although playing with bad injuries, both Danny Brown and Joe Rogers managed to walk out of Shibeshire with much praise heaped upon them. Beside blocking two punts, Danny played a stellar game on the forward wall while Rogers was the big sparkplug in enabling the Wildcats to walk away with aerial honors, outpassing the visitors 204 to 121.

Keats, Gallo, Fahy Average .764; Lead Staff Predictors

Three men tied for top honors as swamis of the gridiron this week. Ray Keats retained his hold on the title with a 16 and 5 rating. He was forced to share the spotlight with Neal Fahy and Jim Gallo who also picked 16 correct and missed but five. Both Keats and Gallo accurately foresaw the Alabama-Tennessee ties but got their figures a little off. Both men called it at 14-14; while it was actually but 7-7.

The staff managed to up their total percentage to .681, a three-point gain over last week. Out of 210 picks they got 143 right. On nine games the whole staff concurred correctly although with varying scores. The boys all muffed three together, however. None picked Ole Miss and Boston College to tie. The boys also went the way of football pool players by calling both the Navy-Wisconsin and Michigan-Northwestern contests wrong. No one called any one game exactly correct although there were several near misses, falling short or going over by only one or two points. For those who have noted that we only took the results of 21 games instead of 22 here is the explanation. The St. Mary's-Loyola game was played on Sunday, long after the Villanovan "went to bed."

What Our Opponents Are Doing

Poor Texas A. and M. has won only one game so far while dropping four. Penn State has fared a little better by posting a two and two record. Detroit has only one wine with three games on the deficit as has St. Mary's. Tulsa won one from you know who and now boasts a two and three record. Duquesne has split also and is in the same boat with Penn State with two for four. Boston College has one win, two losses, and so far the only tie of the Wildcats opponents. Georgetown is in the black with three wins to only one loss. North Carolina State also split their schedule so far and hold a two and two record.

In games in which our mutual opponents have played so far this year we see that Penn State wall-Boston College 32-14 which bades well for the Cats. Boston College meets another opponent of our this weekend when they face Georgetown.

Detroit, who Villanova trounced 34-7 shaded Tulsa 20-14 earlier in the season. We are treading on sensitive memories now, however, so we'll call this article to an abrupt halt . . . Nuff said.

Basketball Preview

Practiced sessions will be held throughout this week in Alumni gym by the various hall teams, in preparation for the opening of the season a week from tonight. Alumni and Austin held their practice yesterday.

The schedule for the rest of the week follows:

Tuesday, Oct. 18 7:00-8:30 Doms 8:30-10:00 Fedigan.

Wednesday, 7-8:30 Barracks 1 & 4 8:30-10 Barracks 2 & 3.

Thursday, 7-8:30 Good Counsel 8:30-10 Mendel.

With Bks. 1 & 4 and Fedigan considerably strenghtened, Alumni may have a harder time than anticipated in their quest for the league title. From where we sit it looks as if the Bks. could win because they don't need much, but that Alumni will win because they don't need anything.

It is expected that Father Murray will draw a very large audience next Tuesday, due to his notability and reputation as an authority on his subject and as a speaker.

Mr. Charles P. Bruderle, Assistant Professor of History in the College, is Chairman of the "Villanova Forum." This is his second year in this capacity, being the first Chairman of the newly formed organization last year.

Inaugurated last February, upon announcement by the College President, Very Reverend Francis X. McGuire, O.S.A., the "Villanova Forum" had three speakers on the rostrum last year. This year four speakers have agreed to take part in the Faculty-Student series, including Rev. Edward J. McCarthy, O.S.A., of the College, Professor James M. O'Neill, and Rev. William E. McManus.

All of the lectures will be held in the Commerce and Finance Auditorium, Villanova College, and will begin promptly at 8:30 P. M. Single tickets are now on sale at $1.20 and course tickets are being sold at $4.00, both prices including all taxes.

Villanova College students will be admitted free, upon presentation of their matric cards.

The Library Corner

Commemmorating the centennial since his death, the Villanova College Library yesterday opened a two-week exhibit on the cultural importance and influence of Frederic Chopin on the musical art in the world. The display, located in the show cases in the main lobby of the beautiful new library, was arranged and collected in cooperation with Polskie Kolko Miedzykoleglialne, the Polish Intercollegiate Club, of Philadelphia, Eugéne Czarnecki, Temple Dental School, President.

Chopin Bust in Display

Various items on display include books by many authors on the geography of Chopin, many of them recently published, pamphlets, a proclamation by Mayor Kennelly, of Chicago, several pictorial interpretations of the great Polish pianist and composer by several painters, basic studies on the types of music he wrote, philosophical gleanings on the spirit of his music, recent magazine articles on Chopin from some of the leading American magazines. Colorful record albums of his works by famous artists lend attractiveness to the display which centers about a 15-inch high bust of the "poet of the piano", loaned by Mr. and Mrs. Peter Kulpinski, of Willow Grove, Penna.

Well-Balanced Exhibit

The age that the great pianist inspired is symbolized by a miniature silhouette of a salon musical group. Lending an air of his native country are two beautiful hand-woven shawls that are the handcraft of the region about Zelazowa Woia, in Poland, where Chopin was born. The wide adaptability of his music is illustrated by music primers for the young and the score of a fairly recent hit tune, "Til the End of Time."

In Canada, the Chopin centennial is reaching a peak this month in many concerts, recitals, lectures and exhibits. The Kosciuszko Foundation, of New York, a Polish-American cultural organization is leading the observance of the memorial year in the United States.

Students Lend Items

Many other items have been gathered for the Villanova Library exhibit by the Polish Intercollegiate Club, under the chairmanship of George Szymanski, Villanova, '50. The collection is made up exclusively from items loaned by the members of that organization, who are alumni and students of many colleges and universities of the Philadelphia area, and residents of this vicinity who have attended other high-level institutions of learning.

Chopin, who died on October 17th, 1849, is the inevitable name that figures at every successful recital. All-Chopin programmes fill concert halls. Dr. Friedrich Niecks, formerly of Edinburgh University, believed Chopin "to be one of the three most powerful factors in the development of nineteenth - century music."

Chopin is nearer the soil in the selection of forms; his style and structure are more naive, more original than Wagner's, while his medium is less artificial. His is the interior play, the eternal conflict between body and soul. Chopin was the color genius of the pianoforte.

Belle Masque Tickets

Tickets for Belle Masque's Fall production of "Jacobowsky and the Colonel" may now be purchased from the members of the cast. The show is scheduled for November 20, 21 and 22. Students and their dates, $.75 (tax inc.), general admission $1.00 (tax inc.).

Delta Pi Epsilon Plans Calendar

Delta Pi Epsilon, the C and F fraternity, at its last meeting was put in the capable hands of the following officers for this year; President, John Weglicki; Vice President, Guy Kingree; Secretary-Treasurer, Vince Desantis; Sgt. at Arms, Harry Postupak; Student Council, Bruce Taten. Various Committees were formed to take care of the business of the coming year.

Tentative plans for the Inter-Frat Ball were brought up for discussion as well as the matter of keys for the members. A committee was appointed to radically overhaul the whole pledge and initiation program. After the meeting everyone relaxed while movies of the Penn-State game were shown.

Any Sophomore or Junior interested in joining please contact one of the officers. An extensive pledge program will be announced at a later date. Watch for notices.

After England

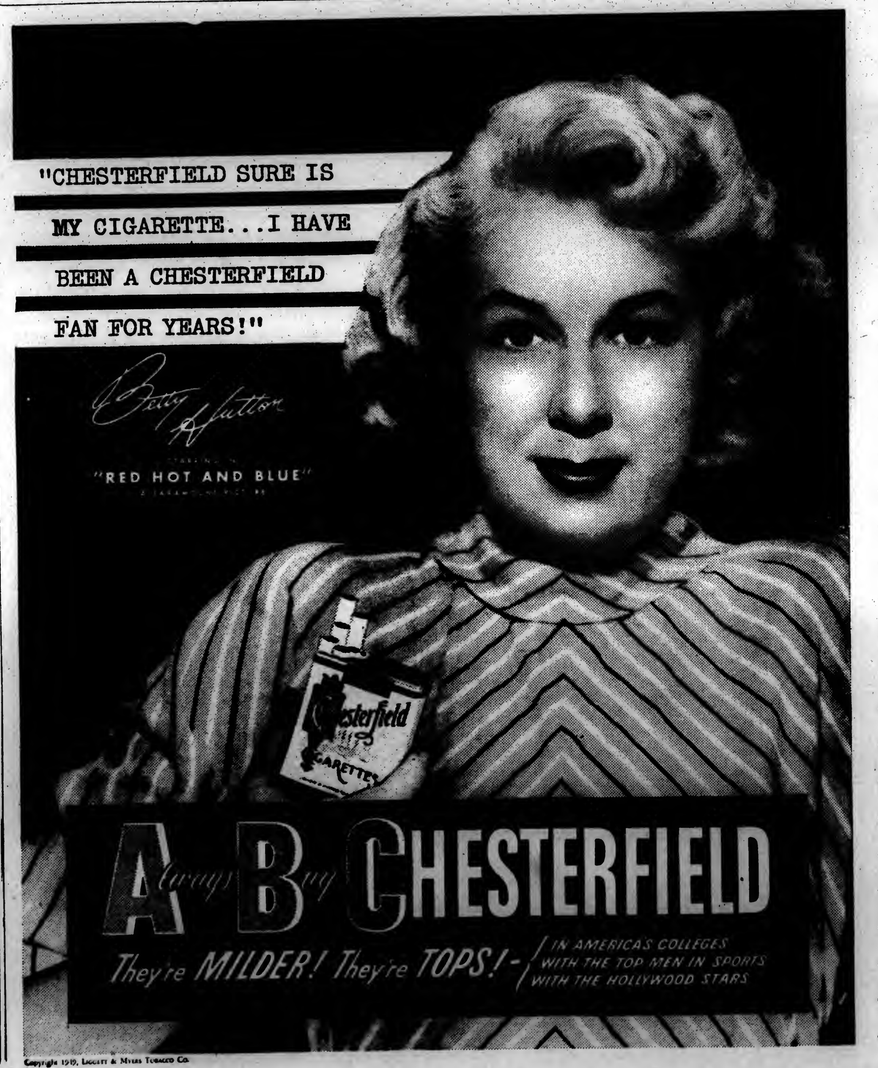
But, the watches and early morning details were not the only things which made up the trip across the wily Atlantic. During the weekend of the Fourth the Task Force commander had all ships halt for a swimming party. Not many can boast of having swum in the middle of an ocean. During the cooling off exercises, a misdirected shark happened upon the frolicking sailors and caused some thrashing about. One witness told of a marine guard's frustrated attempt to shoot the thing. After two misfires, a bluejacket finally scored a direct hit with a potato and frightened the shark away.



Thus it was that the two weeks expended crossing the Atlantic sped by and our seafaring Villanovans found themselves rapidly approaching the coast of Cuba. A quick glance through the ships found the boys brushing up on "el espanol", for although they knew "you don't have to know the language", it does help.

The big day finally arrived. On the late afternoon of Friday 8 July, Task Force 61 cruised into Guantanamo. After necessary arrangements had been made, liberty commenced. The midshipmen had only three nights of liberty as the force got underway for exercises on the following Monday. Over the weekend the facilities of the Naval Base were opened to the middies. We might say that they were mighty pleasant, too. Among other things there were three swimming pools, a recreation hall, and a club open for their use. Swimming in the waters in and around Guantanamo was forbidden because of the presence of the dreaded barracuda. This came as no great shock for the dip coming over, and the fresh-water pools more than compensated for it. On Sunday an informal tour of the city was featured.

When the weekend was over, the ships of the task force rendezvoused off Guantanamo to commence "Harwood's Holiday." The middies, under the guidance of the regular ships' crews participated in the firing. Drones, target sleds, and sleeves towed by planes were used to test the accuracy of the men. Many hits were scored during the firing, and all were well pleased with the proceedings. All the latest aids to gunnery were used.

At the end of the week, all returned to Guantanamo for liberty and more cokes at the club. Monday came and all ships again took part in maneuvers. Two days later the "Mighty Mo" and her escorts were seen to leave the area, and begin a course for Hampton Roads.

On the 25th. of July, Task Force 61 steamed into Hampton Roads. On that same day the NROTC middies were disembarked. All were glad to be on their way home, but somehow each and every one sneaked a last glance at that rugged warrior which had been his home for a summer.

Year Book Staff Begins '50 Edition

The first meeting of the Belle Air Yearbook staff was held last week in the new office located in Mendel Hall. Paul York, Senior Commerce and Finance student was appointed Editor-in-Chief last year at the occasion of the Belle Air banquet, when he succeeded Thomas R. Sullivan, Editor. His first function as Editor-in-Chief of the Belle Air was to appoint the remaining Editorial Staff which includes the following: Raphael MacWilliams, Assistant Editor; Paul J. DeMarzio, Managing Editor; Frank J. Pilecelli, Copy Editor; John Lynch, Photography Editor; Emerie Reichard, College Editor; and Joseph Cyprand, Sports Editor. Barry Gibbons was chosen as Business Manager and holds the same position on the Staff of the VILLANOVAN.

Editorial Policies

Following the introduction of the respective editors to their staffs, the general policies and plans for the 1950 Belle Air were discussed. Emphasis was placed on the anxiety of the current Senior Class to be endowed with a larger and more diversified type of yearbook with its conventional sections given a newly integrated treatment. In the absence of the yearbook "dummy," from which the actual compiling originates, all departments were alerted and ready to start the new annual's production within the next week.

A scheduling of organization group pictures has been posted and members of any organization listed

The second Sunday afternoon record dance of the semester will take place in the Field House next Sunday, October 30, under the sponsorship of the Villanova Interracial Society.

Proceeds will be used to further the Society's work for interracial justice.

Details will be the same as for the successful record hop held by the Student Council two weeks ago. Dancing will begin at 3:00 p.m. and end at 5:30, with music provided on wax by the best bands in the country.

Invitations have been sent to Chestnut Hill, Immaculata and Rosemont colleges, but Villanovans "are welcome to bring dates if they wish."

Admission is 50 cents for men with all girls being admitted free of charge. All students are urged to attend and support a worthy cause.

COUNCIL ACTS ON CHOW LINES; VIDEO SET FOR LOUNGE

Two of the biggest problems of the students have been solved by action of the Student Council, it was announced at a meeting of that group on Monday, October 17th, in 215 Mendel. These are: the long waiting line for breakfast in the cafeteria before early classes each morning, and the television set, or rather the lack of it in the Austin lounge.

Regarding the first problem, Council Chairman, Brian McLarnon announced that arrangements had been made with the cafeteria manager to alleviate the existing condition. He said that a plan to have two lines instead of one would be put into effect by the time this paper was published. One line, just as heretofore, would be for those who have enough time and want to eat a complete breakfast. The other would be for those who have to make a class, and want their coffee, toast and milk on the run. Additional information regarding the new system is to be posted in the cafeteria.

The solution to the latter problem was given by Rev. George McLaughlin, O.S.A., Moderator of the Council. He announced that the long-promised television set for the lounge should also be in operation by this time. The set is to be an RCA table model with a ten-inch screen, complete with an outside aerial and service for one year, and will be placed in the lounge on trial basis for two weeks. If it proves satisfactory after that time it will be left in the lounge permanently and paid for with Student Council funds.

Other business conducted at the meeting included the setting of the date of the Interfrat Ball for November 18th, the nomination of Brian McLarnon as chairman of the dance, and approval of the Owl Hop to be held by the Phi Kappa Pi on February 21st. Approval was given to the fraternity on the condition that it be understood that this dance will not set a precedent for other fraternities to hold individual dances, and that it does not entail any expressed or implied agreement that the engineering fraternity be given sanction to have the Owl Hop again next year.

Falling leaves, smooth music, good entertainment, and beautiful girls were the highlights of the Soph Cotillion held last Friday a gist in the Field House. The first was the theme of the dance as executed by Bill Shilling and his committee, who used two and a half thousand hand-cut paper leaves strung as a colorful canopy over the dance floor. This autumn effect was further carried out by the dance floor centerpiece, a fifteen-foot, pumpkin-headed scarecrow, and by more leaves arranged on the walls of the gym and Blue Room.

The smooth music was provided by the new Villanovans under the baton of their new leader, Vince Palma. The entertainment, the third feature, M.C.'d by Tom Pasha and directed by Jack Kelly, presented Steve Flinn at the piano and songs by Tex Houston, in addition to the "Sophomore Sallies", a group of light-footed he-men dressed a chorus girls.

The pretty girls were provided by the almost 600 students who attended the Cotillion. Recognition was given to the young ladies when a "Miss Soph Cotillion" was nominated by several members of the faculty. An orchid to go with the title was presented to Miss Mimi Heffernan, of Rosemont, who was escorted by Roger Hanafin. Her Ladies-in-Waiting who were also presented orchids were Miss Miriam Megavero, of Wynnewood, escorted by Bob Roland, and Miss Christine Caverzy, also of Rosemont, escorted by Don Lamaire. Tickets to the forthcoming Belle Masque production were presented to the young ladies and their escorts.

Other features contributing to the success of the Cotillion were the

There will be an important meeting of the class tonight at 7:30 in the Commerce and Finance Auditorium. All seniors should make a particular effort to attend since the Senior Prom and Senior Week are important and will be discussed. An important vote must be taken on the Senior Prom question. Over Three Hundred Top "B" For Semester

Rubin, Oxford, and Esterson Achieve 4.00 Record; Engineers Lead With 131

On the Honor Roll for the Spring Semester, released last week by the Office of the Registrar, 379 men are listed as having an average of "B" or better. Three of the group had perfect averages of 4.00 (A). The students who achieved this enviable record were Edward J. Oxford, a senior in the Arts School, and Science students, Emanuel Rubin, a senior Pre-Med and Sherman H. Esterson, a sophomore.

Breaking down the Honor Roll according to schools, we find the Engineers leading with 131 on the list, followed by Commerce and Finance, 125; Arts, 51; Science, 39; Education, 21; Chemistry, 8; Physics, 2; Mathematics, 1; and Naval Science, 1.

The following students averaged at least 3.00 (B):

Station WVIL Airs First Broadcast Of School Year

WVIL, Villanova College's own radio station, began its broadcasting activities for the year last night. Several outstanding programs were on the first night's agenda. The station plans to bring the students the best in radio throughout the year.

The broadcasting year was officially opened with appropriate ceremonies at seven o'clock last night. "The Ave Maria Hour" and "Anything Goes," a musical quiz conducted by Joe O'Brien, highlighted the first evening's activities.

The "Villanova Forum" series will be broadcast throughout the year by WVIL. The first in this series will be broadcast this evening. The Reverend John Courtney Murray, S. J., is to be the speaker for the forum's inaugural session.

Other features this year will include "The International Relations Club Forum," which will be aired each Wednesday evening, and a nightly feature, "Music to Study By," scheduled for daily broadcast from 10 to 11 p.m. "The Fun Parade," the funniest show this side of Berle, featuring Jack Rowe, Skip Keenley and Bill Breninghouse, is expected to be another popular feature.

The Wild Blue Yonder?

This article is the third of a series of four covering the training period that the Midshipmen of the Villanova NROTC Unit attended this summer.—Editor's Note.

Having related somewhat at length the tales of the senior-sophomore cruise ye will now begin the story of the juniors summer stretch with the U. S. Navy.

Once again we return to the date, 4 June, 1949. In the picturesque setting of Villanova's own railroad station, forty-one Junior middies were seen to assemble prior to boarding the Philadelphia local. With a care bordering on fatherly tenderness, Chief Cameron kept his charges well in hand.

Soon came the train, and off were whisked a carload of joyful midshipmen, happily anticipating the summer's activities. At 30th Street Station they changed trains, boarding Pullmans, and, being old hands at this game, immediately broke out several decks of cards, etc.

The trip down was uneventful. Many magazines were read and box lunches with all their wonderful contents were consumed. Indeed, some did not even realize the passage of time. And so it was that the Midshipman Express from Philadelphia arrived at Pensacola on

Bringing Them In

Some of the time this summer was spent on the carrier USS Cabot by the NROTC as a part of the general Navy air training program. Above is shown a few of the trainees bringing a plane into position after a landing. Carrier training is an important phase of the NROTC program.

U. N. WEEK

In this country it's getting so there's a week for just about anything you can think of. In January the Idaho potato is honored among other things; in February there is a week for celebrating hot tea. September has weeks for dogs, felt hats and neckties, but October brings one which is neither local nor commercial. It is UN Week, celebrated all over the world from October 17-24.

A lot of people are going to say "So what? All the United Nations does is talk." And that's true; among other things they talk.

It was talk between two delegates of the United Nations that lifted the Berlin Blockade and sidetracked another World War. It took plenty of talk to save India and Pakistan from what could easily have been one of the bloodiest religious wars in history. Talk brought peace to Palestine and to Indonesia.

But there's more to the UN than talk. Four and a half million children have been fed. Missions have been set up all over the world to teach people how to get more food from the land and water around them. Vast quantities of textbooks, microscopes, all forms of educational equipment, are being distributed in the fight against illiteracy.

All this costs the U.S. $18,000,000 a year—less than the City of Philadelphia spends annually on public works. It stands to reason that we have everything to gain by supporting the United Nations. The best way to do that is to inform ourselves. We read about UN failures in the paper. The other side of the story is free to anyone who is interested at the World Affairs Council, 1411 Walnut Street, the official UN education center for this area.

CONNELLY AWARD

Before the war, one of the biggest events on the Villanova campus was the yearly rivalry between Temple and Villanova. Late during the football season each year they met in one of the fiercest gridiron battles of the season. Sometimes the battle was as fierce off the field as on. It was marked by a big weekend with social events held by each school. At Villanova it was called the Owl Hop at that time. The famed decorations displayed by both schools prior to the game were famous all around the east.

On the Main Line, the Connelly award was given to the Residence Hall which showed the best combination of ingenuity and work in the decoration of it. Year after year the boys from the Main Line tried to outdo their previous efforts until it was nothing short of a college tradition. The conclusion of the Temple series and the outbreak of the war interrupted any continuance of this tradition.

Two years ago, a drive was started by the VILLANOVAN in collaboration with the Student Council to bring back the Connelly Award competition. For the past two years it has been an integral part of the intramural schedule. Besides the awarding of the plaque, points were given toward the intramural crown to the halls having the best decorations.

This year, as the time draws nigh, the Hall Counsellors under the direction of Father Dunne, will ask for members of each Hall to begin work on the decorations. It is not only a chance to show our confidence in the team, but also to demonstrate that we are not lacking in school spirit.

Numerous comments have been made by the alumni and outsiders who wonder where the spirit that was once so much a part of Villanova has gone to. They claim that there was not much shown when the great football team made its two showings at Shibe Park this year. We are of the opinion that the wrong impression has been conveyed, and that there is plenty of enthusiastic spirit among the students of the Main Line.

So when your hall begins work on the decorations for the Connelly award, turn out and show some school spirit.

How are your manners? When you're on a date are you always careful to help your girl on with her coat? When you introduce her to your buddies do you make sure you mention her name first? And when you arrive home do you make a habit of walking around to open the car door for her? More than likely you rate a hundred percent on this quiz with no effort at all, and much more than likely if you don't you are not especially noted for excellence in social grace.

Other Times

But how about your manners at times other than on dates? How, for instance, about your manners in church? Do you consistently stumble up the aisle as the priest begins the Epistle? When Mass is crowded, do you regularly camp on the end of the pew and force everyone to climb over you, including the Blessed Sacrament after Communion? And after defending your end position zealously do you make good use of it by piling out for the last blessing and sprinting for the door as everyone else rises for the last Gospel? Or maybe you have your own little private set of rudisms to amuse you at Sunday Mass. Maybe you are of the artistic type and just can't resist folding up a prayer card into all kinds of clever figures, or the industrious kind who must use every minute to good avail, and so spends the greater part of Mass practicing Morse code by tapping his rosary on the pew.

Indifferent

More than likely if you are still reading this column you have been wasting your time, because the odds are heavy that you just go to church nice and peaceful like, without bothering anybody. In fact maybe you go to the other extreme —maybe you go to church without even bothering God. And that isn't doing you a whole lot of good either. But that is just a maybe, and the odds are still in favor of your being at least of average behavior.

Review

Nonetheless it might be worth the effort to analyze our conduct in church just to see if we are as perfect as we have always presumed ourselves to be. It really is a very minor matter, but beaches are made of grains of sand, and pebbles have started slides. It might be an easy way to get a lot more out of the time and effort we already spend in prayer of one kind or another, and what better way can we find to start than an easy way?

LYNX

A student subscription drive for the Lynx quarterly was announced at the latest meeting of the Lynx staff. John Murphy, Editor, stated that the drive will begin October 31st. and cover a two-week period. The subscription rate will be one dollar, and the first Lynx, the Fall issue, will be distributed some time in November.

ADVICE TO THE LOVEWORN

By Bill Brenninghouse

No newspaper today is complete unless it has within its ad-splattered pages a column devoted to the care and feeding of those wallowing in the depths and despairs of that state known as love. Every town has its own little problems solver in its daily journalistic attempt. This helpful person may be male or female but it seems that females are preferred. This is because women think they have a lot more problems than men. After an exhausting search your reporter has selected a few choice questions and answers.

Dear Old Mrs. Pobblebottom,

I am a young girl of fourteen and I am very much in love with a man twenty-six years my senior. My mother objects to this match, not only because of the age difference, but also because he is a drunkard, is married, has five children, and is now doing a twenty year stretch in prison for grand larceny. I know that my lover boy has faults, but who hasn't? I think my mother is unfair. What shall I do?

Distressed

Dear Distressed,

Your problem is a common one and has touched my heart. My advice to you is to trust in your mother's judgment. She may be wrong but she's still your mother and we all love our mothers, don't we? Forget this boy and find a new love.

Old Mrs. Pobblebottom

In reality Old Mrs. Pobblebottom is Waldo Lumpfry, head copy boy in charge of emptying green wastebaskets. It seems that all he does is read the letter and classify it into one of five types. Old Mrs. Pobblebottom has been giving only five answers in the last sixteen years. The five basic problems are:

The old lady doesn't like him (her); He (she) left me for another; she's (he's) poor, shall I marry her (him)? I used to like him (her) but I don't no more; and I love him (her) and I think he (she) likes me but he (she) never says nothing about us (we). Still another purveyor of good advice is Dr. Thermoyd J. Strichnine, Your Amiable Friend in Need. One of his readers has this problem.

Dear Dr. Thermoyd J. Strichnine,
My Amiable Friend In Need,

This girl and me, the both of us, we have been going steady now for almost nine years and this girl she says that she is getting tired of waiting. This girl she said the both of us we would get married as soon as I get a job. Can I help it if times has been tough in the last nine years? This girl she has been saving her money and she has over a hundred and twenty bucks so I says that we outta get married while we're flush. This girl she says I got no pride, I also got no job. This girl she says she's going to start going out with Slug if the both of us we don't get hitched soon. What should I do?

Joe

My Dear Joseph,

The consequences of plying one's troth with another has certain restrictions which must be acceded to and bring about certain obligatory demands which you must fulfill to the greatest extent of your inherent capabilities. My advice to you is for you to seek employment at the earliest possible opportunity and to prove yourself the epitome of industry to this fair damsel. Take for your criterion the life of J. Warner Bosshelsmoon. There was a man. Go to it, my boy.

Dr. Thermoyd J. Strichnine,
Your Amiable Friend in Need

CAREERS

By P. F. Jannuzzo

This is to be the first in a series of articles pertaining to the opportunities of the college graduate. It is not intended to be comprehensive but rather informative and point out a few worthwhile facts to the jobseeker. The scope of these articles will be necessarily limited. The majority of the liberal art graduates of the many schools throughout the land intend to continue their education in law schools. Considering its popularity law seems a good place to start.

Prelegal Training

All but a few schools require a minimum of two years of approved prelegal college training. Three years of full-time study in a law school merits the degree of LL.B. A Master of Laws degree is conferred after a successful year of post-graduate work, and frees the graduate of the obligation of spending a year's time as an apprentice before being eligible to take his bar examination. When and if the bar exam is passed there are several avenues the young lawyer may follow. He may open his own office or he may join with other recent graduates and open a law firm. Until such time as he can specialize the lawyer corresponds to the general practitioner of medicine, and his duties fall into two categories of either advocate, representing his client in court, or consultant. As a consultant the lawyer advises a client on the legal aspects of his business, or on his rights and duties under the law. As a specialist he may concentrate on any one of a number of important branches of law, including: corporation, criminal, patent tax law, trial work, and teaching.

Salaries

For their legal services lawyers with experience ranging from five to ten years in cities of 50,000 and more average $3,700 to $4,000 a year, these earnings do not represent incomes of more successful attorneys. But law does not confine a person to a solitary profession, his training is valuable in many activities, such as managing a business, banking, insurance, and politics.

Law is a crowded and hence highly competitive field, but there are opportunities for the man with the energy and initiative to step out ahead of the common run of his associates. The nation's requirements for legal services increases with the rate of business expansion of governmental activities, and the increase in regulation of business. With this in mind the outlook of the new lawyer appears relatively brighter at this date than at any time since many years before the war.

LETTERS

Dear Editor,

I realize that Villanova has one of the better football teams in the East and even after the Tulsa game I was sure that we lost due to a combination of breaks and the wholly admirable playing of the inspired Tulsa team.

I read your sports editor's column today and received quite a "jarring," for I saw that we were not one of the better teams of the East but the best. Now this is a pretty broad statement to make, especially when it appears in a newspaper supposedly dealing with facts and not a pep rally where such rash statements are to be expected. Anyhow, I always thought that New York state was in the East, and as long as West Point is in New York, and the Military Academy is West Point, I think Mr. Range's statement is more than a little questionable.

Now I'm not belittling my own school. I move in a circle of friends who do not attend this school and who call upon me to defend the school's reputation in everything from football to the merit of the School of Engineering. This I do as best I can. But facts are facts, and it seems to me that no columnist, not even an editor, can ignore what is generally accepted as fact, or at least without an explanation of his choice of one team over another team apparently better qualified for the title "Best in the East," (which is a mythical title anyhow, I might add.)

Oh well, maybe Mr. Range's motto is: "If you can't beat them, ignore them."

Sincerely,
Bewildered

It takes more than a good band to get ahead in the music business these days; you've just got to have a gimick or as the kids on the beat would say, "You ain't nowhere."

Johnny Fisher is a guy with a gimick and from what we've seen he has a band that will help him make it work.

Last week Bruce and I were invited down to catch his outfit in a rehearsal. It was an impromptu little affair but I'll guarantee that a fine time was had by all.

Good Outfit

First, let it be known that this was not just a group of amateurs knocking themselves out for kicks. As a whole, the outfit is fairly young but strictly professional. They play like they mean it and have a wealth of experience to back them up. It seems that when Johnny was building his outfit he very systematically lifted all the top men he could from the better local bands, and we thoroughly agree that he did a fine job of it.

There's one kid in particular who does great things with a trombone. Bobby Jones is his name, and at the tender age of eighteen seems to be destined for a cozy future. Seeing him in action put me in mind of Corky Corcoran who started playing sax with Harry James when he has seventeen. Same crew cut and comparable talent. This kid's got stuff he hasn't used yet. Frank Hess on lead trumpet and Bob Jones (they should have called this outfit the Jones Boys) on tenor sax also add immeasurably to the aggregation.

Gimick

As I mentioned earlier, Johnny has a gimick, but of course, like you and me, the band is in the habit of eating regularly so they do the usual one night dances, and split up to do combo work when not on a full-scale job. They plan to blossom out with their own economy size jazz concert within a few weeks. They have several dates set now and plan many more—one at Villanova for instance. If you remember, we mentioned that last week. And now here's Bruce with a little more of the same.

Future Look

Thanks, Ro! Many of you have expressed at one time or another the thought, "what kind of music will they be playing in a few years?" Perhaps the most accurate means of determining the trend toward the jazz of tomorrow is to find out what the musicians of tomorrow are playing and what they hope to accomplish in the years ahead. Fortunately we have had an opportunity to form an opinion of sorts through a brief but pleasant association with the fellows in Johnny Fisher's outfit.

Precisely who is Johnny Fisher? The answer is both simple and comprehensive. Simple insofar as he is one of many musicians who have organized a band to play the kind of music they want and are struggling to make a name for themselves in their chosen field. Comprehensive insofar as they are musicians of tomorrow, the band that will be playing all the name spots in New York, the men who will lead the development of modern jazz. Not necessarily the band in question, but rather the band that will come from all the young bands throughout the nation who are striving for the same success that Johnny's band hopes to attain.

Radical Departure

The music they play is not, as many expect from the young men of modern music, a radical departure from anything previously written. Rather, it is a gradual improvement of already existing and accepted forms. Some few of you may have noticed the obvious "filling in" near the middle of Boyd Raeburn's otherwise excellent record "Interlude." Somebody in Johnny's band did, for arranger Murray Schaft wrote an original break to replace the "fill in" and thus the improvement and development of jazz continues. With their projected jazz concert in mind, Schaft has written what may be best termed a "production number." Explaining it as a compilation of trends in jazz presented in extensive continuity it is merely another limited attempt to put into print, what can only be expressed in music. Words can never fully portray a musical impression. Thus I shall let it suffice to say that should you be afforded the opportunity to attend the contemplated jazz concert here at Villanova, by all means take advantage of it.

PROOF of the NEGATIVE

By WILLIAM CARROLL

It is amusing in the extreme, to see what the American public reads. The unfortunate part of the whole business is the tragic fact that they no longer read, they only look. The problem takes on a humorous note when we consider it in this aspect.

Environment

Some psychologists argue that a man becomes his experiences. In other words he acts according to the knowledge he has. That which constitutes his knowledge is his experience. For instance: if a man, from his earliest childhood, experiences those things kindred to a rural environment, he may well manifest in maturity all the indicia of a farmer. His knowledge is made up for the most part of those things attendant to the environment in which he has been raised. This theory can be carried too far, of course, and at the outset we assure you we intend to carry it just as far as it will stretch. Why? Simply for purposes of showing in a somewhat unwarranted fashion the importance the factor plays and the harm it works.

Wrong Direction

Getting back to the American Looking Public. We submit that if the many millions of Americans continue to indulge in picture periodicals our society will in time become a nation made up of a vast "Picture of the Week."

The important thing to consider is the kind and character of the pictures that are offered in the picture periodicals.

Without Moralizing

Without going into a lot of moralizing on the subject you must admit that you don't have to be a moral theologian to realize that 99½% of the pictures that you see in these magazines would have been burned by your grandmothers twenty years ago. Grandmother knew what the score was. So do we, but we would rather not admit it for fear of being looked upon as an odd and somewhat prudish character. You must admit that the old girl's State of the Nation in her prime was in considerably better condition than the state in which we find ourselves. Teen-agers behaving in a fashion that would make the Roman voluptuaries look like pikers by comparison.

Marriage is fast becoming an institution of the "take it on a time trial" variety. You know, "try it out for awhile." If it doesn't work out forget it and try again some other time. Great! The upshot of all of this business can be found in such indicative statistics as the following: 6,000,000 sleeping doses sold every day in the United States. $56.00 spent on alcohol every year on a per capita basis. And you know that there are a lot of kids who don't drink until they are seventeen, at least. There is enough money spent on cigarettes every year to build two hundred B-36 bombers. And so it goes.

Look At the Covers

Getting back to our original theory and its application to picture magazines, we don't intend to take the time or the trouble to establish a line of direct cause from the periodicals to the trouble in

Around The Town

By F. A. VARALLO

Our footlight fare this week features "Montserrat," Lillian Hellman's adaption of Emmanuel Roble's Paris success of last season. Currently being presented at the Forrest, "Montserrat" is an absorbing and exciting drama with constantly increasing tension. It takes its inspiration from the pages of South American history of more than a century ago. This was the period when Simon Bolivar was hailed as hero, the "Liberator of his day, who led the insurrection against Spain, unifying the separate states of Venezuela, Ecuador, and Colombia into his new "Republic of Colombia," and inflaming his followers with fanatic zeal and devotion. This blind belief is the principal motive of "Montserrat."

Tragic Theme

The scene is Venezuela in the year 1812, when the Spanish army of occupation was once again trying to stamp out rebellion by capturing Montserrat, a young Spanish officer, sympathizes with Bolivar and helps the patriot to elude his pursuers. Montserrat is discovered, however, by Colonel Izquiredo, the Spanish Commander, who attempts to force him to reveal Bolivar's hiding place. Instead of physical torture, Izquiredo causes six hostages to be picked up at random from the town square and gives them an hour to plead with Montserrat for their lives. The emotions and reactions of these victims—a wealthy, elderly, and recently married merchant; the philosophical woodcarver; the Spanish actor; a boy whose father and brother have lost their lives in Bolivar's army, and two women of different backgrounds—provide the action. The pleading is in vain, however, and a wanton slaughter climaxed by Montserrat's death takes place.

The Cast

Emlyn Williams, British dramatist and actor is superb in his portrayal of the cynical Izquiredo, while William Redfield handles the role of Montserrat admirably. The veteran Francis Compton lends his rich experience to the part of Father Coronil, the priest. Rheinhold Shunzel, John Abbott, Vivian Nathan, Julie Tarris, George Bartlinieff and William Henson give thrilling performances as the six hostages.

Musical Comedy

"Yes Sir, That's My Baby," a "My Baby," a Technicolor production at the Karlton gives us some amusing collegiate capers. Wed to campus beauty Gloria De Haven and the doting dad of a baby boy, Donald O'Connor tries to combine college and family life. Four of his ex-GI buddies are in the same and fix. The physchology prof convinces the girls that their husbands should help with the household chores. This leaves little time for football practice and the coach, Charles Coburn, begins to worry. Things look black on the day of the big game but school spirit spurs the team to victory.

"Red, Hot and Blue"

Betty Hutton, boisterous, rowdy and clowning, appears in this new flicker at the Goldman. This film can hardly be recommended to movie fans since its is nothing but a hodgepodge of melodramatic gangster business, show business and music. There are some amusing spots but not nough to make for good entertainment.

Ice-Capades

The 10th edition of the "Ice-Capades" will be at the Arena until October 31st. It features ten big production numbers, twenty big acts. Don't miss this enjoyable show!

THE FIFTH COLUMN!

Did you miss us last week? Did you wake up last Tuesday morning anxiously looking forward to the FIFTH COLUMN? Were you disappointed when you opened the page and didn't find our literary masterpiece? Well, don't fret . . . we were more surprised than you were . . . the truth is we were sabotaged. It seems that our reliable editor (no names please) got all hepped up at the Tulsa pep rally and joined the torchlight parade. We didn't notice until it was too late that the torch he was burning was our column . . . which goes to show that at least one person carries a torch for the FIFTH. . . . Anyhow, we've regained our senses, calmed our tempers, secured the editor in Mendel Tower and lost the key . . . no hard feelings. . . .

Received a letter from an ardent reader:

Dear Editor,

Noticed last week that the Fifth Column was omitted. If the Villanovan is to be improved, I would say this is a step in the right direction.

Affectionately,
Your Reader . . .

But we don't mind that, either . . . we chained him to a Rosemont girl for the Soph Cotillion. . . .

Speaking of the Soph Hop, did anyone notice Ray Waldron with his brother's suit, his father's car, and his buddy's girl? . . . Bob (Women Hater) Hahn spent the evening talking golf with the Pinkerton man. It seems that darkness scares him. . . . Chairman Bob (Mohot) Quinn and Bruce Taten wore their white hats in an attempt to steal some Frosh's girls. . . . John Morris had to content himself by bringing only one date. . . . Did you notice the various styles of dancing adopted by many out-of-towners? This was one time when the Field House became a gridiron, complete with players, subs and officials. . . . Paul Hanafin changed his pace so frequently he looked as if he invented the delayed buck play used by Earl Blaik. . . . Jack Kelly made a perfect lineman as he threw his weight around the floor. . . . Pete D'Alonzo has nothing on Bill Canino whose violent dancing left a wake of destruction as he plowed through the masses. . . . Dick Hammond went off guard and is going steady with a Miss Take. . . . Gene Cullen, formerly coached by Arthur Murray, took an end sweep so fast that he crashed into Dave Jones running interference. Both were treated by Pre-Med Joe Fabiani who was also involved in the collision. . . . Tom Linahan, everybody's buddy, was in poor shape throwing passes at the girls. They were all intercepted. . . . Jim Gallagher saw a clearing and broke into the open only to fumble his girl into the waiting arms of Bud Holland. Jim watched the rest of the game from the side-lines. . . . Father Burke, a referee, stepped in and called 15 yards on Dick Lauman for holding. . . . The between-the-halves entertainment was gratefully accepted by the fans, especially the Sophomore Sallies demonstration of dancing as it should be done. . . .

ORCHIDS TO:

Father Handran and the Band for the fine job they're doing despite rehearsing under adverse conditions. . . . John McLaughlin and McNamara are responsible for the comedy acts. . . .

ONIONS TO:

Hamburgers

Hear Ye! Hear Ye! Dick (Smoky) Zande, understudy to Vince Cella in the forthcoming Belle Masque Production, received a pleasant surprise from the girls across the road on the occasion of his sixteenth birthday. The Rosemont corral club serenaded him over the phone with "We're Just Wild About Hammy". . . . Bill Hahn is running a date bureau. He not only guarantees an enjoyable date but even goes so far as to arrange discounts for his buddies. Only trouble is Bill can't get a date for himself. . . . Brainerd Gives A. I. E. E. Talk On Illumination

Last Tuesday night the College Branch of the A. I. E. E. presented Mr. Arthur A. Brainerd in a lecture entitled "Illumination, an Engineering Activity." Mr. Brainerd is one of the outstanding authorities in his field in the U. S. He is a Fellow of the I. E. S., President of the U. S. National Committee of the International Commission on Illuminations, author of numerous technical papers, and Illumination Engineer of the Market Studies and Service Division of the Phila. Electric Co.

Mr. Brainerd spoke on several aspects of illumination engineering including a brief history of the field, measurements and instruments, problems of the day, and, especially the task of the engineer in making proper selections based upon scientific rather than personal emotion. He noted the difficulties in testing whereby the time a lighting fixture has been properly tested it is already out of date. He remarked upon the rapid changes in the field and the many advances being made.

Refreshments were served after the meeting, at which time, Mr. Brainerd, and his assistants, Mr. Harrison and Mr. Flynn, invited questions. Mr. Michael Flynn, Villanova, '45, is a graduate of the school of electrical engineering. At present he is in charge of all lighting at the Phila. Electric Co. properties.

which we find ourselves. You can do it without too much strain. Just take a look at the covers (that's enough) on the magazines on any fair sized news stand and see if it doesn't suggest that business about near-occasion that the good nuns tried so hard to impress on us when we were still playing such games as "kick the can."

We don't want to place all of the blame on the magazines. We grant that they are not totally responsible. If we said that, we would be slighting Hollywood, Commercial Advertising and the historical novelists—and you must admit they do deserve some of the credit.

Picks Committees for Initiation, I-F Ball

As Delta Pi Epsilon fraternity held its second meeting last Wednesday, the committees appointed at the last meeting reported. A further committee was appointed to meet with the Student Council concerning the Inter-Frat Ball. It was also announced that the pledge program will begin next week.

A fraternity is a student organization formed chiefly to promote friendship and welfare among the members. The Delta Pi Epsilon offers a splendid opportunity for the students in the C and F School to make new friends. They not only share social events but emphasize intellectual and business adventures. Since most of the members are Seniors the need of sophomores to carry on the work of the fraternity is marked. Any sophomore interested in joining is requested to report on Wednesday evening October 26th, to 215 Mendel where their applications will be received.

N. Y. Villanovans Schedule Dance

The Villanova Club of New York will hold its annual dance on Friday evening, November 25th, in the Keystone Room of the Hotel Statler in New York, according to Mike Marshall, campus representative for the New York club.

"Since last year's affair was such an astounding success," Marshall said, "we expect a minimum of 100 men from the New York area this year."

Last year, the song "V for Villanova" was introduced. The Alumni Association chose the orchestra and the admission price was five dollars per couple, and forty undergraduate couples attended.

Those interested should contact Mike Marshall, O'Dwyer Hall, or write directly to the Villanova Club of New York.

The Wild Blue Yonder

the early evening of Sunday, 5 June. Buses were waiting, and within a tolerable period the middies had "chowed down" and were receiving their billet assignments at NAAS Corry. After a briefing by by the officer-in-charge, all hands turned in for a good night's sleep.

So they thought! Somewhere on the foggy side of 0500 all were roused for a muster. Gradually, each began to realize where he was and to hustle for a place in the chow line.

Incidentally, the middies at Corry ate in the officers mess. As to the quality and quantity of food, well, many were the contented sighs issuing from Villanovans as they passed out with tooth-pick in hand.

Our lads were in a company with all the maddies from Auburn. After several feuds which consisted mostly of singing "Yankee Doodle" and "Dixie", the boys settled down for a nice stay.

Classes began immediately, and tours were conducted. The instructors were the best and all the boys were well content to learn about aerodynamics and the mechanical data involved in the construction of a modern aircraft engine.

Among other things the men learned how to give a 3-60 and 90-hour check. One of the most interesting things was the observation of cadets learning to perform night landings. Probably the greatest thrill of all was revving up an SNJ.

The principal topic taught during the one-week phase at Corry was flight instruments. The problems confronting a pilot are made somewhat clearer by excellent instruction and interested consideration for both the officers and men at that field. To a man, the Villanova contingent of trainees hated to leave NAAS Coory.

VILLANOVANS RE-ORGANIZED; VINCE PALMA IS LEADER

The Villanovans, the campus dance band, has been completely reorganized by Vince Palma, who has taken over the position of Band Leader left open by the recent resignation of Red Murphy.

From all reports, there has been a marked improvement in the presentation of their arrangements. At present, thirteen pieces are featured with Vince playing Tenor Sax. Talented Marion Stodde is the lovely vocalist who does the warbling. Marion was a finalist in the recent contest sponsored by Benny Goodman in his search for new talent.

This year it has been decided to do away with the "Closed Shop" with regards to membership in the Villanovans. Until this year it was required that one be a member of the Villanova marching band in order to be eligible to play with the Villanovans.

NFCCS Plans Trip To Europe

A complete round-trip to Europe in commemoration of the Holy Year will be accessible to Villanova students next summer for approximately $465. The NFCCS, sponsoring the excursion, will issue definite details in the near future.

Numerous Catholic collegians from all sections of the nation are expected to take advantage of this offer. It is open to every Catholic college student in the United States. The $465 price includes complete second-class round-trip passage, all board and meal expenses on the continent, and other common group expenses. The excursion is expected to depart in the latter part of July.

The likely travel plans call for the tour to finish its excursion on the continent at Rome, September 3rd to 6th. From the date of arrival to the scheduled meeting in Rome, there will be tours conducted throughout Europe. Several tours will be conducted, each covering various renowned spots of historic note. The trip is expected to visit Paris for one or two weeks.

That Autumn Motif

Again a Sophomore class has come up with a successful Cotillion. An evening of well balanced fare left everyone feeling that a good time was had by all. The new Villanovans were another feature of the dance.

Bussolari Group Hosts Rosemont In Joint Meeting

Opening a full season of activities, the Bussolari Foreign Affairs Society was host to twenty members of the Rosemont International Relations Club at a joint meeting held in the seminar rooms of the Library, Tuesday evening.

Highlight of the evening was a lecture by Dr. Hartman, professor of History and Chairman of the History Department. Dr. Hartman spoke on "American Economic Foreign Policy and its Impact on Foreign Affairs." After the lecture, Roger Hamelin, secretary, led a lively discussion of the topic, during which several searching questions were directed at the speaker. The meeting then adjourned to the C. & F. Auditorium for refreshments and informal talk on world affairs in general.

Already scheduled is another joint meeting with the Bryn Mawr Foreign Relations Club on November 3. The radio series of the Bussolari is delayed pending the opening of WVIL. The co-operation of the University of Pennsylvania, Haverford College, and Swarthmore College along with lectures by members of the faculty should make this program series entertaining and informative.

The attention of the student body is called to the display in the library, marking United Nations Day October 24. The organization and achievements of the U.N. are vividly portrayed. The stellar work of BANK, FUND, W. H. O. and other economic and humanitarian branches of U.N., operating far from the dramatic clamor of the East-West split, have gone virtually unnoticed. These results, along with progressive achievements in the Economic and Social Council, justify the U.N. bid for a rebirth of confidence.

The next meeting of the Foreign Affairs Society will be announced by posters and postal cards to all members.

Math Club Meets To Plan Season

Mu Alpha Theta, the mathematics club, began another season on Monday, October 17, with a meeting at which elections were held. The club is under the direction of Professor Emil Amelotti.

Frank Haney was elected president of the group, and John Bell and Dan Haflinger, vice-president and secretary - treasurer, respectively. The theme for this year is to be extra-curricular study of mathematics, particularly in the fields of Engineering and theoretical mathematics.

All those interesed in joining the Math Club will be able to do so at the next meeting. Notices will be posted specifying time and place.

Villanova Strength Explodes in 2 Half For 3 Touchdowns

Romanik, D'Alonzo, Pasquariello set Pace for 495 Total Gain.

By Harry Range

Last Saturday at Forbes Field in Pittsburgh, some 15,000 saw a rebounding Villanova club break a 0-0 halftime deadlock and go on to romp over Duquesne 20-0 in the second half.

The Wildcats again were a "second half club" as they were unable to do anything but threaten in the first two quarters while the Dukes put on a remarkable performance both offensively and defensively.

Phil Ahwesh's Dukes did very well before the Homecoming Day throng and came very close to scoring twice. The first threat was a drive after the opening kickoff which brought the ball to the Villanova 14 but it was stopped when Johnny Duchess was hit hard and fumbled. The Cats then took over and, although they could not score in the first half, were way head of the hard-fighting Dukes in the statistics.

Concentrated drives brought the Mainliners as far as the Bluffites 28 and 22 but both time the ball was lost on downs and the Dukes began fighting again. It seemed that when the chips were down offensively Villanova just didn't have it in the first half, but on the defense they stopped Duquesne on the 31 and again on the 22. The Dukes made their last bid late in the second period with an attempted field goal from 33 yards out which fell 5 yards short.

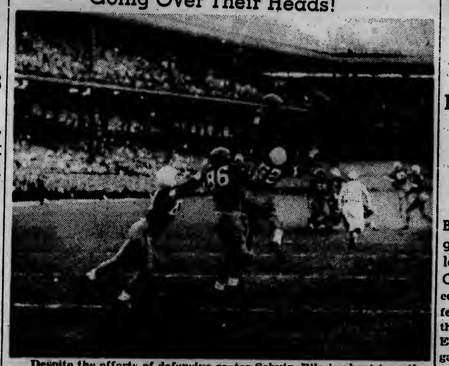
Wildcat Power Shows

The second half saw the inevitable come with Steve Romanik, Dan Brown, Pete D'Alonzo, Ralph Pasquariello, and Joe Rogers picking up yard after yard and hitting for paydirt three times.

Things got under way with Big Ralph taking turns with Romanik's arm for a 35-yard TD drive which ended with Steve passing to Dan Brown in the end zone for the first score. Duquesne's Jim Gilleoly made a good try to spoil the play, but the ball sliced off his hands into the arms of the great end. Tom Clavin's try for the extra point was wide and it could still have been anybody's ball game. But within three minutes the Cats had pounded back for 59 yards and another score.

Pete D'Alonzo, who had taken over where Pasquariello had left off, started the powerhouse rolling by carrying the mail 37 yards off left tackle and 17 yards off right tackle in successive plays to put the ball on the Dukes five. A line play gained two more yards, a pass to Brown missed, but on the fifth play Joe Rogers took a lateral from Romanik and skirted right end for pay dirt. This time Clavin split the uprights and the score stood at 13-0.

O'Boyle Leads 80 Yard Drive



The final marker for the Cats came late in the last period as a result of an 80-yard drive with quarterback Neil O'Boyle steering the Blue and White all the way. The six points came on a pitch out from O'Boyle to Bill Padula who swept right end and raced down the sidelines to the goal line. A spectacular block by end John Bogan saved Padula from being knocked out of bounds on the 15. Clavin's kick was perfect and the game ended with the score 20-0.

Lead In Statistics

In the statistics department, the Cats were miles ahead of the Dukes picking up a total of 495 yards to 191, passing for 169 to 48, and rolling to 23 first downs to 8 for Duquesne.

Much praise is due the inspired Dukes and their fine new coach, Phil Ahwesh who really put on a great show for the first half but succumbed to the power of the superior Cats in the last two periods.

Going Over Their Heads!

Despite the efforts of defensive center Schutz, Rilo is about to gather in another Romanik pass for long yardage. It was the combination of passes and running plays clicking in the second half that opened up the game.

X-Country Team Drops 2nd Meet of Year, Losing to NYU

Ross Paces Field, But Harriers Bow To Violets 24-31

By BILL COONEY

Browning Ross returned to his usual form last Saturday when he won the long five-mile grind up in New York's Van Courtlandt Park to pace harriers from Villanova and New York University. N. Y. U.'s team poyer was a little too much for the Wildcat's, however, for the Violets copped the meet 24 to 31. Ross' time for the hilly course was a good 26:49.5 considering that he ran against the clock all the way.

Surprise of the meet was N. Y. U.'s Gordon McKenzie who trailed Ross over by about 70 yards. McKenzie who is but a sophomore amazed even Violet supporters by taking George Thompson by about ten yards, Thompson's third place and Ross' first could not tip the balance away from the New Yorkers show of strength though, as the next four men over were Von Elling's stalwarts. Rounding out the Wildcat scoring were Charlie McKee, Artie Klepper and Bill Curran. Also running for Villanova were Jim McKenna and Pete Sinigan.

Ross Wins Easily

Ross experienced little difficulty in winning and led the field almost all the way. We say almost all the way for the last man out as the gun went off was none other than Browning Ross. His reluctance to take the lead at the outset caused many a knowing and amused smile among the spectators. He had the lead very definitely however as he passed the three-mile marker in 15:56.5. The pattern was about the same as the finish then with McKenzia and Thompson second and third respectively at 3 miles also.

The meet was originally scheduled as a triangular affair with Manhattan as the third school. Due to a mixup in schedule however, Manhattan was on a trip meeting Syracuse. A disasterous trip it was too for they were shutout 15-40 by the Orange.

Second Loss This Season

For Villanova this was the second loss in two starts this season. Their loss was made even more unbearable by the fact that Ross' knee was bothering him. A three-week rest did the trick and he is now back in form.

One spectator was moved to remark that it's too bad the race wasn't 600 yards instead of five miles. It would be a great race too for competitor in the meet were Jim

Kittens Victorious In Opener, Down Rutgers 19-13

McCreary and Battino Score on Long Runs

By GEORGE SCANLON

The rejuvenated Villanova Kittens pounded out a 19-13 victory over highly rated Rutgers on Friday. It was the 150's first victory in six games and one to be proud of.

The game got underway with the Blue and White kicking off to Rutgers who returned the ball to the 15. The opponents couldn't move and were forced to kick out on the Villanova 22. On the third play from scrimmage chunky Charlie Battino whipped off tackle, cut to the outside, and scampered 78 yards to paydirt on a magnificent run. Mergen's try for the extra point was wide.

Rutgers began a drive from mid-field with some fancy passing by quarterback Len Affiance. With a first down on the 13, Villanova's fighting eleven held for four downs. It was this kind of fight and determination that marked the Kittens play throughout the game. Jimmy Moore, Villanova's standout signal caller, booning punts kept Rutgers on the remainder of the quarter.

In the second quarter the Red and White of Rutgers drove 40 yards to the Villanova 20 but once again the Junior Wildcats held with Joe Bellero recovering a Rutgers' bobble to snuff this threat. Late in the second stanza the Kittens drove to the 8-yard line paced by Moore's passes to Jim Gallo and Charlie Bottino's dazzling runs. The half ended this scoring drive and the Kittens held a 6-0 lead at intermission.

Rutgers Scores

The third quarter saw an exchange of punts with finally the Kittens initiating a sustained drive to the opponents 24, before an interception cooled this threat. Rutgers late in the 3rd quarter scored on a 7-yard pass from Affiance to John Salt. The score was the result of a 97-yard march aided by Affiance's passes and helpful penalties. The try for the point failed to break the 6-6 tie which prevailed till the end of the 3rd quarter.

In the last period the Kittens were pushed back to their own 35 where Joe McCreary turned on his amazing speed and outraced four Rutgers defenders to score.

Captain Bob Fitzmeyer threw a bridal block to shake the elusive speedster loose. Versatile Jim Moore split the uprights to make the score 13-6 in favor of the Blue and White. Rutgers drove deep into Cat territory but their attack fell short. The Kittens struck again with Joe McCreary streaking 78 yards to the double white stripe. Joe simply had too much speed and fight to be stopped. Moore's try for the gift point was wide and the Blue and White had a 19-6 lead.

In the final minutes Alliance connected with his favorite target, Salt, to make the final count 19-13.

Great Improvement

The improvement of the 150's is amazing. Last year's score was 39-0 in favor of Rutgers but this year's efforts presented a different story. Space doesn't permit the praise which is due to coaches Jack McCourille, Bud Kane, Sid Blanz, Tony Russo, and Dom Pindino. The excellent coaching was evident in the 150's manner of alertness and heads-up football. Next week the club travels to Ithaca New York to encounter Cornell and what they hope to be another victory.

Next Opponents For 'Cats Are Boston College Eagles

B. C. Still Strong Even After Hoya Upset; Have Diminick, Statner, Palladino and Sogin.

By NEAL FAHY

On Friday evening under the arc lights of Braves Field, Boston, Villanova's football eleven will once more take to the gridiron, this time in an effort to break an old jinx. For the last three years in a row, the Wildcats have gone to the Hub City, have played their best brand of football, and have been edged by Boston College by only a few points. As a matter of fact the total number of points the Eagles have won by in the three games is 14.

This time, the 'Cats hope its going to be different. They're out to make up for all three losses, and they can do it if they regain their early season form. Both teams have played Penn State. Bee Cee lost 32-14 and Villanova won 27-6. But, whenever these two elevens meet, one might as well throw the record books out the window.

Rated High

The pre-season prognosticators picked the Eagles as the top eleven in the East on the basis of their excellent material. However, Boston College has been following the new Beantown tradition, established by the Red Sox and the Braves, of losing games despite having the better personnel. Nevertheless, the Eagles are ready to start blasting any day now, and Friday might be the night.

A crowd of about 35,000 is expected to be on hand and the game will be televised in Boston and New York, but not in Philadelphia. So far this year, Boston College has lost to Oklahoma 46-0, beat Wake Forrest 21-13, was trounced by Penn State 32-14, and tied Mississippi 25-25. Last Friday night the Eagles ——— Georgetown by a score of ——— to ———.

The Wildcats will face virtually the same squad they lost to last year (20-13) with only one regular, Tom Brennan, a guard, lost by graduation. Ed Sorgin is Bee Cee's indispensable man. About Friday night, Coach Denny Meyers will tell you "We'll go as Sorgin goes." This high kicking, hard pounding quarterback really began to click in midseason of '48. He found his range in the Mississippi game, and final pass tabulations gave him 84 completions out of 164 and ranked him seventh in the nation in total attack.

Eagle Stars

Bob Palladino Emil Stautner Joe Diminick

Heavy Line

Villanova has faced quite a few heavy lines this season, but Boston College will present undoubtedly the biggest. For instance, at the tackles there are, Ernie (the horse) Stautner at 224, and Art Donovan at a cool 233. The centers are paced by Ed Kennedy, an anemic stripling of 265 pounds who stands 6 feet six inches. Starting ends should be Art Spinney 205, and Stan Goode who tips the beams at 211. Mr. Myer plans to start at the guard slots Dom Papaleo 233, and Len Flagerty 211 lbs.

In the backfield behind Sorgin, is the often dazzling Steve Sluka, Bob Palladino, the Natick Nugget, averaged better than six golden yards per try with his fullback lunges last autumn. Joe Diminick, the old Wildcat nemesis, and Maurice Poissant travel like startled halfback spooks off the tricky Myers T, while Ed Clasby rips like a fiend and is the soundest defenseman in the Maroon and Gold regalia.

The Team of 1898

By JIM GALLO

Fifty-one years ago, intercollegiate football was in its infancy, and Villanova College was one of the cradles in which it was nursed along. Some of us may remember the Stoppers and Wysockis who carried the Wildcat colors a few years before our time, but I'm sure we give little thought to the men who were pioneers in the gridiron sport at Villanova. The men pictured above are among those who helped football along in its adolescence.

In the fall of 1898, Villanova faced five opponents in six contests:. Georgetown, Lafayette, Hill School, Lawrenceville, and Manhattan twice. The oversized pigskin in the picture bears one of the scores, Villanova 16—Manhattan 5. Both Lafayette and Georgetown were powerhouse outfits in the day of the five-point touchdown.

As it was played in the good old days, football was a real head-banging sport, characterized by hard line play. The forward pass was unheard of, the closest thing to it being a play known as the "Quarterback kick," in which the Q.B. was allowed to advance the ball beyond the line of scrimmage by punting it downfield to one of his ends. Imagine that in this day of the T-formation! One official had the responsibility of calling all decisions on the field. Since then the number has been increased to four, and still we often have occasion to believe that eight eyes are insufficient to cover the actions of twenty-two men.

The 'Cats of '98 were unaffected by such modern devices as eligibility rules and sanity codes. Freshmen as well as upperclassmen were eligible to play. In a school whose enrollment did not exceed 175, there was no coach employed to mastermind the gridders. Nevertheless, the boys were always ready to meet an opponent on the patch of ground we know as Mendel Field.

Of the fifteen men who played on that '98 squad, four entered the medical profession after leaving Villanova. They are Doctors Kane, Herr, Daly, and Eagen. Four others received their vocation while attending school here and entered the priesthood. Of the four, three are deceased—Fathers Mumley, Gaffkin, and Driscoll. The fourth, Rev. B. Zeiser, O.S.A., is here at St. Thomas of Villanova Monastery, and was the source of our information. Two of the men enjoyed careers in major league baseball, Richard Nallin as an American League umpire, and Bernard J. McFadden as a pitcher with Philadelphia and Cincinnati Teams of the National League.

The sports staff of the VILLANOVAN would enjoy hearing from any of the members of that 1898 squad. Also, we would like to furnish any member, their families, or friends with a print of the picture accompanying this article. Address all correspondence to the Sports Editor of the VILLANOVAN. We really would like to hear from you, alumni.

Navy, Irish on Tap

Next week the Blue and White harriers hit the road when they journey to Annapolis to tangle with Navy and Notre Dame. Last year the Cats were shaded by the Irish, but outdistanced the poor third and last place Middies. Browning Ross (naturally) won the individual honors, and set a course record in the process. Austin and Doms Trounce Opponents In Intramurals

Basketball League Starts Tonight

MONDSCHEIN INC. & KLUCSARITS

Following is a list of Intramural sports activity for this week:

Touch Football

Tuesday Oct. 25—
Alumni vs. Austin (Austin Field).

Thursday, Oct. 27—
Doms vs. Austin (Alumni Field)
Alumni vs. Fedigan (Austin Field)

The Intramural Basketball League will also get underway with the following contests:

Tuesday—Bks. 1&4 vs. Doms.
Austin vs. Mendel.

Thursday—Alumni vs. Fedigan.
Bks. 2&3 vs. Good Counsel.

All games will be played in Alumni Gym with the first game starting at 7:15 and the second game following immediately.

Football of the Past Week

The Doms and Austin dominated league play last week by trouncing Alumni and Bks. 1&4 respectively. Bks. 2&3 also lost to the Doms who now are unbeaten in three starts. Alumni won a disputed 8-6 verdict over Bks. 2&3 earlier in the week. The dispute resulted when a safety was called against the Bks. Buckley and Brennan scored the touchdowns on passes.

Led by Bill Knecht the Doms then handed Bks. 2&3 their fourth defeat in a row, 12-0. Two touchdowns in the early moments accounted for all the scoring. The Bks. team held the Doms in check the rest of the way but the damage had been done.

Doms Annihilate Alumni

Previously unbeaten Alumni met the undefeated Doms team last Thursday and went crashing to a 36-0 loss. Bill Knecht did everything but sell programs at halftime as his great playing completely demoralized the men from Alumni. He passed for all six touchdowns, ran on occasion and punted when necessary. The winner's line of Doyno, McHale, and Spaeth gave him great support on offense and kept in check any Alumni threat on defense.

Meanwhile, Austin, living up to Capt. O'Brien's prediction, humiliated Bks. 1&4 in a 30-0 rount. Tall Charley Daly caught three of the touchdown passes. The aerials were tossed by O'Brien and King Wilson. Jack Egnar, the league's leading ground-gainer, scored the fourth touchdown on a sweeping end run from the ten-yard line. The last talyy came on a long pass from southpaw King Wilson to T. J. Smith.

Austin's line was bolstered by the return of the "old pro", Bob Munday, was more in the opposing backfield than some of the opposing halfbacks yere.

The scheduled contest between the powerhouse Austin team and the high-scoring Doms this Thursday promises to be a real thriller. O'Brien and Knecht are expected to hook up in a passing duel, while Egnar will try to offset Knecht's running ability with some jaunts of his own.

Gallo Tops Again; Cooney, Range Hit

Jim Gallo retained his position as top man of the sports department, crystal gazing branch. For the second week in a row Jim picked 16 right out of 21. He was forced to share the spotlight with two of his colleagues, however. Ye Editor Harry Range hit the top with the same 16 and 5 record; while Bill Cooney was voted the most improved player of week. He jumped from a lowly 12-9 record of last week to the top 16-5.

The Doak Walker fan club, Range, Gallo, Cooney et al picked S. M. U. to "upset" Kentucky. Not a few foresaw the Michigan-Minnesota handwriting on the wall. It is doubtful, however, that anyone (right pool players?) could known beforehand what a slaughter the Army-Columbia game (?) could be.

No one again picked an exact score, but as always there were a few close ones. The staff average again jumped a few point .781 to .794.

Track Bulletin

A late bulletin which arrived at press time by runner, appropriately enough, informs us that for the second time Villanovans Browning Ross and George Thompson have been selected to participate in the Sugar Bowl games at New Orleans on New Year's Day. Ross will take part in the mile, while Thompson will run the half.

The last time these men were selected was for the 1946 games. Ross won the steeplechase, but George was snowbound by New York's big blizzard at the time, and never got out of New Rochelle, which was no doubt a streak of luck to the other half milers in the Crescent City.

Together with the basketball team it looks as though January 1st in New Orleans will be Villanova day. It seems as though it's now up to the football team to complete the picture. Let's go Cats.

class banner, the first of its kind to be acquired by a class of this college, which was displayed during the dance; and the program which Frank Garvey reported set a record both for attractiveness and for the number of patrons listed in its pages.

The only thing which could have marred the complete success of the dance was the mechanical failure of Jack O'Neill's invention, a mirrored globe which was to rotate and project a starry effect to the ceiling. Despite this Bob Quinn, Cotillion Chairman, was able to say that the Cotillion was a success in every sense of the word.

are requested to be available for these pictures at the specified places and on the appointed hours.

Reminder

The few remaining stragglers who have not had their Senior portraits taken at the Zamsky Studios or who have not completed their Senior Class History forms, should expedite these matters immediately rather than risk omission of either or both in the new yearbook.

Several copies of the 1949 Belle Air are still unclaimed and shall be disposed of in a few days. Any student who has not called for his yearbook should not expect a copy at a later date, in lieu of the several announcements made in the past.

A seven-hour schedule of office hours was formulated, which allows for the office being open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. daily except Saturdays. Any inquiries, business, or other transactions may be attended to during this period. The Editors of the 1950 Belle Air invite suggestions from all students and shall endeavor to give attention to the predominant suggestions in the best possible manner.

Debaters Open Wednesday

Villanova's Debating Society will swing into high gear at a general organizational meeting to be held Wednesday, November 2nd, at 5:00 p.m., in room 207 of the C. and F. Building. New members will be welcomed and plans discussed for the coming year's activities.

Under the capable leadership of its moderator, Mr. Joseph T. Jonas, Professor of Public Speaking and Debate, this group has attained a high standing in inter-collegiate circles. Beta Gamma has supplied contestants for the annual oratorical competitions sponsored by the National Debating Council. The organization provides invaluable experience in speaking on the public platform. Members engage in debates with the leading schools of the East.

Mr. Jonas will be available in his office in Room 108 Belle Air Hall between 12:00 and 1:00 p.m. to speak with anyone interested in the Debating Society and is unable to attend the general meeting on November 2nd.

Acc'tants Name Year's Officers

Last Thursday, the Accounting Honorary Society, elected its officers for the 1949-50 school year. Elected president was Joseph Dugan, Senior Accounting student, while Vince Ciamichelli was chosen Vice-President; John Holland, Secretary; Ed Ansur, Treasurer; and Joseph Shannon, Librarian. These men will assume their offices immediately.

Dugan will call a meeting in the near future at which time he will greet the members of the society in his official capacity. The new administration promises to promote the objectives of the society to the utmost.

The Library Corner

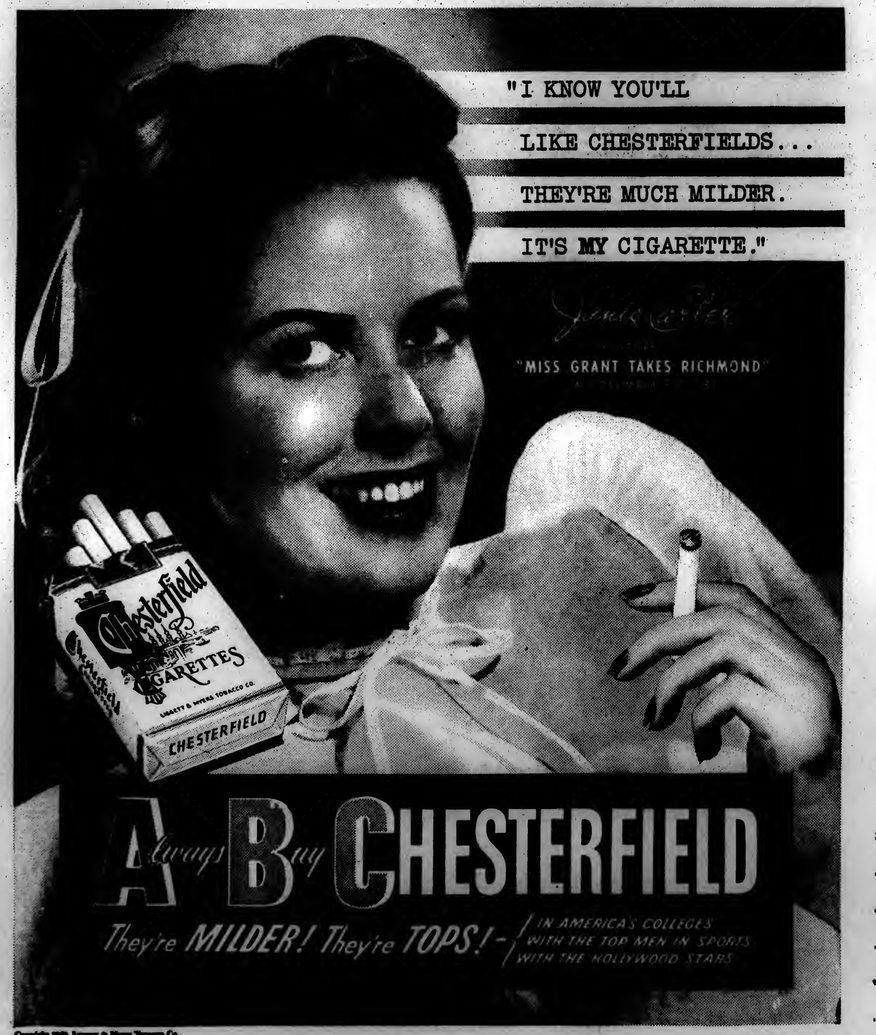
The college library has arranged to show "1848", a new exhibition prepared by the editors of LIFE in their series of exhibitions on the history of Western culture. Now in progress, the exhibit will continue through October 31st.

"1848" depicts that crucial year of the 19th Century which some historians have called "the turning point of history at which history didn't turn."

The exhibition of 24 large panels uses material from the article "1848" which appeared in LIFE, although it is expanded beyond the article and includes many rare pictures—from the journalistic point of view—from 19th Century periodicals and other sources contemporary with the period.

At the Congress of Vienna in 1815 the absolute monarchs of Europe smothered but did not extinguish the fires of two decades of unrest and Napoleonic turmoil. Nor did they solve the common problem overwhelming them all: how to protect themselves against the ravages of their own mutually exclusive ambitions. Their attempts at a solution are now known as the Metternich Reaction and the Concert of Europe.

The Metternich Reaction consisted of repressing civil liberties by means of a secret political police, and the Concert of Europe of direct intervention by a coalition of concerted powers wherever the institution of absolute monarchy was assailed. These policies, and their failure, led to the revolutionary crises which erupted all over Europe in 1848.



"1848" attempts to describe something of the complex nature of the events which culminated in that turbulent year. The exhibition is divided into five sections as follows: England and Industrialism; France; Austria; Italy; and Germany. The title panel is a reproduction in color of Delacroix's "Liberty Leading the People" and is followed by a portrait of Prince Metternich and a painting of the diplomats at the Congress of Vienna. Then follow many exciting reproductions of paintings, drawings, woodcuts, lithographs, cartoons and maps.

The last panel contains a cartoon from Punch of that year and a painting of New York City's Battery as it was when emigres landed there in their flight from Europe after 1848. The panels include a running text which attempts to explain the political and economic forces that made 1848 "the year of revolutions."

The exhibition is being shown in Seminar rooms 1, 2 and 3 located on the ground floor.

October 24th has been proclaimed as United Nations Day, and in keeping with the occasion the library has set up an exhibit. This exhibition is located in the main corridor on the ground floor. A varied collection of pamphlets, articles, magazines and books on the United Nations and its many commissions and special agencies is available for examination and circulation. This literature is being kept available on shelves near the Circulation desk.

Forum Series Commences With Fr. Murray's Lecture

Woodstock College Professor States the Church's Position in Modern World

"No single one of you can let the problem (of Church and State) rest." Thus charging, Father John Courtney Murray, S. J., challenged his listeners at last Tuesday's Villanova Forum to their task of spreading and protecting the interests of the Catholic Church.

Being the first speaker of the second annual Forum Series, Father Murray first outlined what this topic of "Church and State" includes. He made his aim the explaining to his attentive listeners the way in which the Church combats major catastrophic actions aimed at annihilating it.

Very successfully accomplishing his aim, Father Murray centered his informative talk around the refuting and commenting upon Paul Blanshard's novel, "American Freedom and Catholic Power", rated eighth in the general section of Best Sellers by the New York Times, October 23rd, and the 1944 Christmas message of Pope Pius XII.

Stating that, "The Laity are to insure for yourselves the Christian freedoms you should have", Father Murray very strongly attacked Mr. Blanshard's opinion that if the Catholic individuals in the United States gain too many (just) privileges that soon the Catholic Church will gain power and rule the nation, subjecting other religions to the acceptance of Catho-

Rally, Dances, Play To Mark N.C. State Weekend

Whether you call it home-coming weekend or the final game weekend, the weekend of the North Carolina-Villanova game promises to be one of the biggest the Main Line has seen in a long time. The judging of the decorations put up by each hall in competition for the Connelly Award, will be followed by the final rally on Thursday, November 17th. Friday, the campus fraternities will play host at the annual Inter-Fraternity Ball. Saturday afternoon, the Wildcats meet North Carolina State at Franklin Field. The NROTC will parade before the game. They will hold a dance at the Hotel Barclay that evening. Rosemont and Chestnut Hill will hold their Senior Proms that same evening. Then Sunday the Belle Masque will open at the Field House for a three night stand with "Jacobowsky and the Colonel".

The Connelly Award decorations switched this year to the North Carolina State game, will see their third year since their inception after the war. The Georgetown game has been, in the past two years, the subject for these decorations. However since the game will be played away on Friday evening,

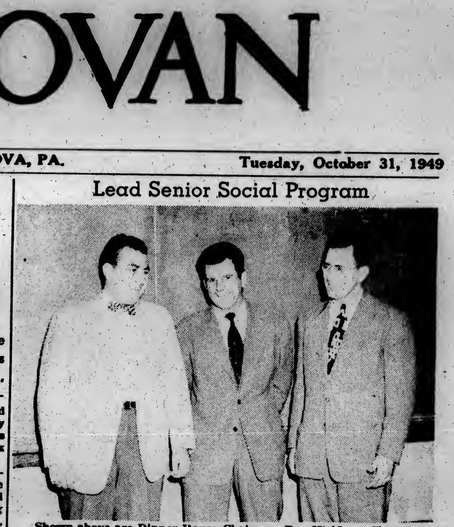
PICK COMMITTEES FOR INTER-FRAT BALL; NOVEMBER 18

The Interfraternity Ball, one of the traditional bright lights of the campus social season, will be held on Friday evening, November 18, at the Field House. Music will be provided by the recently revamped Villanovans and tickets are priced at $2.40, tax included.

Chairman Bryan McLarnan announced that this year only three of the four campus fraternities will conduct the affair. The sponsoring organizations are: Delta Pi Mu, Arts; Delta Pi Epsilon, Commerce and Finance; Lambda Kappa Delta, Pre-Medical. Phi Kappa Pi, the lone exception, will hold a separate dance later in the year.

As usual, the decorations will be kept secret until the last moment, but earnest work by the Decoration Committee assures the dancers of pleasant surroundings.



Committee Heads

Chairmen in charge of the various committees are: Edgar LeBlanc, DPM, Decorations; Joe Appleby, LKD; Bill Creamer, DPE, Tickets.

Contrary to last years procedure the proceeds of the event will be divided equally among the three fraternities instead of being in proportion to the tickets that are sold by each.

Tickets will be on sale soon and can be purchased either at Mendel Hall or the Pie Shop, or from any member of the fraternities.

Lead Senior Social Program

Informal Dinner Dance Voted By Seniors

This year's Seniors have taken an unusual step in that they have voted to have their dinner-dance informal and have moved the starting hour back to 6:30 P. M. Mike Marshall, class president, appointed Ray Waldron as chairman of the dinner-dance committee and George Szymanski chairman of the Belle Air Ball.

The informal dinner-dance, to be held at the Broadwood Hotel, will be so organized that those who wish to attend Villanova's basketball game that evening will be accommodated as well as those who wish to remain and dance after dinner. This arrangement was chosen because it seemed to come closest to satisfying the wishes of the partisans.

Both sides are gaining in that those going to the game will be able to both dine and dance before the game, and those remaining will have a longer period for dancing than was offered in previous years.

Plans are being made to try to reserve a block of seats at the Palestra for the Seniors who are going to attend both the dinner-dance and the game. The Wildcats will meet Valparaiso University in a game starting at 9:45 P. M.

Like Going To Summer School

By JACK ROWE

After a brief but pleasant stay at Corry Field, Company 7, which consisted of men from Villanova and Auburn (AFI) moved a few miles across the way to Mainside, the central operating base at Pensacola. There they were attached to VP Squadron 49. This outfit consisted of a group of patrol bombers. The main idea behind giving the middies this training phase was to indoctrinate them in the basic fundamentals of seaplane operation. The training, which lasted a full week, was built around engineering and problems confronting the anti-sub patrol. Tactics were explained by competent instructors and tours of the base were made. Some of the minor details of classroom instruction have been forgotten, but none can forget the hops taken in the PBM's, Martin Mariners. Each middie had two fifteen minute stabs at flying one of the biggest planes the Navy uses, quite a thrill for anyone's money. It can be imagined without too much difficulty that the pilots had many a hectic moment during such periods. Orchids to these men, though, they took it all in stride.

During the off periods, the middies had access to two indoor swimming pools, and a beach on the Base. In addition, all the latest movies were held in an air conditioned theatre. Athletic recreation was not limited to swimming; the Athletic Department at Mainside provided the middies with Softball equipment. Within a few days a league was formed, with all the schools participating. In all, there were about twenty-six colleges represented. It might be said that the lads from Villanova did all right by themselves, emerging as one of the better teams in the league.

Liberty was given nearly every night, since few watches had to be stood. However, more men remained on the Base since there was more to do there than in Pensacola proper. On Sundays many were seen wending their way to the town's beach, which proved more attractive in some respects, than Mainside.

Bring'ng Them In

Upon entering their third week of training, the Villanovans found themselves marching down to a Pier at which rested the USS Cabot, CVL 28. They embarked, found sleeping quarters, the mess decks and then settled down for a week's stay.

The Cabot put out into the Gulf each morning and cruised around the area while NavCads and "Flying Midshipmen" made their qualifying carrier landings. This in itself was an education. Watching these fledglings bring in an SNJ to a safe landing on moving platform surrounded by nothing but miles of water would be interesting to anyone. The middies were permitted to observe the operations from flight deck catwalks foreward of the "island."

Some of the time spent aboard was used to re-indoctrinate the Juniors with the paint-chipper. The lads, who had been having a party of it so far as manual labor was concerned, recoiled at the thought, but went to work with a will.

When the ship was tied up, the off-duty sectons had liberty. Most

Announce Arc-Welding Contest

The James F. Lincoln Arc Welding Foundation of Cleveland, Ohio, announced this week the third annual competition of the Engineering Undergraduate Award and Scholarship Program. This program offers annually $6,750 in awards and scholarship funds to engineering undergraduate students, and to schools for the best papers prepared by undergraduates on arc welded design, research, fabrication, or maintenance. A total of 77 awards ranging from $1000 to $25 will be given to students and $1750 for seven scholarships will be given to schools this year.

The Foundation's Undergraduate Program, whose rules were formulated with the advice and help of eleven prominent college engineering deans, is conducted to encourage engineering students to investigate some phase of the science of arc welding. Regardless of previous knowledge of arc welding, all resident engineering undergraduates registered in a school or college in the United States are able to compete in the writing of papers for awards.

The instructions of the Foundation in regard to the preparation of the papers explain that the student papers may have a wide variety of subject matter, and may be based on study or actual experience. Papers may describe the welded design of a machine or structure, or any part of a machine or structure. Laboratory research and development work are also suggested by the Foundation as suitable material for the report.

Awards for the best three student papers will be $1000, $500, and $250 respectively. The other seventy-four awards will be scaled

15 Days Leave Clarified By VA

Each veteran in training at Villanova College recently received a form 7-1907c-1 from the Veteran's Administration Office that indicated in item I that subsistence would be paid from 9-14-49 to 6-20-50. This notice caused some confusion since the school year ends on 6-5-50.

It should be pointed out that veterans in training are automatically granted fifteen days leave time at the end of each school year, unless the individual veteran submits a notice in writing to the Veterans Administration, 128 North Broad Street, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, in which it is stated that leave time is not desired. This letter must be received in the Veterans Administration at least thirty rays prior to the end of the school year.

It is well to remember that acceptance of leave time results in the use of fifteen days of eligibility time, for which subsistence only is received. If leave time is refused, these fifteen days can be used later on for tuition purposes as well as subsistence.

Placement Notes

Any student wishing to have his name listed as a professional blood donor at Bryn Mawr Hospital is requested to submit a card with the following information on it to Mr. Harris in room 102 Mendel Hall by Friday, November 4th. Name, address, telephone number, Blood Type and R-H Factor (if known).

The deadline for turning placement applications into the Placement Office, is 102 Mendel Hall, for January graduates is Friday, November 4th.

Campus Leaders

The various campus clubs and fraternities seem to have enthusiastic leaders, but enthusiasm does not make for well-organized, efficient meetings unless these individuals will take the trouble to learn the rudiments of proper parliamentary procedure.

The rules of parliamentary procedure were adopted for the sake of holding orderly meetings when there were large groups. Groups have a natural tendency to get out of hand and the chair soon finds itself dominated by the floor. The rules are not arbitrary, but based on the principles of courtesy.

The greatest difficulty seems to arise when the chair asks for discussion on a question. From then on time is no object. Time is wasted. In some cases the desired objectives are never accomplished. When a club fails to act the members soon lose interest.

Obviously there is a problem which can only be solved by the various presidents of the groups. The solution lies with these very men. Our suggestion is that the officers plan to attend the Student Council meetings in order that they may observe parliamentary procedure being practically applied.

Observation of the Student Council meetings together with study of a handbook on parliamentary rules will go far to solve many of the problems that arise. The president of an organization will find himself equipped to cope with meetings, making everyone much happier.

Strikebound

The country is again rocked by a series of economy-strikes. This is probably the worst outbreak since the near-disastrous strikes which occurred immediately after the war. Many consider that the outcome of these strikes will indicate just what will happen to our national economy.

There is a possibility that the high cost of living may be on its way down from the lofty peak it attained during the past few years. Actually there would be no danger in a high cost of living if there was a promise of stability in wages. People yearn for security.

The importance of the labor-management trouble to the college student is not immediate, but only a healthy industry will be able to handle the large influx of college graduates. Jobs will not be available if our economy is not running in high gear. It is easily seen that the labor difficulties so rampant today do affect us in an indirect manner.

It is ironic that many of the strikes are the result of disagreements over pension funds, a long range guarantee of security. Pension funds will mean nothing if the present is not considered important in the scheme to achieve financial security. The effects of the strikes in the basic industries are already felt in every part of the country. The products of these industries are necessary for the continued operation of many other industries which have found it necessary to cut production. This means the laying off of thousands of workers till production can be safely increased.

November 2nd: All Souls' Day. November: the month of the Holy Souls. These are the thirty days of the year during which the Church asks us to make our petitions unselfish by offering them for the poor souls in purgatory, and supplying them with the help they need so badly, but are powerless to supply for themselves.

A Reminder

This is written just as a reminder for, to those who have any charity at all, a reminder is all that is necessary, while to any others a plea would be a waste of time. And it might be well to include a sub-reminder that what is done for unselfish reasons might well result in some self-good for the doer. As intercessors, in the present, the souls in purgatory rate high with God; in the future, they are potential saints, and it might well develop that, when we find ourselves forsaken and in need of help, these very souls who now need our prayers so will come then to return our favor.

Personal Reasons

But for most of us there will be personal reasons for remembering during November. Maybe we'll be saying special prayers for our fathers and mothers, for a brother who: PT exploded off Guadalcanal or a buddy who found his grave on Iwo.

And maybe some of us will still remember that vast mob of unknowns who just disappeared in the chaos. Maybe we'll be praying for the black dog tags we picked from the charred victim of a flame thrower in Normandy, or the head on the Salerno beach with half the face a gaping hole. Or maybe for the old people we marched past in Holland, or China, or the Rhine . . . grandfathers who saw their farms wasted, their home burned, their families butchered by remote control, and grandmothers, tired with eyes white from hunger, watching through silent tears, waiting for pneumonia, or fever or slow starvation to bring an end.

Need For Prayers

These are the souls in purgatory. And these are the helpless ones who cry to you for aid. Whether we know them or just know of them, they need our prayers. For each we know of there are thousands who are unknown, and they too need our prayers. Will they find the earth as barren in death as it was in life? Will their calls for eternal be as fruitless as their pleas for life on earth? It is our question to answer . . . is it so difficult?

Dear Student,

Just a word to remind you that November fourth is the First Friday of the month. You are urged to attend Mass and receive Holy Communion on this day for the greater honor and glory of God and your own success in life.

Masses in the Chapel on the First Friday will be 6:00, 6:45, 7:00, 7:30, 8:00, 9:00 and 12:00 noon. Confessions will be heard during the Masses.

Sincerely yours in Christ,
Father GRIMES, O.S.A.

PARDON MY BIG TOE

By Bill Breninghouse

For some strange reason Oscar had never learned to dance. It always seemed so foolish. He had learned that the shortest distance between two points was a straight line. If he wanted to take a girl from one end of the floor to the other he would just pick her up and carry her. There were none of these false heroics of having to do it slowly, and with music yet. Up to now, Oscar has gone to thirty-seven tea dances, at which he has consumed four cases of coke and a bushel of pretzels. He prided himself in that he has yet to dance. This time, however, it was different.

Fixer-Upper

She was smiling as she sidled up to him and inquired as to why he just stood around with a blank look on his bare face. The moment he saw that huge banner around her neck which proclaimed in purple letters that she was an official fixer-upper Oscar knew he was in for a rough time.

"Can't dance", he mumbled with a whole bottle of coke gurgling through his vocal apparatus.

"Oh sure you can", the bubbling one answered, "and I know just the girl for you. She's just as cute as can be."

Scared

"Yeah! I just bet she is." By this time Twomp was getting scared. This girl wasn't going to give up very easily.

"C'mon now! There's a nice slow waltz coming up." She had a determined look in her face and she stanted to prod him with a broken coke bottle.

"Waltz, schmaltz! I told you I can't dance."

"How can you tell if you won't even try?" She then beckoned to a friend, and before he knew it Oscar was on the dance floor and little Miss-Fix-It was on the sidelines gleaming from molar to molar.

Nonchalance

Now that he was in the camp of the enemy he tried to look the essence of nonchalance. He shuffled along to the best of his ability, nodding and grinning at everyone he knew. Suddenly he remembered that he was dancing with a girl. He looked down. She smiled at him and cooed, "Hi! My name's Mary. The music has stopped."

Daze

This was the opening for routine 109. "Can you blame me?" he said softly. "When I dance with you I hear nothing but music. A gentle breeze becomes a wonderful rhapsody when you are around. ("Just watch this kid melt, this line never fails.")

Miscalculated

He had miscalculated her reaction. She immediately burst into six minutes of unrestrained raucous laughter and then called to one of her pals at the other end of the floor, "Hey, Bridget, c'm'here, this guy'll kill ya. He thinks he's Montgomery Peck or 'sumtin'."

Oscar's trial comes up tomorrow. There will be an all-woman jury. He has pleaded not guilty, but the bookies are taking all bets at six thousand to one on his getting the hot seat.

Letters . . . . .

To the Editor:

It is about time the Villanovan realized that corrections were needed. College men are expected to have at least a fundamental knowledge of the rules of grammar, but it seems that Villanovan writers are the exception to the rule. Since the inauguration of the staff, a great improvement has been shown in the quality of the paper. Keep up the good work!

An interested reader

To the Editor:

In a recent editorial you commented on the fact that numerous alumni have noted a lack of the Villanova spirit. Could it be that these old grads have succumbed to old age and delusions of "the good old days?" Perhaps they have never gone to a basketball game to see the field house crammed with students cheering with volume and emotion? At the Tulsa game the student body actually cheered the team back into the game. Why don't you suggest that these critical alumni shake the cobwebs from their foggy heads and realize that Villanova today has reached a peak never approached in the years before? They are doing nothing but disservice to their alma mater by whining and moaning.

A Bewildered Student

Men of Villanova:

Thank you.

Thank you for your fine cooperation and support of the recent Sophomore Cotillion held by the Class of 1952. Through your generous support we were able to collect more patrons than any other dance in the recent history of the school. As a result of your willingness to participate we were able to entertain a near capacity crowd at the Field House. It is cooperation such as you have shown which will force the social functions of Villanova to expand to meet the requirements of the increased enrollment.

It is through the cooperation, spirit, ability and labor of the committees, such as worked for this cotillion, that will enable these increased social functions to expand on a high standard. The gratitude of all of us should go to men like Bill Shilling and Jack O'Niell, along with their committee, who worked unceasingly to arrange the decorations for this dance. Not that the work affected them, but they are now seen tearing paper leaves as they sit in class.

The entertainment was on the scale of a miniature Broadway Review. When you realize that they had little over two weeks to create and learn their routines, you can understand the sweat and toil that went into it. As an example, at eight-thirty, the morning following the Tulsa game, every member of the entertainment group was rehearsing at the Field House. It's a wonder that Jack Kelly didn't lose enough weight to go out for the 150 lb. team.

I could continue on this path of praise endlessly. How Jim Gallagher got around to writing to Ava Gardner is a story in itself, but it proves how the Program Committee determined to do something different. There is not enough room to mention the efforts of Paul Frihalla, Kevin McCrane, and Don Bray in keeping the tickets going smoothly and correctly. Bud Holland, Tom Cullen, and Tom Curren also deserve credit for their efforts on publicity and general arrangements. Men such as Joe Mascuch, Wally Quin and Tex Houston deserve a vote of thanks, as they not only worked on one committee, but they managed to find time to help out on others when the going became rough and the time short.

In all therefore, you can easily see the reasons for the success of the Cotillion. It was based upon the unselfish, unceasing efforts of every member of each committee. It was culminated in the cooperation and support of the entire student body. My only regret is that I am unable to mention everyone who assisted, so that they might receive the praise which is due to them.

To all those concerned, on behalf of the Dance Committee, the Class of 1952, and myself, Thank you.

Sincerely yours,
BOB QUINN
Chairman, Sophomore Cotillion

Ha' Dug, my big chance. Taten has suddenly become indisposed with a bad case of Tripus Bostonius and I've got the whole 700 words, mine all mine!

Leave us review a few records, hey. First and foremost there has been one particularly nauseating travesty on the dignity of music going around that I'd like to warn you against. Perhaps you've already been exposed to "Drink Wine" by "Sticks" McGee. In my humble opinion this guy McGee even makes "Diz" Gillespie sound good in comparison. Another wax lemon worthy of mention in the obnoxious category is a thing called "Fiesta in Old Mexico" by one Camille Howard. It's a take off on "Mexican Hat Dance" and after a few listenings I can only conclude that Camille had a side order of jumping beans with her frioles. Listen to the Hat Dance by Les Brown and hear the difference.

Talk About Shearing

Since this is actually Bruce's hunk of our weekly fiasco I feel it only fair to plug some of his kind of music. Let's talk about George Shearing, the white hope of Bop and as far as I'm concerned the only musician in that so-called phase of so-called jazz. As John Morris would put it "the boy's got the goods". Give a listen to "You are too Beautiful", "I Only Have Eyes For You", etc. and you'll see what I mean.

For a guy who was ushering at the New York Paramount only a few short years ago Vic Damone has come along way. I can't recall a really bad record that he has made and his latest waxing of 'Why Was I Born", is the most beautiful bit of balladeering I've heard in "mucho tempo" (please, no mash notes from our readers south of the border).

Laine Drives Mules

Well as you have undoubtedly noticed, the Laine guy has done it again, now he's driving mules. Gad, what versatility! Lets face it—the boy hasn't a decent obbligato or fortissimo to his name but voices are a dime a dozen and this bargain basement Jolson has a delivery that puts long, black numbers in the ledger. Early indications tag "Mule Team" as another "Lucky Ole' Sun" if the local platter maestros don't play it into an early grave.

Just to prove that this column can have class, after much research, I find that the very lovely "Twilight" recently waxed by T. D. was lifted from Prince Igor by Borodin. Originally it was Choral No. 17 from the above mentioned classic. No wonder Dorsey is making out like a burglar with the thing.

Dixieland, eh Dixieland! Whither for art thou Dixieland? About this time each year I get a terrific hankering to relax and tap my feet black and blue at a good knockdown, drag-out jam session. Unfortunately, after three years I have still to discover any such animal in this part of the pasture.

When speaking of jazz concerts I do not refer to the big money in the bank shindigs which are pitched at the Academy of Music from time to time. The real thing comes in small packages and remains pretty much untainted by commercialism.

Jimmy Ryan's

To illustrate, let me mention Jimmy Ryan's a peanut-sized nitery on 52nd street off Fifth Avenue in Ole' N' Yawk. One Monday night late in August, I caught a jam session there that I'm sure I'll never forget. Since most other spots are closed Mondays, all the old jazz men in the area, (and there are plenty in New York these days) seem to gravitate to Ryan's. Sidney Bechet and his combo were on the stand doing a terrific job, but it was during the intermissions that the place really went into high gear. There was such a constant stream of jazz greats going in and out to take soloes that I won't attempt to go through the roster.

As an ardent trombone worshipper I practically went into a coma when J. C. Higgenbothom and Jimmy Archie took off on some real gutbucket stuff, but perhaps the most impressive thing about sessions of this type is the phenomenal timing of the bandsmen. The music is all spontaneous, unhindered by complex arrangements, the rhythm and beat is unmistakeable.

Solos In Turn

Starting at one end of the stand they run through the group solos in turn, and in spite of this seemingly hodge-podge set-up, they never seem to miss a beat. This is no mean feat even on some of the slower jazz numbers, but when they do a jet assisted take-off on "Panama" and similar bits it really is something to hear.

This is not an "Around the Town" column, but still I'd like to recommend a night at Ryan's to any of our readers who may get up to New York. You'll enjoy it-believe me.

Careers . . .

By DICK SPENCE

Jobs in engineering — the nation's third largest profession, and one of its fastest-growing occupations — may increase by as many as 100,000 in the next ten or twelve years. Engineering school enrollments are now so high, however, that many of the graduates of the next four or five years may be unable to find engineering jobs, although their training may help them get administrative, sales, or other positions in industry. I classify engineering into four fields, that is; civil, mechanical, electrical, and chemical. The reason for this classification is that these are the branches in which we are interested at this school. Because each field is so vast, we shall consider only civil engineering this time.

Civil Engineering

Unlike many professions, the civil engineer can enter into his field with only a Bachelor's degree, although the man with a Master's or Doctor's degree has a definite edge over the man with the Bachelor's. Out of the twenty-two graduating civil engineers from this college that sent in applications to the Placement Office last year, one hundred percent of them were placed in various positions. About half of them went to the highway departments of various states. The outlook for civils is much better than the rest of the engineering fields because of the definite shortage of highway engineers. This shortage comes from the fact that the present highway engineers are getting old and retiring. With this in mind, the civil engineer with B. of C. E. can step into highway engineering as a project or even a resident engineer if he's had previous training during the summers of his college years.

After five years of highway engineering, the experience gained will pay off because in nine out of ten cases a private concern will offer him a much better job. Most of the good highway engineers finally join some private construction company or contracting company. Many civil engineers find employment in other branches of engineering. As a matter of statistics, 1.1% go into chemical engineering, 1.3% to electrical, 1.2% to mining and metallurgical, 7.6% to mechanical and 8.8% go into some other type of engineering.

Comparative Salaries

The salary of the graduate civil engineer varies with the type of job and the amount of experience. It is important to get as much experience as possible for that is a governing point of the job obtained. The average for the first year is approximately $3100. As each year goes by, the average rises; but in engineering field, civil engineering is the slowest. Ten years after a graduate civil engineer leaves school, his salary is approximately $4800. In contrast to this, the graduate engineer with a Doctor's degree starts out with an average of $3500 and the average wage after ten years is $5200.

Around The Town

By F. A. VARALLO

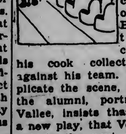
One of the season's finest films, "Lost Boundaries", has come from W. L. White's eloquent story of anti-negro prejudice. The documentary technique employed in this film seems to enhance its realism.

Mel Ferrer excels as the light-skinned doctor torn between loyalty to his race and the all-important problem of earning a livelihood in his profession. Beatrice Pearson plays the role of his sympathetic wife, and the scene is laid in a small New England town. The doctor and his wife, passing themselves off as white, have gained respect and affection of the community. Even their children are unaware that they are part Negro until a crisis forces the doctor to reveal the truth.

Richard Hylton, a newcomer to Hollywood, gives a talented performance as the son, while Susan Douglas is a moving portrayal of the teen-age daughter. "Lost Boundaries", dealing with one of the nation's most complex problems, is an absorbing film which should be seen by all. It is now at the Boyd Theatre.

"Spring In Park Lane"

Winner of England's academy award, this bright comedy at the Trans-Lux should delight most movie-goers. It pokes fun at British society, cinema actors, art collectors, aristocratic bores, and kitchen tyrants.



The screen play, written by Nicholas Phipps, is based on a story by Alice Duer Miller. It is a light, breezy yarn about a handsome lord, who, because of financial shortcomings, takes a temporary job as footman. Needless to say, he scandalizes and delights most of the household by his erudition, c'arm, and general unfootmanly behavior. Michael Wilding, as the would-be footman, is sprightly and bright as he scampers up and down stairs, giving advice as an art critic, debonarily wooing his employer's niece, and confounding the stuffy family with his gaiety and wit.

"Spring in Park Lane" boasts a very fine supporting cast: Tom Walls as the British aristocrat with an appreciation of wit, art, and brandy; Peter Graves as an egotistical screen star who thinks of everything in movie terms; Scenarist Phipps as Wilding's dim-witted elder brother; Josephine Fitzgerald, and Lana Morris.

Most fans should enjoy this film despite the fact that it is somewhat uneven, and the dialogue, in its typical British manner, is sometimes difficult to understand.

Grid Comedy

"Father Was a Fullback", starring Fred MacMurray is a second-rate domestic comedy about a college football coach in danger of losing his job. Besides family troubles, the coach finds that his cook collects weekly bets against his team. To further complicate the scene, the president of the alumni, portrayed by Rudy Vallee, insists that the coach use a new play, that Vallee has worked out, in the next game. Don't expect too much of this picture.

"Student Prince"

Beginning its fifteenth engagement here in Philadelphia, "The Student Prince" is celebrating its silver anniversary at the Schubert where it first opened twenty-five years ago, late in October 1924. The operetta, with its musical score from the pen of Sigmund Romberg, and Dorothy Donnelly's libretto and lyrics, which she adapted from Richard Mansfield's famous play, has lost none of its popular appeal. The entire cast is to be praised for a sparkling performance. The operetta will be here for two weeks, closing on November 7th.

By JOE KENNEY And JACK APPLEGATE

Attention all nicotine consumers!!. We stopped in at the Pie Shop (in social circles better known as the College Store) the other day and happened upon a huge poster which read "Win A Television Set For Villanova". From outward appearances this sounds like a mighty good idea, but this eye-strainer will cost us 60,000 wrappers from a popular brand of weeds.

So we called upon the very able statistician, Ray Jacquette, who is in charge of our consumer research department. He olled his slide rule, dusted off his log tables and came up with the following results:

Students at Villanova — approximately 2,700.

Seniors who will not contribute because they will not benefit — 600.

Students smoking the televised brand — approximately 351.5.

From this data Ray concludes that at the moderate puffing rate, we can secure this TV set in six months if everyone smoking the specified smokes will save 170.3 wrappers; however, chain smokers could give the drive an unprecedented push.

Not to be outdone by Brother Jacquette, We conducted a bit of research and found that the wrappers being requested cost in the neighborhood of 98.6 cents for every 10,000. Ergo, why not send the company a check for $6.00 and call everything square.

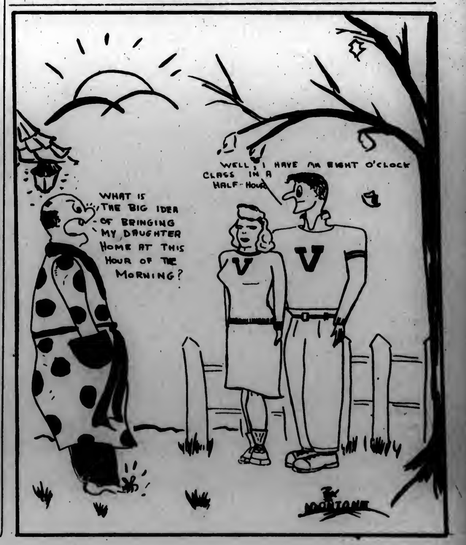
To put a damper on our simplified solution, Mickey Torpey, one of our more advanced marketing genii, informs us that this drive has a threefold purpose;

1. The company feels sorry for those suffering from cigarette hangover. (Purely a humane motive.)
2. These cigarettes have ammoniated tobacco with three-way puffing action which the manufacturer would like all to try.
3. Johnnie needs a new suit.

In order to further the cause we have decided to bum only Phillip Morris from now on.

ORCHIDS TO: — Prof. Bruderle, Chairman of the Villanova Forum, for extending to the students the opportunity of hearing some of the nation's best speakers.

ONIONS TO: — Fellows who are members of clubs when yearbook pictures are being taken and disappear when these organizations turn to their functional activities.



By this time we should all be used to the new PTC fare rise. They change the fares more frequently than a woman changes her mind. Bob Hazn has a novel way of putting it, "everything is going higher and higher, except my marks."

Station WVIL is featuring a unique program this Thursday night, the Fun Parade, which will take to the air at eight o'clock, in the shape of a quiz, a half-hour program guaranteed to provoke your thought processes, tending to make you think on a college level, according to Bill Breninghouse.

THE FIFTH got a scoop and found that the questions will be composed somewhat as follows; "Concretely analyze and comment upon the significance of bouncing a Bolo ball in Bongo Bongo." If anyone can answer any of the questions he is to phone Bryn Mawr 1880, Ext. 250.

Fellows, the prizes are terrific-!!! There are no losers. You get a prize for just making a call! Get this! First prize, a sticker enabling anybody to park his car in either faculty lot! Second prize, a free pass to the prof's dining room in the Pie Shop. Also included are two tickets to the International Livestock Exhibition at Chicago, a five percent discount on having any cesspool cleaned in any part of the continental U. S. and its possessions . . . not just once but for a lifetime!

Some winning contestant will have the honor of smoking the 60,000th. pack of Phillip Morris, while the other 59,999 watch . . . in Iron Lungs! And last but not least, a paper bag, manufactured by Hocus Pocus and Fake, to be placed over the left ear for students who have their class lectures go in one ear and out th other. The idea being that a student can open the bag in the evening and go over what he has missed . . . At last "Stop The Music" has met its match . . .

Smoker, Owl Hop Topics At Phi Kappa Pi Meeting

A crowded social program for the year ahead was planned by Phi Kappa Pi, Villanova engineering fraternity, at the group's second meeting of the year, held last Wednesday in Mendel Hall.

Michael Nowlan, fraternity president, was in the chair as the 75 members present heard committee reports dealing with a November smoker, the Owl Hop and a dinner dance.

The smoker, slated for November 9 or 10 in the C & F Auditorium under the direction of Bob Pope, will feature a moving picture of a recent Wildcat game, comedies and refreshments. One hundred to 150 members are expected.

Committee chairman Gene Valerio held a committee meeting following the general meeting to begin planning decorations and a gigantic publicity campaign for the Owl Hop, scheduled for February 18 in the Field House, the first dance given by Villanova engineers since pre-war days.

Enthusiastic reception was given by the members to plans announced by committee chairman Bruno Uberti for a dinner dance, scheduled for early April at one of the Main Line country clubs. The first event of its type since 1946, the dinner dance will be attended by prominent speakers and faculty members.

It was further decided to make comedy movies a feature of all future meetings of the fraternity. George Schillinger is head of the committee in charge of this phase of Phi Kappa Pi activities.

It was revealed that the fraternity has some 200 members, the largest roster since its foundation as the first Villanova fraternity in 1907. Rev. John O'Leary, O.S.A., is moderator, with Nowlan, Valerio, Schillinger, Al Scarcelli, Joe Sullivan and Don Best filling executive roles.

Officers Greet Acc'ting Society

Last Thursday the Accounting Society held its regular monthly meeting in order to formulate plans for future activities which are on the agenda prepared by Moderator Joseph J. Linsalata.

At this meeting, newly-elected president Joseph Dugan assumed his office. Introduced to the members were Vice-President Vincent Ciamiachelli, Secretary John Holland; Treasurer Edward Anzur, and Librarian Joseph Shannon. It was voted to select an auditing committee to aid Ed Anzur.

Committees yet to be formed are the Public Relations Committee and the Social Committee. The Public Relations Committee will assume the responsibility of publicizing Villanova as an Accounting school. Also many men in the field will be contacted and invited to speak before the society.

Since there are now more than 130 men in the society it is fast becoming one of the strongest most active of its kind on campus.

Phillip Morris Appoints Probert

Appointment of Robert Probert, '50, as Philip Morris Campus representative at Villanova College was announced here last week.

Probert was selected from a group of applicants in the Senior Class. He joins forces with other Philip Morris representatives on the campuses of major colleges throughout the United States.

A resident C & F student, Probert will include among his new duties liaison between Philip Morris and Company and the Villanovan, as well as providing guest packages of the cigarette he represents to the students on the campus.

Delta Pi Mu Meets in Library

Last Wednesday evening Delta Pi Mu, the Arts and Education fraternity, conducted its second meeting of the year. Such points that crop up each year as such an organization begins its activities were handled. Membership, dues, pins and the coming Inter-Frat Ball were discussed.

President George Keenley introduced Rev. John Bresnahan, O.S.A., moderator of the frat to the members. Father pointed out the duties of the members and what their aims should be in light of their purpose.

It was announced by Whitey LeBlanc that Delta Pi Mu will be in charge of the decorations for the Inter-Frat Ball. They will, he announced, be limited to a certain allowance for these decorations, but all the ideas, planning and work must come from the committee and any members of the frat who wish to work with them.

The system for accepting new members was announced by Joe Friend. All will serve a probationary period and will be formally taken into the organization at the end of the semester. At that time only the Freshman will be initiated. Upperclassmen will escape.

Reminder For All Soul's Day

The Chaplain wishes to remind all students who have not already done so to hand in their All Souls Day envelopes to the Chaplain's Office today, Tuesday, so that the intentions may be included in the Mass tomorrow morning.

The enclosed cards already include Villanova's Gold Stars and Deceased Students. Students simply add the names of their relatives and friends.

Remember also to receive Communion for your relatives and friends who are suffering the pains of purgatory. The Church Militant must help the Church Suffering, who cannot help themselves.

VILLANOVA ALUMNI HONOR PRESIDENT AT BOSTON DINNER

A pre-game dinner held the night before the B. C. football game began the "Boston Weekend" for members of the Villanova Club of that city and many other Villanova rooters who were in town to see the game. The dinner, held in the Lenox Hotel last Thursday evening at 8 P. M., honored the Rev. F. X. N. McGuire, O.S.A., President, Rev. E. B. McKee, O.S.A., Vice-President, and the members of the Villanova coaching staff.

Invitations to this dinner were sent to all the members of the Alumni as well as to the parents of students from the New England area by Frank D. Ronan, Secretary of the Boston Club. He expected many to attend while in Boston to see the game, and hoped that a large number would be present to support this annual celebration of the organization.

Inter-Racial Club Holds 2nd Hop

The semester's second Sunday afternoon record dance was held Sunday afternoon in the Field House under the sponsorship of the Interracial Society.

Dancing was enjoyed by a large number of students and guests from 3:00 to 5:30. A large number of girls from Rosemont, Immaculata and Chestnut Hill colleges attended.

All proceeds from the dance are to be used by the society in its work for interracial justice.

Music Seminar Hears Chopin

The Music Club held the first of its series of musical recitations last night at 8 P. M. in the second-floor Library Seminar rooms. A program of all Chopin recorded music was presented.

Last night's program marked the first time the facilities of the new library have been used for students musical appreciation. Rev. John Vrana, O.S.A., moderator of the Club, hopes that the practice initiated last night might be continued and become a regular part of the campus activities.

The Chopin program was held in collaboration with the music exhibit sponsored by the Polish Intercollegiate Club currently being shown in the lobby of the Library.

Definite plans for future recitations have not been announced by Father Vrana.

Going to New York?

Students who are going to New York at any time and would like to attend the Arthur Godfrey show may secure free tickets from Villanova's Chesterfield representatives. They are Mike Marshall, O'Dwyer Hall and Neal Fahy, 128 Austin. A few weeks advance notice will be required.

Society to Meet Wednesday Night

A meeting of the Sanctuary Society to plan the coming year's activities will be held tomorrow night, Wednesday, in the Mendel Amphitheater at 7:15.

Individual members will be assigned to the various activities of the Society such as Adoration and the Literature Racks. President Ray Raciawski urges all members to attend so that new business may be discussed.

On the Air!!

The occasion was the first broadcast of the year originating from WVIL's studios. Jack Rowe, Skip Keenley, and Bill Breninghouse await the engineer's go ahead signal.

Campus Radio Station Plans "On-the-Spot" Broadcasts

WVIL, the campus radio station, began planning special feature programs last week after its successful opening. Special "on the spot" broadcasts are to play a major role in the station's activities this year. The purchasing of new equipment, the orientating of new personnel and improvement of the station's reception also highlighted the week.

Operational difficulties prevented the airing of the first of the Villanova Forum series, but arrangements have been completed to present the remainder of the series. In addition plans are being formulated to broadcast portions of the student council sessions and to bring "play-by-play" descriptions of Villanova basketball games at the Palestra to campus residents.

A new tape recorder has been purchased by the station and is expected to be utilized advantageously in the immediate future.

Last week, the first of broadcasting, saw the breaking-in of the station's new personnel. Now the new announcers and engineers will commence to take their regular turns along side of the veterans of WVIL.

The first week of broadcasting found WVIL's reception good in most areas of the campus, and the few minor disturbances are expected to be ironed out shortly.

DPE'S Register Soph Pledges

Last Wednesday night the business fraternity Delta Pi Epsilon held a meeting in Room 202 Mendel Hall in order to register more than 50 Sophomore pledgees who were sponsored by the fraternity members.

The fraternity has adopted the "big brother" method of evaluating pledgees who desire membership in the Delta Pi Epsilon. The pledgee will be observed by the "big brother," who will later report to the membership committee as to his worthiness.

Initiation will take place at a date to be announced soon.

Change Seminar Meeting Time

The regular weekly meeting of the Italian Seminar has been changed from Tuesday evening to Wednesday evening at 7:30, in room 213 Mendel Hall.

All students who are still interested and have not enrolled for membership may still join.

There have been several Italian Grammars submitted for inspection to be used in the course and a final choice shall be made at the next meeting of the class in Wednesday, November 2, 1949.

Pasquariello Leads Wildcats To 28-14 Win Over B. C.; Meet Hoyas Friday Night

IMPROVED HOYAS BOAST FOUR WINS IN SIX STARTS

Mattingly, Noppinger --Conn & Baranowski Lead Strong Club

"The team we would like most to beat in '49." That's what Georgetown's Hoyas voted Villanova so watch out for an upset when G. U. plays host to the Wildcats, Friday evening, at Griffith Stadium. The once-beaten Hoyas coached by the East's youngest mentor, Bob Margarita, 28, are out to fall the Blue and White especially after the Fordham fiasco in which the Rams upset the Hoyas 42-0.

Last time Georgetown turned the trick on Villanova was 1931, A. D., and they have won only two games out of seven with the Wildcats in series which started back in 1904. You can believe that the Hoyas will go all out to capture the decision on Friday night.

Greatly Improved

As is evidenced by a comparison of last year's Blue and Grey record with this season's slate, the Hoyas can boast they have the most-improved eleven in the nation. Practically all of the credit for this can be given to their new coach Bob Margarita. He is a native of Medford, Mass., who did his college playing for Brown and has made a great start in his new job on the shores of the Potomac. His Hoyas have won four out of six so far.

"I consider Frank Mattingly a right good quarterback passer," says Margarita. Mattingly is a 6-foot 4-inch sophomore from Lexington Park, Md., who completed twelve out of twenty-two passes against the Boston College Eagles. Another good Hoya is Bob Noppinger, a left end, who endeared himself to Margarita by playing fifty-seven minutes during the victory over Wake Forest. And of course, everyone has heard of Billy Conn, the crapid-running back of the Hoyas.

Young as Margarita is, he is not the juvenile of the staff that he has assembled. His backfield coach, Joe Sullivan is only 21, having received his degree at Dartmouth last February.

Georgetown's two losses this season have been to Maryland, and that terrific upset by Fordham which happens to the best.

Baranowski Back

Anyone who saw Villanova once the Hoyas last year, 36-7, will remember the outstanding play of Center Vic Banonis. He seemed to be all over the field tackling Wildcat backs. Banonis will be back this year as will Henry (Babe) Baranowski. Baranowski will be remembered as the man who almost spelled upset for the Cats in '47. Against Villanova, he was all over the field running and passing and the 'Cats were glad to win that one, 14-12.

A total of four Philadelphians are on the Hoya squad. They are: Frank Desmond of St. James, Chester, and Bill Resch, tackles Tom Dolan and Jerry Kane.

The Hoyas' record so far is mighty impressive. They beat Holy Cross 20 to 13 in their opener but then lost to Maryland, 33-13. However, Georgetown came right back on the following Saturday to drop Wake Forest, 12-6, and followed this win with a breezing over N. Y. U. Then, the Hoyas dropped Boston College, 10-7, but last Saturday were trounced by Fordham.

Powerful Pasquariello tears through the Boston College line for twelve yards and a first down. The fabulous fullback, playing for the last time before his home town, gained a total of 128 yards plus two touchdowns. Also pictured are Joe Rogers (20), Joe Rilo (86), Pete Limanni (72), and Nick Liotta (with sleeves rolled up).

Kittens Defeat Cornell As Backfield Men Shine

McCreary's Long Runs Pace Attack, High Powered Offense Gains Total of 500 Yards; Line Play Brilliant

High above Cayuga's waters the Villanova 150 lbs. football team clubbed out a 26-20 decision over Cornell's lightweights. It was the Kittens second victory this season, which has yet to see them lose.

The game got underway with Villanova kicking off to their opponents. The Blue and White forced the Little Red to punt and took over the pigskin on their own '30. On the 3rd play from scrimmage Joe McCreary sprinted to the outside and raced 70 yards to pay dirt. Moore's attempt for the extra point was blocked and the score stood at 6-0.

The following kickoff saw a 70 yard return by Dick Corwith who scored 2 plays later from the 9 yd. line. The point try was good and Cornell took a 7-6 lead.

After an exchange of punts the Kittens marched 65 yards paced by Battino and McCreary. McCreary raced around his left end from 12 yards out and scored his second six pointer of the game. Moore's kick was perfect and the Kittens led 13-7 at the end of the first quarter.

The second quarter was packed with thrills from the outset. The Little Red after being pushed back to their own 4 sprung a double reverse with Corwith going 96 yards to score. The try for the point was good and Cornell held a 14-13 lead.

After an exchange of kicks, Villanova with McCreary and Williams, who ably replaced the injured Charlie Battino, marched 65 yards to the double stripe with Jim Moore going over from the one. The try for the point was wide and the half-time score read Villanova 19, Cornell 14.

The second half saw a scoreless 3rd stanza. The defensive play of both clubs was hard fought. Jack Loughlin, Tom Parise and Bill Lemmer were defensive gems for the fighting Kittens. Jim Moore kept the Cornell club in trouble with his booming punts. His best efforts were 70 yards and 60 yards a terrific performance in any league.

The last quarter saw the Kittens on the prowl again. With the pigskin on the 40 yd. stripe. Moore with fine deception, dropped back and threw a pas sto Louie Mariero who snagged it on the 20. Lou with a fine display of broken field running went into the end zone standing up. Moore's try for the odd point split the uprights and the score was 26-14.

On the final minute of play, Cornell's Corwith sped 60 yards after taking a reverse to make the final count 26-20 in the Kittens win column.

The Kittens played fine ball and once more proved their ability to come back. The eleven displayed a high-powered offense, which gained 502 yds. Next week the club travels to engage powerful Navy and with the hope of keeping their slate clean.

"As the Staff Picks 'Em"!?

BY HECK

Avid readers of "As the Staff Picks 'Em", do you suffer from a bad case of seeing what just ain't so? Do you think that you read in your favorite column that Notre Dame was to meet Cincinnati, Iowa State was to face Michigan or perhaps that Luther was to take on Upper Iowa? Well, Luther did take on Upper Iowa, but the rest of last week's dope sheet was all a horrible mistake.

It seems that the printer of the leading campus newspaper left out a few teams and simply moved the teams below up to the next box. Thus we have the mess which resulted. How Purdue instead of Pitt tore themselves away from their other committments to play Penn last weekend (according to ATSPE) we really couldn't say, although we do think that it is carrying the two platoon system too far.

IRISH DOWN 'CATS: SINK NAVY IN 3-WAY X-COUNTRY MEET

Ross Wins, Thompson 2nd, to Lead Pack

Browning Ross repeated his performance of last year by again leading harriers from three schools to win the second annual triangular cross country meet between Villanova, Notre Dame, and Navy, held at Annapolis last Saturday. George Thompson also duplicated his feat of last year by again running second to Ross. As is their now established custom, the boys left the rest of the field far behind, coming in about eight yards apart, and a hundred and fifty ahead of third-place Kittel of Notre Dame.

Irish Power Too Much

The team standings were also the same as last year. The Irish power once more proved too much for the 'Cats and Middies. In what resembled the parade down Fifth Avenue on Paddy's day, a steady stream of Hibernians filed across the line to rack a low total of 28 points, Villanova trailed the Irish, from a distance, with 55 points, while the hapless sailors went the way of their brother athletes of the gridiron by taking last. The Wildcats barely beat th Tars, though; only one point boosted them over Navy's score of 56.

Ross and Thompson almost got lost at least once and probably twice. It seems that the Navy changed their course this year for which incidentally, Browning Ross holds the record, and our men got a little confused. The Middies were naturally familiar with plotting courses from their Navigation classes and Notre Dame had the usual luck of the Irish, but Browning and George had no such support. In spite of running several hundred yards extra in the process, they still managed win by huge margins. Their times for the 4.8 miles grind were as follows: Ross, 26 min. 29 secs. Thompson, 26 mins. 35 secs.

Face Seton Hall Sat.

This was the Harriers' third meet of the year. Previously they had lost to Army and N. Y. U. Next week they will perform for the first time this season before the home folks. On Saturday, a dual contest with Seton Hall is on tap, and will be held here at Villanova starting and finishing in the stadium.

POWERFUL FULLBACK POUNDS EAGLES FOR TWO TOUCHDOWNS

Frinzi Sparks Drive with 69-Yard Run; Romanik Hits 11

Robust Ralph Pasquariello and his ten little Wildcats went to Boston last Friday night with revenge in their minds and when the dust had cleared from Braves Field the Mainliners from Pennsylvania emerged with a 28-14 win over the Eagles of Boston College.

The contest was a bruising, slashing affair marked with several flairups, brilliant runs, peerless passing, and an all-round great game which was exactly what was expected when these two old rivals met each other.

Pasky Scores Two

Big Ralph, playing for the last time before hundreds of fans from his home town of Everett, was the deciding factor as he dashed and slashed for 128 total yards and two touchdowns, one from the 39 and the other from the 3.

The initial spark that set off the Wildcat charge of dynamite was when Co-captains Pasquariello and Al Schmid won the toss and elected to refeive. B. C. kicked off and one minute later the score stood at 7-0. in favor of Villanova. It wasn't exactly as easy as that, though at the time it seemed so. Two plays brought the ball up the Blue and White 31. At that point quarterback Steve Romanik gave the ball to Mickey Frinzi and, before the Eagle secondaries could realize it, he was five yards behind them and on his way to a 69 yard touchdown romp. Tom Clavin then came in and split the uprights for his first of four extra points. And it all happened before the Eagles had even worked up a decent sweat.

Before the Hillites could get their breaths Pasquariello had gone over from the 39 for his first score of the evening. This one came on a couple of Romanik passes, who incidentally hit with 11 for 23, a few running plays and 230 pounds of Pasquariello pounding through the whole Eagle team for pay dirt. There was just no stopping the big fullback as he shook off a B. C. tackler every five yards and left a heap of frustrated white-jerseyed forms in his wake. Clavin again converted and the scoreboard read 14-0.

The Eagles started a brief flurry after the kickoff that carried them to the six before a fourth down pass was intercepted by Frinzi who lateralled to Clavin who toted the pigskin up to the 30. That started the Cats on the road to their third TD which was scored after four minutes had elapsed in the second period. It was pile-driving Pasquariello again slashing off right-tackle from the 3 and after Clavin hit for his third the score was 21-0 in favor of the Mainliners.

AUSTIN ALUMNI, BOTH BARRACKS WIN IN IM LID LIFTER

Mendel vs. Fedigan, Doms vs. Austin on Tap Tonight

Last Tuesday evening saw the 1949 Intramural Basketball swing into action as two games were played. In the first tilt, a highly regarded Barracks 1&4 quintet just managed to edge a good Dom five 42-41. The game was nip and tuck all the way with the score at half-time reading 28-18. Leading the attack for the winners was Tommy Flynn who made 11 points. He was ably assisted by Tom Kalkowski, Don Dot, Jim Selgrath, and Don Smith. Bill Knecht proved to be the big man on the floor as he garnered 20 points to lead the attack for the losers. His play on the board also stood out. Referees were Freshman Basketeers, Gallagher and McColgen.

In the second contest, Austin trounced a mediocre Mendel squad 62-39. There never was any doubt as to the outcome as Austin made use of all their subs in the game. Tom Brennan with 13 points and Joe Bognar with 10 led the scoring for Austin. For the losers, Becotte with 10 and Briggs with 7 were high. Connie Dettling and G. Mondschein officiated.

In Thursday's evening's opener, an inspired but outmanned good Council five put up a terrific battle for three periods only to tire and succumb inthe final minutes to Barracks 2&3 by a 50-40 score. The victors were paced by the uncanny hook shooting of Ruggerio and Brennan who scored 23 and 15 points respectively. Brick with 13 and O'Donnell and Boyle with 9 each led the scoring for the losers in their scoring efforts. The halftime score showed Bks. 2&3 leading 23-18. Jim Mooney and Bill Kluczsarits refereed the game.

On Thursday evening Alumni lived up to its pre-season predictions by trouncing Fedigan, 48-27. With the first five playing only a small part of the game, the outcome yas never in doubt as Alumni enjoyed a 29-8 halftime lead. Father McLaughlin started a new five after intermission composed mainly of freshmen. Despite their obvious inexperience this team more than held their own and left at the ten minute mark still on the long end of a 31-18 score. The first five then returned and finished the game. Scoring was well distributed with Barry taking honors with 12 points. Farley and Buckley each scored eight. Of the second five O'Donnell a tall freshman, made the best showing. Colletta led the losers' scoring with six markers. Joey Crossin, although off in his shooting game played a good floor game for the Fedigan team. Stanko and Mondschein officiated.

Austin's football team trouced Alumni 42 to 0 in the lone contest of the week. John Egnor again led his team's attack as he tallied twice. O'Brien and Wilson also stood out for the winners.

The following basketball games will be played this week:

Tonight

Doms vs. Austin
Mendel vs. Fedigan

Thursday

Alumni vs. Bks 2&3
Bks 1&4 vs. Good Council

150-League to Award New Trophy

A new championship trophy, to be called the Francis B. Snavely, Jr., Cup, has been put in competition for the 1949 season for the winner of the Eastern Intercollegiate 150-pound football league. The announcement was made last week by Asa S. Bushnell, secretary-treasurer of the league.

Three legs will be required for permanent possession of the trophy which was established by his family in memory of the late Francis B. Snavely, Jr., Cornell honor student and regular on the Ithicans' lightweight team in 1947. Snavely died last year on the Cornell campus.

The new cup will replace the George Oakley Smalley Trophy, which was retired by Navy at the end of last season.

Navy, Cornell, Rutgers, Princeton, Pennsylvania, and Villanova compose the league which has been dominated for the past four years by the Middies. However, with the Academy boys being tied by Penn, 6-6, and the Villanova Kittens smashing to a 19-13 win over Rutgers, it looks like anybody's race.

From The Sidelines . . .

Boston College Game Is Best of Season

By Harry Range, Sports Editor

Having just returned from Boston, it is in a much better frame of mind that we write this column as compared to the gloomy outlook we've had for the past three weeks. The clash at Braves Field in Beantown was beyond doubt the finest we've seen the Wildcats play this season and we've been at five of the seven.

With a 6-1 record under their belts and with only the 21-19 Tulsa upset to mar a perfect season, the Mainliners are having one of the best years in many a moon. Precluding wins over Georgetown and North Carolina State in the remaining two games, we don't feel that we're going out too far on the proverbial limb by looking for a bowl bid. An invitation to the Sugar Bowl Classic would be just about the greatest thing that could happen to the Mainliners for it would complete the picture at New Orleans since Villanova's sensational basketball team is playing there as well as track luminaries, Browning Ross and George Thompson.

For our critics, this does not constitute a prediction as yet, but we can hope, can't we?

This Friday night Jim Leonard and his boys will journey to Washington for the traditional game with Georgetown. The Hoyas now have a record of 5 and 2, having been beaten by Maryland and upset by a fine Fordham club last Saturday. Even with the one-sided score of the Fordham fracas, the Hoyas are a good club and with all the tradition behind this contest it should be a good game.

With a game as good as this and with rivals as old as the Blue and Grey we expect to see a large crowd of Villanovans down in the capital. The great exhibition of decorations for the Conpolly Award will take place before the N. C. State Game this year. For the past two years the decoration of the residence halls has been a major part of the week preceding the Georgetown game and we hope to see this year as successful as the past two. The Connolly Award is a fine chance for a show of school spirit that has been absent on so many occasions.

Our campus Chesterfield representative has informed us that he will award a carton of Chesterfields to the Villanovan that most closely predicts the score of the Villanova-Georgetown game. A box will be placed in the VILLANOVAN office so that all you have to do is write the score and your name, drop it in the box ,and win 200 Chesterfields.

Dear Bewildered—If you would like a personal explanation in answer to your letter of last week, please see us in the VILLANOVAN office this Thursday. Thank you, Mr. Anthony . . .

Eagles Fight Back

A 29 yard runback of Schmidt's ensuing kickoff by Bill Scholz brought the Eagles back into an attacking mood. They went 65 yards on such plays as a Songin pass to Aible Gould, a pass interference, a screen pass to Farrell, and a toss to Al Cannava on which the great halfback fumbled just as he went over the sidelines at the two. The last two yards were tough, though, bit Farrell finally made it on a pitchout around left end and even that play was disputed as Tom Clavin hit him out of bounds as he went over. Petela's conversion was good and it was then 21-7.

With seven points under their belts then became greedy and after an interception by Kenny Hughes set them rolling to thir second tally. Their great quarterback Butch Songin took over on the Wildcats 11 and passed the Hillites all the way down the field culminating with a 34 yard scoring pass to Cannava in the end zone. Petela's try was again good and it was then 21-14.

The Eagles almost scored aga'n in the closing seconds of the first half as Songing passed to Cannava for the second time in the end zone but the play was nullified as the home teams center was down field for the play and was declared ineligible receiver.

The third period and most of the fourth saw both clubs fighting to a stand-still with Villanova definitely having the upper hand, however.

Romanik Goes Over

With eight minutes left in the game a 12 yard pass by Romanik to end Dan Simeone, plus a 12 yard end-around by the same Simeone brought the ball down to the two. From this point Steve Romanik carried the ball over into the end zone on a quarterback sneak and with Clavin's fourth conversion the scoreboard showed 28-14 count which was the final of the most thrilling game of the 1949 football season.

Overall Picture

From the standpoint of a spectator the clash with the Eagles had all the characteristics of a great football game. There were a carload of thrills throughout the entire game, even in the third period in which there was no scoring.

Few will forget Al Schmid's punt from his own end zone that went 60 yards from scrimmage, or the excitement in the closing minutes of the first half when Butch Songin got hot and passed the Eagles to two touchdoyns and almost a third; or the tremendous turnout of fans from Everett to see Big Ralph and Nick Liotta; and finally the score, 28-14.

it was felt that the North Carolina State game would be a more appropriate time. The rally that evening, besides building up the spirit for the game on Saturday, will mark the awarding of the prizes for decorations. It will probably be conducted in the Field House, with everybody on hand for the occasion.

The Inter-Frat Ball is the most popular of the informal dances held at Villanova. Three of the Four Greek-letter organizations on campus join together each year for the occasion.

Saturday the game speaks for itself. The NROTC Unit promises a good imitation of their Academy brothers before the game and quite possibly a half-time display. That night they will gather, in uniform, at the Barclay for an informal dance. If we can judge by their past endeavors it should be quite successful.

Two Proms at local girls' colleges and the Belle Masque production should then fill out a weekend on Villanova's calendar that should be remembered. No one knows whether or not the students will dust off Pop's raccoon coat as a display of their enthusiasm, but many people on campus have marked it as THE weekend of the year. What will help is the fact that only three days of school will follow the weekend. Thanksgiving recess will begin the following Thursday.

Marine Corps League To Hold Birthday Ball

All men of Villanova are invited to attend the 174th Anniversary Birthday Ball sponsored by the Marine Corps League of Bryn Mawr.

This Ball will be held at the Merion Cricket Club at 9:00 P. M., November 9, 1949. Music will be furnished by Chuck Gordon's orchestra. At midnight a birthday cake illuminated by 174 candles will be cut and served to the guests. Other refreshments will be available.

Tickets, as well as additional information, may be obtained in room 111 Barry Hall.

This year due to the unification of the Armed Forces there will be no publicly recognized day for any one branch of the Armed Forces instead there will be an Armed Forces Day. On this day all the branches of the service will celebrate their holiday together.

Originally authorized by Congress on November 10, 1775 the "Soldier of the Sea" have served this country continually on every battle front of every war the United States has participated in since their first day of inception.

Marines to the tune of over 100,000 strong in the regulars volunteer reserve, organized reserve and aviation reserve will celebrate the Marine Corps birthday. Wherever there is a Marine stationed there will be some kind of a celebration.

Civil Reforms

"Nowadays the freedom of the Church depends on the freedoms of the people—civil freedoms." Further elucidation showed that Father Murray believed that the American Catholic, if he took over the nation, as the Catholics in Ireland, Belgium and Portugal are doing, would help the nation. The Catholics of this country, however, are not aiming to take over this nation.

Father Murray showed how the Church has never alienated itself from one particular party, but has always aimed at the predominant party of the times with its discussions of shortcomings.

The Forum was closed by Father Murray, with the warning that Catholics should strive to know our democratic society and understand its intricacies in order to accomplish their wishes through politics.

Father McGuire opened the Forum with an Opening Prayer. He then explained the aims and purpose of this year's series. Exhorting the audience to be "Apostles of our lecture series," Father McGuire asked them to invite their friends, regardless of faith, to come, to listen and to learn.

Mr. Bruderle, chairman of the Forum, gave a sketch of the Forum and thanked Father Murray for his suggested list of speakers. He then formally introduced Father Murray as the speaker of the evening.

The future speakers are expected to come up to the standard that Father Murray has set for this year's Forum series.

Next Lecture

The next lecture will be Tuesday evening, November 29th, in the Commerce and Finance auditorium. The speaker at that time will be Reverend Edward J. McCarthy, O.S.A., who will speak on "The Spanish and Latin-American Tradition of Church - State Relationships". This is another phase of the Forum's general topic: "Church and State".

Major Ed Wall, Harvard, '40 -Flying Executive, U.S. Air Force!

Born in Newark, N. J., he moved to Boston at an early age, graduated from the public Latin high school in 1936, entered Harvard the same year, where he majored in economics and government.

"Active on the campus" — he played football, earned his letter on the boxing team. He worked part-time in a variety of jobs from bouncer to baby sitter. received his AB degree in 1940.

He enrolled in Harvard Law School, left at the beginning of the war to become an Aviation Cadet. In December, 1942, he won his pilot's wings, received a Reserve commission as Second Lieutenant.

Assigned to anti-sub patrol duty, he flew B-25's and B-17's before going overseas in 1944, where he flew 30 missions as a B-24 pilot. Shot down over Germany, he was a prisoner of war for 3 months.

Back in the States with his English wife, he earned his Regular commission. Then he returned to Harvard under the Air Force college training program, receiving his LLB degree in 1949.

Now, he is confident about his future and security. As a pilot and legal officer of Bolling Air Force Base, D. C., Major Ed Wall is a typical U. S. Air Force flying executive . . . with a challenging career.

If you are single, between the ages of 20 and 26½, with at least two years of college, consider a flying career as an officer in the U. S. Air Force. You may be able to meet the high physical and moral requirements and be selected for training as an Aviation Cadet. If you do not complete Aviation Cadet training, you may return to civilian life or have opportunity to train at Officer Candidate School for an important officer assignment in non-flying fields.

Air Force officer procurement teams are visiting many colleges and universities to explain these career opportunities. Watch for their arrival—or get full details at your nearest Air Force Base, local recruiting station, or by writing to the Chief of Staff, U. S. The Library Corner

Two new books which should prove interesting, intriguing, thought-provoking and stimulating are Leo Brady's "Edge of Doom" and Athur M. Schlesinger, Jr's. "The Vital Center".

"The Edge of Doom" is a novel whose overwhelming power, headlong pace, and depth-within-depth of meaning, will make it one of the outstanding books of the year. It poses profound questions that have tried the souls of men in every age — questions of responsibility and authority, world and spirit, sin and regeneration, that are the stuff of lasting literature. It points unmistakably at a supernatural answer. Yet, as sheer narrative it is utterly compelling.

Of Murder and Manhunt

In its simplest interpretation, "The Edge of Doom" is the story of a murder and a man-hunt. The scene is a city — any city in America the time is today. You sit with young Martin Lynn in the drab room where his mother lies dead; you go with him to the man from whom he expects help. You see that help half-offered, half-withheld; the bitter revolt flaring in Martin; the swift blow falling on the half-turned head. The killer steps, all unsuspected, into the streets of night.

Little by little, the thing closes in, in a series of vivid scenes that mount to almost unbearable excitement. You will not forget Martin's encounter, the funeral home, with the body of the man he has slain; his feline stalking of the woman who talked too much; his confrontation with the murder instrument in the very room of the crime; his final talk with the hired mourner, chance-met, that resolves his problem in a flash. And you will know, as Martin walks from his mother's bier to meet what awaits him, that he has won through to victory.

The "Edge of Doom" is a book to be highly recommended as a murder story and a psychological novel. It is a moving and exciting piece of work.

The impact of "The Vital Center," is as sharp and clear as the note of a bell. Cutting through the confusions and fears of our time, it shows how we can recharge our democratic faith with some of its old passion and principle.

Why is our free society on the brink of failure? Why are we a prey to anxiety and insecurity, "not free, but on parole"? Because, says Mr. Schlesinger, neither the Conservatives nor the Progressives have been able to meet the terrific repercussions of industrialism, under which "Man must organize beyond his moral and emotional means." "The businessman rescued society from the feudal warrior only to hand it over to the accountant."

A trained historian, Mr. Schlesinger shows us our present situation in perspective. He traces the history and influence of Communism in America and the rise of the non-Communist Left in Europe. He analyzes the nature of "Civil liberties" and clarifies the befogged issue of loyalty in government service. Finally he sets forth the main outlines of a "new radical program" — a militant liberalism which would once more make freedom a faith worth fighting for.

of this time was spent at the ACRAC, which stands for "Air Cadets Recreational Activities Center." The Cadets graciously turned over all their facilities in the building to the Reserve Middies who passed many a pleasant hour there with a cold beer and a good story.

Ashore Again

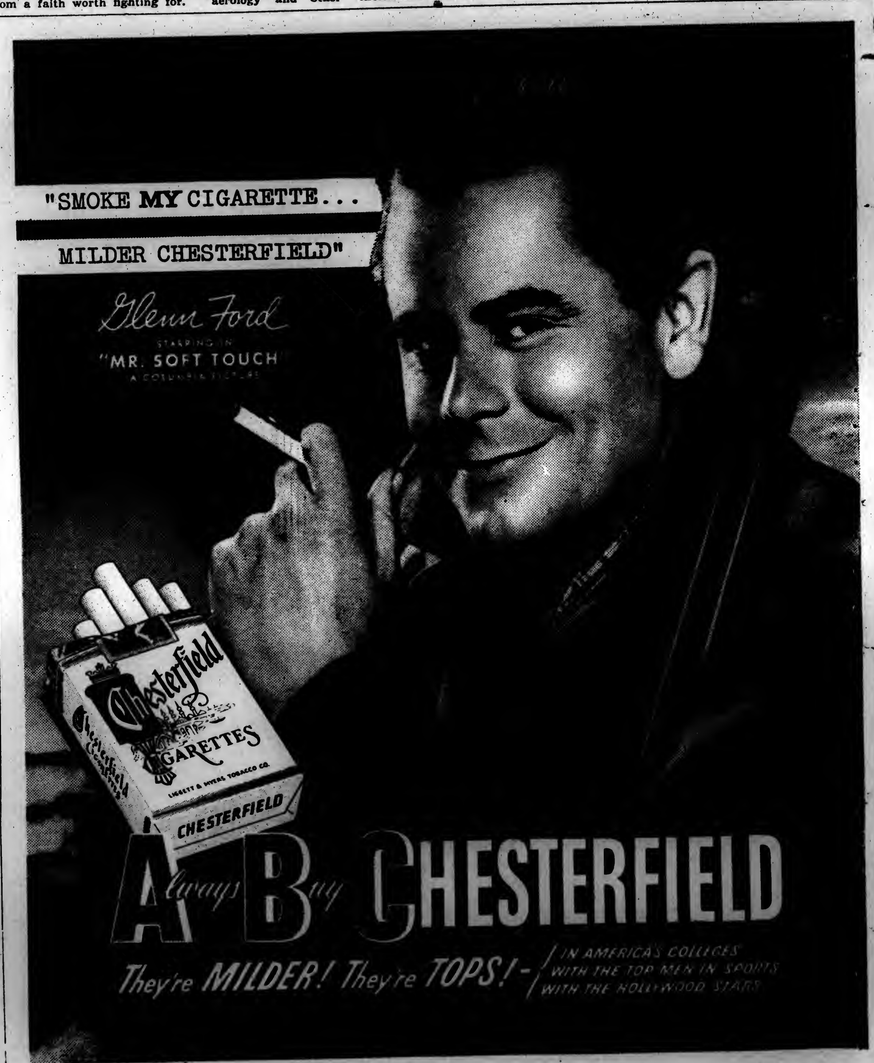
Again the time came to move out. After a week and a day, the word was passed to "Pack Seabags." By then that call had an old familiar ring to it. As a matter of fact, the only gripe heard at Pensacola was due to the weekly stowing and breaking out of gear as the middies changed locales.

This time the boys were going to stay put, for three weeks, at least. They moved back to the midshipman barracks which they had vacated a week before, and awaited whatever would be their lot.

It proved to be quite enjoyable. During the next phase, the middies were given classes in navigation, engineering, aero-dynamics, aerology and other incidentals which go to complete the studies of an aviator. One might say that it was an accelerated pre-flight program.

The day began at 0430 with chow. Then came muster and classes 'til noon. After that the lunch tours were conducted. These latter were many and varied, from Fire Fighting School to Overhaul and Repair. The tours lasted up to three hours each. After this the middie was free to do as he pleased.

During the holiday weekend of the "Fourth", special liberty was granted to all hands. Several Villanovans took advantage of this opportunity to travel to New Orleans. This "free lance" tour provided more than enough material for the "bull-sessions" held later in the ACRAC.



With all this activity, the men were soon counting the days left at Pensacola with regret. But the Cruise was far from over. Ahead was Little Creek and the Amphibious Training period of the summer.

This article is the fouth of a series of five covering the training period that the Midshipmen of the Villanova NROTC unit attended this summer.—Editor's Note.

Fraternities Set For Inter Frat Ball Nov. 18th

This Year's Dance Expected to Top All Past Editions. Tickets on Sale Now

Friday evening, November 18, will see the combined efforts of the Arts, Business and Medical Fraternities come to fruition. That night the traditional Interfraternity Ball, climax of the Autumn social season, will be held.

Enthusiasm and hard work on the part of the committees concerned with decorations, publicity, and tickets ensures this years Ball of surpassing, in all phases, those that have been held in the preceding years. In anticipation of a tremendous demand on the part of the student body, the committee in charge of tickets is rushing arrangements and intends to have them on sale early this week.

Opportune Time

Added significance has been lent to the affair this year in that it is scheduled at a very opportune time. On the next afternoon Franklin Field will be the site of the final football game of the season. The occasion of a really traditional football weekend is not expected to be bypassed by many students. The fact that the Ball is the last open social event before the beginning of the season of Advent is another inducement to those who are planning to attend it.

In the past the Interfraternity Ball has been one of the three or four dances that were considered a must for a socially successful year. According to those connected with the production of it, 1949's edition is prepared to carry on the tradition of bigger and better dances.

Blue Cross Plan Extends Benefits To College Men

All students who are interested in joining the Blue Cross and/or the Blue Shield should take particular notice of this information.

As a result of efforts of Mr. John Dever, Comptroller of the College, prompted by the requests of married students matriculating at the college, the Blue Cross and Blue Shield have announced that they are willing to give to students the benefits of regular policy holders.

The policy of the Blue Cross in the past has been to exclude students and professional men from their hospital benefits. For a limited time only, students and professional men, such as college professors, may make application for enrollment in the Blue Cross Plan.

If a sufficient number of students show interest in joining this organization, arrangements will be made for a personal representative of Blue Cross to come to the campus, at the convenience of the students, to further explain the benefits of Blu Cross and offer applications to students who wish them.

It is expected that many married students will take advantage of this unique opportunity to join this plan. However, this offer to college students will be withdrawn December 15th,, 1949. Prompt action is imperative.

Interested students should fill in the coupon below and deposit it in the Blue Cross Box in the VILLANOVAN office, in the basement of the Commerce and Finance building, this week.

JUNIORS BEGIN COLLECTIONS FOR ORPHANAGE PARTY

The annual Christmas party for the orphans at St. John's Orphanage, in Philadelphia, has been scheduled for December 15th. In order to obtain funds for this party, the Junior Class has inaugurated a program of collections to begin tomorrow, November 10th. Collections will be taken up in all Religion classes throughout the college by members of the committee. Two thousand dollars has been set as a goal for these collections.

Collections Scheduled

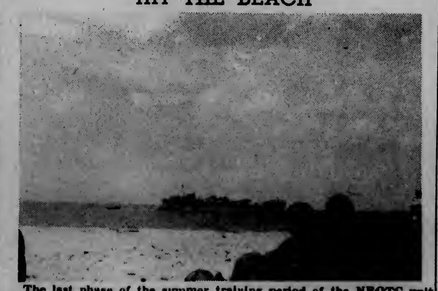
Last year, the first Christmas party of its kind was held for the orphans at St. John's and has established a precedent for the students of the College. This year, the Class of '51 has elected to undertake the responsibility of organizing the orphans' party as part of their regular activities program.

At present, there are about five hundred children at the orphanage, and to hold an entertainment such as has been planned requires a large sum of money. To mitigate the heavy expenses of this party, therefore, collections have been scheduled, and will be made weekly over a period of six weeks. It is hoped that each student in the college will contribute at least $1.00 to this worthy cause. In addition to the refreshments to be served to the children, it is planned to give to each child a gift of some kind.

Students are encouraged to contribute generously for this party for the orphans; they deserve all that can be given.

Contributions from students' parents are encouraged, and all donations will be gratefully accepted.

An Amphibian's Life



By JOHN ROWE

This article is the last in a series covering the training period that the Midshipmen of the Villanova NROTC Unit attended this summer. —Editor's Note.

With the completion of six weeks aviation training, the boys from Villanova's NROTC looked forward to the trip north to Little Creek, Va. There was little doubt in the fellows' minds as to what the Amphibious Training there would cover, since they had had a smattering of that the preceeding summer at San Diego. They were content to settle down for a weekend's travel in the comfortable Pullman accommodations provided for them. What a joy was this, to

"Jacobowsky" To Face Footlights As Climax Of NC State Weekend

ON STAGE

Rehearsals for the November 20, 21, and 22 presentations of Jacobowsky and the Colonel are being held regularly by the Belle Masque in the Field House. Father Krupa, Moderator, is directing the production.

Halls To Be Decorated In Award Competition

One of the features of the week of activity preceding the North Carolina State football game will be the competition for the William Connelly Award, to be presented to the hall devising the best outdoor building decorations on the theme "Beat North Carolina," it was announced by Rev. J. R. Dunne, O.S.A., moderator of Intramural Activities and director of the annual Connelly Award contest.

All halls are eligible to enter the contest, and are encouraged to do so by Fr. Dunne who feels that the display of school spirit connected with the contest will do much to stir up the team to win this last game, and go on to possible post-season success. Day-hop groups are eligible also, and will be allowed to decorate the C & F building.

Customarily, the Connelly award, which was inaugurated in 1937 by Bill Connelly, Director of Athletics, is given for the best decoration job done before the game with one of the traditional rivals. Before the war it took place prior to the Temple game; and in the last two years, before the Georgetown game. But since the Georgetown game was played away this year the committee decided that more interest would be aroused if the contest were held during the week preceding the North Carolina game. The contest can now be held in conjunction with the pre-game rally, and the decorations could be viewed by the many people visiting the campus for the dances and other activities that weekend.

This contest is a part of the Intramural activities, sponsored by the Student Council, and directed cooperatively by the Spirit Committee and Intramural Committee. Besides having possession of the plaque for the next year, the winning hall will also be awarded ten points for their intramural score. Runner-up halls will also be given points for their intramural credit.

Judging of the decorations will be based on the originality and in-

Rosemont Girls Aid Belle Masque In Werfel Comedy

The Belle Masque Dramatic Society will open its current season at the Villanova Field House November 20, 21 and 22 at 8:30 p.m. with Franz Werfel's comedy, "Jacobowsky and The Colonel."

A quartet of veteran actors well known to Belle Masque audiences will appear in the leading roles. The versatile Edward "Ted" Doyle, who portrays a vitriolic colonel, is well remembered from previous roles as the engaging "Straforel" of "The Romancers," and the facetious "Cyrano" of last year's triumph.

Doyle's counterpart, Richard Zande, as Jacobowsky, challenges no detailed description, as his jocose interpretation of "Percinet" in The Romancers and his obsequious role as "Le Bret" in Cyrano have undoubtedly dubbed him among the leading character actors in Bell Masque's history. Both Doyle and Zande fill the Franz Werfel and S. H. Behrman prescription designated to render comedy at its best.

John Rowe

Another actor not at all obscure, who shall appear in the role of Szabuniewicz, is John Rowe, who played the petulant father of Sylvette in the Romancers and a sagacious English gentleman in The Twelve Pound Look. Rowe has achieved the reputation of another prominent character actor of the dramatic society.

Robert Resnick completes this thespian quadrangle by his appropriately designated role as "The Tragic Gentleman." Resnick's performance in Cyrano De Bergerac as the villainous Count de Guiche served as a criterion of his acting ability in such parts, and he now will appear in a role as sardonic as De Guiche.

Rosemont College will again provide the female leading and supporting roles. Miss Pat Ziminsky, who has acted at Saint Joseph's College in their major productions, will play the leading role of Marianne, a vivacious and provocative French woman. Miss Jean Marie Guerin, another newcomer, will appear as Madame Bouffier, who directs the destinies of the inhabi-

Cigarette Wrappers Will Earn Television Set

The Student Council has voted to accept the offer of the Phillip Morris Cigarette Company which has agreed to give the Villanova student body an Admiral Television Console if collectively they can accumulate 60,000 Phillip Morris wrappers.

There is to be no time limit on the offer but the Council expressed a wish to have the wrappers by Christmas. The project is the first of its kind to be attempted in any college in the country by Phillip Morris though it is experimental in nature. If the program is successful here it will be introduced in colleges all over the nation.

Though 60,000 seems to be a large number of wrappers to accumulate for a student body the size of Villanova's there is no doubt that the goal can be attained if there is complete cooperation by everyone. These wrappers may be obtained from anywhere and it is expected that outside help will be needed.

A Depository for the wrappers is situated in the Pie Shop where there also is a thermometer which will indicate the progress being made. Mr. Miller, a sectional sales manager, will tabulate the count every two weeks. On campus "Red" Probert represents Phillip Morris and he will handle all details from day to day.

The Council wishes to emphasize the need for complete cooperation on the part of all students since it is obviously a goal which can be reached but only by an extra effort.

The VILLANOVAN will not be published next Tuesday in order that the staff may prepare for quarterly exams. The next issue of the VILLANOVAN will appear November 22nd.

Full Weekend

There is a great weekend coming up in two weeks featuring all kinds of activities. We'll have Inter-Fraternity Ball on the Friday night before the North Carolina State football game which is to be held at Franklin Field on Saturday afternoon. Sunday will see the first of a three-day run of the Belle Masque production "Jacobowsky and the Colonel." The entire package will be given an initial push at a rally which will climax the Connelly Award competition for the best decorated hall.

Since this is the last game of the season other than possible post-season games, there is good reason for everyone to come out and cheer the team which has so successfully represented Villanova on the gridiron this year. The North Carolina State pre-game rally may afford the last opportunity for the student body to show its appreciation en masse.

Another incentive lies in the fact that the game will be the occasion of the annual homecoming of the alumni. This is the chance to show the alumni that the present student body is just as enthusiastic as any which has preceded.

The Belle Masque is another campus organization which will deserve your support also. They have real entertainment to offer you. From all reports, the play is one of the most humorous to be produced by the Belle Masque.

Of course there will be the ever-popular Inter-Fraternity Ball to provide the relaxing informal social of the weekend. All in all, the weekend promises to be one of the most entertaining in many a moon.

Elections

Today is Election Day all over the country but we'll have none of the excitement and glamor such as is associated with the Presidential election. Today the work-a-day voting will be done for men who are striving for positions in local governments. The people find more of a personal issue in the elections such as today's.

The man who is elected to office in a municipality finds that people will scrutinize his personal record and possibilities closely since his decisions will strike close to home. This does not mean that the people are voting the right men into office. Party politics bring about the conditions we find today in almost any community. Incompetents are found holding responsible positions because the people voted first and thought later.

If the country is to be politically sound it is important that the people take an active interest in all elections, no matter how trivial they seem. Since our political structure is based on the principles of self-government the need for participation of the citizens is evident unless we contradict our faith in the constitution.

The college graduate will learn that with his education was conferred a responsibility to his community to intelligently act in matters political since he often will find himself in the position of a leader in civic activity. Too often we find there is a tendency to a "Who bother" attitude among the young professionals. They try to live independently, and so are very surprised that they can be blamed for many of the local government's infirmities if there should be any.

An early realization on the part of the college student of his future civic responsibility will go far to prepare him for active participation in community affairs.

We can well look on as spectators on this Election Day but lets not be disinterested.

By JAMES GRIFFIN

Are you chasing dandelions? Have you ever stopped as you walked along watching your shadow jumping up and down in front of you, and wondered just whether you or the shadow was striving for a goal that would be more lasting? To put it another way, have you ever stopped for a moment and wondered if what you are after is quite worth the effort? And then did you shake it off as a mood, and drive yourself back to activity, to work or play, until such thoughts were further from you than they had ever been before?

College

Just what are you doing at college, anyway? Are you out to have four years of wild weekends on Uncle Sam, figuring that fifteen hours of class a week isn't too bad a price to pay for them. And figuring, that you might even get a diploma. Then you could get an easy job and bum the rest of your life, too. If that's you, you're doing fine. You've got it all figured out, and you're chasing dandelions.

Motive

Or are you really studying to make something of yourself, an accountant maybe, or a chem engineer? Are you out to make a hundred thousand a year, and drive a Cadillac every one will have to notice? If so you have a purpose; but if that is all, you are chasing dandelions.

True Success

Lots of people have studied to be engineers before. Some have graduated and apparently done well in the engineering field. Others have graduated, period. And still others didn't even get that far. Yet it is impossible to tell just which individuals actually were most successful.

Primary Purpose

Oh, yes, those who became engineers were successful at something — they became engineers. So what? They were not made with the chief purpose of being engineers, and if engineering was the totality of their achievement, their primary purpose has been by-passed for the more noticeable but also more ephemeral achievement.

On the other hand, if those who never even passed made high enough marks on earth to graduate them with honors into heaven, they were quite successful; and their success is a permanent one.

Back On The Trail

So why not quit jumping hedges after a floating flower? Stop a moment and decide just which things are primary. Orientate yourself by making it clear in your mind just why you exist, and therefore toward what purpose your life should be directed. And after you have things figured out, go chasing dandelions again, but have a bigger goal in mind than merely catching hold of them.

T. V. OR NOT T. V.

By BILL BRENNINGHOUSE

In the past few years the new medium of entertainment known as television has come a long way. It has, however, a long way yet to go. Outside of sports events television has given little or nothing to the viewing audience. It has tried, but up to now has produced next to nothing.

Take the matter of news and sports broadcasting. On the radio we picture news commentators as sparkling, virile, young men whose dress is as impeccable as their diction. On television they turn out to be skinny, little, newscasters in baggy pin-striped suits. Our illusions are shattered. For sports commentators we now see paunchy, rednosed ex-wrestlers where once we pictured athletic, young men of the sports world.

Turned On

Early in the evening, if the set is unfortunately turned on, you may be treated to a number of variety shows. These usually have a young idiot as master of ceremonies who makes corny comments, grins, and talks to the audience. The audience is usually made up of a bunch of juvenile nitwits who start waving like mad every time the camera is pointed their way. These variety shows also feature a few singers who couldn't quite make radio and a sterling orchestra that goes by a name like Baron Bluenose and his Barroom Bloomer Boys.

Perpertrated Crimes

The early evening also sees other crimes perpertrated. On every channel there is bound to be a puppet show which has a strong appeal for the imbecile class. They give the show a nice euphonius name like Rowdy-Dowdy or Googla, Boogla and Bam, and permit demented children to partake in the spectacle. Of course, there are some among the viewing public who like this sort of entertainment and they'll like it even more when they get out of the asylums.

Hams

Then there is drama. Television has become a mecca for hams and hacks. It has often been said that radio had never developed any real drama. Television makes radio drama seem like the world's greatest. And again it has often been said that radio drama was written for intellects averaging six or seven years old. If this be true then television drama is written for feeble-minded infants. An adaptation of Little Red Riding Hood was rejected because it would be over the head of most listeners who would not be able to grasp the connotations, the underlying principles and the philosophical implications involved in this complicated tale of intrigue.

Comedy

Comedy has claimed no little time before the eyes of the televieving audience. It is called comedy for want of a more limiting noun. The top man in comedy is an egotistical ham who dances around like a dying pachyderm, wears ridiculous costumes, throws water and pies all over people and has guest stars. The guest stars are pretty good. This character is aided and abetted in his work by a cooperative audience who roll on the floor with laughter every time he opens his large and yapping mouth.

Ah, Commercials

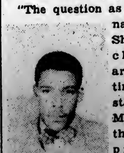
There are many, many other things on television: mind readers, ventriloquists, talking zebras etc. and that old bugaboo of radio, the commercial. Television commercials are artistic. You see a comely miss sip a well known brew, face the camera and show her approval by flashing a forced, assinine grin. The singing commercial is there with all the trimmings. Disgusting as they are, television commercials are usually better than the programs surrounding them. Television has done one thing. More people can now see the ball game.

Campus Queries

By R. F. CULLEN

Question: Do you think the name "College Store" is a better name than "Pie Shop".

Anthony E. Constantino, Senior, Accounting Major



"To be honest with you, I don't think either title is indicative of what the place really is. On the surface the trade looks very diversified, but this is not true because the majority of the students who cater to the place are usually in there for coffee either with or without doughnuts. Upon this basis, I think a more appropriate title would be 'The Coffee Shop'."

Donald J. Manz, Junior, Pre-Med

"Attempts have been made in the past to change the name of the Pie Shop. They have all failed and rightly so. Before I came to Villanova I had heard of the Pie Shop, and no doubt numerous others have also heard of it, without having direct contact with the college. Pie Shop and Villanova seem to go together like salt and pepper. To change the name of the Pie Shop would ruin a name which has grown with the glory of Villanova"

Robert N. C. Nix, Senior, Philosophy Major

"The question as to whether the name of the Pie Shop should be changed has arisen several times during my stay at Villanova. My answer now is the same as on previous occasions; that is, emphatically NO! My reason for this answer stems from the fact that I earnestly believe that tradition has a very important role in college life. Long after the facts have been forgotten the memory of campus "spirit" will linger in our minds; but without tradition it is almost impossible to develop any type of campus spirit."

Joseph J. Gilboy, Sophomore, Marketing Major

"The question now arises are we satisfied with the changing of the name Pie Shop to College Store. I for one do not think all the students are, for the simple reason that the majority of the students are still calling it the Pie Shop. So let's keep calling it the Pie Shop and forget about trying to change the name."

Looking back on the past couple of weeks it seems to me that this town has had its share of good music circulating about. Even places not owned by Frank Palumbo have had something to offer.

Helen Forrest

For instance, Helen Forrest at Chubby's, Tony Martin at the Latin Casino, and the inimitable Hildegarde at the Penn-Sheraton. Three polished performers who play more to the sophisticated crowd, and have been knocking them dead in the soft lights and sweet music circuits for longer than they care to admit. Hildie alone, with her "Darling, Je Vous Aime Beau Coup" has done more to help the American public read high class menus than the entire American School's home study course in basic French. The kid is also murder with a lace hankie — th etype for show that is.

Jump Side

A little more on the jump side, Red Norvo just finished a one week stand at the Rendezvous Club. Red has been a big man in Jazz circles since way back when. Perhaps he's best remembered for his work with Goodman and th sextet (The World is Waiting for the Sun Rise, etc), but he has turned out some terrific stuff with combos of his own.

At the Click our old friend Tony Pastor was holding forth with the same danceable ballads and fine novelty numbers that did so much for last year's Junior Prom. He was packing them in, too. I dropped down to catch their show on Saturday night and had a rough time getting a table at 10 O'clock. To those who still remember, I'd like to report that Adele Castle, Tony's thrush, is still in fine shape, Rouff!! She sings well, too.

Wha' Hoppen

In the wha' hoppen department. How did Rosemary Clooney make Billboard's Vocal gal of the Year after Fran Warren's wonderful waxings of "In Love With a Wonderful Guy", "Envy", etc? To my way of thinking they aren't even in the same league.

Nice Job

Thanks, Ro, especially for a swell job of filling in last week. When one is compelled to drive for hours at a stretch one resorts to the radio as a means of passing the ever valuable time. The results can be disastrous, as witnessed by my recent excursion into the land of the broad "A", more commonly referred to as New England. We suffered through the obnoxious patter of the chief local lighthead, Ed Hirst and such musical travesties as "Mule Team" until finally rewarded with the mellifluous tones of the New York caballeros of the airwaves. The difference is so readily discernible that the Chamber of Commerce is almost culpable of giving Philadelphians reason to leave town by reason of the continued existence of such a nefarious plot as the 950 Club.

Varied Types

From good old Gotham to Boston we were subject to all sorts of horrendous diatribe ranging from Roy Acuff to Dizzy Gillespie, with just about anything that has ever been called music in between. Occasionally some disc jockey would play a half hour of Eckstine interspersed with bop, or possibly we were treated to Doris Day or Perry Como. However on the average it was rather miserable. The hardest part of it all to tak is that there is no need for the listening public to suffer through it all. Disc jockeys such as Art Pedersen and Symphony Sid as well as Doug Arthur and Martin Block are proof that the public appreciates good music. But on to more recent matters.

Some Lemons

The past two weeks have seen the advent of many new tunes with the usual percentage of lemons. Vic Damone agonizes familiarly through "Why Was I Born", Buddy Greco renders a King Colelah version of "Fiesta In Old Mexico" and Frankie Lane convinced me that he would be better off driving mules than singing. Illinois Jacquet has come out with something called "Black Velvet" that is a definite contribution to bop, while a newcomer in the public eye, Mary Ann McCall has recorded a ballad that should please all, a tune called "You're My Thrill". Dodo Day has just released a new album bearing the same name and does her usual heart warming job. Thegal is really good.

Space runs out . . . so do I . . see you soon . . . bye.

Careers . . .

This week, this column shall concern itself with the salesman and salesmanship. The salesman performs a vital function in the economic world and is indispensable to economic stability.

Salesman

No talent is more in demand, and it is generally felt that a minimum of 600,000 men are needed to attain the national ratio of pre-war levels. During the war, many companies carried a skeleton staff, and capable replacements have not been found yet, and as a result, sales staffs are still being expanded.

Enlargement is also governed by another factor, the ability to sell rather than ability to produce, since this will determine future profits. Poorer quality men are being weeded out and the general raising of standards for the salesman is the general trend. The chief problem is to find the higher type individual, and naturally the gaze of salesmanagers is turned toward the college graduate.

Essential Capacity

The salesman is the link, and in many cases is even considered to be the company in the eyes of the buyer. To faithfully represent his firm, the salesman's primary prerequisite, is to be able to sell himself. Not personal service, not entertainment, and not even the product itself is more important than the man.

Training Programs

Recent surveys indicate large firms will, more often than not, subject the candidate to intensive training programs in order to learn the business. Progressive companies screen their candidates with aptitude tests and educate him on the company's particular system, the company, his role in the system, and the needs, attitudes, and buying motives of customers. A typical training program might consist of two to three weeks of lectures, and another month or so as an apprentice to a seasoned man. The program, of course, depends on how diversified the line is. In an attempt to establish selling as a profession, a campaign is underway to have colleges offer a degree in salesmanship.

Salaries

The duration of the war saw many companies switch their men to straight salaries, often as an effort to stabilize earnings, but more often to prevent staggering incomes from sales that took little or no selling. A compromise of salary plus commission or bonus is the usual procedure, a refinement of which is to give better commissions for slow-moving items. Commissions are such a factor in earning power that it would be difficult if not impossible to give an all-inclusive average salary. It can be noted that a sales-manager with a good "production" record can command anywhere from $25,000 to $75,000 a year.

Around The Town

By F. A. VARALLO

At central city theatres, this week, the accent is on drama. "The Red Danube", at the Goldman, is the screen adaption of Bruce Marshall's dramatic "Vespers in Vienna." The film, which is strongly anti-Communist, boasts of a stellar cast and elaborate sets. Indeed, it might be said that the individual performances of the cast and the Italian and Viennese backgrounds give the picture its chief appeal.

The Story

The scene is laid in 1945 Vienna. A British Army colonel, Michael "Hooky" Nicobar, has been transferred from Italy to Vienna, to cooperate with the Russians in repatriating replaced persons.

Together with his aide, Major McPhimister, and his private secretary, Audrey Quail, the colonel is quartered in a small convent. It is here that he learns to believe in God, to hate the Russians, and to help his fellow man even if it means setting aside Army regulations. In good faith, the colonel cooperates with the Russian omcer in locating who are to be repatriated. Maria Buhlen, a Russian-born ballet danper, is sought by the Russians. They say that it would be an honor for her to return to Russia since she is such an excellent dancer. Too late, the colonel finds that they were lying. Maria had been hiding in the convent to prevent her capture by the Russians. This is but one incident in the cruel repatriation policy of the Russians.

The Cast

Walter Pidgeon gives a good interpretation of the one-armed British Colonel. Ethel Barrymore plays the role of the Mother Superior at the convent. Peter Lawford is the colonel's aide and Angela Lansbury his secretary. Janet Leigh is effective as the ballet dancer, while Louis Calhern gives a truly memorable performance as the Russian officer.

In general, the screen version falls far short of "Vespers in Vienna" in dramatic intensity. It is rather long and drawn-out and lacks persuasion. It attempts to convince the audience of a number of things but fails miserably in the attempt in most instances.

"The Doctor And The Girl"

Glenn Ford portrays the doctor and Janet Leigh, the girl, in this mediocre drama at the Karlton. Charles Coburn is the rich widowed neurologist who attempts to run the lives of his son, the doctor, and his daughter. He disapproves of Ford's marrying a nobody, and frowns on a career for his headstrong daughter, Gloria De Haven. Glenn, who at first is pictured as a Harvard medical school snob, later turns out to be a human general practicioner. He marries a poor little waif, a former taffy machine operator, against his father's wishes.

The story behind the film is a good one. Yet, many details, which add nothing to the plot, could have been omitted. The writing is rather poor in places and only the extra effort of the cast gives the characters any reality or depth.

Melodrama At Stanton

Fans who like gangster pictures will enjoy "Mr. Soft Touch". Joe Miracle, the former owner of the River Club, steals a large sum of money from the club and spends the rest of the picture trying to elude his former gangster pals. He hides out in a social worker's settlement house under the pretext

Civil Engineers Visit Projects

Recently, the Villanova Chapter of the American Society of Civil Engineers joined with over one-hundred members from other colleges in the Philadelphia area to take part in an inspection trip.

The trip was under the auspices of the Philadelphia Department of Public Works. Starting from the Engineer's Club, a caravan of five buses visited many of the projects now under construction in metropolitan Philadelphia. Among the projects visited were: the Penrose Avenue Bridge, Hunting Park Underpass, and the Philadelphia International Airport.

Returning to the Engineer's Club, the members had dinner in the club's meeting room. Several interesting speakers were on hand to complete the evening after the dinner. Among them was Mr. Thomas Buckley, Director of Public Works of the city of Philadelphia.

TOTAL OF 2651 MEN ENROLLED; C & F SCHOOL LARGEST

Figures just released by the office of Rev. John McDonnell, O. S. A., Registrar, show that the Villanova student body is continuing to grow in numbers. Enrollment is well above last year's mark of 2500 students, and once again all previous registration records have been broken. A grand total of 2651 students are registered in the various schools for the present semester.

Villanova students come from a variety of places and a diversity of backgrounds. There are men on roll coming from homes in one-half of the States in the Union, the District of Columbia and fourteen foreign nations, including China, Australia, Ireland, Iraq, Cuba, and the Dominion of Canada.

The breakdown of the enrollment figures according to schools indicates that the School of Commerce and Finance with 1064 students is by far the largest group. The Division of Liberal Arts and Sciences is next with 751 students, and following closely is the Engineering School with 730 members.

There are 86 Augustinian Seminarians pursuing their clerical studies in St. Mary's Hall.

The Senior Class and the Sophomore Class are practically equal in size — the former contains 660 members and the latter has 658. There are 546 students in the Junior Class. The largest of all the classes is the new Freshman Class, 1953; it has 788 members.

Resident on Campus are 909 students while 1656 are dayhops many of whom have rooms in nearby Main Line communities.

The Villanova Reserve Officer's Training Corps unit list 111 men as regular NROTC students. Thirty-six Freshmen are included in this category.

It is significant to note that the number of veterans has now fallen below fifty percent of the entire student body. There are 970 ex-G. I.'s at Villanova, of whom over 400 are Seniors and 100 are Freshmen.

Engineering Magazine Will Appear Next Week

The Villanova Engineer, official publication of the college of engineering, has gone to press and will make its first appearance of the school year on Tuesday, November 15.

The current issue, third since the magazine was revived last year, is the first of four scheduled for publication this year. It will be distributed to more than 1,000 faculty members and student engineers.

Heading the Engineer editorial staff is Joseph Roarty, assisted by Joe Truinman, Carl Truinman, Michael Nowlan, Walt O'Sullivan and Leo Wenstrup.

Lead feature of the November issue will be Walt O'Sullivan's "A Slide Rule for Calculus," a semi-technical explanation of the operation of the analog computer, a device which automatically solves differential and algebraic equations.

Another technical article by F. Casey will discuss "Vermiculite," a new lightweight aggregate which is expected to revolutionize the concrete industry. In the humorous vein will be "What Price the Sheep-Skin," by Mort Raphaelson, concerning the exploits of Gus Glotze during his college career; and "A Night of Study," by Art Montano.

"The Young Engineer Confronts Industry" by Professor Joseph Greyson will be the faculty contribution to the issue, while "Meet the Profs," by Don Best and Charlie Peisner, will provide interesting sidelights on the careers of Professor Charles Georgi and Dr. Conway.

Other features will be "The Dean's Page," "Campus Activities" by Leon Kazunas and Fred Seitzinger; "Facts and Figures," by Victor Rainaford; "Collegiate World" by Bob O'Flynn; and "Cross Section," by Jim Harte.

Art work is by George Reinhart and Charlie Toner; photography by Bob Eckenrode.

RADIO STATION AIRS DRAMATIC SKETCHES

Villanova College's student radio station, WVIL, is presently readying student "masterpieces" for presentation over the air in the immediate future. The station has announced, too, that once again recorded musical programs are among the most popular of the presentations.

Short dramatic sketches, as written by the staff members, are due to be aired in the very near future. The abundance of excellent writing talent on the campus is being fully utilized, as WVIL continues with "all-student" programs. Thus, all the dramatic sketches heard over WVIL will not only be presented by, but have been written by Villanova College students as well.

Recorded musical programs, this year once again, have proven to be one of the most popular features of the station. Thus a variety and number of the "disc" shows are to be found on the log each week. "Turntable Time", "Record Rendezvous", "Symphony Hall", "Music from the Opera", and the old reliable, "Music to Study By" are the most popular of the musical presentations.

"The Fun Parade" and "21 Questions" have also proven to be quite popular with the campus listening audience.

Remember — it's 640, first on the left of your radio dial, for good listening.

NROTC Parade and Dance Will Mark North Carolina State Game Weekend

Battalion Marches on Field Prior to Game

The battalion of midshipmen at the college will parade before the North Carolina State - Villanova football game, it was announced by the Professor of Naval Science and Tactics, Capt. James McCormack, USN, last week. Composed of members of the NROTC Unit here, the battalion will thus make its first public appearance since the war.

A demonstration of platoon drill precision will be given during the half-time, with a picked group under the direction of Midshipman Gilbert Hazard.

The Unit will proceed from the campus before the game in buses. Upon arrival at Franklin Field they will assume the battalion formation and to the tune of the College band, will march onto the field. After salutes to both the visitors and hosts they will take up their seats in the reserved stands.

In the years since the war, the Unit has marched only before reviewing parties on the campus. This year, because of the increase in size of the unit and of the ability of its members, it was decided that it was ready to parade, much like their brothers from the Academy.

For the past several weeks a group of about fifty Midshipmen, chosen from the ranks by Major Dayton and Sgt. Raschal, has been practising special drill maneuvers and manuals. It is expected that about forty men will participate in the drill at the half-time.

Informal Dance Will Be Held at Barclay

The NROTC Unit will hold an informal dance following the North Carolina State game, as the first informal dance since its inception and will be held at the Hotel Barclay, where the formals have been held in the past.

With the increase of members it was decided by representatives of each class to supplement the formal dance which takes place in the spring of each year, with an informal affair, to be held in the fall. November 19th, was chosen because it coincided favorably with the parade that the Midshipmen will take part in before the N. C. State-Villanova game.

Midshipmen will wear their uniforms while their dates will be informal. The Barclay, located in Rittenhouse Square, Philadelphia, has been the scene of the last two formal dances given by the Unit in recent years. Dancing, to the music of the Harvey Brothers, will be from nine to one. Tickets may be obtained from any member of the NROTC Recreation Committee at the price of $2.75, per couple.

'Cats Coast Over Hoyas, 29-14; 150's Lose; Wolfpack Meets Wildcats In Season Closer

WOLFPACK TRYING FOR UPSET AFTER VERY POOR SEASON

Cats to Face Wolves at Franklin Field in Season's Opener

By Neal Fahy

A rebel Wolfpack from Raleigh, North Carolina, invades Philadelphia a week from next Saturday for their first trip into Yankee territory in many a year, so watch out Wildcats. There's nothing worse than a pack of mad wolves. When North Carolina State's big eleven steps out on Franklin Field the 19th, they will be out to salvage their worst season since Clipper Smith coached them in 1933; while Villanova will be striving for their best record in over a decade.

Fourth Meeting

Although this series dates back to 1910, it will be only the fourth time these two colleges have met on the gridiron. The Wolfpack has yet to take a decision, but can boast of a 6-6 tie in their first meeting with the 'Cats.

Saturday's game will also mark another unusual occurrence, namely Villanova's appearance in the huge, double-decked Franklin Field. Actually it will be only the third time in history this has happened. As Red Smith says, "You don't have to be fed on Philadelphia's incomparable drinking water to realize that a Villanova game in Franklin Field is like a Sammy Kaye recital in the Taj Majal."

Needless to say, the Wolfpack from State hasn't impressed anyone with their football team yet this year. The record shows a 26-6 loss to North Carolina, a 6-7 defeat administered by Clemson, a 14-20 drubbing by Davidson, a 13-14 edging from Duke and a 6-14 loss to Maryland. Their lone win came over Virginia Tech as North Carolina State took this one 14 to 13. But remember, Tulsa's record was every bit as bad.

State Full of Revenge

Last year the 'Cats traveled down to Raleigh and came back with an easy 21-7 victory under their belts. The last time before that the 'Cats engaged the Wolfpack was in 1929 when Villanova won handily 24-6. State will undoubtedly be out for revenge and they couldn't pick a better time for an upset. The game itself will be the climax of one of the biggest week-ends of the year for Villanova students. Never doubt that Coach Beattie Feathers has plans to spoil all this.

Hoya Jack Preston (43) is about to be nailed by Al Schmid and George Pavalko after a one yard gain on a handoff from Quarterback Frank Mattingly (15). This was one of the few Georgetown gains as they were held to only 44 yards on the ground by a brilliant Villanova line.

'Cats Hoopsters to Play 22 On Home- Penn Court

Price Schedule Announced For Palestra As Arizin & Co. Prepare For Top Year

By Ted Fernandes

On November 30th the talented Villanova hoopsters will begin the year of years in Wildcat basketball annals. Sparked by a host of standout veterans and backed by an impressive reserve, it looks like this is the year for the Wildcats.

In their '48-'49 season, the 'Cats ranked seventh in the nation, sporting a 22 and 3 record. With mighty Paul Arizin setting the scoring pace, the Main Liners found themselves in New York's Madison Square Garden with the second invitation ever extended to Villanova from the N. C. A. A. The Severancemen were eliminated by Kentucky in the opening game after a bitterly-contested battle.

There are at least six reasons to bolster our great expectancy of the 'Cats. These reasons, from left to right, read Arizin, Wolf, Sabol, Hannon, Ricca, and Coach Alex Severance. Lanky Paul Arizin is the "ace-in-the-hole." The tall, 6' 3" center is already well known for his eagle eye, and steady arm. Paul had a 74.2% mark last year. This is Arizin's final year on the Villanova court, along with the above mentioned stars.

The valuable services of Tom Sabol were sorely missed at the close of last season and tourney bid but he will be among the starters this time around. Brooks Ricca's deadly eye will be in there sighting again, and this means a great deal to the 'Cats, for Ricca is a top scorer. The defensive activities of Leo Wolf, plus his ability to hit the hoop brighten the situation quite a bit, and from this point of vantage Villanova spells "King of the Courts."

Strong Reserves

Strengthening the "Fabulous five" are the graduates of last year's "Frosh" quintet, namely, Angelo Scotese, Nick Maguire, Ben Stewart, Joe Maguire and big Tom Brennan. In the immediate secondary we find five experienced veterans, all of whom are entering their last season for the Blue and White. John Weglicki fills in for Arizin at center, and it is our belief that John would be playing first-string ball at any other college. Tom Dolan holds down a forward slot, along with Perry Del Purgatorio. Rugged Shy Ralken gives the opposition much to worry about, as he wages his own private war from a guard post. Diminutive Jack Crossin is a speed demon who has brought the fans to their feet amid a blaze of cheers many a time with his sensational steals. It certainly appears to be a ball club that will carry Blue and White banners to surprising heights.

11 Games At Field House

There is a major change this year in a number of the Villanova home games. Eleven out of the twenty-two home contests will be played at the Palestra. There is, however an added attraction. The Blue and Red of Pennsylvania will be sharing a double-header night with the 'Cats at each game held in the Palestra. The first game of the evening will start at 8:00 P.M., while the second begins at 9:45 P. M. The later game time has been designated for Villanova.

At all games held in the Field House the Frosh will play the preliminary.

Prices for student tickets to all games in the Palestra will be 50 cents, before noon on day of game. The prices for Alumni tickets are $1.30, end court, and $2.60 for side court.

KITTENS DROP 1ST TO NAVY, 28-13; FACE PRINCETON FRIDAY

The Villanova Kittens went down to their first defeat of the season by dropping a 28-13 thriller to the Navy lightweights last Saturday.

Middies Hot

The Middies' were a hot ball club as they struck with 3 quick touchdowns, a lead which the Kittens couldn't surmount. The Navy scoring splurge got underway in the opening minutes of the game when they initiated a 60 yard scoring drive paced by Tom Cotten's long gains. Cotten went over from the 2 to give Nav ya 7-0 lead.

Navy got a break minutes later by recoverisg a Blue and White fumble on their own 35 yd. line. The middies capitalized on this break and once again Tom Cotten hit pay dirt and the score stood 14-0 at the close of the quarter.

The second stanyco saw an exchange of punts with Navy finally getting a 65-yard march with fullback Joe Durham ramming over for the score. The Kittens couldn't move against Navy's line until a middle fumble was recovered by the Blue and White. The Kittens promptly marched 60 yards to score. This drive ended with Joe

22 POINTS IN FIRST HALF PAVE WAY FOR WILDCATS' 7TH WIN

Geppi, Pasquariello, D'Alonzo Set Pace for 471 Yards

By Harry Range

The Wildcat power house descended on Griffith Stadium in Washington last Friday night before 11,071 fans and easily coasted to a 29-14 win over the Hoyas of Georgetown.

As has been the case in the past, Coach Jim Leonard yanked the starters early in the contest, giving the second and third stringers a chance to show their stuff. Again the Wildcats were far ahead in total yardage, 447 to 171, and the only thing that kept the scoring from going even higher were penalties after brilliant runs by Ralph Pasquarillo and Joe Rogers and some fine Hoya defensive plays in spots.

First Score Is Safety

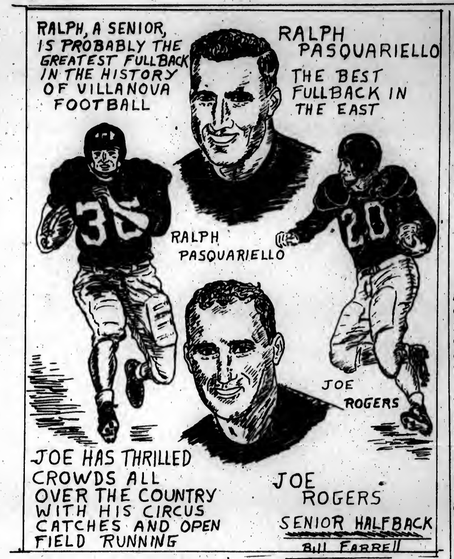
Villanova received the opening kick-off and, led by lightening-fast John Geppi, marched 43 yards to Georgetown's 18. There, a Steve Romanik to Dan Brown pass went astray. Hoya safety man, Jack Kivus, back peddling toward his end zone intercepted on the one, staggered back, was tackled by Brown, fumbled, and the officials ruled it a safety for the Wildcats.

Geppi Again Leads Attack

The Hoyas free-kicked from the 20 and a few minutes later the Cats were on Georgetown's one, the result of a 52-yard drive featured by Geppi's 38-yard smash off right guard. From the one Romanik smashed over and with Tom Clavin's conversion the score stood at 9-0.

On the last play of the first quarter the Wildcats scored again on a 29-yard drive in which most of the ground gained was a 15 yard advance by the officials who caught Georgetown roughing Rofanik in the act of passing. The penalty gave the Wildcats a first down on the 10 from which point Pasquariello blasted for five, Geppi did likewise and was over into pay-dirt. Clavin's extra-point was good.

Fumble Sets Up TD



The Hoyas' Billy Cons fumbled deep in his own territory to set up the third score. Tackle Jim Smith pounced on the leather and the Wildcats had a first down on the Georgetown 26. Plunges by Pasquariello and Rogers and a 13 yard

MAIERO RETURNS PUNT

Kitten Halfback Lou Maiero returns Navy punt to his own 35 in game played last Saturday at Annapolis. The Middies dropped the Kittens, 28-13 for their first loss.

HARRIERS DROP HOME MEET TO SETON HALL

Ross 1st Again, But Pirates Win, 20-29

Villanova's cross country team finished their dual season last Saturday by bowing to Seton Hall 26-29 in a meet held here at Villanova. The loss was the fourth in as many starts for the Wildcats. Previously they fell victim to Army, N. Y. U., and were second to Notre Dame in a triangular contest with the Irish and Navy.

Browning Ross paced the pack for the third time this year to take individual honors. His time for the hilly five-mile jaunt was 27:27.5. Running a smooth well paced race, Ross let neither the cold nor the relatively strong opposition bother him as he outdistanced the field to win by ninety yards.

Milne 2nd, Thompson 3rd

Jack Milne of the Pirates was second to lead Johnny Gibson's charges. George Thompson was third, but Stillwell and Shanks of the Hall crossed together behind him. Charlie McKee broke it up somewhat by coming in sixth but the next two men over were Setonians which sewed up the meet for the Blue and White from South Orange.

This contest was the closest all season for the 'Cats with only three points separating the teams. It seems as though both squads are always up for this race because the score last year was also close. Then the Pirates beat the Wildcats by a mere point, coming out ahead on a 27-28 score.

Summary

1. Ross ... Villanova 27:27.5
2. Milne .. Seton Hall 27:39
3. Thompson Villanova 27.58
4. Stillwell Seton Hall 28:40

BOWLING

An attempt is being made to organize a bowling league to begin immediately after the Thanksgiving holidays. Matches will be held on Tuesday and Thursdays at 3 p. m. Anyone who has the time and wishes to bowl in the league should contact George Mondschein in Room 407, Barracks 4. It is hoped that enough men from each hall will be available this season so that a Hall Bowling League can be organized.

heavy by Romanik to end Johnny Bogan ate up the distance, with robust Ralph pulverizing the Georgetown line for the final two yards to give Villanova a 22-0 lead at halftime.

The Cats drove 85 yards to start the second half but failed to score when Pacquariello missed a first down by inches on the one. Georgetown took over and Surman junted out of danger.

A little later in the third period, Pasquariello knocked over 11 Hoyas for a 30 yard touchdown romp. However it was called back because of backfield in motion.

99 Yard Drive

Georgetown's Frank Mottingly finally took to the air and started a 99 yard drive late in the third period which carried over into the last quarter and resulted in a TD pass to Fornacian. Dick Haesler converted.

But, fast like 11 bunnies, the Wildcats came back with Neil O'Boyle at the helm and Pete D'Alongo supplying the power and marched 62 yards to Georgetown's one. Joe Rogers cracked over and Clavin split the upright and it was 29-7.

Billy Conn, the bullet-like Hoya halfback broke loose on the ensuing kickoff and dashed all the way to the Villanova two where he was finally caught from behind by Dan Scott. But two plays later Wattingly sneaked over from the one for a score and with Huesler's second conversion the score stood at 29-14, the final.

KITTENS DROP FIRST

McCreary driving over from the 2-yard line. Jim Moore's try for the extra point was true and the score at the half stood 21-7 in Navy's advantage.

Fitzmeyer Injured

The Kittens play was hampered by the loss of Captain Bob Fitzmeyer in the opening minutes of play. The contest was marked by hard play and frequest injuries.

The second half saw a scoreless 3rd quarter with no let ups in the vicious play. Joe McCreary's brilliant 65 yard run was nullified on a questionable decision on Joe's stepping out of bounds. In the dying moments of the quarter McCreary raced 30 yards to the home team's 35 but the drive bogged down as the quarter ended.

Navy Scores Again

In the final period Navy started moving again. Their last score came on a plunge by Jim Martin after a 70 yard drive paced by some fine passing by John Kobey. Jim Carson made it a perfect day by splitting the uprights for his fourth conversion.

The Kittens refused to say quit and soon struck back. Joe McCreary, one of the finest backs in 150 lb. football, streaked 60 yards to score. Ed Wolffe aided this run with some fine ball handling. This tally made the final count 28-13.

ALUMNI AUSTIN BKS. 1 & 4 LEAD LOOP IN 2ND WEEK OF PLAY

Doms, Barracks, 2 & 3 Good Council Lose to Leaders; Feds Win

By MONDSCHEIN INC., and KLUCSARITS

The Intramural Basketball League swung into its second week of competition as the games were played on Wednesday and Thursday evenings. The games on Tuesday were moved back to Wednesday because of All Saints.

In Wednesday's first contest, Austin swept to an early lead and were never headed as they easily subdued a scrappy Dom quintet, 47-30. Austin displayed some fine teamwork and great scoring punch in their triumph. The scoring was well distributed as Brennan and Scanlan tossed in 8 points each, Roesgen and Ballister made 7 each and Len Bogner countered with 6. For the Doms, Heigel with 11 and Natiello with 9 led their offensive. Referees were Nisivoccia and O'Donnell.

Fedigan Swamps Mendel

In the other tilt of the evening Fedigan romped over an undermanned Mendel squad 59-32. With Frink and Colletta leading the assault with 15 points each, Fedigan showed that it will cause trouble in the weeks to come. Watson and Gallen with 11 and 10 points respectively, also aided greatly in the victor's offensive maneuvers. Stambaugh was high for Mendel with 8 points. Nisivoccia and O Donnell again officiated.

The high-scoring combines of Alumni and Bks. 1&4 both rolled up big scores in Thursday night's contests. In the opener, Alumn. whipped a fighting Bks 2&3 outfit, 70-5. Although unable to keep up the scoring pace with the Alumn. powerhouse, the Bks. gave a good account of themselves throughout. The winners enjoyed a 39-23 lead at the intermission buzzer. Tom Russo, who acted as coach of Alumni in the absence of Father McLaughlin, let everybody get into the act, clearing the bench in each half. Hal Diot missed the game and was replaced in the starting lineup by Joe Driscoll, who turned in a capable performance. Bill Barry again led Alumni's scorers with 16 points, while Buckley and Driscol were right on his heels with 13 apiece. For the losers, Decker and M. Smith were high with 16 and 15 points respectively.

Barracks 1 & 4 Romp

Bks. 1& 4 strengthened their pre season contender claim by toying with a hapless Good Counsel five before registering a convincing 70-38 victory. Good Counsel only had five men on their squad and tired noticeably in the last half. Seemingly playing under wraps, the Bks. still had no trouble in keeping a comfortable margin during the entire game. All the squad members saw action in a game featured by the great shooting and fine defensive play of Tom Flynn. Flynn was responsible for 20 of the winner's markers and handed off in numerable assists. Aiding and abetting in the slaughter were Smith with 15 points and Tom Falkowski with 13. Markham, Good Counsel's rival to the Eiffel Tower, matched Flynn's output, but could not keep up with the hard-driving Junior in the other departments. Chris Sickler and O'Donnell were the officials.

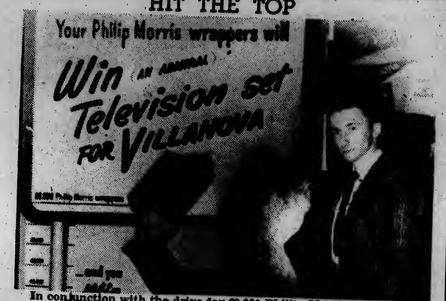
In the VILLANOVAN Football Contest held last week Bob Gorman won out over hundreds of other entrants by predicting a 28-13 score. Gorman's guess of a margin of 15 points between the two teams was only one of many, but he came within one point of picking the exact total points of each team. He was awarded a carton of Chesterfield cigarettes.



The same contest is being held this week so don't forget to leave your prediction of the Villanova-North Carolina State score in the VILLANOVAN office and win yourself 200 Chesterfields.

sleep until the "last horn" for morning chow in the diner.

A New Home

All good things must come to an end, however, and within what seemed hours the word was passed to "Fall Out!" Hundreds of middies tumbled out of their cars to find themselves, as one aptly put it, "in the middle of nowhere." The scene was a deserted country road with a spur track on one side and a woods on the other. Within minutes the lads had turned to in a futile effort to put down an attack staged by the local mosquitos. Cigarets were smoked feverishly in an attempt to halt the vicious attacks of the creatures. Nothing seemed to work however, and just as all hands had given up seeing the light of morrow, a fleet of busses came on the scene and whisked the scratching midshipmen away.

In a few moments the convoy came to a halt in the center of a cluster of Quonset Huts. After debarking, the men were assigned bunks to their respective huts, and since it was near midnight, all hands turned in for some sleep.

Back Into Routine

The following morning was unceremoniously ushered in by the blaring of a recorded bugler. After chow, the boys lined up to get their "fatigues." Packs, helmets and all the other gear used by a landing party was issued to each middie. One little item which saw more use than any other was the canteen. The days were mighty hot down there, and many a gruelling tour was made, so a long pull at the water bottle made life much easier.

The schedule at Little Creek was so designed to accommodate small groups at a time. The men were shown all the amphibious vessels used by landing forces in the Navy and Marine Corps. All the latest equipment was demonstrated and its use explained. According to first-hand information, the most interesting device of all was the "Gehimi", a machine used to salvage crippled and broached landing craft. The "Gilhoist", which is a more cumbersome version of the "Gehimi" was also shown many times.

There Was Liberty

With all this business concerning the more practical side of the life of an amphibious sailor, there were other diverting features which were experienced during liberty hours in the evening and on weekends. Many of the boys went to Virginia Beach, which was located a few miles away. The facilities of the Officers Beach Club were provided for the use of the midshipmen.

One evening during the second week of training was devoted to a party thrown by the four Catholic colleges at the Base. These were Marquette, Holy Cross, Notre Dame, and, of course, Villanova. A merry time was had by all and the middies retired late that night well satiated with coke, and or beer. The Villanovans claim they outsang the others but that is a matter open to dispute.

At any rate, the men who can boast of having been to Little Creek have a claim to a treasure hoard of memories which others cannot hope to realize. Indeed it was a merry crew which left that afternoon to bid "Queen Area" an enthusiastic, if not fond, farewell.

Choral Croup Plans Roster

The Villanova Glee Club which is under the direction of the Rev. Ralph E. Handran has once again taken up their music with the intent of having another successful year. This year, the campus' representation in the choral world has reached a new peak in membership. She has taken twenty new and ambitious men under her wing. The club has decided on a completely different style of song presentation. One thing that should be appealing to the taste of informal concert goers is the playing of novelty music during the second half of the concert.

Last year the group made a number of tours throughout the country and a similar schedule is being planned for the forthcoming 1950 season. Also on the agenda of our traveling troubadours are visits to the local orphanages and a series of concerts throughout the Philadelphia area.

Professors' Group Elects Officers For Current Year

On Wednesday evening, October 5th, the Villanova Chapter of the American Association of University Professors held its first meeting of the current school year. At present, fifty-four members of the faculty are members of the local chapter.

The purpose of the chapter is to provide an agency of integration, professional and social, of the Villanova faculty, for the purpose of working for the common good of the College and all connected with it.

At the October meeting the officers of the chapter for 1949-1950 were selected. Mr. William C. A. Henry, of the Department of Business Administration, was chosen President. The other officers are: Vice-President, Rev. Michael J. O'Donnell, O.S.A., of the Department of English; Secretary, Mr. Miles B. Potter, of the Department of Civil Engineering; Treasurer, Mr. Vito J. Di Vincenzo, of the Modern Languages Department. The members present at the meeting also approved the appointment of an Executive Committee to assist the President and to recommend the creation of other committees deemed necessary.

The membership of the chapter has steadily grown since the beginning of the fall semester, and all look forward to a successful program for the remainder of the school year.

Tomorrow evening, November 9th, a meeting of the group will be held in Browsing Room 7 of the new Library. Non-members are cordially invited to attend.

Halls to be Decorated

genuity of the residents of the hall, and the effectiveness of the decorations in carrying out the theme. Besides Bill Connelly, the other judges will be members of the athletic department, and the football coaching staff.

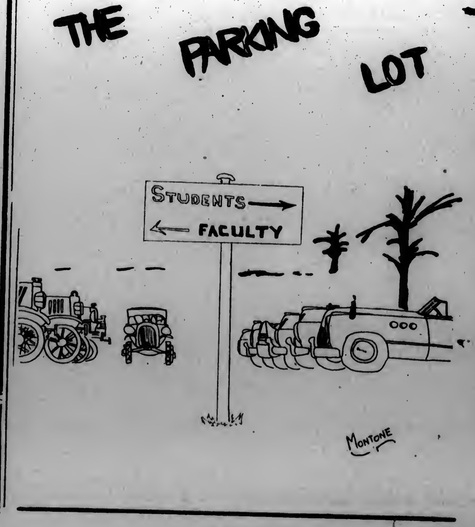
The rules given by Fr. Dunne for this year's contest are:

1. A Chairman for decorations is to be named for each hall or intramural unit which secures a letter of authorization from the prefect. The allotted material must be picked up from maintenance by noon of Monday, Nov. 14th.

2. By noon on Thursday, Nov. 10th, a plan for the decorations is to be submitted by each chairman to Rev. J. McMenamin, O.S.A., in the Business Office. This is to prevent duplication of the decoration ideas.

3. No college property is to be used except what is issued by Maintenance.

4. Shows, movies, or other entertainment may be used, provided there are decorations on the building also.



5. Judging will take place on Thursday evening, Nov. 17th just before the rally. The plaque will be presented to the winning hall at the rally.

Particular attention should be paid to the fourth rule since it is a change from the former rules of the contest. According to Fr. Dunne, "Anything goes, but make it good."

For the decorations maintenance will supply wiring and flood lights, but this year no Xmas tree lights will be issued because of the proximity of the contest to the time when the lights will have to be used for the Christmas decorations.

Two years ago, the first post-war contest resulted in a tie between Fedigan and Delurey. Last year, a "Trump Georgetown" theme carried out in enlarged playing cards won the award for Delurey.

Fr. Dunne urges that all halls get into action immediately

The Library Corner

Music has charms to soothe the harried college student, believes the Villanova College Library, and so it is sponsoring a program to encourage the appreciation of music by the students here.

In accord with this, a Music Club has been formed with proposed plans to meet weekly to present programs of recorded music using the facilities of the Library's Music Room. The first of these meetings took place last week, when a program of recorded music by Chopin was enjoyed by over one hundred college students and members of the Polish Intercollegiate Club of Philadelphia.

This week, tonight in fact, another musicale will be presented by the Music Club entitled, "Music for Listening," a variety program to be held in the second floor seminar rooms at 8 o'clock. The Music Club, a newly reorganized campus group, is described in the words of Rev. J. Vrana, O. S. A., its moderator, " . . . the Club is a rather informal group. We require neither coats nor ties, nor dues nor officers. In fact, all we have as a requisite for our members is an appreciation of music, in any of its shapes or forms. We like hot jazz just as much as grand opera, and we play them all. All are cordially invited."

At the recital tonight the Library has arranged to have on hand a part of its collection of books on music that might be of interest to the student. A librarian will be present, and any of the books may be checked out during the course of the program.

Some of the books which will be made available at the Music Club meeting tonight are:

Music and the Higher Education, by Edward Dickinson—a 234-page discussion of how music forms an important part of the cultural background of the college man.

The Victor Book of Concertos, by Abraham Veinus—a detailed analysis of 130 different concertos, touching the heart of the musical matter in each work, written in a style for the professed music lover.

The Victor Book of Symphonies, by Charles O'Connell—a comprehensive guide describing 138 important symphonies, from Haydn to Shostakovich, and including biographical introductions, a section on the instruments of the orchestra, glossary and list of recordings.

The Columbia Book of Musical Masterworks, by Goddard Lieberson—described on the jacket as a storehouse of musical knowledge from which the music lover can draw information continually. Really an anthology by writers who know their subject.

Light Opera and Musical Comedy, by J. Walker McSpadden—reviews of the best works of the best musicians. Contains historical prefaces, mention of numbers which made the operas famous, and lists of singers and actors who appeared in the operas. Good for reference or reading.

The Music of Schubert, by Gerald Abraham—presents a comprehensive estimate of all the music of Schubert, as well as a character study of the man.

Master Builders of Opera, by George C. Jell—contains biographical sketches of most of the "greats" in the field of operatic music, including Wagner, Bizet, Rossini, Puccini, and Verdi.

The Life of an American Composer, by Edward M. Maisel—biography of Charles T. Griffes, a man who has come to be regarded as one of America's outstanding composers.

These and the other books on music in the library are available for general circulation, and may be found in the "M" section on the second level in the book stacks.

N. Y. Club Plans Holiday Dance

The Villanova Club of New York will hold its annual dance on Friday evening, November 25, in the Keystone Room of the Hotel Statler in New York, according to Mike Marshall, campus representative for the New York Club.

"From the response of the men interested in the dance, it appears that we will have have an attendance of well over one hundred," Marshall said.

The admission price will be about $4.50 to $5.00 per couple. Last year the Alumni Association chose the orchestra and the admission price was five dollars per couple. Forty undergraduates attended.

Those interested should contact Mike Marshall, O'Dwyer Hall, or write directly to the Villanova Club of New York.

"The Indian" of Newberry College, South Carolina reports, "Pop" Ruff, over at the canteen, meets all kinds of characters. One day last week he watched astounded while a student put eight spoonfuls of sugar in a cup of coffee and proceeded to drink it without stirring it first.

"Why don't you stir it," suggested "Pop."

The student regarded him coldly and said, "Who likes it sweet?"

tants of her Versailles hotel. Rev. William J. Krupa, O. S. A., Moderator, is in charge of directing.

All stagecraft and settings are under the supervision of William Confoy and his well trained stage crew, with John Bauman as business manager and publicity agent for the production.

The Werfel and Behrman comedy took form as a result of a conversation between its original author, Werfel, with S. H. Behrman. Franz Werfel was witness to the purchase of a car (in war-torn France during the recent Nazi occupation) by a Polish-Jewish business man. The purchaser, not knowing how to drive, met a Polish colonel who immediately took possession of the automobile, and around this basic idea, Werfel was inspired to write his comedy.

Franz Werfel's previous accomplishments include "The Song of Bernadette" and "Embezzled Heaven." S. N. Behrman, who wrote the Greek comedy "Amphytreon," and "No Time for Comedy," was the motivating force in Werfel's undertaking of "The Colonel." Mr. Behrman injected it with his typical humor which has been pleasing American theatre audiences for the past several years. Produced by the Theatre Guild in 1944, Jacobowsky and the Colonel won the Drama Critics' award for the best Foreign Play of the year.

As an aesthetic climax to a full week-end of activity on both Rosemont and Villanova territory, the play should attract all discriminating theatre goers and offer them a pleasant evening's entertainment.

A number of amusing incidents take place in the settlement house — one in which some tough, teen-age, would-be gamblers mistake Joe for a soft touch and sadly learn their lesson in a dice game. Mr. Soft Touch plays Santa for the kids at Christmas time in the settlement house and does much to improve living conditions at the institution. Glenn Ford appears in the leading role.

Dean Of Arts To Give Second Forum Lecture

Fr. Edward J. McCarthy, O.S.A., to Speak on Latin Traditions of Church - State Relations

Fr. Edward J. McCarthy, O.S.A., Dean of the Arts and Science School of Villanova College, will give the second lecture of the current series of the Villanova Forum Tuesday evening, November 29th. Father's lecture will be on the subject of "The Spanish and Latin-American Tradition of Church-State Relationships."

Father McCarthy is well qualified to deal with this very important aspect of the problem of Church and State. He was recently in Cuba and South America for over two years and while there had very close dealings with the people there and as a result had great opportunities to gain considerable material for his topic.

After serving five years on the College faculty of Villanova, Father McCarthy was transferred to the Catholic University of Cuba, where he taught History from 1946 to 1947. After this he spent a year of travel and study in South America.

In 1948 Father returned to Villanova College as Dean of the School of Arts and Science, the position he now holds, in addition to teaching History and Spanish.

After graduating from Villanova in 1934 with a B. A. degree, Father obtained his M. A. and Ph. D. from the Catholic University of

The workshop will open Saturday morning, December 3, with Mass

Therefore all two o'clock classes will be cancelled for the day. The meeting will end in sufficient time so that students will be able to make their three o'clock periods.

These meeting are held each quarter in order that the entire student body can be reached by the administration in respect to studies, discipline and student activities.

Nationally-Prominent Controller Addresses Accounting Society

Speaking to more than 200 members of the Accounting Society and its guests, Mr. L. Elliot, nationally prominent Controller of the Atlantic Refining Company, outlined the duties of the controller in big business and also stressed the need for enthusiastic young college graduates in the field of accounting.

The talk which was held last Wednesday in the Commerce and Finance Auditorium was one of several scheduled by the Accounting Society as a part of its educational function. With more than 25 years experience in accounting as background besides holding the position of Controller of one of the largest corporations in the country, Mr. Elliot spoke with authority when he advised the students to couple accounting training with training which will enable him to fit into a well-knit organization.

The group was warned against the expectancy of war-inflated salaries as Mr. Elliot expressed the opinion that the country was in a mild depression as evidenced by drives in operation in business today.

Mr. Elliot also stated that big corporations do need well-trained men, but the college graduate should pick the industry he is most interested in. Most big business today operates under a promotion system which encourages the young man in his work. Helpful hints for work in the profession and any other field were also given by Mr. Elliot.

A graduate of the Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania, Mr. Elliot has since been with the Atlantic Refining Company and has been President of the Philadelphia Chapter and then National President of the Controllers' Institute of America. He has also written several magazine articles.

Mr. Joseph Dugan, President of the Accounting Society, introduced the speaker to the men who found the talk pleasantly informative.

Second Annual Cana Conference Scheduled For December 11th

The second annual Cana Conference for married students and their wives will take place here on Sunday, December 11, it was announced this week by Very Rev. Francis X. N. McGuire, O.S.A., college president.

A Cana Conference is designed as a "time out" from normal routine, during which husbands and wives review their lives from a practical, intellectual and religious viewpoint, and gather knowledge and grace necessary to their state of life.

The conference was first introduced to Villanova last March 27, with Rev. Robert Regan, O.S.A., S.T.D., of St. Augustine's College, Washington, D. C., as guest speaker. Its success was indicated by the large and interested group of young couples who attended. The informal manner of discussion enabled the couples to bring up pertinent questions for open discussion by Father Regan and his audience.

This year's Cana Conference will consist of a program roughly as follows. The day will begin with Mass at 9:30 A. M., followed by breakfast in the college dining room.

The remainder of the day will be occupied with conferences given by the priest speaker. Dinner will be served at a convenient time, and the day will conclude with Benediction and renewal of the marriage vows. The schedule is planned to permit those attending to leave the campus shortly after four o'clock.

Ralph Slayton, '50, and Thomas Garden, '51, have been appointed co-chairmen for the conference, and are responsible for the planning and co-ordination of the day's activities.

Each married veteran will receive a written invitation, together with a reply card, which should be promptly filled out and returned to the college by those who plan to attend.

Appointed Co-chairmen of the coming Cana Conference were Thomas Garden and Ralph Slapton who are shown working out details of the affair.

Dances, Game And Play Mark FootballWeekend

After a long weekend, about the only quotable comment was: "Whew!" A rally, the famous Inter-Frat Ball, the game Saturday, the big doings that the Midshipmen were up to, and the proms around at some of our sister colleges, were all part of the schedule. Topping all, the Belle Masque's play will give its final performance tonight.

The Inter-Frat ball was, as expected, a big success. Delta Pi Epsilon, Delta Pi Mu, and Lamba Kappa Delta, the three fraternities that sponsored the dance, of course were not at all sorry. In fact they looked a little happy.

The Midshipmen of the NROTC Unit on campus also had a busy time Saturday. After a march on the field, which by the way, was their first public parade, and the precision drill that the members put on, they moved over to the Barclay in the evening where they held a big informal dance.

Then some Villanova students were lucky enough to get invitations to the Rosemont and Chestnut Hill proms, that were also held Saturday evening. They were the very successful events that added to the weekend's calendar.

Then when everyone was ready to take Sunday off and just plain rest, they remembered the tickets bought for Belle Masque's Jacobowsky and the Colonel. Then, of course, after the show they were not sorry they bought the tickets.

Belle Masque's "Jacobowsky" Wins High Approval

By Frank J. Pitocchelli

The Belle Masque Dramatic Society opened its current season at the Field House last Sunday evening, when it presented "Jacobowsky and the Colonel" to a capacity audience. The Villanova proscenium framed one of the club's most successful productions, following weeks of intensive rehearsals and scenery construction.

The story of an ingeniously tactful Jacobowsky and extremely prepossessing Colonel was enacted with gusto by Richard Zande and Ted Doyle. The plot revolves about both characters midst the trepidation of war-torn France. The Colonel's volatile temper and Olympian self-assurance are quivinized into action whenever in the presence of Jacobowsky, who becomes rampant with rage as a result of Ted Doyle's excusable hyperbole.

Miss Pat Zminskey led the female supporting cast in her unsparingly realistic role of Marianne. Miss Jean Marie Guerin executed her part of Madame Bouffier with a tempest of passion and to a degree of unchallenged supremacy. A host of male supporting roles included John Murphy, Bruno Uberti and William Fleming. The scrupulous John Gray (Chauffeur) and alertly attentive John Rowe (Szabuniewicz) performed with sober earnestness. John Kelly (Senator Bisson) possessed a warm eloquence when he made his appearance in a city which was pregnant with hush excitement. Papa Clarion, as portrayed by Albert Scar-

Thank Whom?

Thursday is set aside for the express purpose of Thanksgiving. Now this day of gratitude has the singular distinction of being the least commercial of the family holidays but somewhere through the years the purpose of giving thanks has been forgotten or at least forsaken.

Thanksgiving is probably the family holiday of the year since we have always associated the food-laden table surrounded by three generations of smiling faces with it. The family is always taken up days in advance with the preparation of the delicacies which will make Thanksgiving a gastronomical success. There is definitely a communal spirit or atmosphere in everything pertaining to the day.

As a strictly American holiday with a history which begins in the days of the Pilgrims, Thanksgiving has managed to withstand the commercial onslaught of our big business high pressure campaigns. Except for the turkey no one tries to sell you anything which will detract from the real purpose of the day. This is quite a distinction when one considers what has happened to even our great holy days.

To get down to cases let's consider the purpose of the day which is broadcast completely in its very name except for one thing. To Whom are we Giving Thanks? God is being thanked for all the blessings which have been bestowed upon us in his infinite graciousness and mercy. Correction — God should be thanked. It has become the habit of the people to take things for granted. A feeling of self-sufficiency has settled over our society although the only reason we have so many comforts lies in the God-given resources of our country.

The Pilgrims had an immediate realization of God's gifts when they reaped their first harvest. When the abundance of their crops was safely stored did they pat themselves on the back on the success of their task? No — they knew that had there been a crop-killing drought or plague they would never have survived the bitter New England winter.

The chances of an immediate realization of God's gifts brought about by a possible disaster are slight in this modern age, yet this should be offset by the abundance of our goods. An enumeration of our gifts is unnecessary to anyone who will open his mind. So our suggestion is that we call next Thursday 'Give Thanks To God Day.'

What Again?

Last weekend there was presented one of the best opportunities for a gala time that Villanova has seen in a long time. The best home game of the season, dances, the play and the rally all were scheduled following quarterly exams and preceeding the three day long week before Thanksgiving recess.

There appears no valid excuse to us why the Connelly Award decorations were dropped and why the rally was such an insipid affair. What could have been the build up to a wonderful Homecoming weekend was practically a flop.

The VILLANOVAN has always felt that part of its duty was the nurturing of student spirit in all of the college activities. This is the reason we were behind the Connelly Award competition and the rally.

In any case nothing was done. We do not feel that it is completely the fault of the students. With rare exceptions they were never advised what was to take place. The spirit committee of the Student Council has done little or nothing to date in the way of furthering spirit.

We feel that if this is the type of showing the school wishes to be known for, it will be much easier for the VILLANOVAN to be agreeable. Yet, somehow, we doubt that this is so. That being the case the school could easily afford a change in spirit among certain quarters in future activities.

Operation Yule

The St. John's Orphanage Sponsor group on campus has announced its plans for a fund-raising drive in order that a Christmas party may be held for the children. In fact, you may have been solicited in religion classes.

It seems hardly necessary to urge you to give to such a the orphans, but the goal this year is much higher than last year's. It is going to take a little sacrifice on the part of the entire student body so that the burden will not fall on a few or, even more important, that we will not fall short of the goal. The commitment has been made so let's make good.

As soon as the stores in town finish their Christmas displays, it will be time for continuation of the custom of taking one of the boys for an afternoon's sojourn through the marvels that make the anticipation almost as wonderful as the great day itself. We guarantee you will have a great time. The idea is to make someone else happy over Christmas and here is the opportunity of a lifetime.

TURKEY TIME

By Bill Breninghouse

Not long after reading this epic most of the people will be heading for home and a few days of normal life far from the hallowed halls of fair Villanova. Whether it be to Ardmore on the P&W or to Squeedunk on the P&T it will be a long awaited trip for all. As for Oscar Twomp, he has to travel several hundred miles by dogsled and he can hardly wait.

This, the first big vacation of the year is nothing more than an elongated weekend but it always seemed to Oscar as though he was going home forever. Ten weeks of stress and strain over everything; hoagies to football rallies leaves him worn and weary. Thanksgiving Day finds him dreaming and wishing. Just to get away from the ditches, the snow fences, the dogs, and the professors is a vacation in itself.

The long cold trip holds no terror for him. George, his trusty Malemute will get him home if he has to carry him on his shaggy back, and George is a real shaggy dog.

Dreams

Oscar dreams about a couple of days of useful activity. He can mop the kitchen floor, fix the old man's car or rake leaves in the back yard. He always preferred doing something like that to the sedentary and extremely boring and unsatisfactory life of a student. All his relatives tell him he needs a college education to get ahead so here he is, a frustrated victim of the times, broke and unhappy but man oh man is he educated.

Ah, these few days will be thrill packed. Oscar will take pretty little Sally Schagel to the movies. Her parents are very radical. Unlike many people who have some authority over intelligent young ladies, they trust her and credit her with a little item known as a brain. Sally can stay out 'til midnight without incurring the wrath of the heavens.

That Turkey

Then there's that turkey. His mouth waters when he thinks of that tender meat, that unparelled flavor, that delicious aroma and above all, the fact that it will be cooked. He can be sure it won't taste like an old bird that died of from hoagies to football rallies hardening of the arteries. Vegetables too, mashed, mashed potatoes, golden corn and sweet peas will grace the family table. Oscar will then reflect that he's not doing so bad. Some people will be forced to eat much worse. He has only compassion for those so unfortunate as to have to eat warmed over chicken legs, lumpy potatoes, etc., etc., etc. Yes, Oscar will have much to be thankful for in the matter of food come this festive Thursday.

Soon, sad to say, those few days will be over and Oscar will take the long trek back to the institution. As he cracks his whip over the heads of his faithful huskies he can't help but wonder whether it would be wiser to forsake this student life and seek adventure on the barren tundra of Greenland, or in the broiling jungles of Brazil, or perhaps high in the Himalayas among the snow covered crags of Tibet. Then he remembers that it doesn't get going he'll get a double cut in the Essentials of the Economic History of Mid-eastern Peru, 1869-1885. Mush!

Campus Queries

By R. F. CULLEN

Question: How do you intend to spend your Thanksgiving Vacation?

Peter J. Canel, Junior, Pre-Law

"My Thanksgiving vacation will be spent in watching football games and eating turkey. I will watch Conshohocken High School defeat St. Matthew's High School in their traditional Thanksgiving Day game. I will also during this time not forget my studies; I may open a book late Sunday night to be prepared for Monday, though mentally I'll be waiting for the Christmas vacation."

William "Tex" Houston, Sophomore, Finance Major

"My Thanksgiving vacation will begin with Mass and Communion on Thursday, follow through with a prom on Friday with my best gal, Sue. Saturday I'll clean the "Yellow Pearl", my car, and Sunday I'll study, I hope. Oh yes, I forgot the big turkey dinner on Thanksgiving Day. I'll come back to the campus green and study and wait for Christmas."

Anthony Lynch, Senior, Education

"The Thanksgiving vacation will not only provide a welcome suspension of academic activity but also will enable me to fulfill a belated social obligation. Temporarily liberated from the rigors of scholastic endeavor, I will be free to spend the Thanksgiving weekend at a friends home in the country. Certainly this rustic setting will be most conducive to a fuller appreciation of Thanksgiving Day. Surrounded by the bounty of nature one cannot help but feel overwhelming gratitude towards its most generous author."

Robert C. Schwartz, Junior, Finance Major

"How do I intend to spend my Thanksgiving vacation? Good question. Well, I guess I'll go see Penn beat Cornell, eat a lot of turkey, sleep as much as possible, and go to parties that are too numerous to mention in the space given to me here. If any of my professors are reading, I'll be studying too."

By JAMES GRIFFIN

"CZECH STATE AND CHURCH AGREE"

"Czech State And Church Agree"

"A period of amicable relations between the State and Church in Czechoslovakia has been insured by the recent passage of the Church bills. . . . The settlement ends the efforts of imperialism and the Vatican to sow discord and plot intervention against the Czech people's democracy." "

It hit me between the eyes.

It was lying there innocently on a subway seat, just inviting someone to come along and pick it up. And so I did.

Communistic Trickery

It was really too ridiculous to argue over, but it struck me that there must be some people who read it, and eat it up, and call for more. I flipped a few of the pages. It was all in the same tone, with streaks of "Fight for the negro!" and "Give us our Constitutional rights!" between the communistic columns.

Dangerous

And the shocking part of it was that it was real — I had it in my hand. Oh, sure, I had known that qsuch papers were published; I had even seen them lying around before on subways and trolley cars, but I never quite grasped what it meant. It never struck me that here was a frontal assault on the bases of our everyday life, on our society, our economy, and worst, or our religion. The battering rams are in operation, the walls have been scaled and the foundation is being undermined — and most of us don't even realize it — some of us don't even WANT to realize it.

Propaganda War

When will we wake up? How long will it be before we become informed and commission ourselves to be counteragents in this subtle propaganda war? When will we realize that a few percent of our population, if well-organized and well spotted in key positions, can stand our democracy on its head?

Spread Ideas

It is not too difficult to see what to do. The Communists have chosen the best method: Disseminate your ideas. And the prerequisite to that is to know what your ideas are; to be thoroughly acquainted with what you believe and where you stand on pressing issues of the day. Then you can begin to spread ideas.

Modern World

And how can we best become acquainted with the correct slant on the modern world? By reading literature which gives us the right slant. Buy a copy of the Sign, Integrity, or the Catholic Digest. Read it, think about it, give it to your friends. It is your weapon in a battle for survival as an individual, for escape from the ponderous weight of a machine state which will crush down upon your religion and your economy till they collapse, and then will crush down upon you till you become a little cog in its great mass. And when your friends finish with your Catholic magazine — leave it on the subway, it might be an anti-toxin.

JUNIORS

The Josten ring salesman will be in the Villanovan office to take ring orders, November 30, December 1 and 2, between ten and three o'clock. Juniors are asked to have five dollars deposit ready at the time. The sample ring will be shown.

Syncopatter

With the Interfrat Ball coming up I can't bring myself to pass any comment on those beautiful, sweet, intelligent and misunderstood girls from Rosemont. Let's face it, they are pretty nice to dance with, even if they do have to be back by twelve. Can't write about the disc jockeys either, they are still miserable; so lets see what the story is with George Shearing.

Shrewdness

Here at last is another musician of the same musical shrewdness as Goodman and Ellington, a man who can present a radical departure from previous forms of music in such a way that the public eats it up and thus makes easier the next step in musical progression. Shearing has brought bop to the people, making it more easily understood and thus more widely accepted. Born in London in 1920, George started as a classical pianist which accounts for his technical ability, so necessary to bop. He came to America in 1946 for a visit and was persuaded to stay by music critic Leonard Feather. His formula for the success he has achieved is to present bop in a sugar coated fashion. George looks on it as a game. A game of presenting the art of bop, which he is a firm believer in, to the public so that they can digest it with little trouble.

Levy At The Beat

George uses bassist John Levy at the beat, has drummer Denzil Best play around the beat, and couples the vibes of Margie Hyams with his own prolific piano to provide the melody along with guitarist Chuck Wayne. The usual pattern he has established, is to play straight melody in opening and then, having started the theme, to go on to whatever variations he chooses, bop or otherwise.

Extremists Defended

George defends the extremists in jazz with enthusiasm, he feels that such attempts are undertaken mainly to avoid stagnation. His admiration for such pioneers as Lennie Tristano is unbounded. He maintains that these are the men who really feel the music they play, the men who are making the great contributions to jazz. His commercial ideas as well as his musical ability should pay off for George, and jazz, for the two are inseparable.

Now here's ole Harry Lightfoot Mayer, whose music may be ancient but whose ideas on it certainly aren't.

Thanks Bruce

Thanks Bruce, and I'll go along with you where George Shearing is concerned, he's one of the greatest.

To the other extreme, one of the worst I've seen in quite some time was Louis Prima's show at the Click a couple of weekends ago. It was a classic example of just how odious a band can get if they really work at it. Louie can't sing, the band can't play, and their bawdy attempts at humor were strictly from hunger, to resort to an oft-used hunk of campus phraseology, the Prima aggregation is loaded with nothing.

Preview

Preview of coming attractions: Perhaps it's the back-breaking alimony payments, a new bride, or maybe just the old eating habit, but Artie Shaw is back in business again, and regardless of the reason I'm glad to see it. Opening at the Click December 12 he should bring a fine show in with him. Even if he only plays his better known numbers from the past, the show will still be well worth the shellacking you'll take on the refreshments. Actually I'm expecting Mr. Matrimony to run true to form and come up with something new and different. After his bringing forty fiddlers with him to Bop City last year anything can happen.

Christie's

Give a listen: To June Christie's latest waxing of "I Remember April". This is June at her melodious best. S'funny but with the Kenton crew on the rocks she seemed to taper off a bit, but now that Stan is back to work she's riding high again. You figure it out, I'm confused. Since when does that gal need any particular band to put her over?

Billy Eckstein

Heard Billy Eckstein do "Goodbye", B. G.'s old sign off theme, the other day, and there's no denying it, the guy can do great things with a ballad. Perhaps his latest waxing of "Body and Soul" was just a horrible mistake. I hope so 'cause he sounded like Sarah Vaughn with a touch of laryngitis.

And so 'til next time . . . Adieu!

CAREERS

By J. R. SPENCE

When a person thinks of a Mechanical Engineer, he immediately thinks of a person leaning over a drafting board all day long doing nothing but drawing lines. This point of view usually taken is a very narrow-minded one, to say the least. The Mechanical Engineer is a versatile person, who is anything from a machine designer to a salesman.

Demand For M. E.'s

The demand for Mechanical Engineers is not so great as it is for Electrical or Civil Engineers. Of the graduates that applied at the Placement Office only 40% of them found jobs. This does not mean that the rest of the men are out of a job, but it indicates that the Mechanical Engineer has a harder time finding the jobs that are. Most of those who applied at the Placement Office, and obtained jobs, started with companies that offered a training program that lasted about 6 or 8 months. No matter what type of work the Mechanical Engineer goes into, he usually starts out in some type of training course.

Training Program

A typical training program consists of the following: The man first goes to what is called basic training, in which he works in every department of the plant so as to get an idea what each department and every other phase. After he has been through every department, he is asked to list them in the order of preference. Then, each departmental head is asked how this man would fit into his department. With this information correlated, the trainee is placed in the position that will keep both happy.

Overall Outlook

With a procedure like this, a man may end up being a salesman after having graduated from college as a Mechanical Engineer with the idea that he would like to become a designer. This method enables a person to see just what every available position for him is like. The only drawback this plan could possibly have is the fact that the starting pay is slightly lower. Of course, this is only right, because, while the employer is paying for teaching his employees he does not expect to pay advanced salaries. Again, we see that experience has a lot to do with the salary a person will earn.

Salary's

It was found that the average salary the men started with after being placed by the Placement Office was about $2950. Most of these men went into training programs, and would probably be up for a raise as soon as they started to specialize. Another thing not to be forgotten is the type of degree the engineer has when he has applied for the job. The difference between the Bachelor's Degree and the Master's Degree is about $480 a year. Experience will help bring the salary up considerably, too. When he works during the summer in the Mechanical Engineering Department of some plant, the future engineer is getting some that basic training required before being placed in his best field.

In 10 Years

After about 10 years, the Mechanical Engineer is usually set in his field. By this time, he may have branched out to become a designing engineer, a consulting engineer, a salesman, or industrial relations executive. The wage increase after ten years of work is about $2950 more per year. From this we see that the average mechanical engineer doubles his starting wage

Around The Town

By F. A. VARALLO

"Everybody Does It", a side-splitting comedy, should be on your "must see" list. A remake of the ten-year old comedy called "Wife, Husband, and Friend", this film provides Paul Douglas with one of his best roles. As a roughneck wrecking contractor, Paul is married to a Park Avenue belle and would-be concert singer, Celeste Holm. Realizing that Celeste is more ambitious than talented, Douglas and his father-in-law, Charles Coburn, try to dissuade the little woman from a dubious concert career.

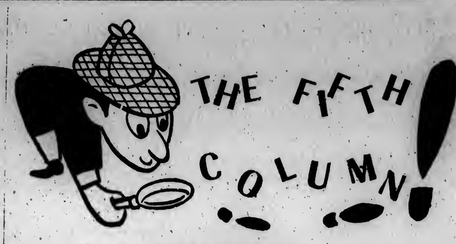
The fun really begins when Paul finds that his bathroom baritone can break tumblers and even mirrors. The finale, a kind of musical slapstick, featuring Paul as an opera singer, is loaded with laughs.

Besides Douglas, who rings the bell with his hilarious antics, this flicker boasts a fine supporting cast. Charles Coburn, Douglas' music-hating father-in-law; Lucille Watson, Celeste's ambitious mother; Millard Mitchell, Paul's business partner; and John Hoyt, the amusing conductor and accompanist.

"Red Light"

George Raft and Virginia Mayo appear in this briskly paced murder melodrama. Raft is relentless in his search for the hired thug who shot and killed his young chaplain brother. Spurning police assistance, Raft sets out to trap the murderer alone. A hotel Bible is his only clue, for his brother's dying words were that he could find the answer there. The Bible disappears, however, before Raft has a chance to examine it. A good deal of film footage is then used up as he tracks down the recent occupants of the hotel room, examines them, and in general pushes them around. When he finally locates the Good Book, he discovers that his brother has merely marked the "Thou Shalt Not Kill" passage. The remainder of the film goes on to show who the murderer was, and how and why he committed the crime. Raymond Burr, Gene Lockhart, Barton MacLane, and Henry Morgan complete a capable cast — indeed, their individual performances are more outstanding than the story deserves.

"Roseanna McCoy"



You've heard or read a lot about the famous Hatfield-McCoy feud of the 1880's. Well, "Roseanna McCoy" is the film version of this fight-filled family brawl. As young Hatfield, Farley Granger is quite successful in making Joan Evans forget that she is a McCoy. Incidentally, Joan Evans is a teen-aged newcomer to Hollywood, this being her first picture. It must be said that she has come a long way, with a talented and refreshing performance. Richard Basehart is a fanatical member of the Hatfield clan, while Charles Bickford is well-cast as Granger's gun-totin' pa. Raymond Massey is convincing as Joan's pappy, and Alime McMahon, as his careworn wife. Marshall Thompson, Gigi Perreau, and Peter Miles score as Massey's attractive children.

"Jacobowsky"

Last, but far from least, on our entertainment guide this week is our own "Jacobowsky and the Colonel", presented by the Belle Masque Society. Performances have been scheduled for November 20, 21, and 22, at 8:30 P. M. If you have not as yet seen this splendid production, don't miss it! You will certainly spend an enjoyable evening.

By JOE KENNEY and JACK APPLEGATE

Do you feel slow and sluggish? Do you feel as though both feet are implanted in a block of concrete . Does your head feel like a lead balloon? Well, don't complain; it was your weekend as well as ours. Oh, our achin' backs, achin' feet achin' heads, achin' wallets!!!. What a weekend! Everything happens at once. It was a big week for everyone with a well rounded sequence of events . . . exams, a dance, a game, a party, a big head, a play, and finally, a pauper.

Delta Pi Mu, Lambda Kappa Delta, and Delta Pi Epsilon joined forces to commence the social weekend. The Spartans had nothing on the Villanovans as the couples slid across the greasy floor. Even the coke was served from Grecian urns with Corinthian-shaped pretzels . . . Jack Chaya and Bill Reagan munched garlic to add to the Athenian air . . .

The stampede after the State game was led by Ed Heiskell hastening to jump into his monkey suit for the Rosemont Prom while the NROTC double-time it to pound the decks of the Barclay.

At our sister school, Jack Kelly danced with a seeing-eye dog because his date was busy translating the Kinsey Report into braille . . . Jack Denuel and Mary Lou Taylor spent the evening discussing the oil situation in Egypt.

Although Gil Hazard led the NROTC platoons through the various formations on Franklin Field with buck sergeant precision, he danced as though he were doing the manual of arms with his girl . . . Some of the swabbies danced as if they hadn't forgotten their sea legs.

Sunday night marked the opening of Belle Masque's "Jacobowsky and the Colonel" . . . the place was packed . . . the entire Krupa family was there . . . Ted Doyle wore more medals than Uncle Joe . . . One from the 1910 convention of the P. O. S. of A. in Allentown, another read "Win With London", vintage 1936, but the one that tops them all off was an award for good conduct from the W. C. T. U. . . . Tonight is the last night. Don't forget!!!

Orchids to: The Promotion Committee for cultivating the spirit displayed at the 150-pound game last Friday.

Onions to: Those who put the squelch on the Connelly Award.

Our rumor department, working overtime this week, has come up with some startling predictions . . . The main hubbub between Fedigan Hall and the Field House concerns several of our gridiron standouts . . . seems that big Ralph Pasquariello is slated to go to work next year for the Los Angeles Rams (Mr. Jane Russell and company) . . . Tiny John Sandusky to journey to Chicago and join ex-Eagle Steve Romanik to join Ed Berrang in the Capitol City . . . What a combination that will make. Several pro clubs hot on the trail of glue-fingered Dan Brown . . . Other gossip along the grid line has to do with the bowl situation . . . one of our local sports commentators started the ball rolling by placing us in the Orange Bowl with Santa Clara as possible contenders . . . Wouldn't it be nice to celebrate New Year's Day down south with all that orange juice?? Could be true but keep your other eye on the 'Gator Bowl . . .

What's new in the world of recorded music? . . . The Mule Train has taken a back seat on the campus in favor of Jimmy Collet, the Mel Torme of Villanova . . .

Last week, pandemonium hit the third floor of Good Counsel . . . Short sheeting the sacks seemed to be the rule . . . seems as though this hall is competing with thirdfloor Fedigan to see who goes beserk first. The mid-terms must be taking their toll . . . Bob Whelan, President of the Golly Golly Club, has all the waitresses on the Main Line slowly approaching insanity . . .

La Salle High School Alumni is holding a Thanksgiving dance tomorrow evening in their college auditorium, according to Jack Metzger.

Jerry Micallef informs us that his girl, Margaret Caswell from Penns Grove, N. J., enjoys the Fifth . . . we love her too . . .

Here's hoping you have a fowl time over the holidays, but don't forget to come back . . .

AND WITH THE END OF MIDTERMS AND THE BEGINNING OF THANKSGIVING, WE FIND OURSELVES WINGING MERRILY HOMEWARD

Seniors Act On Prom Band; Elect McKay To Council

Gene Valerio, chairman of the band committee, presented the seniors with four possible bands for their prom at the senior class meeting. A vote was taken and the results put Ray Anthony, first, followed in order by Sonny Dunham, Ray McKinley, and Johnny Long. It was stated that intermission music would be supplied by a combo. The price of the tickets was set at $6.00.

Ray Anthony was picked as first choice because it was felt that he would best be able to fill the bill of supplying good, danceable music for the prom. Though not a big name of long standing, Ray Anthony now heads a real up-and-coming organization. He first got his start in the service and has been rising in reputation ever since.

McKay Elected

Phil McKay beat out his opponents Bill McCann and Bob Neylon to win the election for the senior C & F student council representative. Phil compiled a total of 44 votes followed by Bill McCann with 37 votes and Bob Neylon with 17 votes. The votes total to approximately 1/6 of the number in the senior class.

In reference to the dinner dance, Mike Marshall stated that $1.00 or approximately that sum would be taken off the previously set price of $8.00 per couple. He also mentioned that it would be possible to reserve seats at the basketball game for those who were planning to attend both the dinner dance and the game, and that final arrangements were being made and would be made known up completion.

"Spanish Night" To Feature Play; Dec. 6 Is Date

The Spanish Club of Villanova College recently announced that arrangements for its "Spanish Night," to be held December sixth in the Commerce and Finance Auditorium, are now complete. Chief presentation of the festivities will be a Spanish play.

"Mercedita se Casa", a Spanish play, is to highlight the evening. Members of the club and several young ladies from Rosemont College have already begun rehearsals. Included in the cast of the play are: Miss Joan Crossley, and Miss Elizabeth Tarlton, both of Rosemont College, and, Adolph deRosa, Anthony Franelli, Robert Rdland and Jeremiah Ryan of Villanova College.

The club announced at the same time that the Spanish consul and the consuls of several South American countries are expected to attend the affair.

A committee in charge of preparations has been named. It is composed of: Robert Brassington, Harry deFever, James Garrity, Harry O'Hearan, Albert Dallago, Frank Gibbons, John Donovan, Edward Coury, Martin Hall, and Martin Robert. The committee has announced that, in the line of final preparations, movies of the Villanova College-Boston College game are to be shown at the affair.

The club has announced, too, that students of neighboring girls' colleges are to be invited to attend. All members in good standing of the Villanova College Spanish Club are free to bring dates if they wish to do so.

celli, was also managed in superlative excellence. Finally, Robert Resnick, a peerless master of pining melancholy, was good in his interpretation of The Tragic Gentleman in the existing mayhem.

There is no suitable "well done" to circumvent Father William Krupa's phenomenal achievement in his latest enterprise. His remarkable ability and power to direct are a result of unreined ambition which invoke praise without limit and beauty too sacred for words. For all who patronize the legitimate stage and others who enjoy comedy, pathos, and satire, Jacobowsky and The Colonel should be a compelling incentive to attend.

NEW YORK VILLANOVA CLUB SPONSORS TURKEY DAY DANCE

The Villanova Club of New York will hold a Thanksgiving Dance from 9 to 1, November 25 in the Georgian Room of the Hotel Statler in New York. Admission is five dollars per couple and the music will be provided by the Alumni Association, according to Mike Marshall, representative on campus for the New York group.

At a meeting held last Wednesday evening at 7:30 in 215 Mendel, Villanova students who live in and around the New York city area heard Edward Rilly ('43), Chairman of the dance, and John V. Faraci ('42), discuss the coming dance. Mr. Faraci is a member of the committee, and will be the chairman for the coming card party to be held in New York in conjunction with the Rosemont Alumni. Suggestions were heard concerning the possibility of holding an affair if the basketball team receives a tournament bid in New York.

The New York Villanova Club is divided into three groups consisting of Greater N. Y., Long Island, and Westchester County. The Westchester headquarters is in Larchmont.

Last year the New York club threw a very successful dance at the Hotel Statler. Almost a hundred undergraduates were present to hear the "V for Villanova" victory song introduced.

As of this date there are 300 men belonging to the New York club.

This year, well over a hundred are expected to attend the dance. Other N. Y. area residents are urged to contact Mike Marshall, O'Dwyer Hall for tickets, or write to the N. Y. Alumni Association.

Straw hats and canes were the uniform of the day for more than 30 initiates of the Delta Pi Epsilon fraternity. A three day hazing period preceded the initiation held last Wednesday night.

DPE Fraternity Initiates Thirty-Eight Pledgees

Bedlam reigned in the Commerce and Finance Building as the Delta Pi Epsilon, the business Fraternity, gave the business to more than 35 initiates in the old fashioned way last Wednesday evening. The initiation was the first major operation of the year for the rejuvenated fraternity which is led by the popular John Weglicki.

The Initiation Committee, under the Chairmanship of Paul Schratweiser, planned the program of the evening which featured well-turned paddles, decorated with frat letters and other appropriate markings, being presented by the pledgee to his big brother. The blind-folded pledgee were then led through the corridors and were given no peace until finished with the chamber of horrors that was the basement of the Commerce and Finance Building.

A social was then held in the auditorium during which President Weglicki addressed the new members, welcoming them to the fraternity and outlining their obligation as members. Refreshments were then served.

The Initiation was preceded by a three day hazing period which saw the pledgees wearing straw hats and carrying a cane. The rather startling effect created quite an impression and if the custom is kept can become a pleasant part of the traditional fraternal exercises.

NROTC Invited To Join Assoc.

The Pennsylvania Department of the Reserve Officers' Association has announced that the national dues of the student midshipmen attending Villanova will be paid by the Philadelphia chapter of the Reserve Officers' of the Naval Services if the students wish to join that organization this year.

Midshipmen will be enrolled in the statue of junior members of the organization. After enrollment they will, as do all regular members, receive the "Reserve Officer", the organization's periodical, and all other material that they publish.

The purpose of the program is to interest every potential candidate in the Reserve Officers' Association and its activities. It is expected that many of the NROTC graduates will upon completion of their required two years' active duty, retire from the active Navy and assume a reserve status.

Any midshipmen interested in joining are requested to submit their names to the Navy office Barry Hall.

Wildcats Smash Over N. C. State, 45-21; 150's Blast Penn, 25-14; Win Ivy League

TEAM OF DESTINY WINS TITLE LED BY HALFBACK BOTTINO

McCreary & Loughlin Shine as Kane's Kids Win in Last Period

By George Scanlon

Chapions! The Villanova 150 lb. football team are Eastern Intercollegiate 150 pound football titleholders after their spectacular 25-14 win over the University of Pennsylvania. A cinderella team, a fighting ball club which was the doormats of the league last season but finishing on top this year with a display of sensational football.

Penn Scores

The title race boiled down to two clubs the Little Quakers and Villanova. The Penn team was undefeated and favored to win the coveted trophy but Villanova's high flying lightweights had too much. The payoff tilt got underway at 2:00, Villanova stadium Friday afternoon with Penn kicking off to the Kittens. Neither club could get moving in the opening 6 minutes until Penn's tricky single wing offense started to click.

The Quakers scored with 8 minutes remaining in the first period as Charlie Schmucker to a reverse fro mfullback Don Hunt and sped 53 yds. to score. Jim Hall split the uprights to give the Red and Blue a 7-0 advantage.

In the 2nd stanza the Kittens finally got their T formation moving and with Joe McCreary and Charlie Battino going for valuable yardage marched 36 yds. to score their first counter. Jimmy Moore scored from bootleg play. Moore's try for the the one yard line on a deceptive point was wide and the Kittens were on the short end of a 7-6 count.

Penn Scores on Pass

In the closing minutes of the half Penn hit paydirt again. Haen's pass to Schmucker climaxed a 60 yard drive. Hall made good his try for the point thus making the score 14-6, and things looked as dark as the overcast skies for the Blue and White as the half ended.

Kittens Stop Penn

Then opening of the 2nd half saw the Kittens stop Penn's attack and started their uphill drive. Midway in the stanza the Kittens march 68 yds. to score with the honors going to Charlie Battino on a 5 yd. plunge. This sustained drive was paced by the Kittens. "Touchdown Twins", Battino and McCreary. Moore's try for the point was blocked and the

BLUE & WHITE PILES UP 706 TOTAL YDS. IN SEASON CLOSER

Pasquariello, Geppi & Frinzi Set Pace in Romp Over Wolfpack

By Ted Fernandes

The Villanova Wildcats finished their regular season last Saturday afternoon by exploding in the faces of the North Carolina State Wolfpack to the tune of 45-21.

Sparked by fullback Ralph Pasquariello, and halfback Johnny Geppi and Mickey Frinzi the Mainliners opened up in the second period to equalize a 7-0 lead held by State. With seconds remaining in the half the talented toe of Tommy Clavin placed the pigskin between the crossbars from the 21 yard line for a three pointer. At the half, Villanova 10, State 7. The second half was strictly Villanova, the Cats scoring 35 points, while Carolina came back to boost their tallies to 21.

State Opens Scoring Column

The opening seconds of the ball game proved exciting as a Villanova punt was blocked by Charlie Musser who picked up the ball and raced into the end-zone for a six pointer. Chuck Westbrook added the point and the Wolfpack was out front 7-0. Midway through the second period the Mainliners drove from their own 38 to paydirt. Pacquariello chopped off 16 yards around end, a pass from Romanik to Rogers netted 22 more. Pasquariello then smashed his way for another 17 yards. Then from the two, the mighty man from Everett, Mass. plunged over the goal line. Clavin converted and the ball game was deadlocked at 7-7.

In the closing minutes of the first half Tom Clavin broke the stalemate with his 21 yard field goal and the Cats were on top to the tune of 10-7.

Frinzi Makes Sensational Run

On the same play that sent John "Te Jet" Geppi galloping 80 yards to the Carolina 2, Mickey Frinzi took off from the Cat 25 and landed in scoring country for another six pointer after a 75 yard junket. Automatic Clavin converted and the fire eating wild Cats were away out front 17-7.

With sheer leg power Ralph Pasquariello set up a Villanova attack by tearing off 16 yards from the Cat 31. Sandusky gained 8 on a lateral from Pasky. Ralph hucked for 10, Frinzi skirted end for 5, then this same whirling half lugged the mail to the enemy 1 yard line. Romanik

Hoopsters Open '49-'50 Season Against Arnold

Capacity Crowd Expected to See Great Villanova Club in Action

By Neal Fahy

Next Wednesday evening, Nov. 30 the '49-'50 edition of the Villanova basketball squad commences a long 29 game schedule by squaring off against little Arnold Teachers College of Milford, Connecticut. While the game is only considered a warmup for the 'Cats, the Main Line fieldhouse will be filled to its capacity of 3500 fans who want to get their first glimpse of what is expected to be the finest court team in Villanova history.

On the following Saturday evening the fieldhouse will again be filled, but this time the opponent will be no push-over. The great New York Athletic Club five, headed by several Metropolitan former college stars will be in town hoping to hand the Wildcats their first court defeat early.

DelPurgatorio Promoted

After more than a month of practice, there is no doubt that the Wildcat squad is already in mid-season form and the daily practice has been most revealing to many, including Head Coach Alex. G. Severance. For instance, observers found that Perry DelPurgatorio, a very popular senior from Union City, N. J., couldn't be kept off the first string. For the last three years, 'Del' has been nothing more than a valuable sub who played only when the first team came out. However, this year, Perry has been amazing Wildcat followers at practice with his sharp accurate passes, brilliant set shooting, and all around aggressive play. As things stand now DelPurgatorio will start the Arnold game next week along with Paul Arizin, Leo Wolf, Joe Hannan and Tom Sabol.

The 'Cat court quintet has already had two scrimmages with the Reading Keys and have another one planned this week at West Chester Teachers. So far in these practices, it has been revealed that Arizin hasn't been dominating the scoring as much as he did last year at this time, but experience has taught him so much about defense that he is head-and-shoulders above everyone else on the floor in this department.

Hannon Also Shines

Another standout has been little "Toad" Hannan. He is one of the few members of the squad who really gives his best every time he is out on the floor. Joe has been sparkling in practice with his accurate sets, his dazzling bursts of speed, and his beautiful passing.

Of course, Tom Sabol is as great as ever, and Leo Wolf is still Villanova's "Old Reliable." Almost needless to say, the reserves will be much stronger this year. The second team averages 6'3" in height and should provide Mr. Severance with the tall boys when he needs them. Big Brooks Ricca should be back on the first string before long and Shy Raiken is liable to break in there at any time.

Tom Brennan, tallest man on the squad at 6'5", will be very valuable in certain spots when a big man is needed Ben Stuart, a fine all around man who can do anything on a basketball court, will prove a very capable reserve. John Weglicki should also see a lot of action this year. One can't forget that Joe Maguire, Jack Crossin, Angelo Scotese, and Tom Dohan are also good performers and will help to make Villanova's basketball club one of the top teams in the nation this year.

The Champs

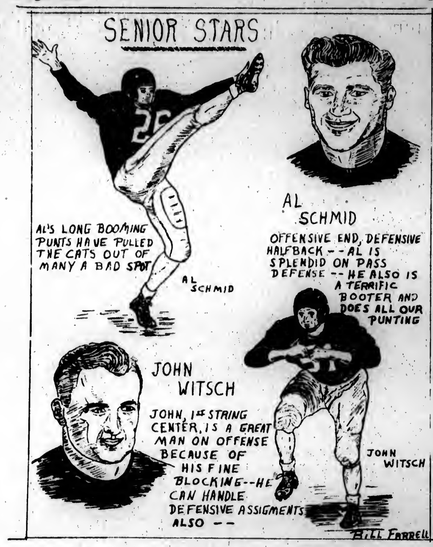
SPORTS STAFF-WVIL INSTALL P. A. SYSTEM FOR KITTENS' GAME

The Kittens' win over Penn last Friday was not only the first time that Villanova had won the Eastern Intercollegiate 150 pound title but also the first time that a public address system was used, the first time that programs were distributed and the first time that the band had performed at a Kitten home game.

The entire project was under the direction of Bill Brenanghouse, Station Manager of WVIL, and Harry Range, Sports Editor of the VILLANOVAN, who wish to express their thanks to Major Francis P. Dayton, USMC, for the use of the public address system; to Father Handran who arranged for the band to be there; and to Gene Ruane, for his cooperation in having programs printed.



Working in conjunction with Range and Breninghouse were spotters Georfe Scanlon, of the VILLANOVAN, and Bill Landis, of WVIL, as well as Bill Canino of the Publicity Department.

Many laughs were provided at halftime by some twenty members of the band who went through some informal routines and also by Jim Caufield and his cymbal and drums corps of Tom Clavin and Shy Raiken.

Geppi Scampers

Blazing halfback Johnny Geppi dashes for 80 yards to the North Carolina State 2 in one of the most sensational plays ever seen at Franklin Field.

SWIMMING NEWS

The swimming club started operations for the coming year last Monday night with a meeting of the officers of that group. Under the chairmanship of President Ed. Connelly, the staff including Joe O'Brien, Vice President, Jake Moran, Treasurer and Dick Spence, Secretary decided on a program for the season.

Halls Split By Sections

The schedule was inadified somewhat from last year and water polo games are now included in the list of activities. For purposes of competition the halls are divided into four groups, North, South, East and West as follows:

North—Alumni and Austin.
East—Barracks 1-2-3-4.
South—All Dayhops.
West—Fedigan, Davis, Good Counsel, Mendel. The meets will start between five and six P. M. on scheduled days.

Tues., Nov. 22—South vs. East.
Tues., Nov. 29—North vs. West.
Thurs., Dec. 1—South vs. North.
Tues., Dec. 6—East vs. West.
Tues., Dec. 13—South vs. West.
Thurs., Dec. 15—East vs. North.

150's Penn Game

score stood 14-12 till the end of the 3rd period.

Villanova Takes Lead

The fourth quarter got underway with an exchange of punts. The ball was resting on the Blue and White 40 when Joe McCreary took a handoff from Moore, eluded two tacklers at the line of scrimmage and raced 60 yards to a sensational touchdown. Moore's try for the odd point was true and the Kittens took the lead for the first time 19-14. This run kept McCreary's streak intact, it was the fifth consecutive game in which this speedster has raced over 50 yds. to paydirt.

The inspired Kittens rose to great heights as they stopped Penn's offensive cold. With the championship 3 minutes away the Blue and White got greedy and Charlie Batino twisted loose fr a 34 yd. touchdown jaunt. Moore's kick was wide but the jubilant Kittens had clinched the title, they had done the near impossible.

Kittens Defeat Princeton

Although this may seem anticlematic but is very important in the Kittens quest was the Princeton victory Nov. 11 by a 13-6 score. The Tigers provided the Kittens with plenty of keen competition.

The Kittens didn't waste any time as they scored in the first 3 minutes of a 60 yd. drive. McCreary and Battino brought the pigskin down to the 15 where McCreary swept the end for a touchdown. Moore's try for the gift point was short and the Blue and White had an early 6-0 lead.

Defensive Battle

The game developed into a defensive battle. It wasn't until midway in the last period that Joe McCreary did his speciality, a 65 yd. run. Moore's try was true and the Kittens wede in front 13-0.

In the last 3 minutes the Tigers marched 32 yds. to score on a Austin to Lilly pass covering 9 yds. The try for the point failed and the final score stood 13-6 in the blue and white's win column.

Thus the curtain falls on a great season for the 150's. Their improvement was beyond words, their spirit and fight would be hard to match on any gridiron. The laurels of a tremendous coaching job go to Frank "Bud" Kane, Jack "Mr. Pessimistic" McConville, Tony Russo, Don Pendino and Ed Binzo. Their efforts and ability were proven by the play of a fine eleven, the play of champions.

N.C. State Game

plied over for the score and Clavin enriched it with his conversion. Villanova now led the parade 24-7.

D'Alonzo and Padula Plow

In the early minutes of the final period sophomore Padula and Pete D'Alonzo, junior, fullback ran roughshod through states line and set up touchdown number 4. Frinzi scampered from the Pack's 8 yard line and added the marker. Clavin split the uprights and he Wildcas were away ou in front 31-7.

Caulfield Intercepts Smith's Heave

Ogden Smith, the Carolina aerial artist hurried a long pass intended for Tony Romanowsky, but defensive ace Jim Caulfield intercepted and took off like a bolt of lightning, smashing into would-be tacklers he lateralled to "Thunder" Pasquarello who carried the North Carolina Wolfpack on his back until he tripped on the Villanova 43. Bill Padula took over and smashed off tackle for a sensational 57 yard jaunt, scoring his second T. D. of the season. Clavin converted as usual and the Rebels trailed 38-7.

Southerners Rally

Paul Carlson, Red and White ball carrier, returned a Schmid punt to the Cat 42. Ogden Smith chucked to Paul Dinan for a sizeable gain. Another pass from Smith to Dinan gained six points for the South and Charlie Westbrook converted. This was the third T. D. in two minutes.

On the kickoff, Villanova began a drive spurred by Pete D'Alonzo, Neil O'Boyle and Joe Rilo. Down in Carolina land O'Boyle passed to Rilo to place the ball inches from the goal for a first down. From this point O'Boyle sneaked over for the sixth touchdown.

North Carolina state scored once more before the closing gun and the final score read, 45-21.

AUSTIN BEATEN BY FEDIGAN; ALUMNI AND BKS. TIED FOR LEAD

basketball league in the past two weeks with only three games being played in that period. The one major change in the standings occurred when Fedigan's talk combine handed Austin their first defeat of the season, knocking the latter out of a first place tie. In other games played, Alumni and Bks. 1&4 both won to remain deadlocked on the top rung with three victories apiece.

Oelz Stars in Alumni Triumph

Alumn's follower sweated out a tough first half two weeks ago, when a fighting team representing the Doms took advantage of a conching lapse to run up a 10-3 lead in the first ten minutes and held the vaunted Alumni team scoreless from the floor. At this stage of the game, Bobby Oelz, Alumni's All-Star guard, took personal charge of his team's offense. He whipped a beautiful hook shot through the cords to break the scoring famine and then proceeded to run wild on offense and defense, racking up 13 points in the remainder of the half to give Alumni a 27-20 lead at the buzzer. His terrific speed helped slow down the Dom's attack, which was being featured by the uncanny shooting of Beahan, who was the high scorer for the game with 18 markers. Buckley wound up high for the winners with 14 points. Barry and Farley were other big guns for Alumni, but in the final analysis it was the great play and spirit of Bobby Oelz, the smallest man on the court — which brought Alumni its 52-44 victory.

Austin Upset By Fedigan

A never-say-die Fedigan five fought back from almost certain defeat in the closing seconds to register a well-deserved 44-41 win over previously unbeaten Austin, in the second game.

Led by hard-charging Dave Frink, who was responsible for 16 points and little Joey Crossin, who scored half that number, Fedigan moved into a second place tie with the losers. The game was close and exciting all the way and was not decided until the last 30 seconds. The clinching basket was thrown in by Colletta. Len Bogner and Jack Rosegen were high for Austin and played an outstanding game in defeat. Joe Lord, former Villanova great, officiated the game.

Bks. 1&4 Retain Tie for Top

Bks. 1&4 had a pretty easy time in subduing their Bks. 2&3 arch-rivals as they romped to a 67-49 victory on Thursday. They remain in a first place tie with Alumni and their game after the holidays will probably determine the first half league championship. Led by Falkowski, Flynn and Diot, who scored 17, 16 and 12 points respectively, Bks 1&4 jumped off to aneanly lead and were never headed, Bob Ruggerio with an impressive array of shots scored 24 points for the losers to account fod almost half their score.

Doms Win Football Championship

The Doms won the banner in the informal football league last week by edging Austin 6-0. This game was a replay of a scoreless tie played earlier between the two teams.

The winning play was a pass from Bill Knecht, Doms' leading passer to DiJo. O'Brien, Austin captain, was outstanding in his team's offensive efforts.

Bowling News

Another reminder to all those who are interested in bowling. An attempt is being made to organize a bowling league to begin after the Thanksgiving holidays. Thus far not too many fellows have shown too much enthusiasm in the proposed league. Come on you bowlers, let's show some interest in this idea. Anyone who is interested in bowling in the league and has free time on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons at 3 P. M. give your names to either George Mondachein, Barracks 4 or Howie Hilbert in Austin Hall.

Gaebler's Black & Gold Inn at Columbia is the favorite off-campus haunt of University of Missouri students. That's because Gaebler's is a friendly place, always full of the busy atmosphere of college life. There is always plenty of ice-cold Coca-Cola, too. For here, as in college gathering spots everywhere—Coke belongs.

America, in Washington D. C., in 1938 and 1943.

This second lecture in the current Villanova Forum series will be held, as usual, in the Commerce and Finance Auditorium. Father McCarthy will be introduced by Mr. Charles P. Bruderle, Assistant Professor of History at Villanova, and Chairman of the Villanova Forum.

Mr. Bruderle looks forward to a fine turnout of both faculty and students to Father McCarthy's address. The lecture will begin at 8:30 P. M. Students' matriculation cards will be honored as usual.

Due to the Thanksgiving recess, there will be no edition of the Villanovan next Tuesday. The next edition will be out on Dec. 6. All copy for this edition must be turned in to the Villanovan office by Nov. 30.

Campus University Profs Hold Second Meeting

The Villanova Chapter of the American Association of University Professors held its second meeting of the current school year on Wednesday evening, November 9th.

During the business portion of the meeting, the membership approved a number of amendments to the Chapter's constitution, including an amendment to provide a "local associate membership" for the clerical members of the faculty.

Mr. Emil Amelotti was appointed by Mr. W. C. Henry, President of the chapter, to head a Program Committee whose purpose would be to draw up a program of social and educational events for the subsequent meetings of the group.

Approximately sixty members of the faculty who have joined the Villanova Chapter of the organization were present at this meeting. After the adjournment motion pictures of the Villanova-Duquesne football game were shown by Rev. John Vrana, O.S.A.

Flag Pole Moved To New Berth Ready Today

Solved is the question of why so many ropes were holding up a flag pole that was presumed to be set safely in concrete. The flag pole that stood in front of Mendel Hall has been moved to a corner position in front of the Naval Science Building.

According to Mr. E. Loughrey, Superintendent of Maintenance at the College, the move was made so that the pole would become "more of the college". In the past years, the trees growing alongside it have all but hidden it and have taken away from it the important position that a flag pole should have on a college campus.

Placed in its original position in 1932, the pole is 66 feet high; 60 feet above the ground and the remaining six feet in solid concrete. Originally it was painted aluminum with a green base, but in its new berth it is a distinctive white. The bottom trim will be painted Villanova blue. The ball on top of the pole has been gold-leafed to further enhance the display.

This move does not mean that the pole, or even the flag, will belong to the Navy Department. Navy personnel will more than likely be in charge of the raising and lowering of the flag, which has been the task of the men of Maintenance, but it has not been decided what ceremony or system, if any, will accompany the display of the American flag.

The flag will fly during administrative college hours as it has in the past. It was first ready for use in its new berth yesterday.

Rev. F. X. N. McGuire, O.S.A., President of the College, is credited with the idea to move the pole and to place it in front of John Barry Hall. The job was done by the John A. McKeafrey Rigging Company of Philadelphia.

"The Indian" of Newberry College, South Carolina reports, "Pop" Ruff, over at the canteen, meets all kinds of characters. One day last week he watched astounded while a student put eight spoonfuls of sugar in a cup of coffee and proceeded to drink it without stirring it first.

"Why don't you stir it," suggested "Pop".

The student regarded him coldly and said, "Who likes it sweet?"

Major Norm Hays, Oklahoma A&M, '40 —Aviation Executive, U.S. Air Force!

A native of Grove, Oklahoma, Norman Hays graduated from Grove High School in 1935. The following year he entered Oklahoma A&M, where he majored in engineering; also took public speaking.

Active in national 4H Club work while in college, he helped organize its statewide activities, won a national 4H championship in Public Speaking. In 1940 he received his BS degree in engineering.

A month later he began navigator training as an Aviation Cadet. In 1941, he received his navigator's wings and a commission as Second Lieutenant . . . married his college sweetheart.

Sent to an RAF Navigation School in Canada, he graduated with the highest possible rating of Specialist. Norman served overseas for 18 months in the Aleutians, Italy and Saipan.

Accepting a regular commission after the war, he was assigned to development of navigation instruments; navigated the B-29 "Pacusan Dreamboat" on its famed Hawaii-Cairo non-stop flight in 1946.

Typical of college graduates who have found their place in the U. S. Air Force, Major Hays is Chief, Navigation Section, at Headquarters in Washington . . . with a secure career . . . a promising future.

If you are single, between the ages of 20 and 26½, with at least two years of college, consider a flying career as an officer in the U. S. Air Force. You may be able to meet the high physical and moral requirements and be selected for training. If you do not complete Aviation Cadet training, you may return to civilian life or have opportunity to train for an important officer assignment in non-flying fields.

Air Force officer procurement teams are visiting many colleges and universities to explain about these career opportunities. Watch for their arrival or get full details at your nearest Air Force Base, local recruiting station, or by writing to the Chief of Staff, U. S. Opera On TV

A private box at the opening of the Metropolitan Opera was given to our students last night. The box in question was the television camera, though, and instead of having to go all the way to New York, all they had to do was attend the program presented by the Music Club in the seminar rooms of the Library. This was presented as a part of the plan of the Music Club to introduce musical appreciation as an additional form of culture available to the students during the school year.

There were no white ties or formal attire worn by those in the Music Club audience, a variance from the tradition of the Met, but, instead, a large gathering of students enjoyed in comfort this highlight of the New York social season.

Besides the ermine and pearls and the other embellishments that make the opening of the Met such a notable occasion, there was also good music, as all those in the Villanova branch of music lovers agreed. The opera, chosen to be presented in this initial program of the season by the Metropolitan Company was "Der Rosenkavalier" a lively and lyric work by the great German composer, Richard Strauss.

This story of "The Cavalier of the Rose" is set in Vienna during the rule of Maria Theresa. The plot, like the title, is based on the custom of those days for a suitor to send the girl of his choice a silver rose by special courier. Lerchenau, the suitor, thus commissions a young nobleman, Octavius, to deliver the token, and in the process, the latter falls in love with Sophie, the girl in the plot. Sophie spurns Lerchenau, and he tries to kidnap her, only to be foiled by Octavius. Lerchenau is then exposed by his rival as the fickle lover that he is, and the marriage of Sophie to Octavius is arranged to effect a happy conclusion for this whimsical story.

In the presentation last night, the noted soprano, Rise Stevens sang the title role, and was assisted by a cast of other well known stars such as Steber and Berger.

This opera, the fifth work of Strauss, lived up to the standards set in his previous works, even surpassing them in its lyric qualities. Another notable feature of this work was the waltz rhythm, apparent in all three of its acts.

This past week has been one of much interest to the music lover on campus, since in addition to the telecast of the Opera, the Music Club also presented its third in the current series of music appreciation seminars. On Wednesday night, Nov. 16th., the group held an "All Request Program" in the music room of the Library. The program for the evening included: Beethoven's Fifth Symphony, Tachaikowsky's Nutcracker Suite, Operetta Music from Victor Herbert, and Rossini's William Tell Overture.

All students who are interested in any form of music are invited to attend these music recitations, the times of which are published in this column and on the bulletin boards.

A new Lester Spinet piano has been donated to the school for use in the music seminars by the parish of St. Nicholas of Valentine in memory Fr. Mortimer Sullivan, O.S.A. Prior Provincial of the St. Thomas of Villanova Province of the Augustinian order. The gift is now in the Music Room of the Library and will be put into use in a short time, in conjunction with the programs of the Music Club.

Beta Gamma Forms Ranks For Future Forensic Meets

New policies and new members were admitted to the Debating Society on Wednesday night, November 2. President Nick Saponara, presiding over an enthusiastic group also announced the receipt of challenges to debate from at least three big-league colleges in the East. Word has been received from the Mid-West Debate Bureau of Jacksonville, Illinois, that the national question for 1950, to be decided by the outstanding men of debating varsities throughout the country, will be: Resolved, "That the United States Should Nationalize the Basic Non-agricultural Industries".

Villanova's representative on the national question will be one of the members of the five team nucleus of the organization which was organized this year in Betta Gamma. The men are hard at work preparing to win arguments on a variety of subjects with opponents from many of the local colleges. Then, they will tackle the larger universities that have submitted bids.

Two important changes of policy should be of interest to everyone at Villanova. All debates will be open to the public and students and their friends are invited to attend. Prominent individuals in many activities will be invited to judge these debates at Villanova. The vitality of this year's group of orators seems to insure a very successful season.

Jack Lavelle Guest At Annual Football Banquet

Martin Gill to Be Honored at Bellevue

Mr. Martin Gill of the class of 1932, has been chosen the recipient of the 1949 Loyalty Award to be presented tonight at the 28th Annual Football Banquet at the Bellevue Stratford Hotel. Principal speaker of the evening will be Mr. Jack Lavelle, prominent scout for the New York Giants, Notre Dame and Yale University football teams.

In addition to all of the well known coaches who have been invited from the Philadelphia area, sports celebrities from many parts of the country will be present at the banquet. The Villanova one-hundred-fifty pound team, recently crowned champions of the Eastern Intercollegiate League, has also been invited to attend. Mr. Bill Campbell, sports director of station W. C. A. U. will act as Master of Ceremonies and keep the well formulated program moving quickly.

Sixty Thousand Cig. Wrappers To Gain Video Set

At the student convocation held last Tuesday, the announcement was made that the Student Council will donate to the St. John's Orphanage the Admiral Television set to be presented to the school by the Philip Morris Company. As previously announced, the set will be presented to Villanova when a goal of 60,000 Philip Morris wrappers has been collected.

The march to this goal is well under way. According to Red Probert, the Philip Morris representative on the campus, the latest count is an estimated 10,000 wrappers. The 60,000 wrapper mark can be reached in a very short time if each member of the student body, which numbers in the neighborhood of 2,500, contributes 25 PM wrappers to the ever-growing pile in the box placed in the Pie Shoppe.

There has been no definite time limit set for the collection of the necessary number of wrappers. The task is not too great and the objective is deserving of praise. So, pick up any Philip Morris wrappers you see hanging around and ask your friends and relatives to do the same. When you get them all together, put them in the container in the Pie Shoppe and the Orphans of St. John's will soon have their TV set.

Father McCarthy Speaks At Second Meeting Of The Forum Series

"Royal patronage in Spain was in long standing long before it came to America," but "what was particular in Spain became general in America, even from the beginning."

Going on to explain what royal patronage was, and completing a most informative and entertaining evening, Rev. Edward J. McCarthy, O.S.A., Dean of the Arts and Science, of Villanova College, gave a very informative and colorful lecture last Tuesday evening in the Commerce and Finance Auditorium as the second speaker of the Villanova Forum in the current series.

Fr. McCarthy was the first faculty member to speak in the Forum since its inauguration by the College President last year. He spoke on the topic "The Spanish and Latin-American Tradition of Church-State Relationships."

Explaining that royal patronage in Spain was the nomination of ecclesiastical officials in Spain and its possessions by the Spanish king, and sanction of same by the Pope, Fr. McCarthy explained that this was almost the only way Church offices were filled in Spain for a long time. The Pope did appoint an occasional bishop without the

Accountants Plan Club Magazine

At the regular meeting of the Accounting Honor Society last Wednesday, Mr. Joseph Linsalata, moderator of the society, outlined plans for a periodical magazine to be published by the society.

The magazine will deal with all aspects of practical accounting and will feature articles by men prominent in the accounting field. Another outstanding feature will be questions from the Pennsylvania State C. P. A. examinations with solutions to the problems submitted by Villanova students.

The magazine's primary purpose is to publicize Villanova as an accounting school and to secure better employment for graduates of the Villanova School of Accounting. Copies will be sent to various business firms and schools and will be also available to the student body.

The group will appoint an editor-in-chief of the publication, the first of its kind in th history of Villanova.

STUDENTS POSE AS SANTA FOR ORPHANS AGAIN THIS YEAR

Last year the Villanova men, under the leadership of only two or three students, took most of the St. John's Orphans to town to see Santa. A few days later a complete Christmas party was held at the orphanage. There was ice cream, candy, hoagies, presents, and Santa presided. It had happened spontaneously. The faculty were asking the students what was going on.

Arrangements have been made with the good Sisters to have a repeat performance this year. Saturday, December 10, is the day for the outing. 590 Villanova men have already signed up to take an orphan in town to see Santa and treat him to a meal. The Sisters plan to give the building a good cleaning on that day — the only day of the year it will be empty.

The faculty has granted permission to the Juniors to raise money for the Christmas party (December 15) any way they see fit. Students are going all out to make this a happy Christmas for the 475 boys (ages 3 to 12) at St. John's orphanage in Philadelphia.

Juniors are bearing the responsibility of buying presents, providing entertainment and purchasing food. To cover these items they have been taking up collections in the Religion classes and have placed a container in the Pie Shop. The Main Line is also to be canvassed. To date they have realized $500 with a goal of $2,000 to be reached. As it stands with less than two weeks to go each orphan has $1.05 credited to his Merry Christmas. Won't you help make

Frank Tracy Dies In Accident

Frank W. Tracy, a Junior in the C & F School, from Lancaster, Pa., was killed during the Thanksgiving recess, it was announced by the Chaplain's Office last week. The death occurred in an automobile accident on Route 22 near Oregon, Pa., early Saturday morning, November 26th.

Tracy, a resident of the third floor of Austin, was a well-known and active student of the campus. He held membership in both the Accounting Society, and in DPE, the business fraternity. His merits as a scholar are indicated by the fact that he was listed on the Honor Roll for last semester, published in this paper just four issues ago.

His funeral was held on Monday in the Sacred Heart Church, Lancaster. Twenty of his classmates attended the Mass, and six of them acted as pall bearers. Rev. Thomas Purcell, O.S.A., moderator of the Junior Class, and Rev. H. J. Eagan, O.S.A., prefect in Alumni Hall, represented the faculty. Prayers for the repose of his soul were offered by the entire student body at the convocation, and masses have been said at the request of several campus groups.

Gala Mid-Winter Belle Ai: Ball and Informal Senior Dinner Dance Plans Set

Broadwood Site for Dinner Saturday, Jan. 7

Plans for the Senior Dinner Dance, to be held on January 7, the Saturday following the end of the Christmas Vacation, have been completed. Ray Waldron, chairman of the dinner dance committee, announced that the affair, which is to be informal this year, will start at 6 P. M. and continue until 12 P. M. Music during the dinner, will be supplied by a pianist. The Blue Notes, a very able organization, will supply the dance music from 8 to 12 P. M.

Tickets for the dinner dance are now on sale. The price has been set at $7.25. Bill Leighton is handling sales for the dayhops, and Ray Waldron is handling the resident sales. Tickets are also available at the Pie Shop.

Vote Informal

The seniors voted to have their dinner dance informal this year because it happens to be on the same evening that Villanova meets Valparisa University in the second game of a double header at the Palestra. Since a controversy arose due to this coincidence a compromise plan making the dinner dance informal was accepted.

Dinner Served

As the dinner will be served from 6 to 8 and the dancing will start immediately afterwards, those desiring to go to the basketball game will be able to attend the dinner and do some dancing before leaving for the game which starts at 9:45 P. M. Those who wish to remain and dance will enjoy the longer period of dancing than was available in previous years, as it had been the custom to start the dinner at a later hour, thus subtracting from the time left for dancing afterwards.

In order to facilitate matters further for those going to the game

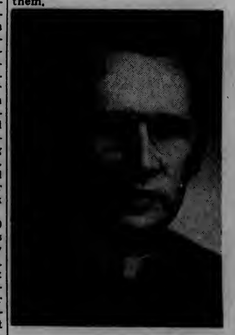
Formal to Feature Continuous Music

George Szymanski, chairman of the Belle Aire Ball, announced that the plans for the presentation of a successful prom are now in progress and that he expected that they would be completed soon.

Committees have been formed to take care of the various individual problems. Gene Valerio, chairman of the band committee, stated that the contract with the band had not yet been signed, although negotiations are in progress, and hence the name of the band is being withheld until the contract is signed. However the name will be announced as soon as possible.



Tyson Reilly, chairman of the ticket committee, said that the tickets will be printed and placed on sale just as soon as the contract with the band is signed. The price of the tickets has been set at $6.00 per couple. Joe Gibson, chairman of the committee in charge of the programs, announced that patrons for the senior prom were being solicited and that as soon as this task was completed the programs would be sent to the printer. Dave Frink, chairman of the decoration committee, stated that all the details of the decorative theme for the prom have not been ironed out as yet, but that the general plan has been formed and that he expects to have the plans completed in their entirety shortly.

An intermission band will also be featured at the prom, thus assuring an evening of continuous dancing pleasure.

Fr. John J. O'Sullivan To Conduct Cana Conference

Reverend John J. O'Sullivan, of the Catholic University of America, Wash., D. C., will conduct the second Cana Conference to be held at the College on next Sunday, December 11th. Father O'Sullivan is a native of the middle west, St. Paul, Minn., and in preparation for the priesthood he attended Nazareth Hall and Saint Paul Seminary, from 1927 to 1939. After ordination in 1939, Father O'Sullivan was assigned work in the Archdiocese of St. Paul as a parish assistant at the Church of the Incarnation, Minneapolis, Minn. During the Second World War Father O'Sullivan served as a Chaplain in the United States Army and subsequent to that he was appointed to the Faculty of the Catholic University where he has been teaching Religious Education and Sociology. He recently has been appointed Chaplain of the University. Father O'Sullivan started his CANA work immediately after the war.

The Conference will begin at 9:30 A. M. with the married students and their wives attending the Holy Sacrifice in the Monastery Chapel. They are reminded to report first to the Information Booth in Mendel Hall where they will register and obtain all the instructions necessary to begin the Conference. It is requested that the couples schedule their arrival at the College not later than 9:15 A. M. to allow time for registration and subsequent seating in the Chapel. It is also requested that those couples planning to attend, who have not mailed their attendance card, do so immediately so adequate preparations can be made to handle them.

LET'S FACE IT

Belle Masque Society and Turf and Tinsel are two of the few representatives of Villanova College to non-members of our institutional family. They show the outer ring some of what the inner ring, Villanova students, can do. When a play is cast, each individual is reminded that he is a personal representative of his classmates. To do his best is to best portray the "stuff" of Villanova College on the boards.

These clubs are open to undergraduates of all the schools here at Villanova, and the roll includes at least one from each school. But, are these, your personal representatives adequately and fairly encouraged and pushed on? NO!

It is true that Belle Masque has been recently reorganized. Turf and Tinsel has been too. Lack of interest in the beginning was expected and was forseeable. But after last year's production of "Cyrano de Bergerac" by Belle Masque, which was good enough to receive a television offer, but which was not accepted for technical reasons, there is no reason why interest and faith should not be at the peak, or near so.

Less than 15% of the college enrollment attended this year's fall production of "Jacobowsky and the Colonel." Of these less than half bought their tickets beforehand, reassuring the talented exponents of Villanova and their productionists that they would have a large audience.

Only fifty different students were given credit lines in the program. Turf and Tinsel's list last year was about three times as long.

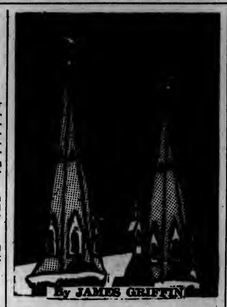
How can you expect "to rival Penn's "Mask and Wig" when you do not bolster Villanova's "Belle Masque" and/or "Turf and Tinsel". You can't be interested, and therefore you can not possibly be encouraging other people to attend the shows done by our dramatic, and original comedy clubs.

Student interest is appallingly lacking. How can you, as a future alumnus of Villanova Collge, sit back and let these two clubs go in the hole year after year. When they do make money (one year) it is first used to pay off last year's debt. The remainder, its entirety, is put into the next production attempted.

Next semester these two theatre groups are again going to attempt to entertain, enlighten, and advertise you. See that you gain full benefits by backing them to the hilt. The depression is coming.

D-Day Minus 4 Days

OPERATION YULE



PHASE 1—Trip to Toylands
" 2—Christmas Party
" 3—TV set (requiring 60,000 Phillip Morris wrappers)

Operation Yule will see its first phase accomplished this Saturday when 475 Villanovans will have themselves a field day which involves bringing a youngster from Saint John's Orphanage into town to see the wonders that are the gala toylands of the big department stores.

The second phase of Operation Yule will happen December 15th when the boys from St .John's will be guests at a Christmas party which will feature gifts, entertainment and eats. If you have not already given your donation to help make this party possible, don't delay another minute. Christmas only comes once a year.

The third phase of Operation Yule probably appears at first glance to be the most difficult if not impossible, but let's take another look. Already one-fourth of the necessary total has been attained without any particular promotional activity. With a little extra effort the rest of the cigarette wrappers can be collected. Go off campus to get the wrappers, if you must.

A successful Operation Yule means that Villanovans will have a special Christmas memory.

Two and a half weeks to Christmas! Just about nineteen days to home, and presents, and lights, and parties and all that goes with the holidays — and to the birthday of Christ. Sometimes we almost overlook that factor when we start to think about Christmas, but we should try not to. And it is just two days to a good opportunity to prepare well for a good Christmas. For how can we better get ready to celebrate Christ's birthday than to celebrate the most important feast of his mother. The Immaculate Conception.

Immaculate Conception

Immaculate Conception — it is almost self explanatory, but we have heard the term so often that its implications have become somewhat passive in our minds. When the Immaculate Conception is mentioned, do we appreciate just what it means? Oh, yes, it means that Mary was conceived free from original sin. But it also means that to preserve her in her sinlessness God performed one of the greatest miracles of all time. To raise the mother of His Son above all the rest of mankind, he excepted her from the punishment which had fallen upon every human being since the fall of Adam, and which has fallen upon every one since. It means that God must have been very concerned that Mary should be someone very much above the level of all the other humans in His creation. It means that God loved Mary in a very special way.

God's Love For Her

It becomes obvious that if God loved her so much as to make her the exception, we should certainly realize that he meant us to love her to an extraordinary degree as well. And, we should stop to try to appreciate this love on the Feast of her Immaculate Conception, of her separation by God from the ranks of sinning humanity.

Our Patroness

There is also another reason why we should stop a while on Thursday to think of our love for Mary. The Immaculate Conception is our patroness, the Queen of America, and Thursday is our feast day, with hers. So let's not go through Thursday as though it were just another holiday from school. Let's try to realize how lucky we are to have the greatest Saint in heaven for our protectress, let's try to love her with a little of that extra love that God had for her, and maybe she will smile upon us and give us her blessing for the coming Christmas season.

The Dean ha announced that there is a change in the Christmas vacation schedule The vacation begins after the last class on Friday or Saturday, December 16 or 17 and ends January 3rd. Classes will be resumed at 8:00 A. M., Wednesday, January 4. The extra day has been added because of New Year's Day falling on the Sunday necessitating celebration on the following Monday.

SEASON'S GREETINGS

By BILL BRENNINGHOUSE ,

Every December when the days are dark and the evenings dreary there comes a time when all men of goodwill are subjected to the biggest con-game of history, the annual Yuletide dollar grabbing. Christmas cards, Christmas trees, Christmas decorations, Christmas gifts all vie for their share of the consumers hard - earned dough. Banks aid and abet this fleecing by encouraging people to have money in "Christmas clubs" so they can get rid of as much as possible in one big splurge.

For weeks before the holiday all advertising is directed toward the buying of Christmas gifts. It seems that you are a chiseler and a cheapskate if you don't buy gifts for everyone fro mCousin Brombery to Great-aunt Bedella. It has been worked up into a vicious circle so that if you don't give you don't get. In other words you don't give, you exchange. In these few weeks retailers get rid of all the junk that has been cluttering up their shelves for months. It is not strange to see housewives in department stores loaded down with vases of doubtful utility, classical ashtrays, mahogany shoe-trees, and nylon mops. The recipients of these gifts will smile, say "Just what I've always wanted," and file them away in cellars and attics, unless that can be rewrapped and shipped off to Uncle Ezra in South Dakota.

Some foresighted commercialists of a bygone day have drummed up a personage who is an idol to children, an angel to department stores, and an ogre to paying parents. This character, Santa Claus by name, has been invested with many strange powers for the sake of the children and it's up to the parents to see that he carries out his monumental task of bringing everything desired to the little darlings.

Starting about July 4th the people begin selling Christmas cards. These opportunists strangle, shake, and shame you into buying gaudy missives to send to friends, friends being anyone you've ever known. To Joe Pronk who used to throw spitballs at you in the fourth grade you send a gay little lithograph picturing pink angels skiing off a firehouse roof. Inside the card is a quaint message stating, "Season's Greetings, friend so dear; Think of me with that next beer." Actually Joe Spronk means about as much to you as that little black dog, but you just have to send him a card. This postal hypocrisy serves only to give mailmen headaches and greeting card dealers your life savings.

Unfortunately, this seasonal swindle will go on forever. It indeed has fine roots. Giving is highly commendable. If the buying public would let its conscience guide its pocketbook it wouldn't have to fall victim to this Xmas extortion. Pardon the Twompian philosophy, but our good friend Oscar has often said, "I get better things to do wit' me dough than buy junk for people I don't hardly know. I think I'll buy me girl a locket or sumthin."

CAREERS... By P. F. JANNUZZO

It is doubtful if any other career places such a premium on varied interests as does advertising. The advertising copywriter consistently calls upon past experiences for the raw material of his copy. Advertising also requires intelligence coupled with curiosity and ambition. Of the many divisions of an advertising agency, the most opportunities would seem to be present in the copywriting department, the research department, or as a seller of space in publications and radio time.

Training

Advertising men, in general, recommend and support advertising courses, although some agency men prefer to train a man who has gained a wide range of knowledge, such as found in a college liberal arts course, rather than a man whose thinking has already been channeled along a certain line. The agencies that are willing to shoulder the responsibility of inexperienced college graduates usually hire them to work in the Mail room which serves as a proving ground. Such is the policy of Benton and Bowles advertising agency which also gives additional attention in orientation classes after hours and special work assignments to the beginner. Mail order houses, in particular Montgomery Ward, and Sears and Roebuck, offer infinite opportunities for experience to those seeking a career in advertising, and later they may be fitted into various branches of the firm as apprentices.

Copywriter

The primary functions of the copywriter are to plan and write an advertisement that will work for the best interests of the advertiser. The copywriter's most pressing requirements are that he have an ability to write, think originally, and a knowledge of people along with many and varied interests. The seasoned copywriter averages about $60 a week and begins at about $35 a week.

Account Executive

The account executive sells radio time, spot announcements or full programs, or advertising space in publications. It is the lot of the account man to service accounts and make all contacts between the agency and the advertiser. For a man to attain the position of account executive it is considered a prerequisite that he have from five to ten years experience as a salesman of one sort or another. It is generally necessary for the aspirant to have a fair knowledge of the working parts of radio or publishing, depending on which field he selects. The account executive for his efforts will receive from $6000 a year upward.

LETTERS...

Dear Editor,

Would it be possible for me to make a suggestion? I have classes in C & F and every time it rains, the grounds behind the building are a mass of mud. The congestion there is such that the walks provided are now inadequate requiring that one walk on the grass.

I should like to suggest that a new walk be installed there, thus rendering a great convenience to both faculty and students alike and also further beautifying the school by removal of the present eyesore.

Very truly,
Interested

Dear Editor,

I would like to compliment the College and all those connected with the Villanova Forum. The last lecture given by Father McCarthy was certainly well worth hearing. The opportunity given by the College to the students to attend such lectures at no cost should be more appreciated by them. Mr. Bruderle, too, should be congratulated for the effort he has expended in obtaining such fine speakers.

Sincerely yours,
MARTIN R. MULKEEN

ED. Note . . . With such fine work done it's a shame more students don't take advantage of the lectures by a bigger attendance.

It seems customary at this time of year to shed a thankful tear or two and gush a few philosophical words concerning that holiday when every body gets the bird. Being a strict conformer to the status quo myself I will endeavor to whip up a little gem of my own. Remember fellow turkey-chompers, even if you are up to your eyeballs in adversity on all other counts that was still FOOD (DOOF spelled backwards) you were eating at home and that's plenty to be thankful for. It might be well also to hang on to that eating habit cause you'll be using it again in a couple more weeks.

Stopped at Nick's

Now for some music before they try to shanghai us to the editorial page. While in New York I managed a brief stop at Nick's down in the Village to catch Bobby Hackett and his Dixieland outfit. As you probably know Bobby is an old timer who plays some mighty fine horn, — he did that great cornet solo in Glenn Miller's old waxing of "String of Pearls". All in all the show at Nick's was great, as what good Dixieland isn't. If the number of paying customers at Nick's was any indication, there is still plenty of life in the so-called corpse of Jazz music that so many progressives are trying to inter.

Wax, shellac and stuff — It would seem that the very versatile King Cole has done it again with his latest — called "Lush Life". Kind of a sophisticated "Nature Boy", weird but nice. He gets some fine effects using a large band instead of the trio.

Eckstine With Muscles

Also a bit off the beaten track is Herb Jeffries' latest, "A Man Wrote a Song". It's neat but not gauche. In case the name is new to you Herb sounds like Eckstine with muscles. He put in a good sized hitch with the Ellington outfit when the "Duke" was at his best, and has produced such notable waxings as "Flamingo", "Basin Street" and more recently "You're Too Tall and I'm Too Small" with Toni Harper, a juvenile songbird who must have been born with a past, considering the way she sings the blues. Herb is currently doing a stand at Bop City in New York and I wouldn't be surprised to see him turn up in Philly soon, maybe at the Click. Nuff said by me so here's "Drumstick" Taten.

Rosemont Beauties

The period of the next few weeks will bring an indication of mounting tension between our campus enterpreneurs and the "Arsenic and Old Lace" beauties from Rosemont. The more phlegmatic of these willowy wisps of wonderful womanhood are busily running about the austere halls of their hallowed institution (really a base of operations for them) waving epistles from Yale, Dartmouth, etc., announcing to one and all that they have been invited to dear old Silwash for the annual Christmas orgy. Meanwhile the operators here on campus are busily readying plans for the vacation and thus cast covetous eyes on the lassies from that school across the tracks. Ah well, perhaps one of us will get a good looking one some day.

Snow Job

Coincidental with the first welcome snowflakes we will be treated to all sort of Christmas music ranging from "White Christmas" to something called "Snowy Mule Train." Thus before getting snowed under with sentiment let us take a look at some of the more worthwhile records of the past few weeks.

In the dreamy field there seems to be an overabundance of music to romance with. June Christy who was at the Click last week did her usually wonderful job on "I'll Remember April", a ballad that still brings on that faraway look, while one of the most underrated of our contemporary mistresses of song, Rosemary Clooney is enjoying the plaudits of many for her soulful rendition of "Bargain Day", a song that has real heart to it. Vera Lynn scores again!! Her latest waxing of "Song of Surrender" should hit the top. This is one of the few truly beautiful ballads to come along in quite a while, it's the kind of song that should be long remembered.

In the field of bop we find George Shearing leading the field again. You Are Too Beautiful, while not one of George's best will receive a warm welcome from the public by reason of its bop flavor with that easily recognizable Shearing melody. For those of you who go for the real down to earth beat I recommend one of the ever wonderful Goodman recordings, "The World Is Waiting For The Sunrise". This one features the terrific piano of Mel Powell and was issued on Commodore under Powell's name, if you go for jazz you'll go for this.

Sense And Nonsense

By TOM PASHA

Well, men, you can get your cogooling opticals back into operation once again because from all outward signs and appearances it looks as though the fashions of the fairer-sex are reverting to their old — Look at my boney ankle and flailing fibula styles.

Yes, female fashion designers are cutting down on the use of materials. Instead of conserving material at the top of me lady's gown, they're severing the bottom tier and restoring the on-the-shoulder effect. Oh, well, it couldn't last forever.

Simplicity

Designers are taking new steps in rebuilding you girl Friday's beauty by introducing a new shark-skin fabric. This shark-skin affair denotes a trend towards simplicity which will enable a girl to select a creation without much floundering around. The price isn't outrageously high either, these models will sell to the tune of about ten fish, which, you will have to admit, is a whale of a bargain.

Spicy

Another innovation in attire for the Everything Spicey and Nice set is the more extensive use of reptile skins in the styling of such essential accessories as bunion imatators for mam' selles petite feet and modified saddle bags which harbor her miscellaneous debris.

This group features a tortoise shell handbag which is guaranteed to improve the appearance of a turtle-neck sweater. The girl who carries this particular type handbag will be so popular that the fellows probably won't be able to get adder.

Eight In One

Many of these skins do have a practical side which must be taken into consideration. Since all women like to be thrifty with their own money, the new chameleon pump has been brought to the market. Instead of purchasing four pairs of shoes of varying colors, the sweet young thing of today buys chameleon skin which changes into eight beautiful pastel shades thus affording her eight pairs of shoes for the price of one.

Draw Backs

Of course, the introduction of amphibian and reptilian epidermis in wearing apparel has its various drawbacks. Imagine buying your best gal a seal-skin coat. She'd probably bellow everytime you touched her. One young feminine admirer of seal-skin started balancing a water ball on her nose while playing "My Country 'Tis Of Thee" on the musical horns. It wouldn't have been so bad but they couldn't keep her supplied with ice and sardines.

And who can forget the girl who received a cobra-skin hand-bag from her boyfriend on her birthday and six weeks later ran away with a window viper.

So long for now see you 'round this time next week.

Around The Town

By F. A. VARALLO

Television and Tuesday night have one thing in common—Milton Berle. If you're one of the thousands of fans who enjoy the weekly Berle show, you won't want to miss "Always Leave Them Laughing" at the Mastbaum. As on television, Berle is the whole show, although we can't overlook the efforts of a good supporting cast—Virginia Mayo, Ruth Roman, and Bert Lahr. Their brief appearances—Miss Mayo in a dance routine, Bert Lahr giving a sample of his inimitable, comical style, and Miss Roman's singing, dancing, and specialty acts — are something of a relief in a show so dominated by one man, regardless of how funny he may be.

The story can be told in a few lines. Berle plays a small-time comic who appears at weddings and banquets trying to work his way to the top. After ten years of struggling, he realizes his ambition. The script has him stealing material like mad, and patting himself on the back so much that he hasn't time to develop an individual style.

As to Berle's antics, we must admit that he leaves little undone. In fact, everything you could think of and even some things you couldn't are at least attempted. Aside from the innumerable jokes, he dances, sings, does a black-face take-off on Al Jolson, disguises himself as a Chinese juggler, wears a detachable mustache, comes out in a snow costume, and even imitates Carmen Miranda.

There is no doubt that Milton Berle's television fans will find him just as funny in "Always Leave Them Laughing" as they do on their video screens.

"Fighting Man Of The Plains"

Horse-opera in glowing Cinecolor, is the current offering of the Stanton. Randolph Scott, who has appeared in numerous westerns, turns in another competent performance. His role this time is that of a hunted outlaw who later becomes the marshal and the town hero.

The plot is rather complicated. In the opening scenes, Scott is a member of an outlaw band called Quantrell's guerillas. For revenge he kills a man who has murdered his brother. It turns out later he shot, not the murderer, but the brother of the man he intended to kill.

One of the film's best scenes shows a Chicago detective, who has captured Scott, taking him back to Kansas handcuffed. Riding side by side on a ferry, Scott gets a chance to escape when the ferry is wrecked during a storm. The detective is kicked in the face by his horse and Scott swims for hours handcuffed to his dead captor. He reaches land and passes himself off as the detective and the dead man as the killer. From then on he "goes straight" and even becomes marshal of Lanyard, Kansas, the home town of the man he meant to murder. In fact, it turns out that this man is the town's boss. The climax comes when the villain hires another detective to identify the marshal and delegates a thug to see to it that Scott is hanged. At the last minute, Scott's old pal Jesse James saves him and provides the film with a happy ending.

Scheduled this week are four shows:—"The Rat Race", at the Forrest on December 7th. "Summer and Smoke", at the Locust on December 5th, "Brigadoon", at the Schubert on December 5th. And "Show of 1001 Wonders", featuring Blackstone the Magician, at the Walnut on December 5th.

It won't be long now . . . only seven more class days until Villanova takes over the postal department, which reminds us of the saying, "Many are called and all are chosen" . . . this is the time of the year when all regular postal employees don green visors, wear dark vests stuffed with eight or ten vari-colord pencils, assume an efficious air (they look more like apprentice bookies), while they lurk in dark, remote corners seeking names and numbers of wayward Christmas tempe . . . The moral of this story is DON'T . . .

Thanks for past cooperation and an appeal for the continuation of harmonious student - administration relations were given to the student body by three members of the faculty last Tuesday. The occasion was the first convocation of the present school year, held in the Field House at 2 o'clock during a suspension of classes.

The College Chaplain, Rev. E. T. Grimes, O.S.A., began the program by urging the students to support "Operation Yule" for the benefit of the children at St. John's Orphanage. This "Operation Yule", he explained, is an activity of the Junior Class in which all students are invited to participate. It includes a Christmas party for which funds are now being solicited, donation of the television set offered in the Philip Morris contest, and setting aside a day on which college students are to take the children of the orphanage to town to see Santa Claus.

Literature distributed at the convocation described "Operation Yule" this year as a repetition, on a larger scale, of the program sponsored by the Junior Class last year for the same group of orphans. Application blanks were distributed to be filled out by those students interested in participating in this activity.

Dean Speaks

Rev. Edward Dwyer, O.S.A., Dean of Men, spoke next in praise of the cooperation evident in the actions of the students in fulfilling school regulations and in attaining good grades at the quarter. He warned, though, that the shortness of the remaining half of the semester makes necessary the acceleration of all the courses, and advised the students to accelerate their study habits accordingly. Fr. Dwyer further stressed the advantages that college study has to offer and admonished the students to prepare now for what he termed, ". . . the world in which you live, and in which you expect to live".

Student Activities

Following the talk by Fr. Dwyer, the Director of Student Activities, Rev. George McLaughlin, O.S.A., took the microphone and is his speech stressed the value of extra-curricular activities in student life. Fr. McLaughlin pointed out that although college life is primarily one of study, the well-rounded student does not miss the opportunities of dealing with people and developing leadership affored by the forty social, academic, and athletic groups functioning on the campus.

The convocation was then closed with the singing of the Alma Mater.

NFCCS Groups Meet On Campus

Over one hundred Catholic college students from the Philadelphia area as well as several from out-of-town attended a workshop on Catholic action held on the Villanova campus last week-end. This workshop, on the theme of "Catholic Action as applied to college life", was sponsored by the National Federation of Catholic College Students, Philadelphia area.

The two-day program of the workshop was under the joint chairmanship of Rita Wilson, of Rosemont, and Robert O'Flynn, of Villanova. Its purpose was described by the chairmen as, ". . . a discussion of the role that the Catholic college student must play in the lay apostolate", with an effort to introduce Catholic Action as an additional function of the NFCCS work in the other colleges in this region.

The program of the workshop was divided into three sections, each presenting a general conference, a group discussion based on that conference, and an open forum in conclusion.

Rev. William Rooney, Ph.D., an experienced worker in the field of Catholic Action from the Catholic University of America, Washington, D. C., opened the first section with a talk on "The Need for Christian Leaders". This, as all the conferences of the program, was held in the C&F Auditorium, following the Mass in the college chapel at nine o'clock, which served as the opening ceremony of the workshop. After the group discussion and forum which concluded this first section, a recess and lunch in the college cafeteria were held.

The second section of the workshop, held Saturday afternoon, featured a speech on "The Development of Christian Leaders" by Fred Crosson, a graduate student from the Catholic University. The activity of the first day was ended with benediction.

Sunday morning, the program began at 10:30 again with a "Tow. Meeting of the Air" type discussion on "The Model of Christian Leadership, Jesus Christ", by ten representatives of the participating colleges. Another discussion and forum of the topic "Making the Apostolate Work", concluded the last section of the workshop Sunday afternoon.

When right, you can afford to keep your temper, when wrong, you can't afford to lose it.

JUNIORS PICK CLASS RINGS; WILL BE DELIVERED FEB. 1

Members of the Junior Class had their first opportunity to order class rings last week. The local representative of the Josten Company was given use of the VILLANOVAN office on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday for this purpose.

The ring contract had been given to the Josten Company early this semester on the strength of their promise to change the engraving of the head of the wildcat which appears on one side of the shank of the ring. Previously, the 'cat which was engraved on the Class of '50 ring was unacceptable to the Class of '51; but, after the submission of several drawings, one design was chosen by the ring committee, and the die was made. It was agreed, by all who saw the sample ring last week, that the profile view of the wildcat is a vast improvement.

Various Styles

Mr. John Giguere, the representative of the manufacturer, was kept very busy answering questions, quoting prices and checking ring sizes during his three-day visit here. The Juniors had a large variety of styles of metal finishes and stones from which to choose. The finishes ranged from a light Roman gold to a dark antique green and the choice of stones included synthetic sapphires and rubies, amethysts and black onyx.

A deposit of five dollars was requested with the balance to be paid upon delivery of the ring. The rings will be delivered approximately two months after the date on which the order was placed.

Blue Cross Representative To Be On Campus

Final arrangements have been made to have a representative of the Blue Cross Plan on campus. This will afford married students and others interested in hosp.talization insurance to have their questions concerning benefits answered and to sign up for their plan. The representative will be available for consultation on Tuesday, December 13th.

Despite the fact that the response to the announcement concerning the Blue Cross-Blue Shield offer made in the November 8th issue of the VILLANOVAN was not as large as was expected, there was a sufficient number of questionnaires turned in to warrant a special visit by a Blue Cross representative.

As yet the hour and place of the meeting has not been announced. Notices will be placed on all bulletin boards when this information is available.

This is a special limited offer on the part of the Blue Cross, and all interested students are advised to sign up on Tuesday as the deadline for acceptance is December 15th. In the past it has been the policy of the Blue Cross to exclude students and professional men from participation in its hospital plan. Opportunity is now afforded to all students, married and single, and to faculty members as well to obtain protection from large hospital bills in case of injury or sickness.

Watch the bulletin boards for further announcements.

Donations May Be Mailed

Donations may be mailed to "Orphan Party Fund", Villanova College, Villanova, Pa. (Make checks payable to "Orphan Party Fund")

A small amount of money is to be left in the "Orphan Party Fund" so that the Juniors of next year might have something with which to start their Orphan Christmas Party. It is never too late to make a donation.

Many men who took orphans out last year recommend that care and good judgment be used in how money is spent on the boys. Their good time is in getting out and having you as a companion. Since the boys will be excited, food especially candy, ice cream, and popcorn, rests uneasy with them. Don't get them sick. When buying presents, remember other Villanova students might be hard pressed for money and, while your boy gets a whopping big present, the other fellows charge may only get a Woolworth toy or less. When the boys get back to the orphanage, they will compare gifts. Your trying to out-do your neighbor may break a little heart. Spend money caretully. The Sisters have recommended a maximum of $1.00 for presents.

Many Day-hops in the vicinity may be interested to know that they can have an orphan boy home for a Sunday dinner or even for a few days during Christmas. Won't you share the warmth of a Christmas Eve at home with some young lad who doesn't really know what "mom" or "home" means? Why don't you ask at home and see if it is possible? For arrangements the Sisters may be contacted at the orphanage — Phone — BAring 2-1210.

International Relations Clubs From Local Colleges Meet At Rosemont

On Friday evening, December 2nd., a regional meeting of the International Relations Clubs of Villanova, La Salle, St. Joseph's, and Rosemont held a regional meeting under the auspices of the Rosemont College group.

Edward J. McCarthy, O.S.A., Dean of the Arts and Science School, at Villanova, lectured on "The Factors Affecting Inter-American Affairs", with the emphasis placed on trade relations agreements and diferences between the United States and the various countries of South America. Father McCarthy presented an accurate and factual account concerning the trade relations problems with observations culled from the two years which he recently spent traveling in Cuba and South America.

At the conclusion of the meeting, the representatives from the different colleges reported on their past activities and those planned, and how they were attempting to further international cooperation between college students in the United States and those abroad.

The formal meeting was concluded at that point and the remainder of the evening was devoted to dancing and refreshments.

BUSSOLARI MEETING

ARNOLD DOWNED BY 74-49 COUNT; TOP N.Y.A.C., 83-53

By Jim Gallo

The first week of the 1949-50 basketball season was a good one for the Villanova Wildcats as Coach Al Severanc's highly-rated quintet lived up to all pre-season expectations by rolling over their initial opponents by scores of 74-49 and 83-53.

Arnold College provided the competition in the curtain raiser of the current campaign. Although the Mainliners jumped off to an early lead, which they never relinquished, the Terriers from Connecticut provided a few uneasy moments for local fans. Led by Ed Brown, who contributed 18 points to a losing cause, the Arnold basketeers could not be considered out of the ball game until the closing minutes of the third period. Trailing by 18 points at halftime, they cut the Villanova lead to 6 points at one point in the third period. It was then that Paul Arizin and his mates began to hit the cords with the accuracy that carried them to the NCAA playoffs last season.

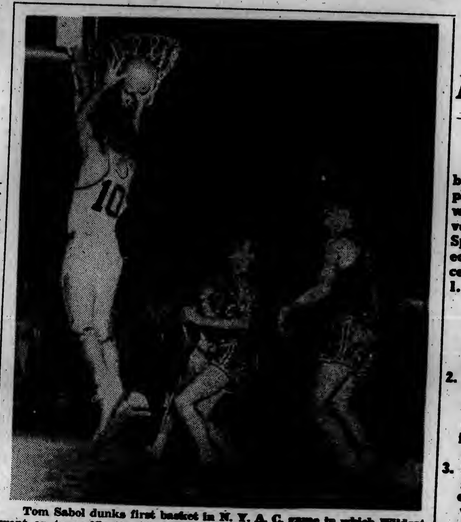
"Tall Paul" accounted for 24 points on 6 field goals and 12 tosses from the foul line. Leo Wolf found the range on 5 field goal attempts and two foul shots for a total of 12 points. Joe Hannon broke through the Arnold defense to score 9 points just before he left the game prior to the close of the first half. Ben Stewart, a spark-plug of last year's freshman team, turned in a fine performance in his first varsity assignment.

On Saturday night the New York Athletic Club invaded the Villanova Field House with a collection of former college stars, among them Charlie Bollinger of Holy Cross, Jerry Smith of Fordham, Vince Leddy of Georgetown, and Bob Plunkett of Colgate. However, Villanova's undergrads handed the ex-collegians an impressive 83-53 defeat.

Once again it was Paul Arizin who led the 'Cats to victory. Besides tossing in 21 points, Villanova's "Mr. Basketball" dominated the rebound play and time after time frustrated the New Yorkers' scoring attempts by thrusting out his long arms to interrupt the intended arc of the ball. Tom Sabol racked up the first 5 points of the game then went in to score 9 more as he broke into the two-figure scoring column for the first time this season.

Al the Villanova regulars showed too much offensive punch and defensive skill for the New Yorkers! When they retired from the game in the third period the scoreboard showed a 68-37 Wildcat advantage. John Weglicki led the fourth quarter scoring parade with 12 points, sinking five out of six field goal attempts.



Plunkett and Johnson led the loser's scoring with 9 and 8 points respectfully. Vince Leddy's floor work was brilliant, but the entire effort of the ex-collegians wasn't nearly enough to halt the fast moving, sharpshooting Wildcats.

KITTENS TO LOSE SEVEN MEN; TWO COACHES IN '50

The coaching staff shudders when they remember that Bob Fitzmeler will not answer the call for the 1950 season. Fitz considered one of the finest linemen in 150 lb. ball attained his ambition by leading his team to the first 150 title in Villanova's history. A great player, a great guy, he will be missed but never forgotten.

Harry Roehling, a four year veteran considered by the coaches as the hardest working member of the squad graduates in June. Who can ever forget Harry's defensive play especially in the Princeton game where he stopped the Tiger offensive cold.

Jim O'Brien, an unheralded guard, but an offensive demon ended his collegiate career. This quiet, hard-working senior was one of the prime factors in the championship quest.

John Kelly a fine end was cited by the coaches as the most improved player on the squad. Kelly's fine wing play will be missed next fall.

Jim "Red" McCoughan was the bulwark of the defensive unit. A converted end, Red played a sensational at tackle. Red leaves Villanova with a proud football record.

John Cosniski, ligeable and hard-work tackle was hampered by late labs but constant hustle kept him in the lineup. John is another fellow who will be missed in 1950.

Larry Doyle, another 4 year veteran, played a fine game at tackle. Injuries hampered Larry for most of the season but he came around for the championship tilt and played a great game. With the 6 other seniors, Larry concluded his football in a blaze of glory, helping to beat the Red and Blue of Penn for the trophy.

Also receiving the sheepskin in June are coaches "Bud" Kane and Tony Russo. Head coach Kane did an unbelieveable job in fielding such a great team. Bud, who played 3 years of fine end for the Wildcats beyond any doubt proved he has what it takes to become a fine coach. Coach Tony Russo developed a forward wall which held its own with any team in the league. Tony's constant drive and spirit was instilled into the Kittens line which was an instrumental fac-

FROSH OPEN SEASON WITH WINS OVER ARNOLD, LEGEUNE

Villanova's freshman team made a impressive debut last week as they crushed Arnold College frosh 85-30 and Camp Legeune Marines 71-44.

Coach Major McDonnell's charges found little trouble with Arnold as they pulled out to a 41-15 margin at halftime. With a display of dead eye shooting and smooth ball handling the Freshmen thrilled the crowd. The club looked terrific as Nick Maguire, and Jim Redmond poured in 15 and 10 points respectively. Steve Gepp controlled the boards and is a real fighter. Larry Hennessey lanky forward displayed some fine set shots. Larry was valuable under the boards also. Major McDonnell gave the entire squad a crack at Arnold as Art Simonian led Arnold's attack with four field goals.

Saturday night the Frosh played Camp Lejune Marines. The first quarter saw a tight ball game, with the blue and white holding a 15-14 lead. In the second quarter the Wildcats opened up as Nick Maguire ran wild with his favorite shot, a drive in lay up shot, which netted him 17 points in the first half. Once again the freshmen displayed fine coaching and ball handling. Sam Glassmiere, a West Catholic Alumnue, accurate passing and hustle dumpted six points but his floor game was sensational. Larry Hennessey's deadly sets acounted for 13 points, George Stanko also hit for 8 points with beautiful set shots. The backboards were controlled by the Wildcats with some fine teamwork by Dan Gallagher and Steve Gepp, Nick Maguire was high scorer for the night with 21 points.

Once again Major McDonnell, freshman mentor has turned out a fine quintet. The five has a sweet team to watch thier fast game and fine outside game bring the fans to their feet. The Frosh showed great defensive skill in their 2 games. Camp Lejune's tricky corner weave was helpless as the Wildcats kept the Marines far from the basket. The schedule provides for many thrillers and great things are looked for from this flashy outfit. On Dec. 9, the frosh play Saint Peter's yearlings.

St. Francis Strong; St. Peter's Here Friday Night

By Neal Fahy

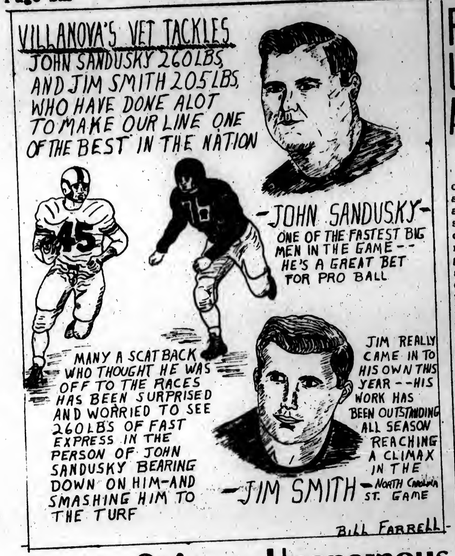
The scrappy St. Francis College Terriers, who drove to the finals of the National Catholic Invitation tourney at Denver last spring, will provide the opposition for Villanova's basketball five tomorrow night when the Wildcats make their debut as host in the Palestra. A crowd of over 8000 is expected to watch the 'Cats try for their third straight in the second game of a twin bill featuring the University of Pennsylvania vs. Swarthmore in the prelim.

On Friday evening, St. Peter's College of Jersey City will send their quintet into action against Villanova in a game at the local field house. The fast-breaking, hard passing offensive of Coach Pete Caruso's charges may give the Wildcats a lot of trouble as the Peacocks had an 18 and 5 record last season.

Terriers Are Threat

A hot time may be in store for the Villanova basketeers tomorrow evening when St. Francis tries to avenge last year's 64-48 loss to the locals. Coach Danny Lynch of the Terriers has many words of praise for his players and especially for a young fellow named Ray Rudzinski.

Aggressively battling his way into the first five, Rudzinski, one of the stars up from the freshman team, has been an inspiration for the rest of the team to burst forth with hidden talent.



"Rudzinski," Lynch said, "has been a pleasant surprise. He's a tough kid, just about six feet, who looks and acts like a fullback under the boards. He's a certain starter along with Capt.. Tom O'Connor and Roy Reardon."

O'Connor, a senior, was the second highest scorer from last year's team which compiled a 21-12 mark. Reardon, voted the most promising player in the N. C. I. T. has the poise and steadiness required to hold the team together. He rarely loses his head or gets rattled. Junior Dick Joyce and Jim Luisi, 6-3 and 6-2 respectively, and sophomore Vim Karwoski, 6-6, have the inside track for the remaining two open berths.

Peacocks' Prospects

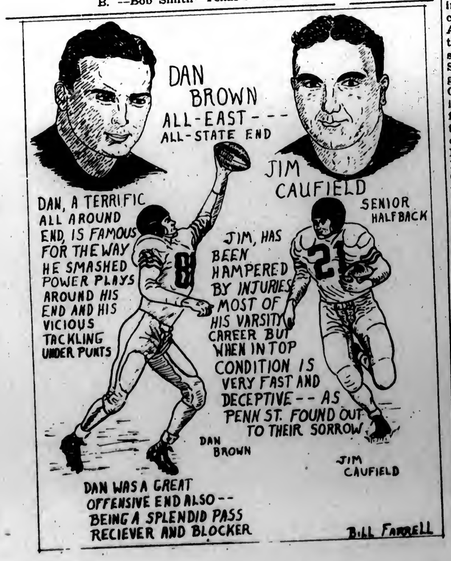
Among St. Peter's loyal rooters, erpectations for another good season are running high Last year the team won eighteen games while losing only five, and the three big guns of the attack, Wally Shiel and Denny Barry, Seniors and Tom Smith, a Junior, are still in the line-up Much is expected, too, of the other Senior veterans: the cagey Jim Bradley and Bill McLaughlin, who did plenty of scoring last year, especially towards the end of the season.

The fine Villanova Freshman squad will play St. Peter's Freshmen in a game preceeding the main fray.

Annex, Spinney Unanamous All-Opponent Choices

Jim Gallo

Except for the annual bowl game which are yet to be played, the 1949 football season has become a memory. For Villanovans it should be a pleasant memory because the Wildcats have enjoyed their most successful season in many a year. But when recalling the events of the past season we cannot overlook the performances of the men who provided the opposition and, week after week, attempted to halt the rampaging Leonardmen. By conducting a poll among the players, we were able to compile an All-Opponent Team that would provide plenty of competition for any collegiate eleven. Boston College and Penn State shared the honor of being best represented, each team supplying the players. Texas A. and M. followed along with two representatives, and Tulsa, Georgetown and North Carolina State each placed a man on our all-star eleven.



Two of the men received votes on all of the ballots returned to us. They were Art Spinney, Boston College's grat end and captain, and Pete Annex, the speedy little quarterback who led Tulsa to an upset victory over the Wildcats.

Another interesting sidelight is that the entire right s'de of the line consists of the Penn State delegation—Joe Drazenovich, Don Murray, and the Nittany captain, Bob Hicks.

In choosing the backfield, no consideration was given to the actual positions of the men selected. Instead, the four backs who received the most votes were awarded the backfield slots. As a result, two quarterbacks, one halfback, and one fullback were chosen.

Here is the All-Opponent Team as it would line up:

L. E.—Art Spinney—Boston College
L. T.—Elmer Costa—North Carolina State
L. G.—Dom Papaleo—Boston College
C. —Jim Flowers—Texas A. and M.
R. G.—Joe Drazenovich—Penn State
R. T.—Don Murray—Penn State
R. E.—Bob Hicks—Penn State
B. —Pete Annex—Tulsa
B. —Ed Songin—Boston College
B. —Billy Conn—Georgetown
B. —Bob Smith—Texas A. and M.

FEDIGAN TAKES TWO; UPSETS BKS. 1 & 4; AUSTIN WINS 67-49

By Mondschein, Inc.

Fedigan pulled the biggest upset of the early intramural basketball season in last Tuesday's nightcap as they edged the strong Brks. 1 & 4 squad 58 to 56 in a bitterly fought contest. A late rally by the Barracks just fell short as Fr. Gallagher's team suffered its first league setback. The great team play of the entire Fedigan squad earned for them a very deserved victory. No Fedigan player could be pointed out as the standout of the game since al assisted greatly in the upset. Dave Frink le dthe victor's attack with 17 markers. On his heels was Joe Galyo whose one hand push shots which netted him 13 points saved the day for Fedigan. Colletta with 11 and Joe Crossin with 9 also aided in the attack. Tom boys Flynn with 18 and F. wski with 15 were the big cogs in the losers attack. Don Smith had 13 points most of them in that last quarter upsurge. The referees were G. Mondschein and Fred Heigl.

Dooms Win

In the first contest of the evening Fr. Dunne's Do mfive triumphed over an undermaned Good Council team 45 to 31. Good Council was greatly handicapped because they were able to muster only five men to represent their hall in the contest. Thus the Doms with many able substitutes tired out the Good Council squad and rolled on to an easy victory. Leading the attack for the victors were Natielo and Knecht with 10 points each and Mueller with 9. For the losers, McCarthy garnered 8, while O'Donnell, Brick and Steinhoffer each tallied 7 points. The score at halftime read 25-15 with Good Council on the short end of the count. Officials for the game were G. Mondschein and Charlie Daley.

In Thursday evening's games, the preliminary saw Fedigan triumph for the 2nd time in 3 days as they dumped Tuesday's rivals, Brks. 2&3, 68-49. The finale brought about another defeat for a game but still outmanned Good Counsel Five 67-49.

Fedigan started off fast and took command of the game early but mainly through Brks . 2&3's ace, Ruggiero, the game seized to be a run-a-way The game turned out to be a personal duel between Ruggiero, who netted 25 points while Dave Frink garnered 24. Coletta with 13 and Galyo with 10 points aided Coach Perry DelPurgatolo varsity basketball star, Fedigan five in their victory. Wills with 10 and Roach with 4 markers were the main scorers for Captain Phil Brennan's squad. John Farey and T. Grady tooted the whistles.

Scanlon Gets 20

With lack of any reserves a fighting Good Counsel team had to succumb to a strong and aggressive Austin quintet after trailing at halftime by a 31-18 score. The winner scoring was distributed among Scanlon with 20, Lemmer 11, Rosegen 10, and Daleywith 8. Most of George Scanlon's points were made in the 2nd half although he had four personal fouls on him before the 1st half ended. Good Counsel cam up with high scorers led by Karabinus with 15, O'Donnell and Markham with 13 each, and McCarthy and Braca 4 each, completed the osers scoring. Another varsity basketball star, "Cannon" Hannon coached Austin's combine to their 67-49 triumph, thus keeping them in the runnerup spot to the undefeated Alumni quintet. Referee'ng the game were Tony Russo and John Farley.

Dayhop League

The Day Hop League was started Wednesday afternoon when Creamer's Warriors humiliated McSherin's Five to the tune of 78-47. Pacing the winners was Shane Creamer netting 29 points, Panzer with 15 and Nicolo contributing 16. McGehrin with 15 and Timlin with 10 were high scorers for the losers.

tor in their great season. Tony has also proven he has the ability to turnout fine football players.

Good luck to the seniors, Bud Kane and Tony Russo in whatever they may do.

From The Sidelines . . .

By Harry Range, Sports Editor

With the basketball season now well under way it seems almost anticlimactic to comment any further on he football season bu there are a number of things that have to be said for one of Villanova's greatest teams.

In his first year on the Main Line Coach Jim Leonard turned out a team that was certainly as good as the '37-'38 clubs and, considering the opposition and the type of ball now played, it was probably better.

Any talk now about a bowl bid would be considered strictly sour grapes but we all know that Villanova deserved something big on its record alone and it's really a crying shame that a club as good as the Wildcats did not receive what they were due. We'd like to take this opportunity to salute the finest team in Villanova grid history which certainly merited much more than they received.

In the statistics department Villanova was among the only three clubs in the country to average over 400 yards per game. The Wildcats netted 432.9 yards in 9 games being edged by Notre Dame for first place honors by 1.9 yards. The Irish gained 434.8 yards in 10 games. Oklahoma, who plays L. S. U. in the Sugar Bowl, was in third place for national rating netting 409.3 yards in ten games.

In addition to being the only three clubs in the nation gaining more than 400 yards per game Villanova (6.24), Notre Dame (6.08) and Oklahoma (6.05) are the only teams which have gained at the rate of 6 yards per play this year.

A little food for thought . . . Villanova 35—Texas A. & M. 0 Texas A. & M. 27—Southern Methodist 27 . . . Notre Dame 27—Southern Methodist 20 . . .

A few highlights on individual honors . . . Ralph Pasquariello, Steve Romanik, John Sandusky, and Dan Brown to play in North-South game . . . Brown, COLLIERS All-East end with honorable mention for All-American . . . Pasquariello, honorable mention for COLLIERS All-East fullback . . . Sandusky, New York Sun All-American tackle . . . Brown and Pasquariello, Catholic All-American . . . Brown and Pasquariello, All-Pennsylvania . . . Romanik, honorable mention for All-Pennsylvania.

As we close the pages on the 1949 football season we would like to say goodby to the seniors and thang them for a great job . . . Ends Dan Brown and John Gattuso, Tackles John Sandusky, Jim Smith, Pete Limanni, and Vince O'Sullivan, Guards Ed Lanigan and George Pavalko, Center John Witach, Quarterback Steve Romanik, Halfbacks Phil Snyder, Joe Rogers, Al Schmid, and Jim Caufield, and Fullbacks Tom Clavin and Ralph Pasquariello.

With two easy victories under their belts, Al Severance's hoopsters are starting to fullfil their pre-season predictions which rank them as the tops in the East and among the leaders in the country. BASKETBALL 1950 places Villanova seventh nationally close behind San Francisco, Bradley and Wyoming, while Stan Lomax, in SPORT, picks Paul Arizin as pre-season All-American and Villanova as one of the leading clubs in the nation.

For the uninformed, look at last year's record shows that of Villanova's 27 opponents, excluding the N. Y. A. C., 21 of them had records over .500, 12 were .667 or better, 8 hit the .750 mark or over, and 2 were better than .800. The Wildcats average for the 1948-49 season was .852 with a record of 27-4. Records for some of Villanova's opponents include Loyola 25-8, Tulane 24-4, Bradley 27-8, Kentucky 32-2, Louisville 24-10, Hawaii 20-6, North Carolina State 25-8, St. Bonaventure 18-8, and Duquesne 17-5.

In the last race of the cross country season Browning Ross scored the second best time in the history of the Camde nYMCA handicap street run to win the 4 7/10 mile event in 22:37. Two weeks ago Ross was second to Dick Shields of Army in the ICA4 Cross Country meet in Van Cordtland Park in New York.

Going out on a limb again we predict a big announcement to be made at the football banquet tonight at the Bellvue-Stratford.

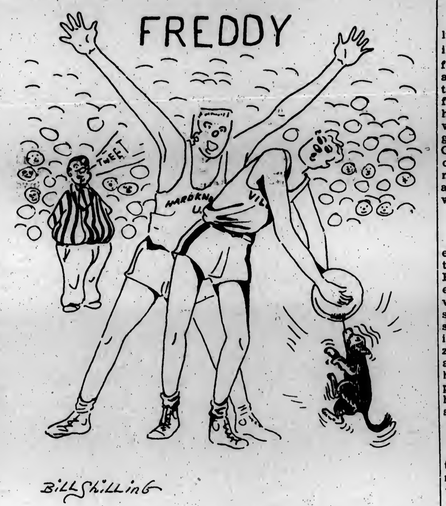
Veterans' Note—Bonus News

Pennsylvania veterans were reminded this week of some very important things to rermember in connection with the Pennsylvania State Bonus. If they are not followed carefully, confusion and late payment to the veteran may result.

One was, when applications become available, original discharge papers may be sent to Harrisburg, together with the application, to gain the bonus benefits. Therefore, all applicants, if they have not already done so, should have their discharges recorded with the county clerk. This is to insure a record being on file from which a duplicate discharge may be issued in the event of loss of the orignial during processing.



In Philadelphia, veterans may take their discharge papers to the Recorder of Deeds Office, Room 154, City Hall, to have them recorded. There is no charge for this service.

History of the Campus Paper, "The Villanovan"

By DON BEST

The earliest authoritative mention of the Villanovan is in "A Historical Sketch of Villanova", by the Rev. Thomas C. Middleton, D.D., O.S.A., written on the occasion of the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of Villanova. "The Villanova Monthly", Villanova's first periodical, was first published in January 1893. It was a "literary magazine of about 35 pages embracing essays, poetry, editorials, and even mathematical twisters".

First Editor

The spirit of its first editor, William J. Parker, and his staff is illustrated by the following sentence from the introductory editorial: "We are in earnest, and heartily trust that when another 50 years freighted with pleasures and cares, has decked Alma Mater's brow with the Centennial crown of glory, won in the holy cause of Christian education, they will find our college journal still existing, not in its present state, but steadily advancing, with an established and well-merited reputation."

Publication Ceased

In 1897, with Henry T. Nelson as editor, the "Monthly" was changed to a smaller, more modern s.ze. For some unknown reason, however, publication ceased abruptly with the July 1897 edition. This seems strange when one reads the statement concerning the "Monthly" in the 1924 Belle Air: "This magazine was purely literary in character and was accredited a very high standard among the college publications of its day" Perhaps it had become hard to keep up to the standard it had itself set.

"Villanovan Quarterly"

For several years periodic attempts were made to restore the magazine but all were unsuccessful until the fall term of 1916, when the "Villanovan Quarterly" went to press. It seems that the Rev. Joseph A. Hickey, O.S.A., its moderator, was the guiding force behind the publication. "The Villanovan was made possible only through the untiring and insistent efforts of its founder and patron, the Rev. Dr. Hickey, O.S.A.," So states the Belle Air.

According to the Belle Air, the academic year 1923-24 was a banner one for the magazine which was now a monthly with T. Robert Sullivan as editor. James J. Daly, the business manager, is singled out for special commendation, since he was the first to put the magazine on a paying basis.

Further Expansion

The year 1924-25 witnessed further expansion and a great increase of student interest in the publication. The "Villanovan" won a great deal of prestige for its part in the establishment of the Undergraduate Council.

In the Fall of 1927, the Villanovan was again reorganized. Many of the staff were in favor of publishing a weekly newspaper rather than a magazine, but this idea was abandoned because of the limited capital. Finally, it was decided to publish a Quarterly, each issue dealing with an entirely different type of content matter. However, the disastrous fire which destroyed the main college building changed the plans and the best that could be done was to publish a grand issue at the end of the year.

Two transfer students happened to meet in the lobby of a downtown hotel. The began speaking, naturally of women.

The first student said that he did not date much because he was secretly pinned to a girl who was attending another school. The second transfer said that he, too, was secretly pinned a girl attending another school.

They began to sympathize with each other. Comparing notes further, a smile came over their faces when they learned that their girls both had the same first name.

But this smiled turned upside down when they discovered that both girls had the middle and last name, too!—Ohio State Lantern.

TURF AND TINSEL AWARDS KEYS TO SENIOR MEMBERS

Club keys and nominations were the principle items of importance on the agenda of a recent meeting of the Turf and Tinsel Club, according to Edgar LeBlanc who presided over the meeting.

After much discussion the members came to several important decisions concerning the keys. One of the controversial points was concerned with the shape of the ornament. The conventional type was adopted in preference to a rounded version. In addition, they also settled on a design which is to incorporate. It will be executed in two colors, with the official Turf and Tinsel seal superimposed on the gold background. A committee was appointed to contract an acceptable agreement with a jeweler in regard to the production of the keys.

Candidates for Club officers to serve next year were also nominated at the meeting, and provisions were made for an election to be held in the near future.

At the conclusion of the meeting refreshments were served and entertainment provided in the form of group singing of many hits from past Turf and Tinsel presentations. A surprise premiere of several new songs written by Bob Whelan also added to the enjoyment and provided a climax to the evening for those who were in attendence.

Prof. Donn On Evaluation Group

Professor Leo A. Donn visited Episcopal Academy on November 15, 16 and 17 as a member of an evaluation committee selected by the Middle States Association of Secondary Schools and Colleges. The Committee was honored by the trustees and faculty of Episcopal at a dinner on the night before the evaluation. Professor Donn was the chairman of the Curriculum, Instruction, and Outcomes committee. The evaluation was under the direction of Dr. Harold McElroy, principal of McKeesport High School.

Overheard in the cafeteria:

"Cherry pie, please." (we heard him say it).

The waiter brought him pineapple pie.

"I asked for cherry."

"I'm sorry," the waiter said, "but we don't have any kind but apple."

ATOMIC ENERGY, an exhibition prepared by the editors of LIFE Magazine will be on view at the College Library for two weeks, beginning Dec. 6th and continuing through Dec. 17th it was announced this week.

ATOMIC ENERGY was prepared in consultation with the United States Atomic Energy Commission which has urged nation-wide education on the subject.

The thesis of the exhibition is that science is truly international; and that atomic energy is not an exclusively scientific matter but will inevitably involve 'social and political questions. More concerned with the practical use of atomic energy to date than with nuclear physics, the numerous photographs emphasize the importance of the layman's understanding the social and political aspects of this great new source of energy.

ATOMIC ENERGY opens with the seven scientists whose peacetime research led to wartime development. Then follow panels of Hiroshima, Nagasaki, Bikini, experiments with animals, radiation sickness and mutation. The second section is devoted to postwar use: the development of atomic power and continuing research. Here are seen pictures of a plutonium laboratory, the new California cyclotron, work in the production of radioactive isotopes at Oak Ridge, and the new uses of radioactive isotopes in therapy, industry and commerce.

The last section is devoted to the problem of atomic energy control. This involves the world sources of uranium, the mining of uranium, Oak Ridge separation plant, and the possible diversion of atomic energy to use as a weapon of war. The exhibition closes with panels describing the problem in education, in statecraft and as it is manifested in the ways of the human spirit.

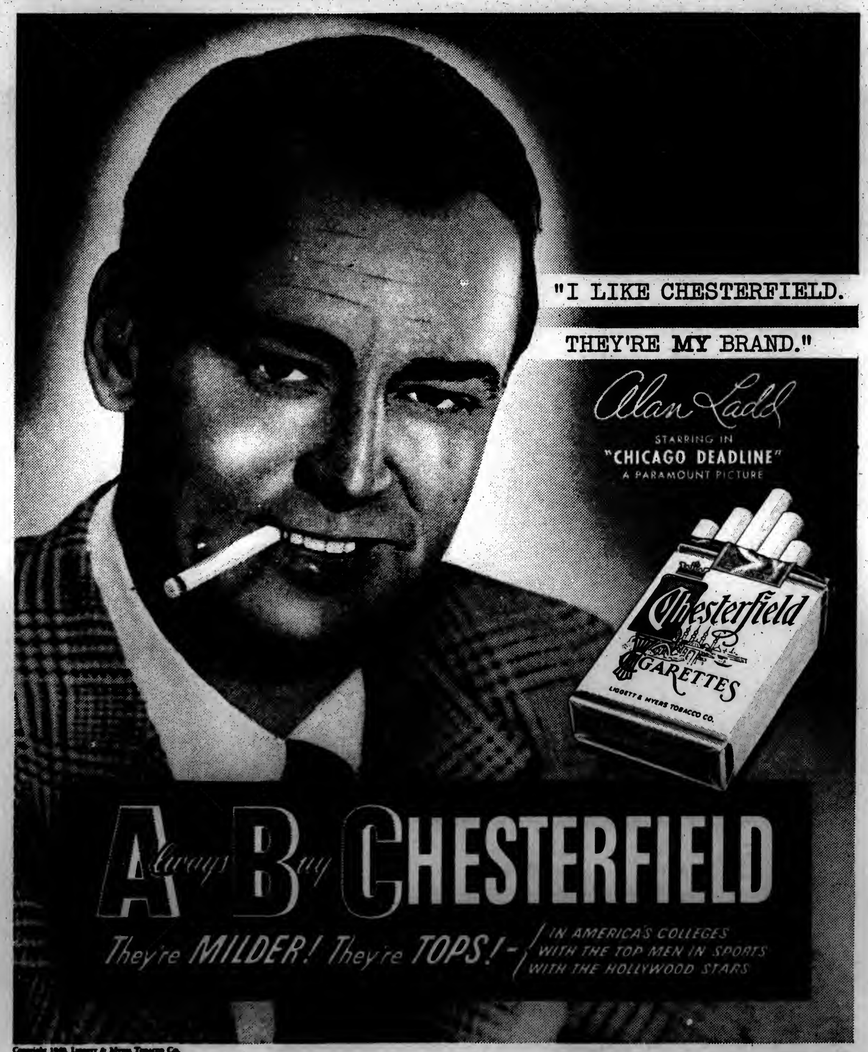
sylvania conferred upon him the degree of Master of Arts in 1941. Not content with these awards of learning, he is now a candidate for a Doctor's Degree at Temple University. He has been an officer and king's sanction to show that the Church gave him his authority.

In South American countries where the government is admittedly Roman Catholic a grave danger lies, the speaker continued, If the government is ever overthrown, and the successor is not essentially Catholic, it may look upon the Church as hostile to the new regime, and, this can cause great difficulties, he said.

During the wars of independence, which lasted about fifteen years, few, if any, bishops were appointed by Rome, for fear that the Spanish king would be hurt. After the wars, therefore, there were very few good leaders of the people holding Church positions. This weakened the Spanish-American Catholic Church of the period.

Today, the State in many countries of South America directly supports the priests of the parish. This may sound good to Catholics in our country, but actually they do not fare so well. The State does not pay enormous sums, as might be expected, but since it does pay a little, the parish people frequently feel that there is no need for them to contribute further to the support of their Church. In the countries which do not give financial aid, the Church is better off, continued the speaker.



Concluding his dissertation by stating that only by realizing the Church-State problems in their respective nations can the people of South America adequately cope with their problem, Fr. McCarthy drove home the point that close unity of Church and State is a very good thing, but as the relationships can sometimes become too close, serious problems can arise.

In the question period that followed the lecture, Fr. McCarthy said that vocations are lacking in South America due to a small middle class, which class produces most of the vocations of the world. Argentina is one of the few nations which is gaining a middle class, due to the growth of mechanical industry, producing a corresponding increase in vocations.

zBrazilians, he said, welcome foreign missionaries, especially Americans, since they have such a strong faith in the American way of doing things.

Mr. Bruderle, Forum Chairman, welcomed the audience and introduced the speaker after Very Rev. F. X. N. McGuire, O.S.A., College President, gave the invocation.

The next Forum lecture will feature Prof. James C. O'Neill, of Brooklyn College, who will discuss "The U. S. Constitutional Theory of Separation of Church and State," on Tuesday evening, January 10, 1950, in the C & F Auditorium.

Nineteen Seniors Cited In College Who's Who

Men Distinguished by Marks, Leadership

Nineteen seniors were notified last week that they had been nominated and enrolled in the 1949-1950 edition of "Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges." The list published by the office of the Registrar of the college included these men:

Manuel A. Abreu
Emil R. Borgers
William R. Carroll
Edward L. Doyle
Daniel J. Haflinger
Karl G. Haselmaier
Paul M. Hemler
Edward Krieg
Roland M. Marshall
Daniel F. McGrath
William B. McLarnon
Joseph V. McNulty
John P. Murphy
Michael J. Nowlan
Raymond J. Raclawski
Joseph D. Roarty
Richard N. Ruane
Joseph F. Shannon
Eugene J. Shuchart

Each year students are nominated by 600 colleges and universities throughout the United States. From the large number of students nominated less than six thousand are actually accepted. An average of about ten men from each college and university are honored annually.

Nominating committees from the schools are instructed to consider only those students who are outstanding scholastically as well as showing leadership in extra-curricular activities. Other determining factors are cooperation, general citizenship and a promise of future usefulness.

Certificates are awarded to all who are chosen for membership in the organization. Then the students are qualified to use the placement service included in the organization benefit plan.

Some men are automatically nominated for enrollment by being leaders of certain activities on campus, and then approved if they have satisfactory grades. M. A. Abreu, Editor-in-Chief of the VILLANOVAN; Edward Doyle, President of Belle Masque; Roland Marshall,

STUDENT COUNCIL IN FINAL '49 MEETING

The Student Council met for the last time during the year 1949 and the session was marked by energetic discussions and action on matters of importance to the student body. Brian McLarnon presided at the meeting.

The councilmen voted to continue the Phillip Morris contest which had been on a test basis till this time. Favorable returns prompted the continuation of the collection. A committee was chosen to select cheer leaders in order that there would be a uniform procedure each year in their selection.

An unofficial financial report on the Inter-Frat Ball set the profit per fraternity at eighty dollars. Intramural athletics will be investigated so that suggestions for improvements may be made by the council. Athletic equipment was pointed out in particular as needing attention.

The council will ask the school authorities if it is at all possible to amend the by-laws concerning the five dollar room reservation fee.

Christmas Lights To Shine Again; Attract Throngs

Once again the annual outdoor decorations of the campus are expected to attract thousands of motorists and residents of the eastern section of Pennsylvania. Work has been started on the decorations already, reports Mr. Ed Loughrey, Superintendent of Maintenance, and should be completed in a few days, before the students adjourn for the Christmas recess. This display, which traditionally opens the Yule season for Villanova, and brings the Christmas spirit to the campus, will remain up until after the students return from the holidays.

The principal part of the decorations consists of the lighting with colored bulbs the many evergreen trees which line the roads of the campus. Mr. Loughrey reports that more than four thousand lights will be used this year, and that their arrangement will be much the same as in previous years.

Now a tradition on the campus,

Senior Belle Air Ball To Feature Ray McKinley and His Orchestra

Ray McKinley

Popular Band to Play at Formal, January 6

Dinner, Intermission; Music by Teti Group

George Szymansk., chairman of the Senior Prom committee, has announced that plans for the gala senior weekend have been completed. Ray McKinley and his orchestra will hold the feature spot at the Senior Prom on Friday, January 6, 1950. Intermission music will be supplied by the Blue Notes. Tickets are now on sale at $6.00 per couple.

Following close on the heels of the Senior Prom is the Dinner Dance, to be held at the Hotel Broadwood, on Saturday, January 7, 1950. Tickets for this affair, which is to be informal, are now on sale at $7.25 per couple. The after-dinner dance music is to be supplied by the Blue Notes, currently appearing at The Main Liner. The Blue Notes, comparatively unknown in college dance circles just a few years ago, have earned an excellent name for themselves in the past two years. Their reputation has been particularly boosted by their distinctive styling of tunes new and old. Of interest to Villanova students is the fact that the Blue Notes' pianist is Frank Teti, an ex-Villanovan. Requests will be welcomed from any of the attending couples.

Ray McKinley started his public musical career at the age of 12, and has been drumming his way upward ever since. On his way up he played with various famous bands such as The Detroiters and Jimmy Dorsey. In 1942 he decided to start his own musical organization which, however, was soon split up by the war. While in the service Ray played with the celebrated Glenn Miller band and took over its leadership for a while after Glenn's disappearance in action. After his discharge in 1945, Ray started to reorganize his band and made his debut at the Hotel Commodore in New York with a compliment of all ex-servicemen. Since this debut, Ray McKinley has been in constant popular demand. While many people are aware of only his novelty and jump tunes, he has a reputation of equal distinction for his smooth rendition of current popular ballads. He has a reputation for versatility, and he has made it his business in the past to play only what the public wants to hear. His repertoire is one which will satisfy any and all tastes. In it

Housing Woes of Off-campus Men To Get Hearing

An attempt to remedy the situation of off-campus resident students who have "legitimate gripes" about their present accomodations will be made in the near future, it was announced this week.

A group of students, with the approval of Rev. J. Tuohy, O.S.A., Dean of Freshmen, have interested themselves in the problem and will conduct a survey this week to locate students in need of better arrangements.

According to a spokesman for the student group, some of the difficulties of off-campus living, made necessary by increasing enrollment,

Rosemont Choir Sings Carols In College Chapel

Choristers of the Rosemont College Glee Club will bring the first air of Christmas spirit to Villanova on Thursday evening, at 6:45 in the College Chapel. Chapel will be for the entire college on that evening, joining the Wednesday group with Thursday's.

Very Rev. Francis X. N. McGuire O.S.A., President of Villanova College, will deliverhis annual Christmas message to the students. This will be followed by Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament, with participation of the Glee Club.

The Processional, "We Three Kings," will begin the traditional evening, inaugurated in 1943 to instill the proper Christmas spirit in the students. The Recessional, "Angels We Have Heard On High," will complete annual Christmas Chapel.

Rev. Francis Dennis, O. S. A., Headmaster of Malvern Prearatory School for Boys will provide buses to bring the Rosemont girls to and from Villanova. Organist for the Choir will be Mother M. Bellarmine, S.H.C.J., of Rosemont College.

Arrangements for the program were made by Mother M. Basil, S.H.C.J., Dean of Rosemont College, and Rev. Edwin T. Grimes, O.S.A.,

Christmas Message

Raising our heads above the masses of modern day men, lifting our ears above the din of modern day commerce, and raising our hearts above the fierce struggle of modern day living, we at Villanova acknowledge the simple truth of Christmas—the birthday of Christ. We are also daring enough in the twentieth century to resort to the use of such a medieval and unscientific word as the "Incarnation" in connection with the Christmas Season. For, our concept of the Birth of Christ embodies the idea of God reaching down from heaven to earth and taking unto Himself the flesh and blood He had formed to constitute Man. We speak of God being made flesh-becoming incarnate. We do not conceive of such an act contributing to a degradation of Divinity but rather an elevation of humanity. In becoming man, God demonstrated to the world His predilection for mankind, the dignity of the human being and with it the possibility of the union of the divine and human natures.

Everyone today thinks or talks of human rights, human dignity, and human freedom. The only thing common to the thinking of all of us is that we know such things exist. The nature and meaning and origin of such things as rights, dignity, and freedom are little understood, and less accepted by mankind universally. More often than not our rights, our dignity, and our freedom are conceived as gifts bequeathed to us by the State, or by some beneovolent statesman; by the majority vote of the citizens, or by the conquering masses of the military.

Human dignity and the many qualities stemming from it can only be understood by approaching God for the answers. The surest and most huma napproach to God is the path to the Stable of Bethlehem, where God made man offers Himself as our mediator.

We at Villanova renew our faith in God at Christmas-tide by reaffirming our belief in the Divinity of Jesus Christ. We realize the necessity of struggling to maintain America a Christian nation, so that we may preserve the only true foundation of rights, freedom, and peace—God Himself.

Francis X. M. McGuire, O.S.A.

Rev. Francis X. M. McGuire, O. S. A. President

Season's Greetings

On behalf of the staff of the Villanovan we would like to second Father McGuire's wishes to the student body and also wish everyone a very Happy Christmas and a Holy New Year. This being the joyful season of the year we know you will enjoy the extended vacation over the holidays to return ready for a full year of achievement.

"Hey, bud, got an extra dime?"

How many times have you been asked that question by some old man in a tattered grey overcoat, by someone whose beard was three days overgrown, whose eyes looked beaten by life?

It's a hard question to say no to when you have an extra dime. It takes something approaching cruelty to say "Nah" and stick your hand in your pocket to keep a couple extra half-dollars from jingling. More often than not you probably just dig in and give the guy a dime whether or not you really think it will do him any good. More likely than not you think enough in the way of charity to thank God that you are not he, begging dimes on the corner.

Consider Them

There have been a whole bunch of people begging dimes around here in the last couple weeks. No, they aren't derelicts who have lost the initiative it takes to go out and look for a job. They aren't old men beaten by the years till their eyes are bloodshot. They don't have a stubble of beard on their chins, and they don't have nearly the persuaviveness that some of the corner-boys have.

The Hard Way

These are just a bunch of little kids who have had the tough luck that we have been spared. Their clothes may be plain and worn, but they are clean. Their faces are clean too, and their eyes are clear and blue. But they've had a bad break. They've had the misfortune of being forced to grow up without their mother and father.

And they've been begging dimes around here so that they could get enough money together to go back to the orphanage and give all their little brothers and sisters a party for Christmas. They've been extending their little palms and pleading with blue eyes through all the posters that have been hanging on the bulletin boards since September. They've been showing up in Religion classes to wander among you and see if maybe, by any slim chance, there was an extra dime around to help them get a few candy canes to give the smaller kids, or a couple boxes of tinsel to make the tree a little more like the ones you and I will have.

Give Them A Christmas

It's been rough in a way, wondering whether the thing would pan out, but it must also be something of a pleasure. After all they can look forward to this Christmas with hope that they have never before dared to have. They can hope to see Santa for the second Christmas in a row, they can hope that when it comes to Christmas there will be a tree just for them, and maybe even a little something all wrapped up in bright colors, just for them.

More Help

So far it looks as though their hopes might be realized. The boxes that have been going around for them haven't been received without welcome. But they need a lot more help to make Santa feel when he comes to them that he isn't the only one who cares whether their Christmas is a happy one or not. They still need every extra dime Villanova can spare. So won't you try to find one the next time you run across one of those little white boxes. After all it is just a little eight-year old asking, "Hey, bud, got an extra dime?"

The Runaround

By BILL BRENINGHOUSE

Oscar Twomp is a student at a fairly large Eastern parchment factory. Like hundreds of other students and psuedo-students he receives a monthly stipend from that great benefactor, Uncle Sam. Unfortunately this retainer is in the form of a check. It's a pretty check, green with artistic black lettering and a beautiful seal on one end. There are impressive long numbers and symbols all over it. It is, however, of absolutely no value in the institution.

First Obstacle

When Oscar presented his latest check to the business office, he was received with a warm smile and a cold denial. It seems that there was only three dollars and twenty cents available for check-cashing. Oscar couldn't understand this, simple slob that he is. Here, this organization willingly accepts about two million dollars annually from its students. Yet, they cannot see their way clear to cash a check over ten dollars.

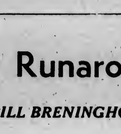
Cash, Please

Next, our poor Mr. Twomp, in search of cash to pay long-owed debts went to the local bank. In that stately business house they told him that he couldn't get his check cashed unless signed by Joan Blotz. Identification meant nothing. Oscar dragged out birth certificate, draft card, social security card, Navy ID card with picture and fingerprint, matriculation card, driver's license and produced five witnesses as to his identity. The teller just looked up and told him it had to be signed by Joan Blotz. Why this one personage should be given so much power over the economic welfare of the students was beyond Oscar's feeble reach of mind.

Tried Again

Returning to school he tried the financial offices again. This time they gave him an IOU and took his check. After a minute of thought, Oscar gave back the IOU and took his check. They must really think he's nuts. They're going to get 99% of the dough, anyway. It should be no trouble to cash this little check.

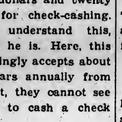
Perhaps they wanted to start a "save your money" campaign. At any rate Oscar needed cash, and fast.



How Easy

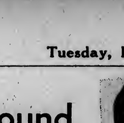
Then, strangely enough, Oscar had an idea. He hurried down to a local refreshment parlor, passed through a door filled with neon advertising signs, put his foot on the rail and ordered a Seven-Up. The gentleman behind the counter took the check and cashed it gladly. Oscar could hardly believe it. Every time someone cashed a check for him at school that person acted as though Oscar was the recipient of the greatest favor ever bestowed. No more, though, from now on Oscar heads for the nearest bar when that check comes through.

Campus Queries



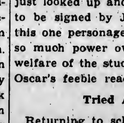
Question: What benefits do you expect to receive from a Catholic College Education

Martin J. Gillan, Sophomore, Arts



"A "Catholic college education provides a student of today with an all around substantial background with which to face the problems of everyday life after college. Basic faith is very commendable, but in College we expect to go further in the knowledge of our Catholic Religion; to be able to answer our own questions concerning it as well as those of others. Our Catholic College Education therefore should enable us to lead more mature lives as to our religious practices in later life."

Thomas E. Langan, Senior, Chemical Engineering



"A Catholic college education is the best preparation for entrance into the troubled world of today. We will emerge from college with a deeper understanding of our fellow man. With a thorough religious education, such as we acquire here, we become better equipped to cope with the problems of everyday life. While in college the benefits of a Catholic education may not be appreciated but by the time of graduation we will have developed a more mature outlook on life. This, I feel, is a basic requirement for success."

Barry D. Gibbons, Junior, Philosophy

"A Catholic college education supplies not only the academic requirements for a degree but something additional. It supplies a moral and religious background to the student, which is lacking in other leading educational institutes today. A Catholic education also provides a scholastic outlook which is sure to provide a more rounded background of knowledge that will surely benefit a graduate materially and spiritually."

Edward J. Staudt, Sophomore, English

"In my experience I have seen evidence whereby I firmly believe that the Catholic education, not only in colleges but also in grammar and high schools, far surpasses that of other types of schools. The religious background, atmosphere and training of a Catholic College is priceless in this material world we live in today. A lack of moral teaching is very evident in general today and is a serious defect in our social structure. Only in a Catholic education do we find adequate compensation along the lines of moral teachings. I fully expect to leave this college a better and fuller man able to face the hardships of life due to the foundations in religious training which I have received here in a Catholic college."

Letter

Dear Editor:

I, as well as many other students, will be working during the week or so preceding the Christmas vacations. This can produce a special problem, especially to those of us who will work rather late at night. It will mean that we cannot concentrate on our studies as much as we usually do, or would like to.

We hope that the members of the faculty will keep this in mind when determining the date for the next test. Such consideration, while scarcely mandatory, will be appreciated by the students concerned.

Yours truly,

Student Christmas Worker

Knowledge of Jazz

To an altogether too large group who claim a knowledge of jazz, it is still merely a pastime indulged in either actively or passively with no assayable amount of serious intent for the necessary promulgation and improvement of the art form. The demonstrative proof is readily discernible. Dinah Shore records a completely uninspired performance of a ballad using a stock arrangement, and sells enough copies to keep a small mansion in the thespian jungle that is Beverly Hills. June Christy records the same ballad with infinitely more feeling using an intelligent and interesting, though not too radical arrangement by Pete Rugolo, and sells appreciably fewer copies because to fully grasp it one must pay some attention to the score. Finally June comes up with an excellent arrangement of the very same ballad by some more advanced technician such as Bob Grettinger, and sells only to the musicians themselves.

Criterions

Why? The answer is not too complex to permit of a ready reply: one must listen and try to appreciate what the artist is attempting to do. A similiar, though far more devolped situation exists in the field of the classics. The vast majority of the listening public all agree that Bach and Wagner are masters. If they have heard of Stravinsky or Bartok they will acknowledge that they too are masters in their field. Is it because they understand, appreciate or even listen to their works? Usually not. They make these admissions because they have been told that these men have been recognized by authorities in their own field as far superior to the efforts of their contemporaries. Thus also may I state the case for jazz. If you would develop something worthwhile out of music you must be guided by the opinion . . of those who profess to know whereof they speak. When these setters of the standard agree, one may feel that here is a serious endeavour to advance to further perfection the idioms of jazz.

Pioneers

Thus we find that the men who bear the brunt of criticism, Gillespie in his earlier days, Parker, Tristano, Young, Kenton and Raeburn to mention a few, are those who are making efforts to explore atonal music played in contrapuntal frames. In short listen to the newest of the new, the men with the new sounds, the pioneers of jazz. Now . . . Mr. Mayer.

Anything, but anything, can happen in the music world — the latest f'rinstance: Hugo Winterhalter who is currently riding high with his discing of "Blue Christmas". Even Max Schulman would think twice about using a name like that in one of his books for fear of overdoing it, but at this writing our boy Hugo has the hottest thing in the country and will surely crash the higher tax brackets for the year if he can convince the Revenooers that he isn't using a phony name.

Chri + Back

Christy's bac. ud Kenton's got her. According to the latest word June will be rejoining her old boss shortly. Apparently they're planning mostly concert work as Stan's new aggregation totals forty pieces, better than double the average band roster — definitely too unwieldy for one night stands and the usual circuit work.

New Vocal Gals

Several new vocal gals have made their record debuts in the past few weeks and I'd like to boost them now so I can say I told you so later. First and foremost Trudy Richards, in my opinion, has turned up with the first really original bit of vocal styling in a long time. She has a low throaty delivery with a homey quality that will do things for your hypertension. Listen for her waxing of "The Song is You" and see what I mean.

Although I've only heard one record by Emma Lou Walsh it was such a fine job that I think she rates a plug and should be filed for future reference. Her vocalizing on "This Autumn" with the aid of an Echo Chamber is well above the average balladisc.

Terry Bruer—Vision

Last but far from least, we have Terry Bruer, a pint-sized vision who up till last summer did nightly shows at the "Sawdust Trail" in New York. One night on the Godfrey talent show apparently did the trick as she left the "Trail" soon afterward and is now recording on her own. To date she's done "Copper Canyon" and Ole Man Mose" both novelties but cute as is Terry herself. You might say she out shines Kay Starr.

Sense and Nonsense— "Merry Christmas"

By TOM PASHA

Since this is the last we'll be seeing of each other until after the Christmas migration, I thought it best to complete my Christmas shopping early and get my gifts distributed before the last minute rush.

Here is a list of a few things which I wish Old St. Nick would give to a few friends of mine.

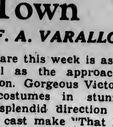
To Chestnut Hill girls a one o'clock permission,
So they won't have to return like Donder and Blitzen.
To Rosemont which with beauty is teeming,
Gregory Peck and his white teeth gleaming.
For Immaculata's girls so pretty,
A home near town so they can see the city.
To the seniors a diploma with bright blue ribbon,
A house, a wife, and substantial livin'.
To the juniors with only a year to complete,
The go and the push to stay on their feet.
To the sophs more study and loads of cheer,
'Cause we all want them 'round another year.
To the frosh whom we considered all saps,
Stockings filled with bright white caps.
To the Arts, Commerce, and Science schools,
Bring tiddly-winks, Bicycles, and new slide-rules.
To the profs, who endeavor to make us smart,
Merry Christmas, Happy New Year and softening of heart.
To the basketball players who win by large margin,
The NCAA and a few games in the Garden.
To the football players so big and scrappy,
A perfect season to make them all happy.
To the boys in the band who march and toot,
Bring each a bus and shining new suit.
This request you might think shocking,
But could you put Lana into my stocking?
For brother, sis, mother and dad,
The best Christmas and New Year they've ever had.
To all the little St. John's boys,
A Christmas full of blessings and joys.
To old Joe Stalin who rules Russian sod,
An understanding, acceptance and love of God.
And last but not least remember our priests,
Who teach us time and agin' . . .
Peace on Earth, Good Will To All Men.

Around The Town

By F. A. VARALLO

Our film fare this week is as gay and colorful as the approaching holiday season. Gorgeous Victorian sets and costumes in stunning technicolor splendid direction and an excellent cast make "That Forsyte Woman" one of the most elaborate screen dramas of the year. With the accent on romanticism this leisurely-paced tale of the '80's is based on John Galsworthy's classic "The Forsyte Saga", or more specifically, on the first book of the "Saga" entitled "The Man of Property."

The story is an account of life in a clannish upper middle class English family. It centers about the unhappy experiences of Irene, who found tragedy by marrying into it. Greer Garson gives a fine performance as Irene Forsyte — indeed, it is probably her greatest role since "Mrs. Miniver", and of much more value than her recent comedy parts.



Errol Flynn, whom everyone remembers best for his swash-buckling hero characterizations, portrays this time Soames Forsyte, "The man of property", a stuffy, materialistic Englishman whose one concern in life is the acquiring of wealth and possessions. The portrayal is very effective.

Walter Pidgeon, as the young artist who has been disinherited by the Forsytes, Janet Leigh, as June Forsyte, and Robert Young, as Philip Bosinney, a dashing and irresponsible young architect, complete the cast.

While the dialogue is somewhat lengthy at times, this in nevertheless Grade A drama, and is now playing at the Goldman Theater in Philadelphia.

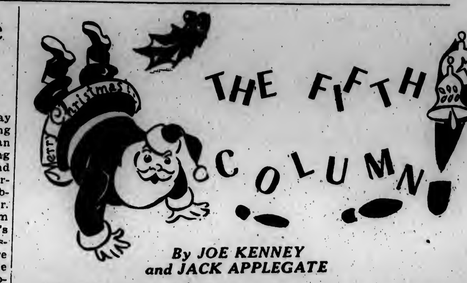
"Pinky"

Racial conflict is the theme of this emotion-packed picture, dealing courageously with anti-Negro prejudice and racial discrimination. While there have been other films dealing with this subject, the present one is probably the most disturbing, since it arouses immediate sympathy for its heroine. Jeanne Crain plays the role of Pinky.

Pinky, an educated colored girl who has lived among northern whites, and has passed for one of them, returns to her washer-woman grandmother's shack in the Deep South. Immediately she become a target for discrimination. She is torn between the affection of her grandmother who implores her to be true to her heredity, and love for a handsome Northern doctor who wishes to marry her but lacks the courage to acknowledge her race openly once he has learned that she is colored.

Ethel Barrymore plays the part of Pinky's strong-willed, sharp-tongued patient and benefactor, while Ethel Waters is magnificent as her wise old granny. Significant and stirring, "Pinky is one film you shouldn't miss. It is currently at the Fox, in Philly.

"Brigadoon"



Making its third visit to "our town" in as many years, this charming musical excursion to an enchanted Highland hamlet, will be presented at the Shubert until December 17th. The romantic leads are ably handled by Hayes Gordon and Virginia Oswald, who were both understudies in the original company of "Brigadoon." The dances and musical numbers are by Agnes De Mille; production is staged by Robert Lewis.

Coming Events

"Alive and Kicking", a new musical at the Shubert, beginning Dec. 27th.

Philadelphia La Scala Opera Co. presents "Il Trovatore" at the Academy of Music on Dec. 15th.

Philadelphia Forum presents the Wagner Opera Company in "Cavaleria Rusticana" and "Pagliacci" at the Academy on December 13th.

Only three more days until the campus takes on the air of a morgue. All the residents are busily engaged in craming their belongings (and some of their roommates) into their suitcases. What presents they take home!! For mother, a months accumulation of mouldy socks and soiled mildewed shirts, among other things; for father, a heaping big handful of I. O. U.'s and for the girl friend, a tale of how dry college life is without her . . . Ha! Ha! Even Peno and Freddie our canine collegians, have made arrangements to migrate until after New Year's.

There are many ways to earn the necessary dough for the little women's present. Some of our scholars are bracing themselves to suffer a few days at the local Post Offices, but others are more fortunate . . . All they have to dodge is slamming doors. For instance, Paul Skoptic is selling blank Christmas cards for those who desire to write their own verses. John Wooley and Bruce Tatem are selling burned out Christmas bulbs at half prices. Bill Coopersmith and Dick Altman have the Santa Claus concessions on all the down-town street corners. Pete Reddy is working on a device to manufacture snowballs imbedded with radioactive sourballs to heave at scrooges like Bill Breninghouse.

Preparations are already underway to decorate the campus and foster the yuletide cheer. Lights are to be strung from one end of the grounds to the other. Atop each tree is to be placed an appropriate Star of David, but the unique thing will be the flashing Philip Morris ads. Not to be outdone, Louie is going to sell green hamburgers speckled with red. Even Charlie the barber will feature a special Christmas creation . . . "The Pointsetta Crewcut" . . . for guys like Harold Dies and the like. The highlight of the Christmas theme will be Jim Cahill who plans on hanging around the campus, alternately blinking his green eyes with the blood-shot background for the benefit of passersby, atop Mendel Tower.

ORCHIDS TO. All the guys who played Santa Claus for the St. John's kids. They really have true Christmas spirit.

The basketball season is well under way, but for some the rapid change from football is just too much. Take for example, the plight of John Larkin at the Palestra last week. He brought a date (He can afford two-sixty . . . yet!), and the explanations he didn't have to go through!!! "No dear, they're not pacing off fifteen yards, it's just a foul . . . Yes dear . . . Two shots . . . No, at the basket . . . No, the referee isn't actually blind, he just thinks this is Convention Hall . . . No, Arizin isn't as tired as he looks, it's just that it takes a lot out of one playing the pivot . . . No, he isn't dizzy!! . . . Johnny Weglicki didn't sneak in the game, Hon, Al knows it . . . What? . . . Yes, we got a touchdown . . . Yes, their suits are nice . . . Yeah, Shy Ralken palmed the ball because he wanted to take it home without being caught . . . Uh huh, the ref did swallow the whistle . . . yeah! Yeah!! Yeah!:. . . . Just let me see the last thirty seconds!!!"

They're still talking about the New York Thanksgiving Dance, where Bill McPartland sure had a good case and Red Murphy taught Jack Steele how to make like Old Faithful. Rosemonter Pat Zminsky, female lead in "Jacobowsky", was spotted with Gene Cullen. Also present were Joe Smercak, John Farley, Ken O'Brien, King Wilson and Jack McConville, to mention a few of those attending.

Dave Rothman and Jane seen at the Seven Stars listening to Jimmy Collett . . . For the benefit of a certain coedreader at Duke University, we would like to say that Harry Rollens is still going strong at Rosemont . . . Varsity band members sporting their new letters include Joe McNulty, John McNamara, Bob Green, Jim McLaughlin and others.

In closing, here's hoping you and yours have a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year. Don't forget to come back . . . single.

President Host At Annual Pre-Christmas Dinners

Field House Site of Faculty Banquet This Evening

The annual Faculty Dinner given by the President of the college in honor of the members of the teaching staff of the college will be held this evening, it was announced by by the office of the President this week. The dinner, to be catered by a local concern, is scheduled to be held in the Field House, beginning about half past six.

About two hundred persons are expected to attend this yearly function at which Rev. F. X. N. McGuire, O.S.A., President of the college, welcomes the new members of the faculty and honors the religious and lay teachers who have been on the teaching staff.

Guests to Attend

Besides the members of the faculty, special guests at the dinner will include the wives of the faculty members, the members of the Board of Trustees, and the members of the Advisory Council of the College.

The faculty dinner of the President has been an annual event of the social calendar of the College since it was instituted in 1944. Each year it has served to introduce the new faculty members to the other members of the school's teaching staff. This opportunity has also been used to honor several members of the faculty as was done last year. Rev. J. C. Bartley, O.S.A., then celebrating the twenty-fifth anniversary of service was the guest of honor.

President to Speak

At the time of the publication of this paper, no information was available regarding the guest of honor at this year's dinner. It was disclosed, though, that Father McGuire would speak at the dinner, and deliver his personal welcome to all the faculty members and guests who are to attend the affair.

College and School Mentors Are Guests Thursday Night

Local educators from the Philadelphia archdiocese will be honored at a dinner to be given Thursday evening by Rev. F. X. N. McGuire, O.S.A., President of Villanova College. This dinner, during which Father McGuire meets with the other local college presidents and with the Rectors of local High Schools is scheduled to be held here on campus in the President's suite in Mendel Hall.

Among the prominent educators who are expected to attend this annual function are: the Rt. Rev. Magr. Francis Furey, of St. Charles Borromeo Seminary; Dr. Edward Reilly, Superintendent of Schools for the Philadelphia Archdiocese; the Very Rev. John J. Long, president of Saint Joseph's College; Brother James, F.S.C., Provincial of the Christian Brothers in America.

Others who are expected to attend are the Very Rev. Francis L. Dennis, O.S.A., Rector of Malvern Preparatory School, and other rectors of local Catholic high schools.

I love the paper,
I think it's swell,
On Tuesday mornings
I run pell mell
To get my copy,
And read each line.
The stories and columns
I think are fine.

I laugh at the jokes,
I read all the ads;
I note all the news,
I take up the fads.
When I praise the paper,
I scorn those who laugh,
I'm really most loyal —
I'm on the staff.

INTER-RACIAL CLUB EXTENDS CLOTHING DRIVE EXTRA WEEK

The Intercollegiate Inter-Racial Council recently announced that it is extending its clothing drive to Thursday, December 15th.

Members of the Villanova Inter-Racial Club have placed boxes in Mendel Hall, Belle Ajr Hall, Commerce and Finance Building, and the pie shop to receive contributions. Articles of clothing may also be submitted to club members. There are notices in the residence halls indicating which students will accept the donations on behalf of the club.

All clothing collected will be distributed in two of the poorer parishes of Philadelphia, St. Ignatius, and St. Elizabeth. Each student is urged to search his belongings for excess usable clothing. Regardless of tailoring or style, any item of apparel is acceptable.

Such unneeded clothing, now taking up space, can be put to good use by needy families.

The drive was undertaken at the regional intercollegiate Inter-Racial meeting which convened last November 20th., in the Villanova Library, when students of five colleges agreed to the plan to benefit those in need, and the two parishes were selected by unanimous opinion of the council as the one whose need was most pressing.

Originally, the duration of the drive was to be from Nov. 28th., to Dec. 9th., but in view of the delay occasioned by the Thanksgiving recess it was decided to extend the drive until Dec. 15th.

include: poor board at prices much higher than on-campus rates, high room rents with no boar and inadequate restaurant facilities a long distance from the college, and others.

"Undoubtedly some of the complaints are only gripes," he said. "But we and the college want to help students who have real problems, but who haven't approached the administration."

All off-campus residents who feel that they are being "taken" in any way are asked to report to Room 223, Mendel, any time between 12 noon and 5 P. M., this Thursday, December 15th., where a staff of students will be present to hear their complaints. Efforts will be made to remedy serious problems as soon as possible.

Off for the Day

Villanova students and their wards from St. John's, set off for Philadelphia to see the Christmas activities. Five hundred boys were shown the sights last Saturday, in the first part of "Operation Yule".

Students Sponsor Yule Celebration At St. John's

Thursday, December 15th., marks the second event in the three-phase Operation Yule. Five hundred orphans at St. John's Orphanage, in Philadelphia, will be guests at the second annual Christmas party held under the supervision of the Junior Class of Villanova.

An elaborate entertainment for the orphans has been organized, gifts have been selected for them, and refreshments prepared. Santa Claus will preside in person at the party for the distribution of gifts to the children.

Last year, the first Christmas party for the orphans was a huge success, and the tradition is now well established by Villanova students. Earlier in the fall, the Junior Class inaugurated a drive to collect funds for the Christmas party. Through the collections in Religion classes, still being taken up, the Class of '51 has been moderately successful in collecting money for the party. Donations from parents of students have been received, together with contributions from local merchants.

A separate fund has been established, the Orphans' Party Fund, to be maintained permanently here at Villanova, and through which each year's junior class will be able to carry on this tradition.

The first part of Operation Yule was completed last Saturday when the children at St. John's were taken to the various department stores in downtown Philadelphia to see Santa Claus. This was done by 500 Villanova students who gave their time and money to give the orphans their Christmas trip to see Santa Claus.

The elaborate Toyland at Wanamaker's with the Rocket Express ride for children on the ceiling of Toyland was the scene of Santa Claus' sleigh and reindeer where the children sat on his lap and were promised their Christmas gifts.

The third event of Operation Yule is the donation to the orphanage of the Admiral television set which Villanova will receive from the manufacturers of Phillip Morris cigarettes in return for the collection of 60,000 cigarettes wrappers.

Fifteen Join Tertiary Order

The silence that permeated the campus on the Feast of the Immaculate Conception was witness to an impressive ceremony which took place in Saint Mary's Hall Chapel on that day.

For the second time in the history of the college, Villanova students went in a body to "seek the mercy of God and the Third Order Secular of the Order of Hermits of Saint Augustine." Fifteen novices did just this.

The mass preceding the reception of the novices was celebrated by Rev. Edwin T. Grimes, O.S.A. The seminary choir sang liturgical hymns in the background. Following the Mass, Father Grimes, assisted by Rev Thomas P. Purcell, O.S.A., in the presence of Rev. Henry J. Egan, O.S.A., Director of the Third Order, removed the coats from each of the novices saying, "May the Lord divest thee of the old man with these acts."

Then, vesting the men in the habit, he continued, "May the Lord clothe thee with the new man, who according to God, is created in justice and holiness of truth." Girding the men with the Cincture he added, "Receive this Cincture about your waist that your loins may always be girt as a sign of temperance and chastity."

Members of the Augustinian Third Order, commonly called the Secular Tertiaries, live in the World and strive after Christian perfection in a manner consistent, with secular life in obedience to rules approved for them by the Holy See.

They are not, properly speaking, religious, since they do not take the public vows of poverty, chastity, and obedience, nor do they profess a common life.

They differ from other lay people in that they have a distinctive rule and garb approved by the Holy See. In this country the garb consists of the cincture worn under the clothing. After a year's novitiate the members make a profession and in a manner adapted to the life of persons living in the world, they seek after Christian perfection.

A bit of history was also written that day. As has been explained, after one year as a novice a profession is made. Seven Villanovans made their profession this year, since the Augustinian Tertiary was first begun here at Villanova a year ago December 8th.

The ritual for the profession is no less impressive than that for the accepting of the novices. Characteristic of it is that the professed, rather than members of the Augustinian Order proper, predominate the occasion.

Making three promises, to honor God and further His church and its teachings, the professed accept the kiss of peace given them by their Brothers present and a record of his profession is inscribed in the Book of Professions. Each then receives a Certificate of Profession as attesting to his new honor and duties.

Westinghouse Man Lectures Tonight

Tonight, at 8:00 P. M., Mr. S. M. Kapell, of the Westinghouse Electric Corp., will lecture on "Application of Transformers to Power Transmission" at a meeting of the A.I.E.E. student group.

Mr. Kapell, though still a very young man, is a specialist in electronic control of transformers. His wide experience in the field promises a capable presentation of the subject, and he will use slides to illustrate his lecture, to be held in 215 Mendel.

Charles Rodden, Chairman of the Villanova Chapter of the A.I.E.E., announced, at a meeting last Wednesday, that a field trip will be made shortly to a plant in Conshohocken that makes refractories. Herman Diesel, '49 last semester's chairman, who is now in charge of the electrical apparatus there, will conduct the tour. Diesel's intimate knowledge of the plant will serve to guarantee an informative trip. Many special applications, new in industry, will be shown to the students. The exact date of the trip is pending.

Wildcats Win Games Three, Four, As Arizin Ties Palestra Scoring Mark

WILDCATS WIN OVER ST. PETER'S; 88-72: HOME WINS NOW 23

Jerseyites Surprise in Close 1st Half

By Jim Gallo

Villanova's Wildcats poured it on in the second half to defeat the Peacocks of St. Peter's College, 88-72, last Friday night in Villanova's Field House. A crowd of 4000 sat stunned in disbelief as the underdog Jerseyites refused to be left behind in the scoring parade. The score was tied seven times in the first half and the lead changed hands five times.

The St. Peter's defense was designed to harass the 'Cats' sharpshooting; and, as a result, the game was tight, hard-fought, and often ruggedly played. A total of 53 personal fouls were called by the whistle-tooters and five men left the court via th penalty route. It was their superiority on the foul line that kept the Peacocks in the running. The visitors converted 26 of 33 attempts, while the Villanovans accounted for 22 of 41 tries.

From the floor, however, it was a different story. The Wildcat dribblers made good on 33 of their 54 field goal attempts, while their opponents could hit on only 23 of 77 shots.

Once again it was Paul Arizin who paved the way for Villanova's 23rd consecutive home victory. Anything that can be said for Tall Paul's play is merely repetition. Again he was a demon on rebounds, a certainty from the foul line, and deadly accurate from the floor. All in all, he amassed 30 points on 10 of 15 field goal attempts, and 10 of 11 foul tries, bringing his average up to 26.75 points per game.

Tom Sabol and Brooks Ricca shared the honors as runners-up with 15 points each. In addition, Ricca turned in a fine performance of deceptive passing, and Sabol grabbed off his usual healthy amount of rebounds. Joe Hannan tallied 10 points with a varied assortment of lay-ups. With the score knotted at 27 points, Joe sank the two quick ones that gave Villanova a second period lead which they never relinquished. Leo Wolf left the game early on personal fouls, but his defensive play was praiseworthy.

The visitor's scoring was dominated by Wally Shiel, Jim Fox, and Tom Smith, who contributed 18, 16,

FROSH TRAMPLE ST. PETER'S WITH FAST FINISH; 80-55

McGuire, Hennessy Leading Scoring

By George Scanlon

Villanova frosh won a hard fought 80-55 victory over Saint Peter's yearlings Friday night. The Peacocks provided some keen competition and the outcome of the game was in doubt for nearly 3 quarters.

Tight First Half

The first half saw a hotly contested tussle, Saint Peter's offensive was in high gear and it took all the skill and fight of the Main Liners to match their scoring. The first quarter was nip and tuck and the score stood 20-20 at the 10 minute mark. Villanova opened up a 8 point gap—paced by Hennessey's deadly shooting but the New Jerseyites pulled up to a 37-35 count at halftime. Masterelli, Saint Peter's 5'8" guard was troublesome with his sets and drive in shots.

In the second half Villanova pulled out to a 15 point lead. The race horse style of the frosh was too much for the game Peacocks. Glassmire and Maguire, using their blazing speed, drove in time and again for sensational two pointers. Coach McDonnell who has an exceptionally strong bench inserted substitutes who continued to pour it on to the tune of 80 points.

Maguire Gets 18

The frosh displayed their best ball of the season, their control of the boards and fine offensive make them a tough outfit to crack. Nick Maguire and Larry Hennessey paced the winners with 18 and 16 points respectively. Glassmire, Mooney, and McColgian each contributed 10 points to the winning total. Masterelli and Lasagna were high with 15 points each for the aggressive St. Peter's quintet.

ROSS WINS MAAAU 10,000 METERS

Clocked in 31:40 for 3rd Win in 4 Years

Browning Ross, Villanova's ace Olympian and cross-country runner, won the Middle Atlantic AAU 10,000 meters run at Fairmount Park last Sunday. Ross, running for the Penn A. C., covered the approximately six and one half mile course in 31:40.

This victory was the third one in four attempts for Brownie, his first win being in 1946.

George Thompson, Ross' running mate for the last three years, was third with a timing of 32:08. Second place went to Luther Burdville of Mutual of Omaha who finished 80 yards behind Ross.

In the last of the regular cross-country meets this season, Brownie held first place over the entire distance.

Cats' Face Tampa, Mount, Paul Gunning For 1000th

Five to Face Loyola Away Next Monday — Big Test to Come in Bowl Tourney 'Cats Meet 'Cats in Opener

By Neal Fahy

The second basketball double header of the season at the Palestra comes off tomorrow night with Penn playing Maryland in the first fray and Villanova taking on Tampa U. of Florida in the second game. The Wildcats are favored by a wide margin to make it five straight since the Tampans did not show too much in bowing to Siena 69-36 last Saturday evening.

Near 1000 Mark

However, the game should be interesting because many Villanova rooters are hoping that 'Phenomenal Paul' Arizin will have another hot night and score the 1000th point of his college career. To do this Arizin will need to make 32 points, an extraordinary amount for the average player, but the way he has been going lately, there is a likely possibility that Arizin will become the first player in Villanova court history to pass the 1000 mark.

On Friday evening, the local hoopsters will perform at the Villanova field house against Mt. St. Mary's College of Emmitburg, Maryland. Last time these two clubs met was in 1947 with the Wildcats winning by a slim 2 point margin. St. Mary's is known as a scrappy outfit with a lot of spirit and hustle which might spell trouble for the 'Cats.

The following Monday night will find the Villanova five in Baltimore for their first 'away' game. The opposition, Loyola University, ordinarily wouldn't be considered much of a threat to the 'Cat courtmen, but Loyola is always hard to beat on their home floor. As a matter of fact, they sent the Wildcats down to a stunning 66 to 49 defeat only two years ago on the Baltimore floor.

Play Kentucky

December 28th is the date of Villanova's first real test on the hardwood dand is the night of the opening of the Sugar Bowl tournament at New Orleans, Louisiana.

It will be Wildcats against Wildcats, Blue and White vs. Blue and White, and Villanova against Kentucky. This is the game that will tell the country whether Villanova is a good team, or a great one. The two squads met at Madison Square Garden last year in the NCAA tourney and Villanova come out on the short end of an 85-72 score.

Gone from that great Kentucky team, that lost only to Loyola and St. Louis in 34 games, are Alex Groza, Ralph Beard, Wah Wah Jones and Cliff Barker and Coach Adoph Rupp has a rebuilding program underway. His current squad has five letter winners with three of them Jim Line, Walt Hirsch and Dale Barnstable. Line will long be remembered by the Main Liners for his deadly left handed shots from way out that did more than anything else to beat Villanova last year.

Then there are sophomores Bobby Watson and Bill Spivey, the latter a 7-foot center from Macon, Georgia who led the Kentucky freshman in scoring last year with 290 points in 15 games. Watson was runner-up to Spivey with 115.

Either Bradley or Tulane

The night after this game will find the Wildcats matched against either Tulane, or Bradley, who will have played against each other on the previous day. It is a winner-play-winner and loser-play-loser affair. Bradley, paced by all-American Paul Unrah, is considered the best team in the tournament and is undefeated thus far this season while Tulane has already been upset by Arkansas just last Saturday evening.

Following the return from vacation, the Wildcats play Valparaiso U. at the Palestra on Saturday night and Rutgers at Villanova on the Wednesday after that.

BLUE-WHITE BLASTS ST. FRANCIS IN 2ND HALF; 80-57

Tall Paul's 32 Points Sets Pace in Win

By Harry Range

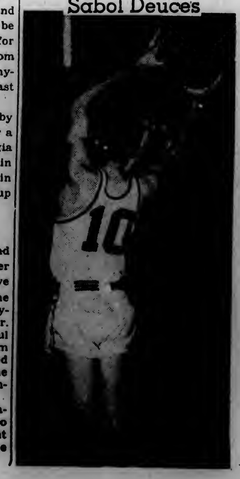
Playing in their first double-header at the Palestra, last Wednesday, the Wildcat five overcame an early surge of St. Francis of Brooklyn and went on to win with ease in the second half by a 80-57 count, after being held to a 32-27 edge at intermission.

Again the individual star for the evening was "Tall Paul" Arizin who, in his initial appearance at the Palestra, scored 32 points to tie the individual scoring mark for the Palestra which was made by Easy Parham of Texas Wesleyan. Arizin, who played the entire game, hit for 10 out of 11 fouls and racked up 11 field goals, the record-tying marker coming with only six seconds left in the final period.

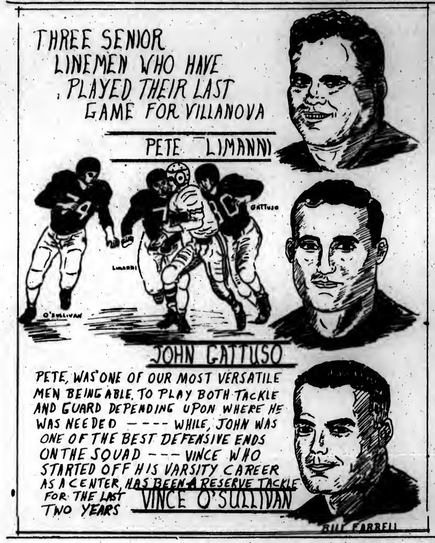
Hannan Also Stars

While Arizin was the recognized star of the contest, a player contributing in no small way to the Wildcat win was the ever-hustling Joe Hannan. "Toad" gathered 17 points for himself but his most outstanding performance was in constantly gaining possession of the ball and setting up countless plays.

The Terriers jumped to a 6-3 lead in the first five minutes but Leo Wolf and Arizin set the pace for the Cats, who bunched 12 points to drive on to a 15-14 lead after eight minutes. St. Francis held on, however, and with the Villanova offense somewhat bogged down managed to keep it a close game all the way through the first half. Jim Luisi, who was high scorer for the Terriers with 16 points, and Tom O'Conner, who hit for 14 were the pace setters for the boys from Brooklyn and drew much acclaim from the crowd on great drive-in shots.



Cats Roll in Second Half



The second half sa wthe Wildcats come into their own and pull out in front of the Terriers by an ever increasing margin. Arizin moved into the bucket and from this point scored 6 field goals while teammates Wolf and Hannan were connecting with sets and lay-ups.

During this period the St. Francis center, Vince Karwoski, who was guarding Arizing, went out with five personals and his substitute, Dick Joyce, drew five and was forced to leave the game. Both tried to stop

Introducing Jim Reardon, Wildcats' Irish Olympian

By Bill Cooney

The word Olympian as used around Villanova has come to mean almost exclusively Browning Ross, and brand new alumnus George Guida of the class of '49. It is not generally known though that two other competitors in the games may be found on campus any day simply by ambling over to Fedigan Hall. It is there that Jim Reardon and Coman Clancy, two members of the Irish Olympic team, hold forth in a little bit of Erin transplanted to the Main Line. This week's story gives a few facts and figures on Reardon.

Jim was the first to arrive at Villanova. He enrolled here in February of 1949, but it wasn't until the spring that he donned the Blue and White track uniform. Those who saw the Penn Relays remember his sensational lead-off quarter in the freshman mile relay which was his highlight of the spring campaign.

Was British and European Champ

Jim's distance is the quarter and its at that length that he has turned in his best performance. A press agent could go on for days about something like this, but for those who like facts here they are: Reardon was British Open champ in '47 and '48. He was also the European 400 metre champ. He holds the Irish 440 and 300 yard records, and as a sideline, he can hit 1:55 in the half, which he claims he has run only four times in his life.

It was only natural that with a record such as this Jim would be picked for the Olympic team. Not only was he picked, however, he was also chosen to Captain the Hiberians. At the Games he fought his way through the grueling heats to the semi-finals. Here he was finally shaded when he took fourth when only the first three were chosen for the finals.

On the Personal Side

A look at Jim Reardon the man shows that he was born in Tipperary, but moved to Dublin where he now makes him home. During the war he served in the British Navy in a Naval Assault force. After the hostilities, he went to Stockholm where he studied Physical education and particularly the Swedish methods of running. His coming to Villanova is a direct result of his participation in the Olympics. There he met Guida and Ross who influenced him to pull up stakes and come to the States. This decision was no doubt very painful to Dean Cromwell, head coach of U. S. C., who also had designs on the swift Irishman.

In the next issue of the leading campus newspaper we'll take a brief look at the other half of the combine, when Coman Clancy will have the spotlight. The Tipperary men will have to stop taking bows because it will then be time for the men of Galway to shine as their favorite son takes the stage.

and 16 points, respectively. Smith made good on 12 of 16 foul attempts.

In gaining their fourth straight victory of the current court campaign, Coach Al Severance's quintet has rolled up a season's total of 325 points, averaging 81.25 points per contest. If the Mainliners keep up this pace, they will carry with them into the Sugar Bowl Tournament a record that certainly will be respected by Tulane, Bradley, and Kentucky.

ALUMNI WIN STREAK INTACT AFTER WINS OVER AUSTIN & BKS.

Doms & Fedigan Also Gain Victories

Mondschein Inc.

Last week's activity in the Intramural Basketball League was limited to games on Monday and Tuesday nights. By virtue of two victories in as many nights, Alumni kept their unbeaten record intact, and is expected to complete its first half schedule without tasting defeat. The other winners in last week's tilts were the Doms, who downed Mendel, and Fedigan, who sunk a winless Good Council squad. Alumni's victims were Brks 1&4 and Austin.

In Monday night's games, Alumni got a big scare, but two quick field goals in the last 30 seconds proved too much for the Bks. squad as Alumni emerged victories 54-49. At halftime the score read 21-20, Alumni in the lead. Both teams set a terrific scoring pace just after the intermission ended.

Leading the scoring attack for the all-victorious Alumni five were Hal Diot with 17 points, Buckley with 12, and Oelz with 10. John Farley's backboard work greatly aided the winners. Tom Flynn led the loser's attack with 20 points and was ably assisted by Tom Madonia who had 13 points, and Don Diot with 10. Tony Russo and Tom McCullion refereed the game.

Doms Subdue Mendel

The second encounter of the night saw the Doms subdue the Mendel quintet 62-42. Fred Heigl was the high scorer for the Doms with 15 points, while Beahan and Natiello, had 12 and 9 points respectively. Briggs with 10 and Stambaugh, Grodovich, and Forsythe with 8 points each contributed to Mendel's scoring efforts. Referees were Tom Flynn and Lou Malero.

Last Tuesday night saw Alumni roll to its fifth consecutive triumph as they outscored a game Austin squad, 76-60. It was a free scoring game and the outcome was never in doubt. The winners jumped into a quick 6-0 lead on three baskets by Hal Diot and then began to increase the lead gradually.

When Alumni put in their second five, Austin began to creep up on the lead but never enough to worry the Alumnites. The score at the half read 40-25. Hal Diot and Bill Barry with 18 ach were the high scorers for the winners, while George Scanion of Austin was top scorer in the game with 20 points. Lenny Bognar kept Austin in the game with some beautiful left handed tosses as he netted 14 counters. Buckley got 10 for Alumni, while Oelz of Alumni and Brennan, Ballister, and Joe Bognar all pitched in 8 points each. Ray Petit and Perry Del Purgatorio officiated.

Fedigan Rips Good Council

In the other contest of the night, Fedigan rolled over a hapless Good Council squad, 64-44. Dave Frink again was the big gun in his team's offense as he tossed in 16 markers. Close on his heels were "Jumpy" Gallyo and Colitta with '4 each. For Good Council, the score was evenly distributed among McCarthy, Boyle, Markham, Karabinus and Brick. Ray Mondschein and Perry Del Purgatorio refereed.

Last Thursday evening the Villanova Chapter of Alpha Si Omega, a National Honorary Dramatic Fraternity, conducted its stage of the Field House. Six members of the Belle Masque Dramatic Society, who met the rigid qualifications, were instructed by the Fraternity's Cast Director, Ted Doyle, as to their further preparation. In order to participate and be admitted at the formal initiation proceedings, each aspirant must conform to a specified program according to rules found in the constitution of Alpha Si Omega.

The eligible pledgors included: John Rowe, Robert Resnick, Bill Breninghouse, Donald Wilson, John Murphy and William Fleming. To qualify, each had to be a member in good standing of the Belle Masque Society, a Junior or Senior, have participated in major and minor productions, and attained a cumulative point score under a prescribed system graduated to their respective contribution.

Lamda Pi, the Villanova segment of Alpha Si Omega, was formed last year at the invitation of the National Fraternity following recommendations by a simialr group at Immaculata College. Since membership is extended conditional to dramatic achievement, Villanova's group shares the distinction of being one of a few from this area to enjoy membership in the National Chapter. Annual dues include a subscription to "The Playbill", a publication of the National Council which contains pertinent news on club activity, recent productions and reports.

The inter-college activity of the subsidiary chapters ranges from social functions to private presentation of one act plays. Recently, Lamda Pi was guest of the Immaculata Chapter, which produced an original play. It is the intention of the local group to diversify their functions with original one act plays to be presented on an exchange basis with Immaculata College and private presentation at regular meetings of the Belle Masque Society.

28TH ANNUAL ALUMNI FOOTBALL BANQUET HONORS GRIDDERS

The main ballroom of the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel, in Philadelphia, was last Tuesday evening, the scene of the 28th Annual Football Banquet sponsored by the Villanova Club of Philadelphia. Mr. Jack Lavelle, notable scout for the New York Giants, Notre Dame, and Yale University football teams was the principal speaker of the program which honored both the Varsity eleven, one of the greatest football teams in Villanova's history, and the 150-lb. recently crowned champions of the Eastern Intercollegiate League.

Dan Brown, Collier's All-East end selection was awarded the Martin J. McLaughlin Memorial Award to the Captain of the 1949 football squad. Mort Berry, of the Philadelphia Inquirer, presented the Cyril J. Burke Award as the Most Consistent Player on the team to Tom Clavin. Tom kicked a field goal from the twenty-three yard line against North Carolina State in addition to having an eighty-five per cent average in his try-for-points after touchdowns this year. The National Alumni Association Award of Most Valuable Player was presented to Ralph Pasquariello who also won an honorable mention as fullback on Collier's All-East team, and was named on the Catholic All American team.

Varsity coach Jim Leonard was the recipient of copious congratulations for his fine record in his first year at Villanova.

Gold football helmets were given to all Senior squad members and to Leon Conches, Senior Manager. Bill Campbell, sports director of WCAU acted as master of ceremonies in very fine fashion. As to fulfilling its purpose, that of honoring two of the greatest representatives of precision football to play for Villanova, the affair was a rousing success, with a fine representation of past and present men of Villanova college. The gathering for the banquet exceeded well over 700 people who resounded with approval the recent records of both teams. To use an expression which some might regard as trite, but which is certainly fitting—"A good time was had by all."

A Villanovan's Impressions Of a Trappist Monastery

By JOSEPH BARRETT, '50

Ed. Note—Joe Barrett, a Senior, had the good fortune to attend a retreat at the Trappist Monastery, in Gethsemani, Kentucky, over the Thanksgiving recess. The Monastery is the home of the famous Trappist author John Merton, and of John Stanley, '48, who entered the Order last summer. Barrett here writes his impressions of his visit, though the only one he was permitted to speak with was the Prior.)

A retreat in the popular sense is retiring in the face of the enemy. It also means a place of seclusion or shelter, or privacy. And in the religious sense it is a retreat in the face of the enemy, Satan, to seclusion with God.

Of Perpetual Prayer

But in a Trappist Monastery one is not closeted with God at certain intervals as in normal retreats, rather He closets Himself with us, always. He hounds us from the gate to the Chapel, from the Chapel to the bedroom. And when the lights are out you can feel Him in the darkness, and hear Him in the pounding silence around you. And in the morning as you look on the fields that are worked by men, as they shovel, or saw, or plow, or just work and smile, you can see the rosary of Mary in their free hand. And if prayers were tangible it would be impossible to see the surrounding hills, for the prayers that are flying so thick and fast to Heaven.

Even as you approach Gethsemani, the single spire beckons to you like a finger pointing to Heaven, "Come, and I will show you the stairs that lead to the gates of Heaven."

Engineering School Grad

And once inside, you can see a man who has tread the same paths that we have, a man who worked out his engineering problems in Mendel Hall, but is now putting them in practice in the monastery at Gethsemani. But Villanova looked different when he was here in the late thirties, before the G. I., before the war.

Clement Dorsey, Villanovan

Brother Clement Dorsey came to Villanova from the state of Michigan, and after graduation went to work as an engineer. It was difficult to find a job, and it was more difficult to find a good job. But Mr. Dorsey went to work for a man who was so distinguished in the engineering field that young engineers paid him a fee merely to work under him. But our Villanova graduate was paid by this famous contractor to work for him.

As Revered as Merton

However, peace was not be found simply in building structures for the sake of building. God's will had greater plans for the engineer and those plans brought him to Gethsemani, Kentucky, in 1942. In view of his college degree it was suggested he become a choir monk, and subsequently a priest. But he preferred to be a brother, for reasons best known only to himself and God. Perhaps it was humility, the humility that cannot be found in Mendel with a slide rule. For his work, Brother Dorsey is as prominent there as the author of best-sellers, Thomas Merton.

The abbot of the Monastery knew how to use a man of the world in the work of God. With life revolving around the tabernacle in prayer and in work, the spiritual capacity and flexibility to the will of God is increased to the point when supreme happiness and contentment is found in the chapel and you actually enjoy taking your recreation with a shovel.

From the Ground Up

But for Bro. Clement the plans were greater for there was construction to be done, and soon he found himself in his old trade. Now he did not have the excellent tools or machines, or expert carpenters, plumbers and bricklayers who put the plans of the engineers in operation, merely a group of novices, monks and lay-brothers to work with.

However he was the Under-master, he was in charge of the different tasks and appointed the brothers to the various jobs.

He undertook the installation of a new and modern plant, a new novitiate wing, various farm buildings. And, finally, with the help of thirty novice laybrothers, whose knowledge of the brick was in its use as Irish confetti, he designed and built a fireproof horse barn with all of the conveniences and improvements of the modern world.

Carries An Extra Physical Cross

But as though the diet was not frugal enough, still it was God's wish for Brother Clement to carry a cross, along with his wonderful labor. So that because of ulcers he could just about eat all of his breakfast, some of his lunch and none of his dinner, so that he is virtually without food from the noon of one day until about six the following morning.

Here is a man who came a third of the continent to come to Villanova, who sweated out his examinations to earn his coveted degree, and then found a good position in his line of work. But his line of work was also God's line of Work, so he changed positions: his present position doesn't pay as much and the conditions are rather poor, but the chances for getting ahead are tremendous—in the next world.

The Library Corner . . .

The spirit of Christmas is now with us. In fact, it's everywhere — even in the Library. Yuletide cheer has been added to the customary welcome the library staff extends to the students, and this has done much to add to the pleasantness of the newest building on our campus.

In the lobby a crib, arranged by the members of the Sanctuar, Society, sets the keynote of the other decorations. This crib was supplied by the Monastery, and together with its surrounding evergreens, has changed the corner of the lobby into a typical Nativity scene.

Display Cases Decorated

The display cases in the lobby have also been decorated in the Christmas colors. An interesting and timely pictorial review of the various Christmas celebrations throughout the world is featured in two of the cases. Another shows a display of books relevant to Yuletide, the last presenting copies of the various Christmas carols which have become so much a part of our celebration of the holiday.

Not to be outdone by the special effects department, the Music Club of the Library is also presenting its recognition of Christmas, in audible form. Tonight, it has been announced, Rev. R. Handran, O.S.A., Moderator of the Band and Glee Club will give a piano recital featuring Christmas songs. This recital, incidentally, will mark the first time the new piano, donated to the library several weeks ago, is to be used by the Music Club in one of its meetings.

Besides this, plans have been made to brighten the last two days before the beginning of the Christmas recess by having Yuletide Music piped through the building over the P. A. system at intervals during the day.

Books For You

The library staff has prepared a list of books they suggest for holiday reading. Of course, agreeing with our Dean, they unequivocally recommend text books as the best form of reading during the three weeks of vacation But if you have time between now and the end of the year, here are some hints to help you use it profitably.

For that spiritual mood, they suggest that you try The Waters of Siloe by Thomas Merton, or Burnt Out Incense, a book along the same lines, by Father Raymond, O.C.S.O.

If you happen to feel intellectual, The Vital Center, by Schlesinger, and The Crisis In Education, by Bell, offer stimulation for your mind in their controversial subject-matter.

For Pleasurable Reading

But then, if you just don't feel up to reading literature as weighty as this, but want a book for pleasurable reading, take a look at The Chosen, by E. J. Edward; To Every Man A Penny, by Bruce Marshall; Father Flanagan of Boys Town, by Fulton Oursler; The Edge of Doom, by Leo Brady; and Call It Treason, by G. Howe.

All these books, as well as meny others are available to you at the library, waiting for you to come around and pick them up. Don't forget the studies, and take the best wishes of the Library for your Merry Christmas and Joyous New Year.

WVIL Presents Christmas Show

Station WVIL, the radio voice of Villanova College, will present its third annual Christmas production the evening of Thursday, December 15th.

The program, which will bring to a close WVIL's activities until after the holiday recess, will be aired from seven to eleven in the evening.

The four-hour presentation will be divided into three main parts. The three portions will be the playing of recorded Christmas carols, a presentation of Dickens "Christmas Carol", and a recorded feature from the Orphans' Christmas party of the afternoon of the same day. The station's new tape recorder will be utilized in the recorded portion of the broadcast.

Bill Breninghouse, station program manager, and Skip Keenley, production manager, are in charge of the program, assisted by Jack Rowe, chief announcer, and Leo Schrieber, chief engineer.

Bussolari Society Meeting

Members of the Bussolari Foreign Affairs Society will meet Tuesday, December 13th at 4:45 P. M. in 215 Mendel Hall.

Members who cannot be present should call Mr. Donn, campus phone 282.

are found several modern bop scores, a representative choice of eight — to — the — bar standards, novelty tunes, and all the current popular ballads. A large part of McKinley's popularity is, no doubt, due to his fine arranging staff headed by Eddie Sauter and Deans Kincaide. With the aid of these two greats, McKinley points all of his arrangements toward the dancing public and has made his orchestra one of the most pleasing to be heard today. In the past three years he has been one of the leading College prom favorites and gives every indication of continuing to hold that position.

Tyson Reilly, chairman of the Senior Prom ticket committee, stated that the tickets for the Prom are now on sale. They can be purchased at the Pie Shop or from any one of the members of the ticket committee. Tickets are priced at $6.00 per couple. Reilly emphasized the importance of making plans for the Prom now, for, although many may not realize it, due to the extended Christmas vacation, the Prom is only 2 days after the close of the Christmas vacation. Although tickets will be sold on these last two days, the committee urges all who are able to do so to purchase their tickets prior to the Christmas vacation.

Dave Frink, chairman of the decoration commitee, refused to release for publication the exact decorative theme of the Prom. However it was promised that it would be fitting to both the time of the year and to the senior class, and that it would be the final touch to a carefully planned Prom that will provide a memorable evening of dancing pleasure both for those of our fellow students who graduate this year and for those under classmen whose senior year is still in the future.

P.M. Drive For TV Continues; Jan. 18 Is Deadline

Bob Probert, campus representative for the Philip Morris Company, has announced that January 18th. has been set as a deadline for the collecting of the 60,000 Philip Morris wrappers needed to acquire an Admiral television set which will be presented to St. John's Orphanage by the Student Council.

A large number of wrappers was received from Easton Catholic High School during the holidays, and in addition to the wrappers turned in during the past week, the number of collected wrappers has swelled to 39,853.

Collections are being made in various schools throughout the area in addition to that being conducted on this campus, in order to help the students of Villanova beat the deadline with time to spare.

A steady stream of PM wrappers is flowing into the Pie Shop as the contest, which has been going on for the past two months, rapidly approaches its end. All that is needed to go over the top is 10 wrappers from each Villanovan. That number, plus the anticipated returns from other collection centers, will readily attain the 60,000 figure.

The Philip Morris Company is extremely pleased with the enthu-

Exams Will Begin Saturday Morning

The climax of a full semester's work will begin on Saturday morning and continue through till Friday, January 20. The exam schedule has been published by the dean's office and posted on all bulletin boards.

A new feature of the exam week will be the use of the Field House for several exams for large groups. Other than this innovation, the procedure will be similar to past years. Tests will be given at 8:00 A. M., 12 noon, and 3:00 P. M.

177 To Graduate This Semester

For some 177 Villanova men, the close of this semester will mark the end of their studies here at Villanova. Of these 177 men, 20 are from the school of Arts and Sciences, 55 from the school of Commerce and Finance, and 103 will be graduates of the Engineering School.

Although these men will have completed their scholastic requirements for their degrees by the end of this semester, they will not receive their diplomas until the formal commencement exercises in June.

This will be the last group of Villanovans to leave under the accelerated program. In the future any group graduating in January will consist only of men who either have had to make up some failures or who have gotten out of their regular categories by changing their course.

Fr. Rogers To Conduct Annual Retreat, Opens Sunday, Jan. 22

It has been announced by Chaplain's Office that Father Thomas E. Rogers, O.S.A., will conduct this year's Annual Retreat. This will mark the 107th student retreat at Villanova College.

Father Rogers has given two retreats here at Villanova, one in 1938 and a more recent one in 1942. Before these he was a prefect at the college.

Of special note to the students is that there has been a change in schedule for the Retreat. Proceedings have been moved ahead one day, therefore beginning Sunday evening at 7:30 and ending Wednesday morning, about ten o'clock.

All Catholic students are requested to stop in at the Chaplain's Office some time this week and pick up their Retreat envelopes.

Confessions will be heard after Benediction Sunday evening and also daily during the Retreat at 11:30 A. M. and 4:15 and 8:30 P.M.

Monday and Tuesday the Retreat will open with Mass, followed by three conferences and Holy Hour. Resident students will have Night Prayers at 8:00 o'clock.

All seniors graduating in February must make arrangements at the Belle Air Office in Mendel Hall for purposes of receiving their yearbook. A charge of three dollars will be made to cover the balance of the yearbook subscription and the book shall be mailed in June to those who have received the proper receipt upon payment. All arrangements must be completed by January 25, 1950.

Owl Hop Scheduled For Field House, Friday, Feb. 17

The Owl Hop will mark the end of the winter social season at Villanova on February 17 in the Field House. This will be the first appearance of the Phi Kappa Pi dance since pre-war days, the Hop having been last presented in 1941. At that time it was one of the most eagerly awaited informal dances held on campus.

This year the Owl Hop will feature what promises to be something really different in decorations, plus the recently reorganized and vastly improved Villanovans dance band. With a reputation for unique and interesting decorations in the past, our present crop of engineers refuses to be outdone and is planning an interior face-lifting for the field house that will set a precedent for Owl Hops in the future.

All Engineers Represented

All schools of engineering are represented on the decoration committee under Chairman Jack Link, and the theme will be designed to encompass all four fields present in the Villanova engineering Villanova curriculum.

Music for the Hop will be provided by Vince Palma and his new Villanovans, who come to the bandstand with several new additions after a recent turnover in personnel. The vibes which everyone enjoyed at the Inter-frat Ball will now be a permanent fixture with the outfit.

Last Chance

As the last dance to be offered before the Lenten season, the Owl Hop presents a final opportunity for local blades to get in the swing of things before the big shut-down on activities which lasts until after the Easter Holidays.

Although the event's offered by the Engineering fraternity, Phi Kappa Pi, all students are cordially invited to attend. Dancing will run from 9 P. M. till 1 A. M. with never a dull moment between sets. Tickets for the affair will sell for $2.40 per couple, tax included.

Initiations To Be Held

Pledgees to the Phi Kappa Pi fraternity may obtain applications for membership at the Phi Kap's next meeting, tomorrow evening at 5 o'clock in 215 Mendel Hall. Initiations will be held February 9, so all applications must be returned by Monday, February 6.

Weekend Marked By Prom, Dinner-Dance

With the dinner-dance Saturday night at the Broadwood, and the Senior Promenade, Friday night in the Field House, the Seniors, class of '50 ended their social endeavors at Villanova. The swan song was a memorable one with the arrangements of Ray McKinley and his orchestra. The dinner-dance, despite the poor attendance by the Seniors, was a singular success with music supplied by the Blue Notes.

The Field House, Friday, was wonderfully decorated. It had as its theme a winter wonderland. With the work of Dave Frink the center piece, a sleigh, roped in by giant candy canes, blended in beautifully with the surroundings. Off to one side was a fire place reminiscent of the vacation days around the yule log.

But the attention of most of the formally dressed couples was focused on the sweet music of Ray McKinley who gace adequnte proof of the validity of his reputation. The Blue Notes, the same organization that played at the dinner-dance the next evening, filled in with music at the intermissions.

Although the dinner-dance was not as crowded as was at first expected dut to the basketball game, and to confusion brought on by the proximity of vacation and examination, it was, nonetheless, a success. The couples dined on delicious roast capon as the entree and later danced to music by the Blue Notes.

At the Prom, Senior Class president, Mike Marshall briefly welcomed the seniors, and was followed by the sinbinb of the Alma Mater. Many of these seniors will complete their scholastic endeavors this month although they will not graduate until the Spring semester with the rest of the class.

Probably the credit for the success of both of these affairs goes to the Chairmen of both events and to the Chairmen of the various committees. George Szymanski was the chairman of the Belle Aire Ball, while Ray Waldron was the head man for the arrangements of the dinner-dance. Mike Marshall, President of the Class, also deserves credit as do sub-committee-heads: Gene Valerio, Tyson Reilly, Dave Frink, Joe Gibson, Bill Leighton, and Bruce Taten.

When students of the next century study our times, the thing that will probably astound them is how in 50 years we were able to find the time and enthuiasiam to fight two major wars. Last week brought to a close an era whose keynote was change. Changes so vast and effective as to influence every nation and every human being in the world. Yet, the world, not even attuned to the developments of science, plunged headlong into two world conflicts, the most horrifying in the history of war.

Science had fallen from its place of deification, to be saddled and driven hard in search of the wherewithal to fight wars, and the comforts to make peace more worthwhile. Hardly had Hiroshima cooled than scientists went back to the labs to see if they could bridle that energy for practical use.

Hardly a man now alive, who remembers the turn of the century, could believe what he had seen. Electric lighting, automobiles, gas stoves, radio and finally television, to say nothing about the local movie house, each wrought tremendous change in home life; especially American home life. The nation which had fought to take credit for these developments and by mid-century was one of the few which could afford them. Planes, trains and autos accelerated until the earth's inhabitants were appalled at its smallness.

Fifty years ago, the British Empire, under Queen Victoria saw the end of the colonial wars with the defeat of the Boers. Englishmen were filled with haughtiness and pride as they surveyed the strings, knotted at London, that tied the whole world to her apron. Even as Rome had declined, so also did the British world, but with men like Churchill it did so more gracefully.

As London declined, the expanded city of New York that typified the country it controlled financially, rose to take its place. Where the colony-enriched pound had failed, the capitalist dollar was at least doing better, and as it did so the young and still awkward United States realized the domination of world politics.

Even though the democratic nations fought two wars to stem the totalitarian trend of the short-lived German Empire, they began to feel more and more strongly that here wasn't where the most dangerous enemy lay. As the communism practiced in Moscow tried to push beyond the limits of the Soviet Union, and the world by degrees, became conscious and then fearful of such a force, tentacles which had grown silently were discovered throughout every land.

It was significant that Pius XII, Bishop of Rome and Pope of the Holy Catholic church, declared for all his people that 1950 was a Holy Year. The Church had risen from the days of the Council of Trent to a position which was fundamentally stronger and more learned than any since its inception. Catholics looked at the organization with pride and devotion, reorganizing Protestants with a bit of jealousy. Not governed by political hesitancy, the Church was the first to open fire on the still growing communism. There was then a sense of admiration shown as the people of America and other democratic nations at least too notice of the common enemy.

The era ended was that belonging to our parents and grandparents, that which we opened last week will be ours and our childrens'. If a few tears were noticed as people looked back over fifty years and looked ahead to another fifty, it might have been as much the unpromising years ahead as the memories of the past.

At any rate minds filled with horrible memories of war learned there was no such thing as "balance of powers", "wars to end wars" and "weapons to end wars".

In the future the blackness might clear. Now the threat of the Red Tide is still imminent. A United Nations organization still reeked of two worlds instead of one. The world was still crying that God was ommitted from the world plotting boards only to soothe a certain group. Whether the hand of the peace maker could be successful without God's direction only the future and God knew. Some prayed, others waited.

TRUE OR FALSE?

Following the mid-term examinations we received many comments from the student body about the tests. Although we were filled with enthuiasiam about the issue then, we felt it better to save our comments till this issue with semester exams only a week away.

We believe, and we feel that everyone will feel the same way, that the subjective or essay type exam is the more ideal. It offers the student an even chance to include that which he knows in a treatise which not only expresses this knowledge but indicates the ability with which he can expound on such material.

Many times this type of exam is not practical and so the need for the objective exam. Here the short answer and multiple choice are sufficient although they limit the interrogation to bare facts taken singly. What has become an extreme sore point is the famed true and false examination. Here it is often felt that not only is an extensive knowledge of the subject required but also a keen subtleness to detect the hidden snares. It exaggerates the knowledge of the dolt and belittles that of the student when results are tabulated.

Since college is an institution of higher and we believe more mature learning, it is only fair then that examinations should be considered in the same light.

Home Is Where The Pocketbook Is

By Bill Brenninghouse

This college life isn't all its cracked up to be. Take the case of amiable Oscar Twomp. He isn't a dayhop and he isn't a resident. They have bestowed the title of "Temp Twomp" on our boy. He is living off campus "temporarily" due to crowded conditions. This first term has been misery financially and he is a physical wreck.

Ideal Condition?

When he first came to the school he thought living off campus would be ideal. Then he started counting the cost. He is paying thirty-five dollars a week to share a room with nine other guys in a garret apartment six miles from the school. For this thirty-five dollars he gets one sack, clean sheets once a month, his socks darned and three ham sandwhiches a week. Food, laundry and incidentals come at a little extra charge.

Tips For Oscar

Oscar's old man is a newspaper boy with a hilly route and has to depend on tips to send Oscar to school and believe it or not it hasn't been easy. In fact, Oscar thinks that he is being taken by a profiteering landiord.

Bacon Fat

It hasn't been fun living in that snake pit. Take the other day, for instance, Oscar started having hunger cramps and decided to get a piece of bacon fat out of the refrigerator. As he came into the kitchen a trap door was sprung and he landed in a coal bin. Picking up his black, and we do mean black, and blue body he climbed through the trap door and finally reached the refrigerator. This was a vault like affair with a triple combination time lock. The pantry came next.

There should have been a stale crust in the pantry but the barbed wire stopped him from venturing any further so he crawled back up to his straw pallet and fell down exhausted from hunger.

Life Was Tough

Life was tough. Every morning he wrapped canvas around his blistered feet and set out in the general direction of his school. Sometimes he gets a ride, twice to be exact he managed to catch the pony express. At school he could hardly concentrate he suffered so much from chills and fever and his teeth rattled for lack of something to chew.

Saxaphone Player

One of the nine guys in the room plays the saxaphone not well but loudly, another is a prospective Golden Glove champ and has a punching bag hung in the middle of the room. Still another roommate is a practical joker and takes pride in ruining the sleep and study of his buddies by starting small conflagrations under their beds.

It's pretty hard studying with two desks for nine students or pseudo-students and one fifty watt frosted incandescent lamp. It's two miles to the bus stop and two and a half to the nearest eatery thus making necessary an uncomfortable amount of pedal activity.

Flunking Six Subjects

Oscar's life has been seriously affected by these conditions. He is flunking six subjects, he hasn't had a date since September, he's lost thirty-pounds and hasn't had a haircut for months. He is bitter and dejected and has bitten six friends in the last week.

Ray Of Light

In all this darkness there now appears a ray of light. There is a group of students on the campus who, strangely enough, are interested in the welfare of their fellow students. Not only that, there is no money in it for them. They want to help out guys like Twomp. It may sound funny but it's true and through these people Oscar has found a good room at a reasonable cost.

So Now

Now that Oscar has been taken care of he wants to see that the rest of the Temps are happy. Soooooo . . . If you think some one is getting rich through your room rent, if you are the victim of a money-grabbing skinflint, if you are living in unlivable living quarters, don't grin and bear it. Act now! Send a postoard to OSCAR TWOMP c/o Villanovan and he'll do what he can.

SS VILLANOVA VICTORY

One of the last Villanovans to receive an honorable discharge after serving her country during the recent war is the cargo ship SS Villanova Victory, which was recently purchased from the Maritime Commission by the Isbrandsten Company, world-wide shippers.

The Villanova Victory was built by the California Shipbuilding Corporation at their Terminal Island yards. She was launched from that yard on April 27th., 1945, and turned over to the Maritime Commission. This ship is the latest addition to its fleet, the Isbrandsten Company announced, and was renamed the Brooklyn Heights, after one of the first company-owned vessels taken over by the Government at the beginning of the war.

As the Brooklyn Heights, the former Villanova Victory was to be placed in service between the United States and European ports in the Antwerp-Hamburg run. When last reported, though, the ship was docked in Hong Kong, loading for a trip through the Chinese Nationalist blockade into Shanghai. At present, this trip is doubtful, as another ship of the Isbrandsten Line has aroused national interest by its proposed attempt to run this same blockade.

By JAMES GRIFFIN

Happy New Year!

And I guess you're thinking that what follows is bound to be the same trite old line about starting the New Year right, making some good old-fashioned resolutions, and sticking with them right up to December . . . and you are thinking how futile it is.

Not This Time

That might have been the line for this week, but those old fashioned resolutions make me tired, too. The pattern they follow is monotonous. Born on the first, dead on the tenth, or the twelfth at the best. And sometimes I wonder what's wrong with resolutions, what makes them go under?

It seems that one of the chief difficulties with them is the wave of over-enthusiasm which rides them in. We feel hopped up to a new year, we feel great, we could break chains with our chest. And so we determine in one grand sweep to eliminate all flaws from ourselves; we decide that nothing less than perfection will suit us in this new and glorious 1950.

Then a week or so passes, maybe only a couple of days. The wave of enthusiasm has long since rolled out to sea, and we are up on the beach with a whole string of promises we've made to ourselves, and each one seems more ridiculous than any other. We wonder how we ever could have so overrated ourselves. We make a joke of our great expectations, and we start off in the middle of January just about where we were in the middle of November.

Enough Of That

Or perhaps we've lived through that pattern often enough. We decide on New Year's that resolutions are futile. We've seen enough of that enthusiasm, and we'll have none of it.

Both attitudes are probably quite common, but the best lies somewhere in between. It is senseless to get the idea that we can coast right into pay dirt on a few New Year's resolutions, but on the other hand it is just as senseless to stand by and let the annual wave waste its energy. Perhaps if we held down a little on our enthusiasm we could put it to some effective use. Perhaps if we gauged our will power with a little thought we could make a couple of conservative resolutions that might live past ten days.

A Different Approach

Perhaps we could decide instead of doing something, or not doing it, to try to do it. Then when we fail for the first time we can hold to our good purpose instead of throwing the whole thing up and saying, "There goes '50". We could fail twice or three times and still have kept a resolution to try. And maybe after a while trying won't be such a struggle and we'll find that by not making our resolution too definite we are actually succeeding in keeping it more definitely than we have ever done before.

It may sound like drawing hair lines; but even if it's worthless, it's worth a try. Make a resolution that you will try to keep just one or two New Year's resolutions, then all you have to do is try . . . and your resolution will be intact.

Where the many detractors of Bop have failed the boppers themselves may be effecting a degradation of that toward which they so ardently struggled. Bop has finally reached the stage where it its forward progress is beginning to fail. Many of the men who were the popularizers of the idiom have become stale and repetitious. Bop is progress, that is why it is good jazz. When it ceases to advance and bring forth new ideas it will no longer be good jazz but merely a thing of the past . . . the music they played back in '49.

Threat Present

From the moment that Bop first began to attract the more discerning listeners to its standard the threat was present. The young musicians, those who were unable to make any contributions themselves, began the ever-ruinous mode of imitation. They not only tried to imitate the music of their idols, but even carried it to the ridiculous extent of mimicry of their actions, dress, and way of life.

Gradually this spread. Too many were content to relax and bask in the reflected glory of those who were making Bop a jazz idiom to be respected and enjoyed. Too many were doing the emulating and too few were worthy of emulation.

The top names in Bop are few. We have now reached the stage where fresh ideas are not as common as they were in the golden age of jazz just passed. It is no longer sufficient for a drummer to play fill ins that are ahead or behind the beat. Trumpeters and tenor men must be able to do more than play interpersed scales and sustain screeching high notes. Now is the time when there must be a regrouping of the forces that made Bop the great improvement in jazz so long awaited by the musically jazz conscious public.

Progress a Must

Bop must progress. It has come a long way in the past few years; it must continue to go a long way in both public appreciation and artistic endeavor along the lines of arrangement and composition to maintain the respect that has been so grudingly given it and to earn further respect and acknowledgement as a legitimate music form.

This is the new year. It gives us all a chance to get a new start, a chance to improve on what we have done in the past. Let us hope that the powers that be in Bop will take advantage of this to bring forth the fresh ideas and sound transformations so necessary to the constant progress that is jazz.

Ancient History

Ancient history: Way back last year Artie Shaw played at the Click and came up with the best music I've heard at that glorified gin-mill. The maestro was in fine form on the clarinet and his new outfit shows great promise, being rather reminiscent of the great Shaw outfit of the early 1940's, when swing was the thing and Artie was top man of the Totem.

During the show they ran through all the old unforgetables — Stardust, Begin the Beguine, Dancing in the Dark, etc. while also intro' ducing a few new numbers that should be showing up on records soon. Particularly impressive was a rather complex ditty called "Lyonia" featuring Shaw on clarinet and his skinman Irv Koegler in the most original drum solo I've ever heard. If you liked "Concerto for Clarinet" you'll lose your mind over "Lyonio".

Pat Lockwood

It would be pure sacrilege not to mention Artie's latest find in the vocal department. Pat Lockwood is a doll, the large economy size perhaps, but a doll all the same. This kid is another Peggy Lee, or I miss my guess.

Aside from the good listening, the Shaw show disclosed two glaring changes in the Shaw outfit. First, the usual strings were absent from the band stand and perhaps even more significant — Artie was seen to smile at the audience and even talk to several couples as they danced by the band stand.

Fiddles

There has always been much pro and conning about Shaw's use of fiddles but with or without them he has consistently produced good music, however, when Artie becomes genial with his listening public that's something to think about. Perhaps he's given up women in favor of people. At any rate with a little more personality on the bandstand and the same great music this new outfit has unlimited potential. I'm sure we'll be hearing more from them this coming year.

Patti Page seems to have the local disc jockeys going around in circles (like a life saver) with her latest called "With My Eyes Wide Open". She pulled a Les Paul and made four separate records then played them together and recorded the resulting confusion to get a nice quartet effect. Talk about leading a double life, here's a gal trying to out-do the four-way cold tablets.

Sense and Nonsense By Tom Pasha

Every tourist guidebook you pick up now days advises you to travel not only to witness new, exciting, enchanting, and deserted places but also because you meet so many interesting and fascinating people on a cross-country safari. However, I've yet to come in contact with one of these much publicized characters.

Take for an instance my last trip home on the square-wheeled, vertebrate viberating, mode of transportation commonly refered to as a bus. Did I become acquainted with an enlightened traveler? Of course not, because after the driver finished shuffling the ticket stubs, I found myself sitting, as usual, with a motherly, spectacled, travel-worn little old lady who was just waiting for an opportune moment at which time she could begin relating her trials and tribulations. She had more troubles than Carter has pills and by the time I reached home the experience would have put Mr. Anthony back in the minor leagues.

Prologue on the Weather

After the usual prologue regarding the weather, and miserable bus ride, she began her lengthy tale of woe and although the coherency of the conversation is questionable, I gathered from what she said that her family was in such a sad state of affairs tht Helen Trent was seriously thinking of suing the whole shebang.

This poor bewildered soul was returning from Podunck Junction, New Jersey, where she had witnessed the marriage of her youngest feminine off-spring. I must admit that my tear ducts responded admirably when she uttered with noticiable dismay the fact that "Baby" had sealed the marital bond with an apprentice butcher who was nothing but an old cut-up.

We both hoped that this little escapade of Baby's wouldn't come to as sorrowful a conclusion as the one into which the elder daughter Amelia had ventured. It seems that Amelia had divorced her husband, Horace, who two years ago left the house to buy a bottle of Airwick and never returned. Sensing something was wrong, Amelia packed up the cocker-spaniel and humbly withdrew to Reno where she severed the bonds and won the custody of Poopsie the puppy.

Have a Bon Bon?

As we reach the outskirts of my stamping-grounds, the little old woman offered me a Bon-bon and surveying my contenance, remarked that she had a son about my age, however, he had joined the Foreign Legion a few years ago because of scholarly difficulties. It seems that Bernard couldn't navigate past the third grade and with a questionable future in sight enlisted in the corps.

As I got off the hired chariot and waved goodbye to my seatmate a silly thought ran through my inadequate gray-matter. "Wouldn't it be swell if sometime I could get a seat next to an attractive litle blonde? You know, Tom, like the one that was sitting in front of you with the fatherly, spectacled, travel-worn, little old man."

Around The Town

By F. A. Varallo

A glance at the playbill shows that several of the plays which opened here in preceeding weeks tarry a while to enliven the post-holiday season. One of these, "Arms and the Girl," a new Theater Guild musical, was given its premiere at the Forrest. This comedy has been adapted, with reasonable fidelity, from the 1933 stage hit "The Pursuit of Happiness."

The action takes place in a Connecticut village in 1776. Pretty Jo Kirkland, having been driven from her home near Doylestown, Pa., by the British, seeks out her New England relatives and again finds herself in the midst of hostilities. Jo, who is willing to give her all for her country, dons trousers and drills raw recruits. She has reason to suspect that there is a British spy in the camp but cannot decide whether it is the Hessian deserter or the Colonial colonel. The rest of the story concerns her attepts to discover who the real villain is. Meanwhile, she bungles things so badly that General Washington, himself, has to appear to straighten things out.

"Arms and the Girl" has the makings of a Broadway success. It starts out with a new star, George Guetary who has charm, stage presence and a remarkably resonant tenor. It boasts a cast of talented principals and a first-class score by Morton Gould. For a fresh and delightful evening's entertainment, we recommend "Arms and the Girl."

"The Enchanted"

This new play at the Walnut is a French fantasy by Jean Giraudoux. The moral of the play is not generally evident and the details of the story, not easily analyzed.

Isabel, a young school teacher in a small French town, instructs her pupils to take an uninhibited view of life. She is encouraged in her views by a ghost who meets her in the woods at twilight and discusses the situation. The towns people are puzzled and annoyed by the whole affair. They summon an Inspector from Paris to clear things up but he isn't too successful and the conclusions reached are rather muddled.

"The Enchanted" will appeal to those who enjoy flights of fancy. If the play is taken as a subtle satire, a knowledge of the present political situation in France will be of value to the playgoer.

"The Heiress"

Turning now to the cinema, we come across this fascinating film at the Fox. Olivia deHavilland, Montgomery Clift and Ralph Richardson star in this absorbing drama of conflicting emotions. Set in nineteenth century New York, it is inspired by the Broadway play of Henry James's novel, "Washington Square."

Olivia gives a brilliant performance as the shy daughter of a successful, over critical father. Montgomery Cliff brings love into Olivia's barren life but her happiness is short-lived when her father objects to the marriage on the grounds that Cliff is a common fortune-hunter. He threatens to disinherit Olivia and Monty's love is put to the test.

Ralph Richardson scores as Olivia's clever distinguished father; Miriam Hopkins is fine as her match-making aunt.

By JOE KENNEY and JACK APPLEGATE

There comes a time in everyman's life when he must pass certain, well-publicized exams in order to beworthy of a college degree and it seems that our time has come, but . . . Yes, beieve it or not, we have finally reached that stage that seemed so far away six years ago when we first set foot on the grounds at Villanova. We happened across a bulletin board the other day and lo and behold there were our names on a list of prospective grads . . . Will wonders never cease . . . So, with our hearts filled with hope and our pockets stuffed with ponies, we prepare ourselves for the inevitable finals.

No matter what happens we can't lose . . . If we pass we win ourselves two very attractive pieces of sheepskin which qualify us for active membership in the Eligible Bachelor Club; if we don't pass we win two pieces of cowhide on the seat of the pants and twofree tickets to the uranium mines in Upper Transylvania . . . However, we will bid adieu to these hallowed halls with flying colors . . . black and blue . . . We might truthfully say that the track season is about to open around here . . . All next week the ponies will be racing around the campus. Of course we understand that this is illegal but we also understand that cooperation is the secret of success. To each his own.

Now we must turn our backs on dear old Alma Mater and face the cold cruel world to see what lies ahead for two industrious, intelligent, conscientious, young college grads . . . then we'll see if we can find something for us to do. But don't take it too hard . . . Maybe the next writers will do a better job on this scandal sheet. (Ed. Note: They couldn't be worse.)

Orchids to: Those who were instrumental in securing monetary satisfaction for those band members who were victims of theft at the Georgetown game.

The Senior Committee members who worked so diligently to make the Senior weekend a grand success.

Onions to: Those who are growing two heads just to confuse the census takers.

Let us review some of the confusion that reigned over the recent holidays. Besides taking us away from the books, the events of the past three weeks took us away from the Status of sound, healthy human beings. The Post Office in particular tore at the very nervous systems of many of our loyal brothers . . . Dan Dehl, Jack Gibbons, Paul McMenamin, Bernie Rafferty, Charlie Comerford, Joe Mullen, Bill Hahn, Frank Ney, Jack McLaughlin and George Schillinger were all seen hustling about the 30th street building picking up a bit of loose change for their empty purses . . . Joe Buckley was spotted on the sidewalks of West Philly dragging a bag (a mail bag).

Incidentally may we express congratulations and condolences to Paul Cooney and George Schillinger who worked up enough nerve to pop the fatal question and sell their freedom at the price of one diamond per . . . may the best man win.

Before we forget it, as true members of the Belle Masque, let us inform you that Fr. Krupa has selected a humdinger of a play for the spring production March 23, 24 and 25. Don't miss it.

The slide rule clan from Mendel Hall have set February 17 as the date for their Owl Hop in the Field House and have chosen Gene Valerio as chairman of the tussle . . . Music by the Villanovans. The Phi Kappa Pi will hold their annual electrocution ceremony (better known as initiations) on February 9. Oh! what those poor intelligentia go through.

Well, as the boy said when he ripped the seat of his pants, "The end is in view." Having rambled on through the weeks, we feel it is about time we put an end to this nonsense and let you men go on about your business. We hate to go . . . but better now than never.

NFCCS Sponsoring Low-Cost Holy Year Tours Of Europe For Students

"Bargain basement" tours are being offered by the NFCCS in conjunction with the activities of the Holy Year of 1950. These tours offer an opportunity for the college student to gain knowledge and culture such as can be obtained on a tour through the great cities of Europe at a price which is within reach.

Applications may be obtained from the office of the Dean of Student Activities. It is pointed out that once the application is mailed to the New York office of the NFCCS unit in charge of the Holy Year tours, the student will be doing business with that office.

The itineraires presented are designed to meet the desires of students — and their pocketbooks. Never before has it been possible to visit Europe at so low a cost.

For those who desire to pursue courses of study at the great University of Fribourg, a special itinerary has been arranged. After the summer sessions at Fribourg the students in attendance will travel to Rome to join other American students and to participate with them in a great demonstration of faith and unity.

Fortunately, the summer of 1950 will witness the World Congress and the Interfederal Assembly of Pax Romana, the International Movement of Catholic Students. Assembled in Holland for this event will be students from all over the world, and this great student conclave will be one of the focal points on an itinerary offered to those who desire to participate in this international gathering.

Chaplains or moderators will travel with each group of student pilgrims, and adequate guides will be provided for sightseeing. Whenever possible, these guides will be native students, who will be able to select attractions which are appealing to students. Student Federations in each country visited will make every effort to provide numerous opportunities to bring together American students and their European fellow-students.

REGISTRATION: These tours are open to all persons, students and non-students, between the ages of 16-30. However, there is no age limit for Religious and lay members of Catholic college faculties, to whom special consideration will be given in accommodations. A deposit of $75.00 is required with each application. This amount is the minimum, more may be submitted with the application. Applications will be accepted until March 31, 1950. Those received after that date cannot be guaranteed acceptance. Accommodations will be allotted on a first come-first served basis. All accounts must be settled before May 31, 1950.

Arrangements have been made to allow payment by installments, if this service is desired. After the initial deposit has been made, additional payments must be made on the 15th of every month, starting with January 15, 1950. The amount of the payments is left to the discretion of the applicants. All accounts must be fully paid by May 31, 1950. Applications and payments are to be submitted to the International Catholic Travel Committee, 39 West 55th St., N. Y., N. Y.

PASSPORTS: United States Passports cost $10.00 and must be obtained by individuals directly from the Department of State. No visas are necessary for any of the itineraries for United States citizens. However, those using the itinerary which includes Germany, must apply for a special permit to enter Germany when they submit their application for a Passport. Yearbook On Schedule

The editors of the Belle Air yearbook extend their gratitude to the faculty and student body for the assistance received during the compilation of the first section of the annual. This division of the yearbook went to press shortly after the beginning of the Christmas recess and includes several new features.

The final sections of the yearbook go to press the second week of February. One of these sections deals with Student Activities on campus, while the other concerns itself with sports.

There will be a meeting of the Belle Air staff on Wednesday, January 11, 1950, at 3:00 P. M. in the Belle Air office. All staff members must attend this meeting, as final assignments have been made for the remaining sections of the yearbook.

CAGERS SEEK NINTH AND TENT AGAINST WEAK SCARLET; RAMS

Wildcats Show Good Home Record; Poor on Road

By Neal Fahy

Tomorrow evening will find the Villanova court quintet back on its home floor for the first time in a month as the Wildcats take on a fast-breaking Ruters University five gled by Jumpin' Buddy Hatchet. The Scarlet, coached by Jim White, has a season's record of 4 and 5.

On Saturday night it will be Fordham's turn to take a shot at the Main ILiners impressive record. This contest will take place at the Palestra with Penn taking on Yale in the opener. The Rams are 2 and 4 on the season. Villanova must again be listed as a heavy favorite in both of this week's games since the Widcats had little trouble in trouncing them last year although it must be mentioned that every team the 'Cats face now seem to be 'up' for the game since Villanova is on the top. It is much easier to be the underdog

'Cats Not a Road Team

Looking over the record of the same Wildcat team that has performed for Coach Severence for the last three seasons, it is interesting to note that the 'Cats are an excellent home team but just mediocre on the road. The statistics:

At Home: WON 31—LOST 2.
Away: WON 16—LOST 13

This might be a possible explanation of the four points min over

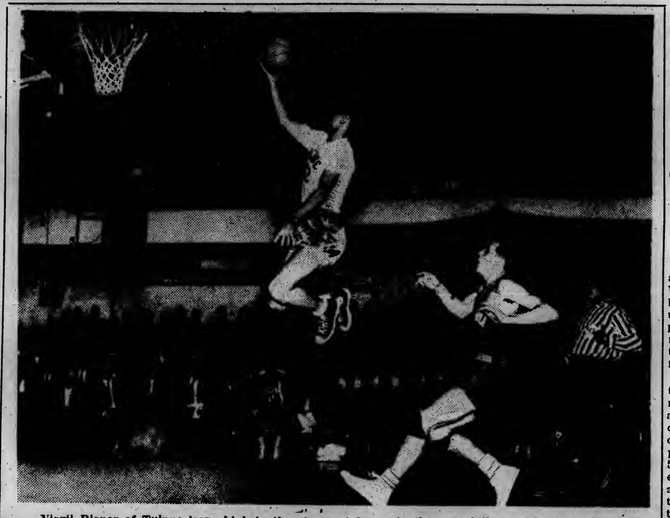
ARTIE MAHAN NEW BASEBALL COACH



Former Wildcat Star Succeeds Weinert

During the Christmas recess, Father McKee, Moderator of Athletics, announced the appointment of Arthur L. Hahan as Villanova's new baseball coach, Mahan succeeds Phil (Lefty) Weinert who resigned recently in order to devote his full time to other business interests.

Art Mahan is no newcomer to the Villanova campus. He entered the school in September, 1932, from Somerville, Massachusetts. For three years he was a regular first baseman on the Wildcat nine, and was elected captain of the team in his senior year. Upon graduation in 1936, Art became the property of the Boston Red Sox and began his professional baseball career with Hazleton of the old New York-Penn League. From there he was moved up to Little Rock of the Southern Association, and later to Louisville of the American Association. He became a Major Leaguer on Opening Day of the 1940 season as regular first baseman for the Philadelphia Phillies.

During the 1941 season, Mahan was sent back to the Little Rock Trnvelers. He was with that ball club when he entered the service in 1942. After four years of service as an instructor in Captain Tom Hamilton's Naval Pre-Flight School, he returned to professional baseball as manager of Providence of the New England League. He then became associated with the Eureka Casualty Company and is at present their leid Manager in the Philadelphia area.

Now a full-time resident of Philadelphia, Art Mahan returns to Villanova with a fine baseball background.

Virgil Risner of Tulane leaps high in the air to sink one in the consolation game of the Sugar Bowl Tournament. Coming down to cover Risner is Wildcat Captain Leo Wolf.

FROSH GAIN TWO VICTORIES; WHIP TEMPLE; LOYOLA

Maguire, Hennessy Again Set Pace

It was a happy holiday season for Villanova's yearlings as they romped to two impressive victories. On December 16 the Wildcats met Temple High of Philadelphia and pounded out a 74-46 victory. The frosh were in a ball game for the first half but soon turned the game into a rout. Coach "Major" McDonnell gave his entire squad a crack at the Templers. Thirteen men scored for the Blue and White, the parade was led by Nick Maguire who hit for 15 counts. Jim Koehnlien of Temple High displayed a fine variety of shots as he led the opponent scoring with 7 field goals.

Cats Beat Loyola

On December the 19th the freshmen club traveled to Baltimore to meet Loyola's frosh. Again it was a display of wide open basketball performed by the blue and white as they piled up a 83-50 victory.

The frosh had control of the game from the opening minute and were never headed. Steve Gepp played his usual fine backboard game. Sam Glassmere and Nick Maguire were like two scared rabbits as they outraced the defenders to score sensational twin pointers. Big Larry Hennessy led the scoring column with 19 points, Nick Maguire with 14, and Steve Gepp with 10 followed. Loyola's big guns were Schuler and Doherty with 15 and 12 points.

Play Rutgers

With each game the frosh quintet looks better and soon will be meeting some of the top freshmen clubs around. On Jan. 11 "Major's" boys will face a highly respected Rutgers outfit at the Field House. The Wildcats now have a undefeated streak of six and will be striving to make it lucky seven come Wednesday.

ROSS; M'KENNA AND THOMPSON IN STAR; INQUIRER GAMES

Washington Mile, Inquirer 600 Draw Top Talent

By Bill Cooney

Indoor track, which really got off to a roaring start last Saturday at the Brooklyn K. of C. games, climbs into the top nation wide brackets this coming Saturday P. M. with the running oft he annual Washington Star games in the capitol city. The top feature of the meet is the mile, which every year draws the cream of the country's distance crop. The field this year is sort of a track and field milky way judging by the stars who are entered.

Ross in Star Mile

Villanova will be again represented by Browning Ross. Ross won the event in 1948 with the sizzling time of 4:12.7, but last year lost to George Wade of Yale. Wade, who won the IC-4A mile crown later on in season, will defend the title. He'll have a lot of defending to do, however, for the starters include Dan Gehrmann of Wisconsin, undefeated in the mile last year, John Twomey of Illinois National A.A.U. 1500 metre champ and Carl Joyce, schoolboy mile sensation who is now a freshman at Georgetown. Foreign competition will come in the persons of Alf Holmberg, Sweden's gift to Tennessee and John Bany of Ireland who's 4:08.6 clocking seem to put him as one of the world's best.

'Cats Teams to Run Relays

The Wildcats undoubtedly will enter the one or two mile relay, probably both; while not officially announced though equally probable George Thompson will defend his 1000 crown which he gained last year.

Closer to home is the Inquirer Meet which will take place Friday night, January 20th. Rosa will again run the mile. As of last Sunday morning the only entries listed by the Inquirer were Neil Pratt of Syracuse, Gerry Carver, former Penn State star in addition to Twan-

CAGERS WIN TWO OVER HOLIDAYS; BOW IN SUGAR BOWL

Arizin Most Valuable Player in Tourney

Led by Paul Arizin, a star in victory and defeat—the Wildcats split even in a quartet of games played during the holiday season. Tall Paul joined the select "1000 Club", in the game against Mt. St. Mary's on Dec. 16, when he dropped in a field goal in the last half minute of a 79-45 win. Tom Sabol matched Arizin's 16 point game total in this contest. Traveling to Baltimore, the Wildcats subdued a stubborn Loyola club 49-45. Brooks Ricca netted 15 points to lead the local scoring parade after Arizin fouled out early in the second half.

In the annual Sugar Bowl sports extravaganza, the Blue and White warriors suffered their first defeats of the season bowing to Kentucky and Tulane on successive nights. Behind by one point at halftime, the Wildcats from the Blue Grass state, came back in the second half and tied the score at the end of the regulation game. Kentucky went on to win in the overtime period by a 57-56 count. Despite the fact that his team lost, Arizin took scoring honors as he dumped 24 points through the hoop. Thirteen of these came after the halftime intermission and accounted for 2/3 of Villanova's points for the remainder of the game. Paul received notable support from Ricca, who played one of the best games in his brilliant collegiate career.

Lose to Tulane

Tulane, who had made a miserable showing in its opening night tilt with Bradley, got hot the next night and upset the Wildcats by a 58-55 margin. But again the huge crowd went away singing the praises of Villanova's own All-American whose 26 points gave him 50 in the two game tournament. Paul hit on eight field goals and 10 out of 14 foul shots in amassing his second game total.

This latter accomplishment tied the output of the entire Tulane teamfl. However, his mates fell

WOLF LEADS FIVE WITH 17 POINTS; HANNAN NETS 16

Crusaders Behind by 15; Tie Up in Last Quarter

Jim Gallo

The biggest crowd of the season at Penn Palestra saw Villanova's Wildcats return to the win-column last Saturday night with a 60-55 triumph over the Crusaders of Valparaiso University. It was a good night for both home teams as Penn turned back Lafayette, 73-57, in the first game of the doubleheader.

The nightcap was a thriller throughout, but the noisy crowd really had something to scream about when, with but two minutes of play remaining, the visitors caught fire and overcame an eleven point deficit to tie the score at 53-53. The fact that the Palestra's electric timeclock did not function at all in the second half increased the suspense that suddenly gripped the crowd. The new two-minute foul ruling proved itself useful for the first time this season when its application in this game indicated to the spectators that the contest was in its waning moments. Joe Hannan broke the tie with two quick goals, a screaming set shot from the outside, followed by a driving layup which was set up by a pass interception. Bob Metcalf, The Crusaders' scoring star, got back two points, but Perry Del Purgatorio dunked another for the 'Cats and Hannan converted from the foul line to end the scoring.

Valparaiso's height advantage forced Al Severance to change his Wildcats' style of play. Paul Arizin was moved out of his usual position under the bucket to draw the taller midwesterners away from the backboards. This action also set the stage for Leo Wolf to walk off with the game's scoring honors. The Villanova captain hit on eight of twenty-one field goal attempts and one of two free throws for a total of seventeen points. Leo's performance together with that of Joe Hannan, provided a fine exhibition of sharpshooting. Hannan was a close second to Wolf in scoring with sixteen points. Arilin's point production was below his normal yield but "Tall Paul" still managed to contribute ten points to the Wildcats' total of sixty. Bob Metcalf led the losers with fourteen markers, the majority of them coming in that final scoring splurge that knotted the score.

Despite their great height disadvantage, the Villanovans surprisingly maintained control of the rebounds. Brocks Ricca's backboard work was especially worthy of praise. Tom Sabol and Arizin also made a good number of recoveries.

The loss was Valparaiso's second of the year and stands against seven victories. Villanova captured its eighth win of the current campaign.

From The Sidelines . . .

By Harry Bange, Sports Editor

As we return to the typewriter we find that much has happened in the Villanova sport world within the past three weeks.

• • • • •

The biggest feature of the holidays was Ralph Pasquariello leading the Yankee club to a 20-13 win over the Rebels in the North-South game. Big Ralph was awarded the sports writer trophy for the most valuable player while teammate Steve Romanik was third in the polling. End Dan Brown and tackle John Sandusky were also brilliant for the North and just to prove how good the Villanova boys were we are going to give a few quotes that appeared in the Miami Herald. It was the general opinion in the mud-soaked Orange Bowl that Pasky was definitely the top man.

So to quote . . .

"That Pasquariello, he's the number one boy," sighed Andy Gustafson the Southern skipper after congratulating victorious Herman Hickman at midfield.

Bob Woodruff, Baylor mentor who served as Gus' guest coach slogged up in the mud that marred the Shrine classic and moaned: "That Pasquariello was what hurt us coach. We couln't tackle him."

Once that Pasquariello got going he was the hardest back to bring down I've seen this year", chimed in backfield tutor Eddie Dunn.

Tom Flynn, University of Miami guard who did a steady, commendable job in the Southern line, thought "that fullback was by far the hardest runner I saw! He was a tank."

Fullback Whitey Campbell, another Hurricane who toiled at least 58 minutes, felt Pasquariello "was one of the hardest runners I played against."

Gustafson also had words of praise for several other Yank players.

"Steve Romanik, their quarterback, did a grand job." Steve took over offensive QB duties after BC's Ed Songin was injuried and led the North on to their first of three touchdowns.

"Larry Coutre's run was a pip" (a brilliant 55 yards on the final play of the first half).

Other than the Notre Dame halfback, it sounded like Villanova players had done more damage to the South's chances than more celebrated other Irish stars.

"What was that Villanova end's name—Dan Brown. He was great", Gus said. "And yo usaw that Sandusky. He was just as good."

So we might say that the Villanova boys in the North-South game gave a pretty fair account of themselves. It's certainly about time that someone outside of Villanova started to realize just what a great club the 1949 edition of the Wildcats was.

• • • • •

A point we failed to mention in our last column about the honors given to the Wildcat players was that Al Schmid had been invited to play in the Blue-Grey game. Although the Blue lost a close one Al played a great game and was another credit to Villanova.

• • • • •

The cagers traveled to New Orleans for the Sugar Bowl tournament and as mentioned elsewhere, lost both games. However it is not the games themselves that we'll talk about they'r over and we don't intend to cry.

As Coach Al Severance said, when called upon to speak after the games, it is no disgrace to lose when you have played your best and when the opposition was as good as Kentucky and Tulane were on those nights.

The New Orleans sports writers had nothing but praise for Villanova and for Paul Arizin in particular. They even voted Paul the most valuable player in the tournament.

Incidentally Arizin's 48 points in two games broke the Sugar Bowl scoring record.

There was also much praise for the Judge's fine speech. It really pleased the crowd.

• • • • •

Laurels to George Thompson who placed third in the Sugar Bowl invitation half-mile and to Browning Roas who did likewise in the mile.

• • • • •

In closing, isn't it amazing to see all the fans that have followed St. Francis, Tampa, and Valpariso. There's loyalty for ya, following your team all over the country.

DOMS; BKS. 1 & 4 WIN IN INTRAMURAL DOUBLE HEADER

Alumni Lead League With 5-0 Record; Fedigan Second

Mondschein Inc.

After a lapse of three weeks because of the holidays, the Intramural Basketball league swunk into the final lap of the first half last Thursday, as two hotly contested games featured the evening's play. The Doms took the measure of Barracks 2 & 3, 43-25, and Barracks 1 & 4 toppled a winless Mendel five 61-45. Neither score really reflects how close the games actually were. It seems as though the Christmas vacation layoff greatly offset the forms of the winning combines as neither team was able to muster any sustained scoring threat and their defensive play was very ragged and easily penestrabl

In the opener, Bks. 2&3 est a terrific scoring pace the first few minutes and went well ahead of the Doms, and managed to hold in check the Doms' offensive power. Although the Doms put on a second quarter scoring spurt, the halftime score still showed Bks. 2&3 on the long end of a 19-17 score. After the intermission, it looked as though the Barracks were on again after they garnered five quick points. But here the Bks. offense bogged down completely as they were able to get only one more point the remainder of the contest. The Doms, in the meantime, were doing some fancy and accurate shooting and toward the end of the game showed their superiority in all respects. Bill Knecht led the winners' scoring attack with 15 points but his great bacboard play was outstanding. Beahan, with 9 points and Heigel with 6, also aided the victors attack. For the losers Wills was high with 7 points, followed closely by Smith and Decker with 6 each. G. Mondschein and Joe Billera refereed.

The nightcap saw almost an identical type of play as in the preliminary contest as a heretofore low scoring, spiritless Mendel aggregation reversed procedure showing form, determination and plenty of scoring punch in the first half of its encounter with Bks 1&4. Getting off to a very fast start mainly through its hustle and accurate shooting the Mendel quintet found themselves in a good position for an upset victory. They held a comfortable 15 point advantage with but two minutes remaining in the first canto. But the lack of reserves which began to show on the players enabled the Barracks to close the gap to 33-27 as the half ended.

The second half, however proved fatal for the Mendeleers as the intermission seemed to cool off their offensive thrust. A rejuvinated Bks. 1&4 squad refused to be the first victim if a thus far winless Mendel five and got their offense in high gear. Tom Madonia carried the brunt of the scoring attack for the winners in the first half and continued his fine work in the second half but received some fine assistance from Tom Flynn and Tom Falkowski, who were both held scoreless in the first half. Madonia was high scorer with 18 points followed by Flynn with 10, and Diot and Falkowski with 9 and 7 points respectively for the winners.

But the plaudits go to Stanbaugh and Lenahan of the losers who made 15 and 14 points each and aided greatly in stalling the Bks 1&4 quintet most of the way. Captain Dick Altman also played for Mendel and managed to stay on his feet most of the game, and also accounted for four points. The final score was 61-45.

little Loyola, although Paul Arizin fouled out early, and the fact that the local hoopsters have lost 5 out of their las 6 'away' contests. With 14 of the remaining 19 games to be played either here or at the Palestra, it seems likely that the 'Cat basketeers will again go over the twenty game victory mark this year.

Sidecourt splinters: Jay Raiken is one of the few members of the squad who is in favor of the disputed 'new two minute rule' . . . Nick Maguire, freshman star, joins the varsity at the end of the month and should prove a very valuable addition . . . Joe Maguire recuperating from an illness at his Brooklyn home will return to school at the beginning of next semester . . . Question of the week: Why do the Penn students cheer louder for Villanova's opponent than they lo for their own Penn team?

CAGERS AVERAGE 69.6 PER GAME

Arizin Third in Area With 204 Points

With ten games of the current season now in the record books we find that the Mainliners now rank second in the district with a mark of 8 and 2. In points per game the Wildcats are now second with an average of 69.6.

In the indivdual scoring, Paul Arizin is third in the Philadelphia area with 204 points. First place honors went to Paul Senesky of St. Joe's who has scored 229 points in 11 games. Second is Swarthmore's Jim Reilly with 212 in 8 games.

Arizin's 204 points are broken down into 69 field goals and 66 free throws for an average of 20.4 points per game.

Second for the Wildcats, both in total points and average is Captain Leo Wolf who has hit for 100 points in ten games. Leo's even century is made up of 41 field goals and 18 from the foul line.

Toad Hannan ranks third for the Cats with an average of 9.5, 40 field goals and 15 fouls.

McKenna to Face Fox

Jim McKenna will carry the blue and white colors in the600. For spectator interest this event promises to be one of the best on the evening's card. As in the mile the paper has failed to release the total entry list in this events, but the first two names are ones to be reckoned with. McKenna who was second in the race last year will face Frank Fox formerly of Seton Hall and Gil Rhoden, ex-Morgan State flash. Fox a recent graduate and now a teacher at the Hall was IC-4A Indoor 600 and IC4A outdoor 440 yard champ last year. McKenna was third in the 600 and fourth in the quarter in these races Rhaden was National A.A.U. 400 meter champ last spring and this year is reported to have run 47.9 indoors on a armory floor while endeavoring a mile relay.

In addition the Mainliners will probably take a crack at the mile relay crown and even possibly at the two mile relay which is a new event on the program. Thompson's duties for the night again have not been announced, but it would not be out of the realm of possibility to see him running either the 1000 or less likely the two mile.

Band Members Reimbursed By School For Theft Loss In Washington D.C.

Band members, who had clothing and other valuables stolen from their bus on the occasion of the Georgetown football game last fall, were reimbursed to the extent of two-thirds of their losses, the prefect, Rev. John J. McMenamin, O.S.A., announced last week.

The thefts occurred while the band bus, operated by the Short Line, was parked outside Griffith Stadium in Washington during the game in November. Student losses amounted in value to about $1000.

Though neither the bus company nor the college was responsible for the losses, the Short Line returned to the College the fee for the use of the bus, which was approximately $300. To this the college added enough to make up two-thirds of the losses and returned the money to the students. Checks were mailed out during the Christmas holidays.

George Keenley Chairman Junior Week Activities

George Schuster, president of the Junior Class, announced the appointment of George (Skip) Keenley as general chairman of Junior Week at a meeting of class officers and steering committee held last Thursday.

Chairmen of the other committees connected with Junior Week were also selected by the group, which announced that a meeting of the Junior Class will be held February 16.

The position of chairman of Junior Week is one of the most important which a man can hold during his college career. It is his duty to co-ordinate the many and varied activities which take place during that week.

Junior Week is one of the traditional highlights of the academic year. It begins on Mother's Day, when the Juniors accompany their mothers to Mass and Communion. The remainder of the week is filled with a series of colorful social events, which include a band concert, the Blazer Ball, the Junior Prom and the Dinner Dance.

Skip Keenley has been active in the Class of 1951 since its freshman year, and, with the help of the other committee heads, should be capable of leading the class through a successful week, a class spokesman said.

Herb Matthews was elected chairman of the Junior Prom Committee. To him falls the job of arranging for the hiring of a Band and assembling a working committee for the dance. The equally important position of Dinner Dance chairman was given to Frank Pitocchelli.

Other officers selected for the week's events were: John Murphy, Mother's Day; Joe Rugo, Blazer Ball; and Jack Gahagen, Blazer committee.

The Library Corner

The Ten Best

About this time, at the beginning of every new year, it seems to be the custom for every columnist to give a resume of the past year, listing the "ten best" things in some particular field, which were most pleasing or most newsworthy. The Associated Press does this when it names those it considers the top football players of the year to its All-American football team. The Fashion Institute lists the women considered to be the best-dressed for the year. Hollywood announces its most popular stars, based on the preferences of the fans.

Following the custom, we'd like to list for you the ten most popular books in the Villanova College Library, based on the frequency with which they were borrowed, and the number of times they have been reserved by the students for use.

The three books by Thomas Merton by far led this poll, and are below listed as one, because to single out any one of them would be to slight the other two. The complete list is as follows:

1. Merton, Thomas — Seven Storey Mountain — Waters of Siloe — Seeds of Contemplation
2. Sheen, Fulton — Peace of Soul
3. St. Augustine — Confessions
4. Brady, Leo — Edge of Doom
5. Waugh, Evelyn — The Loved One
6. Greene, Graham — Heart of the Matter
7. Reverend, Raymond — Burnt Out Incense
8. Howe, George — Call It Treason
9. Sherwood, Robert — Roosevelt and Hopkins
10. Prochnow, Herbert — Toastmaster's Handbook

New Library Exhibit

THE MEDIEVAL WORLD, a photographic exhibition prepared by the editors of LIFE, is being shown at VILLANOVA COLLEGE LIBRARY for two weeks, beginning Jan. 5th. and continuing through Jan. 18th.

This exhibition is made up of photographs which were published as a two-part pictorial essay in LIFE (April 7th and May 26th 1947) and also includes many pictures that had to be omitted from the magazine for lack of space.

Twenty-four panels, each containing from one to six photographs and captions, delineate the roles of the Church, the Town, and the Castle in the day-to-day life of medieval man. The section devoted to the Church reflects the medieval spirit in a sequence of panels which include the cathedral of Chartres, the Abbey church at Vezelay, Fountains Abbey, sculptural details and color reproductions of stained glass from Bourges and Chartres.

The second division of the exhibition treats town life, late in the Middle Ages. Here are seen engravings of anonymous streets and street scenes as well as such centers of medieval life as Nuremberg, Dinkelsbuhl, Constance, Carcassonne and Avignon.

Feudal life, centering around the lord's castle, is portrayed in the third division. Color reproductions from the May 26th. issue of LIFE include the Unicorn Hunt tapestry (now in The Cloisters, Metropolitan Museum of Art), and also Life in the Manor (from a 15th Century manuscript in the Morgan Library). There are also panels illustrating a tournament and the Crusades. Of the 35 photographs in this portion of the exhibition, 24 tell the story of customs and courtesies of castle life, while the others reveal the interiors and outside walls of medieval castles still standing today.

Campus representatives for Chesterfield cigarettes, Neal Fahy and Mike Marshall, have prepared a basketball exhibit in the window of the drug store at the corner of Springmill road and Lancaster Pike.

Leading personalities in the personnel and student training field provided a series of most capable and informative talks for a Senior class which is facing the problem of employment - seeking soon.

The morning sessions, which were opened by a welcoming address by Dean Rev. Edward Dwyer, OSA, concerned the interview in all its aspects. The panel which included such luminaries as James J. Mahan, Partner, Lybrand, Ross, Brothers, and Montgomery, Gordon L. Bussard, Personnel Division, DuPont Company, Maynard B. Boring, Manager, Technical Personnel Division, General Electric Co., John C. Dance Scheduled For Sun., Feb. 19 In Field House

The Villanova Chapter of the NFCCS will conduct a dance this Sunday afternoon, February 19th., at the Field House, for the benefit of the NFCCS relief fund.

Hours of the affair will be 2:30 till 5:30, the music being provided by the newly organized Villanovan Combo. It will be a premiere appearance for this group, but advance notices promise very danceable music in the rhythmic combo style which has become so popular at the informal dances held of late. The sidemen have been lifted from the regular Villanovan orchestra.

Girls Colleges Invited

As for dancing partners, there will be guests from all the local girls' colleges who have been invited to attend. An expected several hundred girls will be on hand for the social.

Admission for the male element will be left up to the individual, since only a donation is all that is requested in exchange for entrance. This will be one of the last opportunities for social activity on the campus until after Lent, and many are expected to take advantage of it.

This activity of the NFCCS is one of the several held during the school year for the purpose of swelling the Student Relief Fund.

Annual Retreat Marks End Of Fall Semester

The Annual Retreat for all Catholic students was held in the Field House recently; from Sunday evening, January 22 through Wednesday morning, January 25.

The retreat was given by Father Thomas E. Rogers, O. S. A., a former prefect at Villanova who has also given two other retreats here in the past.

The retreat began with a short conference on Sunday evening and ended with a Solemn High Mass, Benediction and the Papal Blessing on Wednesday morning. The Mass was preceded by nocturnal adoration which began after the Holy Hour Tuesday afternoon.

On Monday and Tuesday, there were three conferences followed by a Holy Hour and preceded by Mass in the college chapel for all students. There were also night prayers for resident students on these nights. Confessions were heard at the conclusion of each exercise in order to prepare the students for the reception of the Sacraments.

The highlight of the retreat was this year, as in the past, the nocturnal adoration. The Field House, transformed into a huge church, was thronged throughout the night not only by Villanovans but also by passers-by and friends of the College. The spectacle presented a wonderful example of devotion to all.

The retreat was termed an outstanding success by the college authorities. This is evidenced by the great number of students who received the Sacraments at the retreat's conclusion.

Students check in at the rear of the temporary chapel in the Field House during the three day Retreat which was attended by some two thousand men.

STUDENTS WITH FIANCEES TO ATTEND PRE-CANA SESSIONS

Pre-Cana conferences, for the benefit of Villanova students and graduates who are engaged, will start at 3 P. M. on February 26th., in 215 Mendel, and continue on each succeeding Sunday afternoon of Lent, as announced by the Chaplains, office.

The course will include the following topics to be given by speakers who are versed in the problems involved in The Meaning of Courtship and Engagement, The Psychology of the Sexes, The Law: Canon, Liturgical, and Civil in Marriage, A Doctor Looks at Marriage, The Problems of the First Year of Marriage.

The Chaplain's Office regards these Pre-Cana conferences as an important part in the life of a couple contemplating marriage, and said: "God calls people to marriage as a holy and happy state of life, and in order to make their marriage a holy and happy one, people must know God's plan for marriage. Today, in an age of specialization in education where men prepare themselves thoroughly for one field of study it certainly seems necessary that a specialized course for marriage be in order."

It is hoped that every Villanova student and his fiancee takes advantage of this opportunity in preparation for their lifelong vocation.

FRESHMEN KILLED IN N. J. ACCIDENT

One of the worst highway accidents in New Jersey history claimed the lives of two Villanova Engineering students along with six others on the evening of February 1. The students, John Brandemeier of Dougleston, Long Island and Donald Liddy, Brooklyn, N. Y., had registered only that day for the Spring Semester and were on their way home. Injured seriously was another Villanovan engineering student, Francis Sillet of Woodbury, Long Island.

The cause of the accident was not determined, but the roads were sloppy and th weather bad, with visibility at a minimum. The car with the 4 homeward bound students apparently struck another car either making a U turn or stalled across the highway. All five occupants of the other car were killed while only one of the four youngsters survived. John Brandemeier's brother, a high school senior, was also killed in the tragedy. Father Martin Tuohy, OFM, who had followed the north-bound car for 10 miles before the accident, gave absolution at the scene.

Both in Navy Program

Brandemeier was a graduate of Lovola High School, NYC, while Liddy had graduatel from Xavier, a Jesuit High School of the same city. Both had attended Villanova in the Engineering school under the Navy Reserve Officer Training Program.

The father of Joseph Hicks (EE-Sr.2), and Dr. John Hobson, D.D.S., (Alumnus Villanova 1933) died recently. Prayers and condolences are extended to the bereaved by the Villanovan staff and the Villanova College student body. Masses were offered in the College Chapel for the happy repose of their souls and individual prayers were also said by the students.

Phi Kapp Readies For Owl Hop Friday Night

Dance Once Marked Temple-Villanova Grid Contest Moved to Pre-Lenten Date

In the Field House on Friday, Feb. 17th., Villanova's engineers will offer, for the approval of one and all, their first post-war edition of the Owl Hop. Because of the war and the absence of a large male population at the college, this traditional dance was discontinued.

Renowned for its novel decorations, the Hop served as a check valve for the pent-up creative urges of the Engineering School, and the crowds never used to leave the dance disappointed at the decorations and the change effected in the Field House.

Making a concentrated effort to have the Hop reinstated as a permanent fixture on the school's social calendar, this year's crop of engineers plans to go all-out to make the coming affair the biggest and best yet.

Music for the occasion will be provided by Vince Palma and his rejuvenated Villanovans, featuring Marian Stodder on the vocals, and the new vibraharp that made such a hit at the Inter-frat Ball.

Aside from its being the first informal dance since the Inter-frat Ball, it might be noted that the Hop will bring to a close the winter social season at Villanova, and, with Lent on the way, it will be long weeks before again the favorite gal comes out to Villanova for an evening of dancing.

Gene Valerio is General Chairman of the affair, assisted by John Link, Decorations Chairman, Charles Rodden, Ticket Chairman, and Roland Mayer, Publicity Chairman. Tickets are now on sale at $2.40 per couple, tax included, through representatives in all dormitories and at booths in Mendel Hall and the Pie Shop.

Accountants Begin Lecture Series Tomorrow

Tomorrow afternoon, at 2 P. M., in the Commerce and Finance Auditorium, the Accounting Honor Society will inaugurate a series of lecture meetings to be held during the Spring semester. The initial talk will be given by the group moderator, Mr. Joseph Linsalata, Accounting instructor. The title of his talk will be Gateway to a Profession, and the text is based on an article in a recent publication of the American Institute of Accountants.

Mr. Linsalata will emphasize the importance to the accounting student of the position of the Accounting profession as the youngest, bar none, in the country.

Plans will be formulated at this time to publish the Accounting magazine which is nearing completion and will be available before the end of the semester. This is a novel venture on the part of the society, and in keeping with its policy to enlighten the Accounting student in regard to work in the field and education.

All business students are invited and, of course, all members are urged to attend.

SENIORS!

Father Henry Eagen, your class moderator, will offer the first Memorial Mass for Richard Terrill, Friday, February 17, at twelve o'clock noon in the College Chapel. All members of the senior class are requested to be present, and if possible, receive Holy Communion for the happy repose of the soul of your classmate who died last year.

Gallagher, Piazzola And Skowron Receive Staff Promotions

With the publication of this issue of the VILLANOVAN, the first for the Spring semester, several changes have been made in the paper's managing staff. The new officers and the positions to which they have been appointed are Jim Gallagher, who has been named to the new post of News Editor, and Mario Piazzola, and Ralph Skowron who are taking over the job of Co-circulation Managers. Those assignments, as well as several others for the staff members come as a result of the graduation of the men who filled the appointments last semester.

The position of News Editor, as such, has not been filled for several semesters, and Frank Gobes, Managing Editor has had to perform the duties of this job. Gallagher, who will now fill this assignment, is a Sophomore Arts student from Staten Island, N. Y., majoring in English.

Piazzola and Skowron, as Circulation Managers, will fill the job held previously by Ralph Iorio who completed his studies at this college last semester, and will receive his degree in Electrical Engineering at th graduation in June. Both new Circulation Managers are members of the Junior Class, majoring in Biology.

Two other Senior members of the paper's staff, Joe Kenney and Jack Applegate, writers of the popular "Fifth Column", have also completed their studies at Villanova, and will be replaced in future edi-

P. Morris Gives TV To St. John's

Last Thursday evening, February 9, saw the Boys of St. John's Orphanage receive the television set donated by the students of Villanova. The formal presentation and the entertainment were sponsored by the Philip Morris Company.

The television set was made available to the orphans after sixty thousand Philip Morris cigarette package wrappers were accumulated by the students.

In spite of the fact that the desired goal has been attained, wrappers still are continuing to pour in and are creating a problem on campus; therefore Brian McLarnan, chairman of the Student Council, has requested that, in order to alleviate the situation, the students cease to turn in any more wrappers.

Losing Game

Two Villanova students killed and one seriously injured in one of the worst highway mishaps in New Jersey history. A total of eight lives snuffed out on the massacre grounds that are our highways.

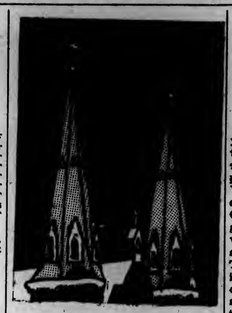
It is never pleasant to recall events which mean sorrow to anyone, but it is important that out of the tragedy we gain a realization of what safety on the highways means today when everyone is in a big hurry—even if it's only to go to the grocery store a mile down the road. Many of us were on the highways between semesters, going home for a few days respite. How many of us were in automobiles which were being driven so as to violate traffic regulations?

To many drivers the traffic regulations are nothing more than a group of rules that make driving a game for them—when they are not observed driving does become a game—a game with death. The function of traffic regulations is the attainment of safety for the majority.

Remember, when you are behind the wheel of an automobile the safety posters are addressed to you, not only the driver in the other car.

Employment Agencies

Last Thursday, Villanova held its first "Career Conference", the inauguration, we hope, of an annual series of conferences for the Senior Class members with the captains of industry. Intent interest on the part of the Seniors was evident, and the sincerity of the men from industry was obvious to all.



From the large group of capable and successful men, however, one stood out, and probably will be remembered when recollection of the conference grows dim. This man was Maynard M. Boring, Manager of the Technical Personnel Division of the General Electric Co.

Besides his timely advice he further indicated his kindly feelings for our prospective applicants by spending an extra hour with them after the meeting was adjourned.

On one of his points, however, we must respectfully disagree. He stated that professional employment agencies are unnecessary to the college graduate and he should not make use of them. In contradiction to Mr. Linsalata, of Villanova's Accounting faculty, Mr. Boring insisted that the recent graduate should continue applying for positions himself until he succeeds in obtaining a suitable one, though it often takes several months and even as long as a year. But, we ask, what is to become of the graduate during that period of watching and waiting? His confidence in himself slowly wanes, his hard-won knowledge grows stale, and his debts accrue as he wears out more and more shoe leather.

In contrast to this, the employment agencies often can offer immediate positions to their clients. As to cost, their fees seldom amount to more than one or two weeks' wages. The objection is always put forth that the jobs secured by the agencies are inferior. However, questioning of those whose jobs have been obtained in this way reveals that the objection simply is not true, providing one has consulted a reputable agency.

The extraordinary graduate with top notch grades usually has little trouble finding his place. But, to the ordinary fellow with average marks, we say look to the agencies for employment.

By Jim Griffin

February 14th. Did you buy your girl something for Valentine's Day? Or are you the fellow whom I should ask, "Did you remember all your girl friends when you were sending out your valentines?"

Your Mother

And how about your mother? Were you thoughtful enough to send a little something to let her know that she is still tops on your valentine list? It may be hard for us to understand, but mothers appreciate little things like that. I guess in their minds we are still their little boys, and such gestures make little boys more lovable; or maybe it's just that they like to be reassured that as we grow up we are not growing out of our love for them. At any rate, they still like to know that we love them, and it's worth a lot more than it costs to serve as a little reminder now and then.

Blessed Mother

And the same holds true for our other mother — Mary. Sometimes we forget that she really is our mother. We are inclined to pass over the motherhood of Mary as something nice to talk about at retreats and missions, something that is reassuring to hear when we are in a holy mood. But our reaction should be quite the contrary. We should try to mold our lives remembering that Mary is our mother, just as truly as our earthly mothers are. After a while we will instinctively influence our decisions and our actions to suit her, just as we now do with our mothers at home, but first we must make ourselves realize that we are children of Mary and consciously make an effort to think and act fittingly.

And just as it pleases our earth mothers to get a little remembrance at Valentine's day, it would make Mary very happy to be reminded that her little children love her.

True Love

Perhaps it could be said that mothers are the only ones who really enjoy hearing their children's troubles. And Mary fills this qualification quite well. She finds it a joy to listen to our problems, and our complaints, and a pleasure to help us when we find ourselves in trouble. So don't muff the opportunity that Valentine's day offers. Make a visit or two today and tomorrow as a kind of valentine for Mary. And if you have a problem remember that she won't mind at all if we write a little request on the fly leaf of our greeting card; in fact, it will make her very happy to know that we are still the little boys who loved her so dearly in the first and second grades, and that growing up has not changed our love for her.

Hearts and Flowers

Do you find something lacking in your copy of the VILLANOVAN today? Take another look — Oscar Twomp is there in the usual space on page two, the sport pages tell you that Tall Paul broke anther scoring record—but nowhere will you find a word of tribute about the various national holidays that occur during the month of February. All the other papers have it but all we can do is condone this lack by saying that we just didn't have enough space to properly honor Washington and Lincoln in the manner to which they have become accustomed. But there is one thing we just couldn't overlook—that today is Valentine's Day. Honest, fellas, the VILLANOVAN does have a heart.

OPPORTUNITY KNOCKS

By Bill Breninghouse

Every magazine designed for young men has a section devoted to the selection of vocations for its readers. Even the straight-laced, puritanical, censored, blue penciled Villanovan has published several articles on career possibilities. Now, Oscar Twomp, after months of gruelling research has come up with the straight dope on job possibilities for college men. Mister Twomp is a recognized authority in the field of vocational training due to the fact that he knows absolutely nothing about it and is, therefore not influenced unduly by previous experience.

The Engine Ear

First come the engineers. Mr. Twomp has bad news for these men of science. If all the locomotives in the country were running twenty four hours a day with one engineer for each eight hours there would still be two million engineers more than all the railroads could use. There is an answer, however, to engineer employment. Many new jobs have sprung up recently. A skilled engineer can find work at such interesting tasks as installing and building bridges across incisors, electric trains, sharpening scissors. Ingenious young men can dream up jobs that will suit their own talents.

Comic and Frolics

Commerce and finance students, according to the distinguished Mr. Twomp, will have the easiest time in finding jobs upon graduation. Bookies are in demand the world over. It takes a lot of know how with numbers to be a good bookie. Many C & F men have already had much valuable experience in this field through the medium of football pools etc. Other possibilities open to these men of the business school are executive-type jobs. With a little training one could become assistant manager of a fish market or perhaps have his own newspaper route. Those who look good in carnations can become floorwalkers at Gimbels.

Education students will not have too much trouble in finding teaching jobs. The education of chimpanzees will become a vital link in the world's educational systems. Teachers of feeble-minded children, idiots, and morons will come from the ranks of today's education students.

Oil Painters

As for the Arts men, Twomp sees little hope. Since they know how to do nothing they will get jobs digging ditches and will spend their spare time philosophizing in barrooms. Some will rise in spite of their education and will make a little money. Oscar hopes to be one of these.

Chemistry and physics majors will find that all their talents will get them fine positions in road gangs and laundries. These people will be most likely to resort to crime for a livelihood. They will, however, be justified since they will have been prepared for little else.

Doctors

The pre-meds will make fine horse doctors at race tracks. Some will be unfortunate and get caught fixing nags before races.

That, then, is the sum and substance of the Twomp Report on Vocational Opportunities. Additional copies may be had by sending ten dollars to Oscar Twomp in care of the paper which you are now reading.

Sense and Nonsense

By Tom Pasha

In this modern atomic era, we are too often overcome by the gigantic advances and startling discoveries of science to give much thought to the lesser achievements which have so much more to do with our everyday living than the fact that there is an H-bomb in existence.

Take the case of America's perennial favorite, the chocolate bar, for instance. The progress made in the processing of this seemingly "ordinary" thing has been tremendous in recent years. Have you tried to buy one of these articles lately? Well, gang, it would be easier to ask Harry James to arrange a date with Betty for you.

In order to purchase one of these plebeian delicacies in this day and age, you have to carry a complete confectioner's brochure and have a thorough knowledge of the candy-making business, because when you mention "chocolate bar" to the goodie-huckster, he raises his brow, looks indignant, abruptly assumes your ignorance, and then cross-examines you with questions that would put the finest federal prosecutor to shame.

"What kind of chocolate do you want —milk or dark? Dark, fine! Do you want it with or without nuts? With — okay! What kind of nuts do you want, Almonds or pecans? Pecans, swell! How do you want the nuts, toasted, roasted, or just burnt black? Toasted, wonderful! Now do you want them with or without shells? Shells, grand! Now that we have those little items settled we can decide upon the size and brand of this delicious morsel. Do you want the large, medium, or small? Small, Terrific! Of course, you want nothing but the finest in brands we have several fine quality sweet-tooth pacifiers. Would you like Googer's Crunchers, Milliken's Milkies, or Corracan Crackies? Goober's Crunches, stupendous! Here you are, sir, let me be the first to congratulate you upon the purchasing of one Goober's Crunchers small sized, dark chocolate-covered, candy bars imbedded with nutrious, delicious toasted, shelled pecan-nuts."

When you leave the counter you feel as though you have acquired the most valuable, definitely the most unobtainable commodity in existence. Yes, you are now sole-owner of a candy-bar, custodian of an object which to so many is yet to be revealed and marveled at. You forget about atom bombs, the Rh factor, antihistamine, and penicillin. How could one be bothered with such minute details after making a purchase of this nature.

Yes, science has achieved great things in recent years and for the first time you have realized this fact. There is now but one question in your mind — "I wonder if I should ask the clerk for a package of chewing-gum?"

. . . A reminder to campus students, old and new—

This is a plea on behalf of the eight percent! Unfortunately it seems to be an accepted statistical fact that only eight percent of the listening public are interested in jazz as a form of musical entertainment. True, this percentage is steadily on the increase, but the increment is so slow and gradual that the end result stated per capita is an insignificant drop in the overwhelming puddle of the American public.

Equal Piano Asked

World renowned for its apathy, the public rises to a state of obstinate hostility when confronted with any attempt to put jazz on a plane equitable with other more accepted forms of music. For some undefinable reason the public seems to think that jazz belongs in one of two places, the time - worn reaches of Bourbon Street in New Orleans or the smoky cellars and plenteous bistros of Harlem. Nothing could be farther from the truth. The only reason that jazz has flourished in such sub-normal surroundings is that they provide a haven wherein jazz, whatever its form, can grow and develop without fear of the ridicule and disdain that the public is so apt to lavish on something it fails to understand.

Ridiculous Found

The ridiculous are to be found in any form of art, be it musical, descriptive or otherwise. Painting has its various schools, many of them far-fetched. Classical music has its extremists, not yet accepted by the conservative element. So too, jazz. Berets and glasses, blackface and a southern accent, narcotics and drink; these are not a part of jazz but merely the devices used by those who feel inadequate when compared with the real talent that has carried jazz these many years.

When confronted with some form of painting you fail to grasp you don't say, "It's no good." Rather you try to understand it and ask for expert advice until such time as you are able to appreciate the true merit of the school presented. Apply this to jazz. Try to understand it. Listen to it, not once but many times. When you finally realize what makes it great you will be only too aware of what you were missing.

Well here we are back after the long fourteen that left us feeling more like the deep six. Rest and relaxation — who said that??!

During the interim since our last column it would seem that a new star has skyrocketed up to occupy a much deserved place in the galaxy of fame. Terry Bruer showed much promise on her earlier waxings of "Copper Canyon" and "Old Man Mose" but she really hit her stride on "Music, Music, Music". True the thing is on the novelty kick, and therefor can't be expected to last for very long, but her work on it proves Terry to be a real artist and will most certainly act as an "Open Sesame" for her on her way to bigger and better things.

I might also point out that the song itself is definitely in the jazz vein and the background music is done by an all star jazz outfit that features some of the greatest in the business.

Jazz Is Back

Don't look now, Bruce, but old time jazz is on the way back. What ever happened to that Gillespie fellow and his frantic fellow travelers?

Heard a beautiful thing a few days ago and would l'ke to recommend it to one and all. Give a listen to Lena Horne's offering of "I've Got the World On a String". She takes the thing out of the popular music category and makes it pure art. Lena doesn't record as many numbers as some of our popular vocalists but when she turns one out it's done to perfection. I'd rate "World On a String" up with her wonderful waxing of "Stormy Weather."

Lost and Found

Lost and Found — No doubt you've heard "Rag Mop" quite a bit in the past few weeks — who could escape it! A brother act Ames, by name, is accumulating bushels of loot from their version of the thing. Strangely enough it was waxed back around 1945 by Red Allen and his Combo and never did get anywhere. They called it "Get the Mop" in those days and the record featured some terrific trombone by J. C. Higgenbotham who for many years was picked for every All-Star band as regularly as clock-work.

That's it for the present we'll be writing at ya' again next week.

CAREERS —

By Dick Spence

So far we have considered three of the four major fields of engineering that we are reviewing in this roundup of facts for the future graduates of Villanova. In looking back we see that opportunities for those fields already covered are still fairly good but are tightening up a little since the war. The next and last of the fields of engineering we will consider is Chemical Engineering. This division seems to be known by most people as about the toughest in the field. It is also about the toughest one in which to get a job.

Demand for Ch.E.'s

In looking over the records in the Placement Office it was noticed that only 17% of all the graduating Chemical Engineers who applied for placement at that office got jobs through it. This does not mean, however, that the rest of them were out of work or had to resort to some other profession to make a living. This indicates that a Chemical Engineer will have to look around a little more and a little longer for his job. Most of the jobs now available are with large research plants, as lab technicians. Almost every manufacturer, no matter what the product, has use for a Chemical Engineer. He may not require many. Just the same, the opportunity is there, and why it is more difficult to find jobs in this field, seem to be that they are more spread out. As a general rule, as in all engineering, most of the graduates will be placed in a training program or an apprenticeship similar to that which was explained in the previous article.

Salaries

It was found that the average salary paid to the men who were placed by the Placement Office was about $3480 a year. As one can see, this is considerably higher than for other types of engineers. This salary is for a graduate with only a Bachelor's degree. The difference between the Bachelor's degree and the Doctor's degree is quite a great one. This means that the demand for Chemical Engineers with a Doctor's degree is much higher than those with Bachelor's degree. The difference in salary is about $1320 a year. Therefore, it would seem to pay off great dividends to continue in school a few more years and get the Doctor's degree. Of course, this would require the graduate Chemical Engineer to enter a graduate school and study about four more years.

In 10 Years

In about ten years the Chemical Engineer will be on his way to success or failure. His wage by that time will be up around $6300 a year, that is, if he started with a Bachelor's degree. It would be considerably more if he started with a Doctor's degree. When you look at these engineers from the aspect of money earned, they are about tops in the field. It is more difficult to get the desired work, but it is available.

Around The Town

By F. A. VARALLO

With the accent on variety, this week's film fare provides the sharpest contrast that movie-goers are likely to encounter in many a moon. Biblical drama, comedy, war stories, horse operas — all play an important role in our entertainment scene. For sheer brilliance nothing can overshadow Cecil B. DeMille's latest Biblical drama "Samson and Delilah". A gaudy panorama of bizarre beauty filmed in glorious Technicolor, this celluloid gets the full DeMille treatment — towering sets, lavish costumes in silks and satins, and riotous colors. Included too, are the scenes of blood curdling fights and tortures which have been the trademark of the DeMille productions for generations.

Inspiration for the story came from Chapters 13 to 16, Book of Judges, Old Testament, although DeMille has done a little fancy embroidering here and there, as well as made some omissions from the text. Briefly the plot is as follows. Samson, ably portrayed by Victor Mature, is determined to marry Semadar a Philistine lass who is already engaged to a military man. More complications arise from the fact that Semadar is the sister of Delilah, played by Hedy Lamarr, who is in love with Samson herself. Nevertheless Samson wins the hand of Semadar as a reward for killing a ferocious lion with his bare hands. This, incidentally, is one of the film's best episodes. Things do not run smoothly, however, and before the wedding is done, Samson, overcome with anger, slays everyone nearby and burns down the palace, with Semadar and her father in it.

For this reason, Delilah seeks vengeance upon the strong man. Later while watching the poor blinded Samson trudging around the grist mill, she repents and chooses to die with him when he causes the Temple at Gaza to come crashing down upon the heads of the Philistines.

Angela Lansbury as Semadar, George Sanders, and Henry Wilcoxon also register as principals of the cast. In general you will find the flamboyant "Samson and Delilah" entertaining — if not too convincing. It is currently at the Earle Theatre.

"Montana"

Errol Flynn and Alexis Smith are co-starred in this rousing tale of the range, at the Mastbaum. Decked out in Technicolor, this horse opera takes us back to the early days of our country when the cattle barons in Montana barred their lands from the sheep herders and threatened to shoot them on sight if they trespassed. Errol Flynn, a sheep man from Australia, wants to buy a nice little ranch in Montana, drive his flock in and settle down. Posing as a peddler he rides into town to start the groundwork for bringing in his sheep. When the townpeople find out that he isn't the peddler he pretends, Errol has to depend on his trusty six-shooters. But everything turns out well — Flynn is able to wangle some grazing land for the sheep and to steal Alexis Smith, the fiery red head who hated sheepmen, from her fiance, a wealthy cattleman.

"Montana" is a big breezy Western with plenty of gun-play, ample romantic interest and a welcome dash of comedy. The individual performances of its stars are quite satisfactory.

"Battleground"

This is a rugged, realistic account of the Battle of Bastogne in 1944, and of the American doughboys who fought and fell on Belgian soil. The story is free of heroics and glamorized gallantry. The dialogue is nothing more than the terse, biting comments of the tired, homesick, miserable men.

By Jack Kelly and John Bauman

Well . . . men of Villanova . . . this tired old column is now operating under two hardships—mainly its two new writers. What happened to the other two guys that were throwing cracks into this corner? Well, to make a long story short, they have gone into the Luncheonette business. Yes, they now operate a mobile lunch unit to service the line outside office doors and they now wear coats with mink collars and are heavy with money. Oh well, . . . we all can't have it.

It was very quiet around the second floor of Mendel Hall during registration as they were cleaned out up there, and an entirely new crew is there now—it seems that there was a plot to overthrow the present administration—we can't figure out why anyone would want to do that. We're all democrats at heart.

Fr. Krupa has announced that four Rosemont Belles, Kathy Rowan, Ellen Sedobow, Pat Zieminsky, and Mary Anna Connor will grace the Field House stage this March in the Belle Masque Society's production of "The Knight of the Burning Pestle" which, by the way, went into rehearsal last week.

Everybody is wondering what has happened to the people on the Year Book staff—they are going around in a trance trying to get their work done—WE have the answer—The final copy for the year book was submitted to the printer last Friday and it should make its debut in the middle of May. Congratulations!!

John Callahan has to stop his trips to North Philadelphia now because of 8 o'clock classes—ain't that awful . . . Joe Kenney, a past author of this column, is now a sales agent for the New York Life Insurance Company (when you're in the market for more insurance don't forget Little Joe—besides we get 10 percent of the take). Jack Applegate, co-proprietor with Joe Kenney of this abattoir, is now working for the Turner Construction Company.

The Gay Lothario—Frank Pitocchelli—gets all flustered when you speak of Rita from Immaculata College,—seems first it was our Senior Prom, now it is their Sophomore Cotillion at the Bellevue (Hotel, of course).

We now know how Paul Zavodny makes all that money he throws around . . . How? . . . By running errands and getting cigarettes for the boys in Simpson Hall. He lights his cigarettes with the $1 tips he receives.

Howie Braithwaite and Pat Rafferty gave the girls of Goucher College a break by attending their Winter Carnival Prom over the holidaze—From what we hear, it was as staid as a Boston Tea Party. Of course, it all depends on what YOU mean by tea. Why certainly . . .

There is many a warm-hearted gaze in the direction of Immaculata around the campus since some of the biggest wheels of the Belle Masque Dramatic Society collaborated with the girls of the Cue and Curtain Club in the play "Our Hearts Were Young and Gay".

We saw Ed McKnight at the opera twice now—boy aren't we getting "kultured".

As we walked around the campus the other day, heard a familiar voice raise in the song "Ghost Riders in the Sky" and, if you suddenly hear the strains of Vaug-gan's biggest hit, you will know that George O'Toole Pequignot is back on the campus and is skipping along somewhere in the vicinity.

Gene Pierotti spent the weekend at the Winter Carnival at Marymount College visiting his one and only, namely—Bunny Train,—seems they took in some sports and had a terrific time at their Prom.

We were invited to a party (society interest), got there about ten o'clock and walked in—the living room looked like Louie's Pie Shop at noon—all the old faces were sitting around sipping "cokes". All of the old timers were there—Joe Brogan, Mike Torpey, Pabi Bedley, Joe Kenny, Jack Applegate, Jim O'Brien, Bill Hahn, Mike Nowlan, and sundry relatives with varying degrees of distemper whose names we can't recall.

Eleanor Foley has really got a cerain guy on the second floor of Mendel Hall going around in circles—we hear he calls her in Pleasantville every night.

As the final item in this little corner, we would like to shower our applause on the fellows who gave so freely of their time to decorate the Field House for the retreat. They made it look like a place where God could be worshipped, and it contributed a great measure to the success of the retreat. Congratulations!

Advertising Exams To Be Held In Phila., Feb. 18

Aptitude for Field Sought in Those Entering Business

The American Association of Advertising Agencies examination which is given annually to "attract high-calibre young people to advertising and to test them for specific kinds of work in the industry" will again be held in Philadelphia on February 18th and 25th.

College senior and people starting out in business are eligible to take the exam which consists of aptitude-temperament and optional knowledge tests.

College Men Excel

According to a study conducted by the A.A.A.A. and the Personnel Laboratory of New York, persons with more than two years of college training may have as much as one-third greater chance of success in advertising than those who have dropped out of school earlier. This flows from the results of the last nationwide examination. Among 967 candidates in 1949 only 46% of those with two years or less of college behind them appeared to be equally well equipped as those with more than two years of college.

Women Found Suited

Men had a slight edge over women in aptitude for advertising. But more women appeared to be temperamentally suited for advertising than men.

Full information and application blanks may be obtained from A. Edward Morgan, Richard A. Foley Advertising Agency, Inc., 1528 Walnut St., Philadelphia 2, Pa.

STUDENTS REGISTER FOR SPRING TERM

Registration for the Spring semester was again conducted under the system initiated last Fall, but, unlike the Fall registration, it was not quite as smooth. The first day of registration, that of Commerce and Finance students, saw inept organization of registration facilities result in average waits of 5 to 6 hours for more than 600 men.

Subsequently, registration of the Arts and Science and Engineering Schools was handled smoothly with line waiting reduced to a matter of minutes in most cases.

The various desks required for complete registration were arranged on the Field House floor in such a manner as to provide a continuous flow of students. Despite the first-day bottlenecks 2200 students were eventually processed.

ATTENTION, SENIORS!!

A limited number of copies of the current issue of the Alumnus Magazine is available free of charge, and may be obtained in either the Alumni Office or the VILLANOVAN office. First come, first served.

Band And Glee Club Begin Spring Season With Concert At St. John's

The Symphonic Band and Glee Club began their 1950 concert season last Thursday night by performing before a group which they consider their best and hardest-to-please audience—the children of St. John's Orphanage. These musical organizations feel that the reaction of this audience, since the children do not suppress their criticism and approval as much as does an older audience is a good indication of the worth of the performance, and that appreciative applause they received last Thursday night insures a successful concert season.

On the schedule released last week by Rev. Ralph Handran, O.S.A., moderator of the groups seven concerts are slated to be given this year before the Easter vacation.

Following the concert at St. John's Orphanage, the two groups will travel to Merion Academy tonight. One week later, next Tuesday night, they will perform at Chestnut Hill College. The next concert after that is scheduled for Feb. 27th. at Immaculata College and the following week, on March 6th., the men will sing and play at the Holy Child Parish, Malvern Prep School is to be the next stop on March 15th., and the final pre-Easter concert, on March 20th., is scheduled to entertain the girls at Rosemont College.

This schedule is similar to the groups' travel program for previous years, with the exception that this year there are no long trips slated to be taken. As usual, after completing their concert season, the Symphonic Band and Glee Club will give a post-season recital during the Junior Week activities.

The concerts to be given this year feature service marches played by the Band, selections from "The Red Mill Overture", and other selections which have been recently added to the repertoire of the Glee Club.

Is This for Real?

A Phi Kappa Pi pledge gets the "E. E." treatment at the hands of a member of the fraternity for the Engineering school, in the initiations which were held last week. In spite of the horrible scene that it was, we hear the pledge recovered.

WILDCATS TOP SETON HALL AS ARIZIN BREAKS PALESTRA SCORING RECORD

CAGERS MEET RIDER WEDN'DAY; FACE B. C. SAT. AT PALESTRA

Cats Aim for 20th Win Against Strong Eagles

By Neal Fahy

The powerful Villanova basketball machine, hitting on all cylinders in its drive for a post-season tourney bid, is again a strong favorite to mow down all opposition this week with indications pointing to the fact that the 'Cats will have notched number 20 in the victory column by the time Saturday night is over.

Little Rider College of Trenton moves into the local Field House tomorrow evening and the Wildcats should have little or no trouble in subduing the Broncs and also racking up their 32nd straight in the Villanova gym. Only once in the last fourteen years have the Broncs been able to tame the Wildcats. In its last outing, Rider was edged by Panzer, 55-49.

On Saturday night the Boston College Eagles, another distinguished charter member of "The Seven Sinners", engage the Wildcats quintet in a duel at the Palestra. Although Bee Cee's five has had a hard time keeping over the .500 mark this season, the Beantowners have shown improvement in recent encounters and might have what it takes to upset the 'Cats. Among others, the Eagles have registered outstanding victories over strong Yale and Rhode Island State.

Have Strong Offense

B. C. this year fields a truly representative team of the 'Boston Irish' from coach to waterboy. Court mentor Al McClellan counts heavily on his three Toms, O'Connell, O'Brien and Deegan, along with Tim O'Connell and Dick Fitzgerald to lead the scoring parade against the 'Cats. Then ,too, McClellan can always call on Pat Higgins if necessary.

MILE QUARTET WINS 3RD AT NYAC GAMES; SET INQUIRER MARK

Two Mile Foursome Wins Philly Race, Barry Stars in Mile

Last Saturday night at the New York A. C. games in the Garden, Villanova's mile relay team won their third major race in five starts, and thus add another reason for their being called one of the hottest clubs this season. The time of 3:21.4 was not a new meet record, but for the second time this season it was the best time of the night. In winning the Wildcats outsped Georgetown, Boston College and Holy Cross. The Blue and White quartet ran with Joe McCreary, Pete Sinigan, John Furlinger and Jim McKenna.

John Barry, Villanova's crack Freshman miler from Ireland was second to George Wade of Yale in the Baxter mile. Wade's time was 4:12.1, while Barry did 4:13.8 in outdistancing little John Twomney of Illinois. Barry who is rated as a 4:08 miler outdoors, has figured prominently every mile this season. This term he registered here as a Freshman and will henceforth carry Villanova's colors for the remainder of the season.

The mile relay team's other triumphs started early in the season

Georgetown players look on in open-mouthed amazement as Arizin hangs in mid-air prior to dropping the ball in the hoop. It was such a shot that made Washington fans gasp as Arizin led the team to a 73-45 victory.

L.S.U., Kentucky, Miami On '50 Football Schedule

Leonardmen Play 3 at Home, 6 on Road

By Ted Fernandes

The 1950 football schedule has been released by the Athletic Office with promisisg opponents lined up to face the formidable grid-machine of Jim Leonard. Three new teams have been added in addition to six hollovers from the '49 season. The real newcomer is L. S. U. while Kentucky and Miami (Fla.) resume after a one-year layoff.

On Sept. 23rd the Mainliners face Duquesne at home. The valuable services of big fullback Ralph Pasquariello will be sorely missed at the powerhouse position, but Pete D'Alonzo will add his share of drive, to partially compensate for this.

The 'Cats travel to Miami, Fla., on Oct. 6th to face the Hurricanes in an evening tilt. From there they hit the road for Tulsa, Okla., in what may be the revenge game of the year. Due to an unfortunate incident at Shibe Park last year, when the Westerners marred an unbeaten 'Cat record, the Villanovans will be out to play for keeps with the Oklahoma version of the Golden Hurricane.

Cats Meet Cats

Kentucky is the next stop, on Oct. 21st. The 'Cats will again meet their brothers, the Wildcats, of Lexington, Ky. In the last game played between these two schools, Villanova led the parade up until the final half-minute when the Rebels tied it all up.

Oct. 27th will see Georgetown at Shibe Park. The Hoyas are definitely an up and coming team, and although Villanova defeated them the last four years, the 'Cats can't afford to rest on their laurels. Georgetown will be tough.

Nov. 3rd, and Detroit will afford the opposition. The Titans also fell victim to the fierce 'Cats last year, but they'll be up for this one. The tussle will again be a home game for Detroit.

B. C. Again

New England is the next scene of battle as the 'Cats tangle claws with the talons of the Bee Cee Eagle on the 18th of November. Always a team to fear, the Bostonians are rough, ready and gunning for the Pennsylvanians. Especially in this coming event, they will be out to even accounts with the Leonardmen in payment for last year's rampage.

A newcomer has been added to the agenda, Louisianna State University, to be played at Baton Rouge,

MR. EUGENE POWERS APPOINTED I. M. ATHLETIC DIRECTOR

Former Pitt Harrier Succeeds Fr. Dunne

Mr. Eugene P. Powers, Assistant Professor of Education has been appointed to the office of Intramural Athletic Director to succeed Father Dunne in this capacity.

A graduate of the University of Pittsburgh, Class of 1938, Mr. Powers has had much experience in sports having coached basketball, track, and baseball, and prior to coming to Villanova having served as Athletic Director at Cannon College in Erie. While at Pitt he was a member of the wrestling team and a distance man on the track team specializing in cross country and the two mile.

He has also taught in both the elementary and high schools of Pittsburgh and is knwn for having established the "Safety Town" program which is nationally famous in the elementary education field. During the war Mr. Powers was a Lieutenant-Commander in the Navy serving in the Pacific Theatre.

His plans for Intramurals during the spring term include a continuation of the present basketball setup with a regular league of day-hops added which will play the winner of the resident league at the end of the season. Also included is a tenative game between the intramural all-stars and the freshman team, a handicap golf tournament, a tennis tournament, and a resumption of boxing.

Mr. Powers wishes to contact all those interested in working with him as well as day-hops who will form teams to play in the basketball league. For that purpose a meeting will be held in the VILLANOVAN office on Thursday, at one o'clock.

Georgetown Routed 73-45; Tall Paul Again Sets Pace

Sabol Scores 15, Hannan 14, to Blast Hoyas

By Jim Gallo

Paul Arizin added another record to his already lengthy collection as he led Villanova's Wildcats to a 73-45 conquest of the Hoyas of Georgetown University. Although it is still unofficial, Paul's total of 33 points is believed to have set a new collegiate scoring record for the National Guard Armory court in Washington, D. C. The crowd of 4639 was treated to one of the finest individual performances ever witnessed in this big basketball barh.

In the first half, it was all Arizin. The Villanova center hit the cords from all angles with his usual variety of shots to amass a half-time total of 25 points. At this point, the entire Georgetown team had only accounted for 24 points, and the Mainlines enjoyed a 46-24 lead at the intermission. The Wildcats got off to a fast start, grabbed the lead and held it throughout the game. At its closest point, the score was 7-5.

The second half was somewhat different. Arizin converted on two of four field goals attempts and four of five freethrows. Tom Sabol and Joe Hannon paced the second half attack. Sabol wound up the evening with a total of 15 and Hannon 14. In addition, Hannon put on a great display of ball-hawking. Brooks Ricca was invaluable in grabbing rebounds and setting up scoring plays. To Leo Wolf fell the task of guardin Georgetown's pointgetter, Tommy O'Keefe.

The Villanova defense checked the Hoya's fast break and forced the Washingtonians to shoot the outside. Only O'Keefe and Durmowicz were successful, netting 14 and 13 points respectively. Four different Hoyas tried their hands at stopping Arizin, two of them being rewarded five personal fouls for their efforts.

As a result of Saturday's games, Villanova's tournament hopes are slightly brighter. While the Wildcats were routing Georgetown, Toledo defeated LaSalle, and Canisius upset CCNY, two of the East's top contenders for tournament bids.

Blue - White Net 28 for 47 in Win Over Pirates

By Harry Range

The amazing Paul Arizin, herculean holder of records has done it again! The most recent record to be shattered by the jumping phenomenon was the Palestra scoring record of 32 points which was topped with ease as the lanky center scored 41 markers in the Wildcats 77-68 win over Seton Hall last Wednesday night.

Arizin's accuracy in the thirty minutes in which he played was close to perfection as he hit with 15 field goals out of 21 attempts and netted 11 for 12 from the foul line. Having only scored 16 points in the team's last encounter with Seton Hall, Paul appeared to trying to prove himself to the lads from South Orange. And well he did. More than half his shots were thrown up one-handed as he fell away from the basket and these kept the crowd in absolute awe for the whole time in which he was playing.

Arizin Holds Crowd

His complete hold over the crowd was evidenced when, with five minutes remaining, Paul was forced to withdraw from the game because of five personals. At this point the Palestra shook with the tremendous ovation, and then, with Arizin no longer in the game half the stands emptied, having just witnessed the greatest scoring exhibition against collegiate opposition in the Philadelphia area. It will be remembered that last season, in a game with the Naval Air Material Center, Arizin set the national collegiate scoring record with 85 points in a single contest.

The former Palestra mark was 32 points set by Easy Parham of Texas Wesleyan 2 years ago against LaSalle, and equalled by Arizin earlier this season in his first appearance there against St. Francis. Paul's 15 field goals broke the Palestra mark of 13 held by Penn's Herb Lyon and Chink Crossin.

Cats Take Early Lead

Concerning the game, the Wildcats broke into an early lead with Tom Sabol's lay-up, jumped to 9-0,

Frosh Win Twelfth Straight; Maguire's 200 Points Lead Team

The dynamic Villanova freshman quintet stretched their season's efforts to twelve consecutive victories. The latest victims were Muhlenburg, John Marshall, Seton Hall, Brown Prep and Penn.

The Blue and White traveled to Allentown and tripped the Mules' frosh in a thriller 54-53. John Marshall was a hapless victim at the field house as the Cats romped to a 77-38 win. Undefeated Seton Hall met the Waterloo on their home court to the hustling yearlings by a surprising 67-59 count. Villanova ran true to form in dumping Brown Prep 71-49 at the field house. Penn's Quakers were tamed quite easily by the Little Wildcats, the final look being 74-58.

Maguire and Hennessey Again

In the closest game of the season Coach McDonnells charges had to go all out to beat a stubborn Muhlenburg club. Villanova was in control of the game by 16 points going into the last quarter then the Mules caught five but their rally fell short giving the 'Cats a well earned 54-53 win. Larry Hennessy hit for 12 points, Nick Maguire threw in 19 points to lead the winners. Dick Leshew hit for 11 points to top the Mules.

The freshmen were at their best as they dumped Seton Hall 67-59. Once again Larry Hennessy's deadly shooting kept Major smiling. Larry had a total of 20 points for his efforts. "Reds" Mooney controlled the boards and contributed 18 points to the winners cause. Bill Kaulkin, the Hall's speedy forward led the losers with 18 points.

Penn Falls

The Redand Blue of Pennsylvania found the Villanova too accurate and too fast as they raced to a satisfying 74-58 win. The dynamic duo of Hennessey and Maguire drove Penn's defense beserk. Hennessey threw in 16 points while Nick Maguire had 21 points. Reds Mooney pushed in 19 counters to round out the three high scorers. Jim Bech with 20 points led Penn's five.

Maguire High Scorer

Nich Maguire's 200 points and 16.6 game average leads the frosh scoring. Nich's blazing speed and ability to shoot at such a pace have brought oh's and ah's from the crowd and moans and groands from the unlucky opponents.

Big Larry Hennessy's dead set shot has produced 158 points and a respectable 13 point average, to make a explosive one-two punch for the high-flying freshman.

There are two open dates on the 1950 schedule and it is rumored that the authorities are seeking a worthy opponent to fill in one of those opens. This game is expected to be a home game, giving the 'Cats four home games.

when the club won their race at the Philadelphia Inquirer games in 3:24. The team was the same except for Jack Holmes running in place of Simigan, and their time was a new meet record. The old record of 3:25.9 was set by N. Y. U. in 1948.

Villanova's two mile relay team consisting of Bill Curran, Simigan, George Thompson and Browning Ross also nosed out favored Pennsylvania to win the most exciting race of the night. Twice the event was a new one and the time of 7:53.8 is an automatic meet record. The victory was remarkable because anchorman Thompson had previously run in the 1000 and Ross had taken third behind Barry in a blazing mile which Fred Wilt won in 4:11.6.

The mile foursome also won in the Boston A. A. games, were second to Manhattan in an "off" night at the Millrose games, and third to Seton Hall and N. Y. U. in a race at Boston whose first three finishes had the best three times of the season.

were ahead 13-1, and pulled out to a 38-21 score at half-time. Arizin's 25 points in the first half were four more than the entire Seton Hall team.

The second half found Tall Paul just as hot and after four and one half minutes he had broken the record and run the score to 49-25. Trizin then retired and the Wildcat reserve took over for awhile.

The Pirates then began to move and reduced the lead to ten points at one time. However, two beautiful freezing exhibitions in the final five minutes kept the Jerseyites in their place and Villanova emerged with a 77-68 win. Noteworthy, however, is the fact that Seton Hall out-scored the Mainliners 47-39 in the second half.

The Wildcat's accuracy on field goals was also amazing, netting 28 in 47 attempts.

ALUMNI HALL WINS INTRAMURAL LEAGUE WITH 5-0 RECORD

Austin, Fedigan Take Closing Games

Mondschein Inc.

The end of the semester also brought to close the first half of the Intramural Basketball League. Alumni, defending co-champions along with Austin copped the first half title with five consecutive victories. They attained this championship honor by virtue of their 48-27 win over runnerup Fedigan. Alumni's victories were over Bks 2 & 3, 70-50, the Doms, 52-44, Bks 1 & 4, 54-49, and Austin, 76-60. Thei rtwo remaining games with cellar-dwelling Mendel and Good Council were cancelled because of schedule difficulties.

The final two games of the first half saw Fedigan topple a strong Dom quintet in overtime 45-41, and Austin edged the strong Bks 1 & 4 combine, 50-48. Both games proved to be hotly contested tilts and both contests were decided late in the game.

Austin Wins

In the first encounter, Austin took an early lead and after a see-saw battle managed to hold a 25-21 halftime lead. After the intermission, Bks 1 & 4 climebd to within one point of Austin but were never able to go into a lead. Although they stayed within very close range throughout, Bks 1 & 4 finally succumbed 50-48. Leading the victors attack was Bill Lemmer with 15 points. Roesgen with 10 and Brennan with 8 also aided greatly in the victory. The Tom-boys, Flynn and Madonia, were the main cogs in Bks 1 & 4's losing effort, garnering 13 points each. Referees for the contest were Perry Del Purgatorio and Jim Haggerty.

The second encounter proved to be a real thriller as Fedigan and the Doms ended the regulation gam with the score knotted at 40 al. Fedigan then proceeded to hold the Doms scoreless in the overtime while Galyo and Crossin countered field goals and Galyo also made good on a foul attempt to show the way to Fedigan's 45-40 conquest. The score was tied six times during the regulation contest and the halftime score read 24-22 in the Doms favor. Serious Joe Crossin was the big siege in the victor's attack netting 16 markers, while Jumping Joe Galyo garnered 13 points. Bill Knecht was high for the losers with 16 points, while Heigl, Nedello and Beahan all made 8 points.

The Final Standings:

	Won	Lost	Pct.
Alumni	5	0	1.000
Fedigan	6	1	.857
Austin	4	2	.667
Bks 1&4	4	3	.571
Doms	3	4	.429
Bks 2&3	1	4	.200
Mendel	0	4	.000
G. Council	0	5	.000

Dave Frink of Fedigan and Tom Flynn of Bks 1 & 4, tied for first half scoring honors with 55 points apiece. Flynn netted his points in six games while Frink needed only five games to reach his total. Third place in the race went to Bill Knecht of the Doms with 79 points in six games. But Bob Ruggerio of Bks 2&3, had the highest average as he hoped in 72 points in 3 games for an average of 24 per game. Rounding out the first five leaders was George Scanlon who got 67 points in 6 games. Oddly enough, Alumni did not place a man in the first ten scorers. The second five were:

	Games	Pts.
Coiletta—Fedigan	6	65
Madonia—Bks. 1&4	6	60
Beahan—Doms	6	60
Galyo—Fedigan	5	54
Crossin—Fedigan	6	52

Cagers Win 7, Drop One During Interterm Recess

Arizin Leads Team in Easy Wins; Only Loss to Louisville

While the rest of the students were enjoying their semester holidays the members of Wildcat basketball squad added new laurels to their court reputation. Starting with easy victories over Rutgers and Fordham, the cagers trounced a supposedly strong Muhlenberg five, outclassed John Marshall, were upset by a hot Louisville combine and then steamrollered Seton Hall Creighton, and Rhode Island State in order. The chief attraction of the first two contests was the work of Villanova's ace, Paul Arizin.

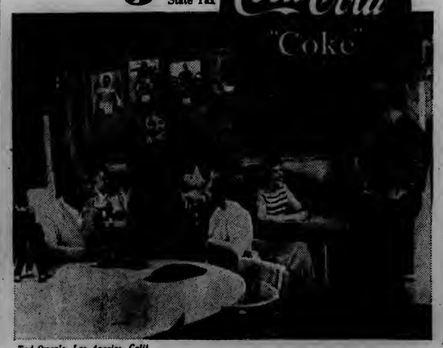
Big Paul looped in 25 points against the Rutgers Scarlet while in the game with the Rams he bettered that total by one marker. The most amazing feature of these performances was that the tall center took 34 shots from the floor in the two contests—and connected on 18 of them. Hannan Ricca and Sabol were big point contributers in both the 84-67 win over the Jerseyites and the 69-54 win over the boys from the Bronx.

Muhlenberg's special "Arizin Defense" managed to hold Paul to 25 points as the Wildcats registered a surprisingly easy 72-47 win over the Mules. A combination of Ricca's passing, Sabol's driving and Wolf's sensational set-shooting helped to bewilder the highly touted upstaters. The Wildcats exploded in the second half of the John Marshall game after being held to a 10 point halftime lead and buried the Johnies under a 107-62 score. Arizin, as usual led the parade with 34 counters, while Hannan garnered 21 and Ricca chipped in with 16. The 107 poins were a new high for the Wildcats against a college opponent.

Lose to Louisville

The Blue and White suffered their third defeat of the season and their second to a Kentucky team when Louisville invaded the Palestra and handed the 'Cats a 78-68 setback.

G. Combs led the visitors scoring with 24 points, while Ricca and Arizin each contributed 17 points to the losing cause. Featuring one of the most phenominal shooting averages ever witnessed in this area, the Kentuckians ran up a big 22-6 lead in the early moments which the locals managed to cut down to 39-35 at the intermission. In the second half Louisville continued playing a steady, methodical game and pulled away to record a 10 point victory —the worst loss suffered by Villanova all season.



Although Sam Lackaye, erstwhile Villanova freshman outscored Arizin 17 to 16 the Wildcats had little trouble in disposing of Seton Hall by a 71-54 score in their next outing. Despite the fact that both Ricca and Arizin were fouled out the Mainliners pulled away from the Hall team in the second half to register a decisive triumph. Still smarting from the loss to the Colonels, Villanova Administered an 84-63 pasting to a mediocre Creighton outfit. Big Paul caged 33 markers in his seemingly effortless manner. Arizin scored an identical total in the last game of the holidays, when Rhode Island State appeared at the field house to receive their lesson in the court game from the powerful Wildcats. The final score read 68-49.

PRINCETON, N. J. — The Medical College Admission Test, required of applicants by a number of leading medical colleges throughout the country, will be given twice again during the current calendar year, according to Educational Testing Service, which prepares and administers the test for the Association of American Medical Colleges.

Candidates may take the MCAT on Saturday, May 13, 1950, or on Monday, November 6, at administrations to be held at more than 300 local centers in all parts of the country. The Association of American Colleges, through its Committee on Student Personnel Practices, recommends that candidates for admission to classes starting in the fall of 1951 take the May test. The results will then be available to institutions in the early fall when many medical colleges begin the selection of their next freshman class.

The MCAT consists of tests of general scholastic ability, a test on understanding of modern society, and an achievement test in science. According to ETS, no special preparation other than a review of science subjects is necessary. All questions are of the objective type.

Application forms and a Bulletin of Information, which gives details of registration and administration, as well as sample questions, are available from pre-medical advisers or directly from Educational Testing Service, Box 592, Princeton, N. J. Completed applications must reach the ETS office by April 29 and October 23, respectively, for the May 13 and November administrations.

The Library Corner . . .

VENICE, a photographic exhibition prepared by the editors of LIFE, is being shown at Villanova College Library. The display began Feb. 6th. and will continue through Feb. 18th. The exhibition is an expansion of the article, Renaissance Venice, and is the third to be based on the LIFE articles dealing with the history of Western culture.

The impressive building above is the seat of the Venetian Government, the Doge's Palace. It is part of th picture exhibit of Venice on view at the college library.

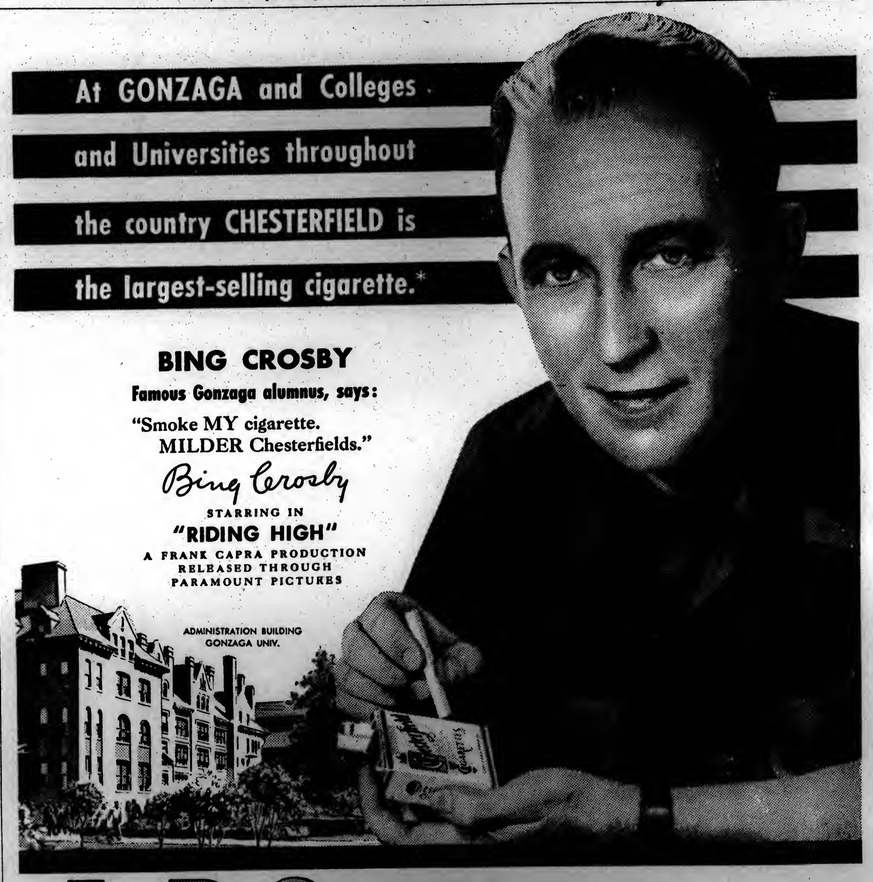
For a thousand years Venice has been the wonder of travelers. In 1365 the poet, Petrarch, wrote, "I know not if it has an equal within the bounds of the world." This exhibition in both text and pictures, suggests the Renaissance splendor and opulence and rich commercialism — in fact the whole extraordinary achievement of art and life in that unique and serene city.

Twenty-four Panels Shown

The exhibition opens with a panoramic view of Venice in 1500 as imagined from the air by a Renaissance artist, with the Grand Canal winding like a serpent through the heart of the city. The twenty-four enlarged panels then follow with the story of the fabulous sea-girt city which enjoyed a charmed life. With her government and populace alike there was but one faction: Venice; one loyalty: Venice; one love: Venice.

The pictorial material is organized under four categories: Government, Religion, Art and Literature, Civic and Private Architecture. Included are the color reproductions which appeared in LIFE of the paintings by Titian, Veronese, Giorgione, and Carpaccio; also photographs of St. Mark's, the Doge's Palace, the Sancovino Library, Palladio's Church of San Giorgio Maggiore, and portraits of Vittoria, Sansovino, Titian, Aretino, Tintoretto, an Aldus title page, views of various private palaces, the Rialto, the Colleoni, the Grand Canal, etc.

History Outlined



After the discovery of America, and new trade routes to the Orient were opened in the 16th century, Venice was doomed. That she withstood her enemies in war and trade from 697 to 1797 is testimony to her great strength. But by mid-eighteenth century Venice was a shell of her former self. The masks worn at her brilliant carnivals seemed to symbolize her false position. Then in 1797 a handful of Napoleon's troops put an end to the once proud state.

The exhibition was prepared under the direction of John Goldsmith Phillips, Associate Curator of Renaissance and Modern Art, Metropolitan Museum of Art. The textual commentary, also by Mr. Phillips, quotes freely from various 15th and 16th century writers and describes the Republic of Venice at the height of its power.

Stamps Also Shown

The current exhibit is on display in the corridor of the top floor of the Library building. Besides this exhibition there is another interesting display currently being shown in the cases in the main lobby, an exhibit of United States commemorative stamps, dating from 1893 to 1945, and recent first-day covers from the private collection of Mr. Al Trezza, a member of the Library staff.

WVIL SCHEDULES NEW PROGRAMS FOR SPRING TERM AIRING

A forthcoming series of special programs, news of dramatic productions, and the re-scheduling of programs, announcers and engineers for the second semester highlighted the first meeting of the second semester of the staff personnel of radio station WVIL, the radio voice of Villanova College. Program manager Bill Breninghouse and station manager Skip Keenley presided over the meeting.

The chief news was that WVIL is to present a series of programs in conjunction with the Lenten Pre-Cana conferences. The conferences, sponsored by the chaplain's office, will be supplemented by a series of programs concerning the problems of youth and marriage.

Also announced were plans for an increased number of dramatic presentations during the second semester. Staff members are already engaged in adapting scripts for radio presentation. The casts for the productions will be composed entirely of students.

The meeting saw the re-scheduling of the staff and the programs for the second semester. "A" and "B" staffs, each complete with its own engineers and announcers, have been formed. The two staffs will work alternate weeks. This plan, it was announced, was instituted by the station so that a greater number of students could be given the opportunity to gain experience on the staff.

The second semester's log of the station appears elsewhere in this paper.

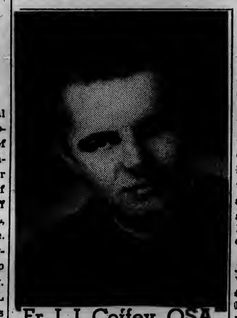
Engineers Host To Crowd At The Revived Owl Hop

Last Friday evening the Field House at Villanova rocked with what was probably one of the most successful informal dances of the year. With a crowd of over four hundred couples, the revival of the traditional Owl Hop, under the sponsorship of the Phi Kappa Pi, was a big hit.

The dance marked the last big social event at the college until Junior Week which will be the first week in May. Next Wednesday is the first day of Lent and the social calendar will be suspended till after the Easter season. Because of this many of the students were eager to see that it would be successful.

Red Eyed Owl

The Phi Kappa Pi, fraternity for the School of Engineering, under the direction of Hop Chairman, Gene Valerio, and President Michael Nowlan, did a wonderful job of decorating the Field House. From a pyramid in the center of the floor, on whose sides were emblazoned instruments of each of the four fields of engineering, strings of lights and strings of engineering formulae reached to the sides and corners of the balcony. On the stage, behind the band, a huge, fifteen foot feathered representation of an owl looked down with wide, red, blinking eyes.



Mugs & Music

Favors were given to every person that attended the dance. They were miniature beer mugs, which had notes attached for the girls with advice on why they should not marry engineers; either there was a scarcity of engineers at the dance or the advice went unheeded, though. Some were lucky enough to be the winners of door prizes which Gene Valerio was deftly giving away during the intermissions.

Last it be forgotten, the praise for the wonderful music should go to Vince Palma, the Villanovans and lovely Marion Stodder, the vocalist. The arrangements received plaudits from everybody there.

Elizabethan Drama To Come To Field House Stage In March

Sunday Conference To Open Lenten Pre-Cana Series

Fr. J. J. Coffey, OSA

Villanova College will begin its first series of conferences for its engaged students and their fiancees on the first Sunday of Lent, February 26th.

Never before in the history of Villanova has there been anything exactly like these Pre-Cana Conferences, which are expected to greatly help all the engaged couples who will attend. Speakers have been assigned to topics pertinent to preparation for marriage and one speaker will address the young couples on each of the six Sundays of Lent.

First speaker will be Rev. John J. Coffey, O.S.A., of St. Mary's Hall, Villanova. Father Coffey was a lecturer for the Dominican Guild Pre-Marriage Conferences in Philadelphia and has talked widely on preparation for Marriage.

The program for the Conferences, which will be followed by Fr. Coffey next Sunday, will be a lecture, beginning at 3:00 P. M. in the Commerce and Finance Auditorium, followed by an open forum. Each Conference will formally close with Benediction of the Most Blessed Sacrament in the College Chapel.

All engaged students are urged to bring their prospective brides to each of these Sunday Conferences. However, if circumstances do not permit a student to bring his fiance, he should come in any event. The purpose of these Lenten Lectures is not to bring the couple together, but to aid the couple in making a success of their marriage.

Engaged students who expect to attend these Pre-Cana Conferences, either one or all of them, are requested to let the Chaplain's Office know of their desire. While in the Office they should be sure to pick up the added information at their disposal.

Students Given Navy Scholarships

Two students from the local Philadelphia area have been chosen by the Navy for scholarships in the Naval Reserve Officers' Training Corps Program at Villanova College.

These students are Robert H. Winner, 1616 Woodmere Wal, Havertown and Thomas N. Stringfield, 319 Jackson Avenue, Collingdale.

Winner and Stringfield were chosen for their scholastic records and abilities from a field of thirty other applicants in the Reserve Officers' Training Corps at Villanova College.

The scholarships will include payment for all books, tuition and uniforms plus fifty dollars per month. Upon graduation they receive a regular commission in the United States Navy with the rank of ensign.

Villanova College is one of the fifty-two colleges in the country which have a Reserve Officers' Training Corps preparing future officers for the United States Navy.

Announce Awards For Finance Men

New York — Three awards to students of finance and economics have been announced by the Pierre A. DuVal Foundation to encourage investment studies by young men and women. The awards of five hundred, three hundred and two hundred dollars each as either tuition or cash will be made to students on the basis of their "investments."

Students may invest a theoretical $25,000 each in stocks listed on the New York Stock and/or Curb Exchanges for the year starting March 15, 1950. Determining factors will be maximum dividends and Deepest sympathies are extended to Harry Brannen (Sr. 2 — M. E.) on the death of his wife and to Joseph Brosek (Fr. — Arts) on the death of his father. Mass was said in the College Chapel for the happy repose of their souls.

Belle Masque Comedy Will Mean Radical Departure from Usual

The Moderator of the Belle Masque Dramatic Society, Father William J. Krupa, has announced plans for their spring play. In keeping with a current trend toward comedy, as evidenced by public support of the group, they have chosen to undertake the Beaumont and Fletcher play, The Knight of The Burning Pestle. Belle Masque will share the distinction of being one of three colleges in the area to produce this type of play. Catholic University and Rutgers were the two other colleges to stage it in the past. It is a comedy of the Elizabethan period and shall be a departure from the conventional type of play Belle Masque has offered in previous seasons. Special Stage Required

A special stage required for this play is now under construction. It will be enclosed within the Field House stage and become part of an elaborate set designed to typify the interior of the famous Globe Theatre, as it existed in Shakespeare's time. Another addition to the Field House stage shall be an apron which will project into the audience and render complete the period setting of this drama.

The assistance of The Jest and Gesture Club of Rosemont College has again been engaged and a large cast for the production is now entering its second week of rehearsals. The leading roles of the Knight and the Citizens shall be played by Richard Lauman and John Rowe. Other major male roles include: Ted Doyle as Jasper, John Gray as Humphrey, Jack Kelly as Merrythought, and Bill Fleming as Venturewell. Rosemont's contribution consists of: Mary Anna O'Connor as Luce, Kathleen Rowan as the Citizen's wife, and Ellen Solodow as Mistress Merrythought.

The performance is scheduled for March 23, 24, 25, and 26th. It will mark the close of the club's activities for the season at Villanova.

FIRE . . .

It's a terrifying word. And it becomes even more frightening to us students when we see daily in the papers, reports of the terrible destruction that fire has wrought in college dormitories, such as the two recent fires at Oklahoma A & M and Kenyon College in Ohio. The first caused the total destruction of a barracks-type dorm very similar to the ones on our campus. The Kenyon holocaust occurred in a typical brick dorm, but still took a severe toll in student lives. These are but two striking examples of what fire has done elsewhere.

And it could happen here!

We all realize this, and realize also the importance of having adequate precautions to prevent a repetition at Villanova of the tragedies at Oklahoma and Kenyon. We do have such precautions, and they have just been reserviced and supplemented by the Maintenance Department so that our dorms may be prepared if such an emergency should arise.

The precautions are present, but will be of little avail if we students persist in making toys of them, sounding sirens, emptying extinguishers. Horseplay with fire hoses, squirting extinguishers on some unsuspecting student, may be fun at the moment, but can result in tragedy should occasion arise to use the equipment before it can be reserviced.

So serious is this matter that the administration of the college has attached a penalty of expulsion any student tampering with the fire equipment.

This should be motive enough to prevent such actions, but an even greater motive can be extracted from the signs installed at each fire station which warn, "The life you save may be your own."

Something Positive

Tomorrow, when the average American laymen commemorates the birth of our first president, with his observance of the holiday, he will also learn that it marks the beginning of Lent. Thousands of Catholics will wear the sign of Ash Wednesday upon their foreheads. For the Catholics the beginning of the penitential season of Lent will mean less food consummed and the substitution of fish for meat at many meals. Instituted for atonement for sin, the regulations will be practicably applied by them to daily living because that is what they are "supposed to do."

Many Catholics who feel that this is to impersonal will impose upon themselves an ancient custom for the season. They will give up a licit pleasure, or perform some extra duty during the forty days that remind us of Christ's fast in the desert.

We would like to suggest a practicable plan for the student body. Many of us find it almost impossible to go to mass every morning because of travel and early classes. Although for those who can and do, this is a wonderful thing. What we had in mind occured to us when we recalled Christ's words: "Take up your cross, and follow Me!" Our cross is study, and let's not be foolish about it, college work when done honestly is a big enough cross for most of us.

That is your offering, if you are interested! Forget about not smoking or not eating candy which as acts in themselves are of little practical value. Make an honest effort to hit the books during the weeks of Lent. Use your time more intelligently in this endeavor. Use more time if necessary, but do a man sized job when you study. Don't drag your cross up to the end of the semester as usual. At least attempt to carry it even if it does seem almost impossible at times. We, and He, guarantee that you'll not be sorry.

Brotherhood Week

This week is Brotherhood Week and though our year is crowded with weeks especially marked for a particular occasion, drive, or a press agent's brain child, we should examine and take to heart the objectives which are stressed during this time.

What Brotherhood Week is:

A period of rededication to the basic ideals of respect for people and human rights essential to our way of life.

A time to dramatize practical things people can do to promote an understanding and realization of these ideals.

An opportunity to enlist more Americans in year 'round practices and activities to build brotherhood.

Why should we work for a greater brotherhood of man? One look at the world about us and at once it becomes obvious that intolerance and bigotry have been the cause of so much hate and misery that we must act immediately. A realization that race, religion or nationality groupings are not the basic elements of our American way of life must be gained. The importance of our common citizenship and goals as Americans must be emphasized.

The importance of man's brotherhood could not be promoted at a more opportune time. World peace is our objective. Our long climb to this objective can be eased if we recognize that true democracy and peace call for the elimination of those evils which have been standing in the way of real understanding among men.

As college students the reaffirming of those principles stated in the Preamble to the Declaration of Independence is as much a part of your education as any of your courses. You can lead the way toward the ideal: Brotherhood of man.

By Jim Griffin

"Hey, ain't tomorrow Ash Wednesday? Boy, I sure hate to think of Lent comin back again, except for Easter vacations. I guess Lent is something you just can't beat. Either you give something up and struggle along doing without smokes, or getting up for Mass every morning, or else you just act regular. And if you do that you feel kind of funny like, guilty of something, every time Bill Butt himself turns down one of your Chesters, or every morning when Dan wakes you up at seven o'clock with that nutty alarm clock of his. The big puzzle is which is the worst.

Then Again

"On the other hand, there are a few characters around who don't seem to mind it at all. I knew a guy once who was so dumb that he actually gave up cigarettes for Lent and went to Mass, too. I mean religion is religion, but after all. And the funniest part of it, the guy didn't seem to think a second thought about it. One day I actually heard him going down the hall whistling, at six A. M.

The Score

"You expect stuff like that from priests and seminarians and all, but that's because they don't know what the score is. I mean, they're not out in the world and all. I guess maybe I'd be like that, too, if all I had to do was hear confessions and say Mass.

Fair Minded?

"But that's geting away from the subject. What's bothering me today is this Lent thing. I mean after all it seems a pretty lousy trick to pull on Louie for everybody just to stop buying cigarettes. Why, the company might even take his machine away. Then what would we do after Easter? You know, that's not as far away as it sounds. I mean, I like to be fair minded about it all.

Why Not?

"Don't get me wrong, now. I don't mind going to Church tomorrow and letting them put ashes on my head. After all, they saved those ashes since last Palm Sunday and it would be pretty mean to let them go to waste now. But cigarettes are a big chunk of Louie's income, and he might fold up. I think it'd be better to get up and go to Mass at twelve o'clock. I mean the guys who don't need their sleep mornings. I don't think it would be too good for me though, because the Doc told me last time I might have a bad heart, he didn't know. That's the big trouble with this Lent; you want to make some sacrifice, I mean something on a big scale, just so's you can be like one of the boys, and everything you try to do is stopped before you can lift up your little finger.

Starting With Ashes

"But to get back to the ashes. I think it's nifty to go to a church where the priest tells you what the Latin means. I really get a thrill when he says "Remember man, that thou art dust, and unto dust thou shall return." I mean, it makes you feel proud you're a Catholic and all."

A WALK IN THE MUD

By Bill Breninghouse

It was a bad day for Oscar Twomp. He no sooner parked his tricycle down by the Barracks (Belle Air Hall, to the deluded) than his trusty three-wheeled vehicle was ingloriously towed away. Oscar pleaded on bended knee to save his faithful mechanical servant. The tow-truck driver had a heart of stone. There was nothing he could do. His hands were tied. He looked very funny driving that truck with his hands tied.

Mud

After a scintillating lecture on the Political History of the Aegean Islands and Its Effect on the Modern Culture of Northern Tibet (PsAegTb 101), Oscar started the saturated plains to the Pie Shop. This Pie Shop is known to the elite as the Pie Shoppe, and to gay Lotharios as the College Store. Oscar stopped for a cup of coffee and also picked up a small tube of toothpaste. He paid the dollar sixty-nine, drank his coffee and started to leave. This was a problem. He went to one of the main doors, it was locked and barred. Oscar became panicky when looking around he saw that all the windows were bolted, locked, and screened. Finally, he climbed over a few tables, and day-hops' lunches, and found a small opening on one side of the other door which allowed the passage of one student at a time. If someone ever dropped a match there would be many, many burned-up day hops. There must have been some fire law that required most of the doors to be locked and barred.

Swamplands

From this den of nothing, Oscar proceeded to the library. By the time he found an open door it was time to go to his next class. Heading across the swamplands to CJB he vaulted over a snow fence which, incidentally, has done yeoman service this snowy winter.

As he headed across the mire, he felt himself sinking into the earth. It was not unlike quicksand. Of course, Oscar had never been in quicksand, but this was like what he figured quicksand would be, as if he really knew what quicksand was like, which he didn't. While he was engrossed in thought he was sinking faster. He was keeping afloat by flapping his ears. Soon a lifeboat was sent out from the Naval Science Building and a gallant rescue was performed as Peno swam out and carried him to the shore in his teeth.

After catching his breath he set out for his objective once again. This time he cut across a circular cement gun emplacement or something like that when all of a sudden it began to rain like Helsinki in April. How was he supposed to know that the chem. engineers were letting off steam again? He was soaked to the skin and slightly broiled but he managed to come out with his coat and tie intact. Twomp happened to hit an open door on the third try at the Naval Science building but was thrown out for being late for class.

Dark Day

At this point Oscar decided to give up. There was no sense in trying to make a success of anything on this dark day. He remembered that his red and green tricycle was now reposing in some garage and he was unable to bail it out. He must go down to the P & W again.

On his way to the station he decided to stop off and read the bulletin board in Mendel Hall. It was very interesting. He found that he was wanted in the Registrar's Office on Sept. 28, 1947, and that there was a meeting of the Trigonometry club last Thursday.

Pushed the Button

He finally came to Lancaster Pike and pushed the little button that would change the light. Eight minutes later the lights changed and Oscar started across the road. A huge trailer truck evidently didn't see the light or Twomp. Oscar almost got away.

Sense And Nonsense

By Tom Pasha

Battle Of The Black Three

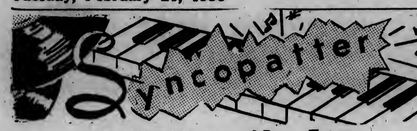
The room was filled with smoke, the silence was deafening, and as one entered the room he became immediately aware of the suspense that lurked in every corner. The opponents skeptically eyed one another and one could see the scrupulousness with which each man judged his challenger, patiently waiting and hoping against hope that through some oversight he would be able to take advantage of an opportunity and overthrow his aggressor.

Crucial Time

At last the crucial time had come, the time for each to prove himself a possessor of the fortitude and stamina that are so important in this test of mental and physical endurance. Slowly, but deliberately, and with an air of preparedness each man moved toward the platform which held the weapons.

The second began to hand the participants the instruments of destruction while his confederate in this grim task of officiating began to ready the table with the stimulants necessary to combat the torturous fatigue which might result from such a contest. Hesitantly, the combatants drew the arms which were to carry them through this perilous flirtation with fate, and as each man obtained his weapon, the thought of its effectiveness or ineffectiveness immediately registered on his countenance. Facial contours were altered in such a way that they recorded the satisfaction, disappointment, hopefulness, and confidence of their respective owners. The belligerents held their weapons in readiness, determined to see this thing through to its conclusion.

Ready



Finally all the preparations were made, the contestants sat facing each other, the duel was about to commence. A flip, a turn, and the fight for survival was on, each contestant trying to out-maneuver, outthink the other with only one thought in mind "I must win or become lost in the milling multitude of failures."

Outcry

On and on they fought, the silence broken only by a sudden sigh of surprise, an exclamation of triumph, or an occasional cry demanding justice, until it appeared as though they had surpassed all other tests of human endurance in this harrowing ordeal. But one by one the weaker gladiators gave way to the overwhelming superiority of the more experienced warrior. At last, this poor, hysterical, raving maniac rose from his chair and in a quivering voice cried "At last, my ambition has been realized, now I can die in peace, knowing that I have reached my ultimate goal in life because now — now the CANASTA CHAMPIONSHIP IS MINE — ALL MINE!!!

LETTERS CONTEST

Do you know anything? Do you think anything? Do you want a carton of Chesterfields, that new cigarette that you have been hearing about? If you can say yes to two of these queries you can have the third, the cigarettes, we mean. All you have to do is write a letter to the editor. Mail it, bring it, or give it to your newsboy. If your letter is the lucky one, you will smoke Chesterfields in the near future and save your money, too.

By Roland Mayer and Bruce Taten

This is a plea on behalf of the other 92% that Bruce forgot last week. Well, maybe not exactly a plea, but more of an acknowledgement that we admit to their existence even if they aren't crazy for Jazz Music.

Possibly if all the facts were known a great deal more than 8% of the listening public would be found to enjoy jazz music in one form or another. It's just that a vast number of people fail to recognize it for what it is when they do hear and like it.

Embark on Self Education

So if you're a member of the "rhythmless ninety-two" and would like to strive towards social acceptability, why not embark on a little self-education program simply by tuning in to WVIL at 9:00 on Thursday evenings for Bill Cooney and Jerry Battle's new record show called '9:20 Spew". The music will be strictly instrumental and feature the best in jazz of all types.

While we're on the subject of the music with a beat, perhaps the best jazz concert ever held in Philly took place last Saturday afternoon in the foyer of the Academy of Music. Apparently down from New York where they are all currently appearing, Sidney Bechet, Max Kaminsky, Wilbur de Paris, and several other jazz greats really had the usually sedate Academy rocking. They did all the old standbys — High Society, Muskrat Ramble, Sister Kate, Panama, and many others. If the interest displayed by the paying customers is any indication I'm sure that we can expect another similar concert back in Philly soon. Memory Lingers

Although Lionel Hampton has now departed from the Click the memory lingers on. There just isn't anyone around who can move an audience like the "Hamp". If you've never seen the guy in action by all means do so at the next opportunity. He turns the audience into the best animal act you'll ever see.

Record of the Week: No doubt you've heard Harry James' big hit "Don't You Go Way Mad". For my money it's the closest Harry has come to his early waxings of 8 or 9 years ago, since he settled down to be Mr. Grable.

The time has come when it would seem proper to review some of the more recent records as well as some worthwhile but more time-proven wax works. High on the list is a small gem from the prolific genius of Earl Garner, one of the best of the modern school by reason of his creative abilities as well as an enviable technical skill. Entitled, "Impressions", it is a combination and interweaving of Clair de Lune and The Night We Called It A Day, both fine compositions in their own right. Their melodic patterns set against the intricate and delicate background provided by Garner produces a record of high merit.

The sudden popularity of such pleasing melodies as, "Don't You Go Away Mad", "My Small Senor" and "You're Always There", seems to have left a charming tune struggling in the dust. The mellifluous tones of Bing Crosby again lend themselves admirably to, "You're Wonderful", a tune that in its quiet and tender render rendition should prove rather popular.

For those of you who like their music well arranged to lift it out of the tune and June class I recommend a not too new album entitled, "Music From Beyond The Moon". Not so weird, as the name would lead us to believe it contains stock songs in well thought out arrangements as well as some deserving originals, all of which add up to distinctive and different music. New Sound Appears

Once again we find a new sound appearing on the musical scene. A not too well known aggregation headed by Jerry Gray has produced a blending of reeds that gives a truly remarkable intonation. Combined with an infectious beat and good styling, "Crew Cut", proves once again that large bands, blatant publicity and over-arranged scores still take a back seat to talent in the musical world.

Has anyone noticed that it has been awfully quiet at Rosemont lately? Surely the freshmen haven't been subdued this quickly!!!

CAREERS

By J. R. Spence

To date we have considered the Mechanical and Civil Engineering fields. The next branch which we will take up will be Electrical Engineering. It is through the Electrical Engineer that the people of this country are supplied with electrical power. He is the mastermind of the communications system in these United States.

Power and Communication

When we talk about the Electrical Engineer we must divide him into two classifications. First, we have the power supply phase which has to do with supplying tremendous amounts of electricity to industries, railroads, and private homes, and to almost every place that has civilized living. Secondly, we have the communications phase which has to do with radio, telephone, television and all other types of communication. But whether or not the engineer is a power supply engineer or a communications engineer, he will have had to take the same basic electrical engineering course in college.

Demand For E. E's.

The demand for Electrical Engineers is still quite high, but it will not be as great as the years go by as it is right now, or as it was a few years ago. Seventy percent of all the men that applied at the Placement Office upon graduating were able to get jobs last year. The rest of the men either had a job lined up for themselves, or are in some other fields. The Electrical Engineers that applied at the Placement Office were put in various companies, but the preponderance went to General Electric, Philadelphia Electric and the IBM Corp. Like the Mechanical Engineers these men are usually placed in a training program for a duration of about 8 months. This program is designed to find the right position for the engineer as well as it is designed to give him experience in a specialized field.

Training Program

The program offered to the trainee is the same as any other one. The man will work about a week in each department of the company and get a working knowledge of how the overall picture looks. After this, he is placed in the department for which he is most fitted. Just like the Mechanical Engineer he might find himself in a position that he never expected to be in, such as sales, or personnel handling.

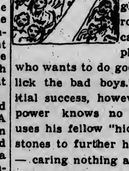
Salaries

In checking with the Placement Office it was found that the average starting salary for the Electrical Engineer was approximately $3100 per year. Of course, the ever present fact that with a higher degree he will increase the take-home pay brings to light an interesting companion. The difference in salary between a Bachelor's and a Master's degree is only $360 per year, while the difference between a Master's and a Doctor's degree is $1140 per year. Of course, a graduate who has had summer jobs would give him experience during the three summers that went by would help him land a better job. It stands to reason that he would advance faster, too.

In The Future

After 10 years of working in the field, the Electrical Engineer is usually where he wants to be, and is steeled down pretty well. The wage increase has been quite steady for him, and this helped him find his way to success. The wage increase would be about $1700 which would make this salary about $4800 per year.

Around The Town



By F. A. Varallo

"All the King's Men", a powerful political drama destined to win top honors this year, opened last week at the Stanley Theater. Based on Robert Penn Warren's Pulitzer Prize novel of the same name, this picture pulls no punches as it takes a look at corrupt politics in our country.

Produced, directed and adapted by Robert Rossen, "All the King's Men" is rip-roaring entertainment — fast moving, outspoken, an exciting blend of the fictional and documentary techniques. It tells the tragic story of a would-be dictator. A one-time honest man, how he become corrupt by over ambition, is led astray by his own false philosophy that "out of evil comes good" and is finally assassinated in the state capitol at the height of his career.

The Story

All of the action occurs in an unidentified Southern state. Willie Stark, a politically ambitious character with a gift for rabble-rousing, starts his career as a simple country boy who wants to do good and is "gonna lick the bad boys." After his initial success, however, his lust for power knows no bounds. Willie uses his fellow "hicks" as stepping stones to further his own ambition — caring nothing about their needs and problems. He makes a great show of doing good — building elaborate schools, hospitals and roads, while actually these serve merely to cloak his crooked deals.

Willie's progress comes to a tragic end at the height of his career when he, as governor of the state, is shot to death on the courthouse steps. It is somewhat ironic that a few seconds before this dramatic moment, the simple worshiping crowds still ignorant of the true state of affairs, were shouting enthusiastically, "We want Willie", "We want Willie."

Real Life

It is generally suggested that Huey Long, the famous Louisiana "Kingfish" is the real-life counterpart of the Willie Stark of the book. The picture mentioned no actual names or places — yet it is close enough to recorded fact to be easily identified with Huey Long's legendary career. Obviously, it is the sense of robust realism, that makes for the potency and fascination which we find in "All the King's Men."

The Cast

Broderick Crawford's magnificent portrayal of Willie Stark may easily be the year's best male performance. Most critics agree that Crawford does the best job of his movie career in this role. Mercedes McCambridge, successful radio actress, is outstanding in her first movie role, that is a sharp-tongued, hard-boiled political worker. The part of the narrator, a confused newspaper writer who joins Willie's gang is superbly played by John Ireland.

Completing a competent cast are John Derek in a minor role as Crawford's adopted son; Joanne Dru as the newspaper man's sweetheart; Shepperd Strudwick, as Joanne's brother, a doctor with high ideals; Anne Seymour as the loyal Mrs. Stark; Walter Burke as little Sugar Boy, Willie's bodyguard; and Raymond Greenleaf as Judge Stanton.

Yippee! It's Mardi Gras time but before we take off for the festivities let's look in on Joe Schmaltz as he is writing his beloved the strange strokes of fortune which befell his compatriots during the past week.

The Engineering frat, after holding their annual evening of sadism and excruciating torture to brand their new pledges, staged the OWL HOP on Friday night. As was expected they produced the unexpected in decor, and with all the big wheels present, the shindig was a huge success.

We noticed Al Gritte and his sidekick Guido Allegrazza cutting a mean rug while Red McCormack, Al Jacobs and Benny Moskal were plotting the graph for a discombooberated ellipse. Eddie Orzechowski was there with his ever-lovin' Betty, but Dick Schlottenmeyer spent the evening in the Austin lounge with his sidekick Leander Von Zullnittharoff, watching TV. Rumors are that Schlotte has arranged with the administration for a six year lease on his favorite armchair much to the consternation of Gene Fahy and Jim Stillwagon.

After two weeks of anxiety, Pete D'Alonso finally got his class ring. He pulled a Fearless Fosdick as anyone who wore a '51 ring while Pete was around got an amputated ring finger. Incidentally, we have received a confidential report that Louie has opened a "Beaneasy" in the rear of the Pie Shoppe.

George Scanlon has opened a Bookstore dealing in second-hand pocket books. Does a pretty good business, too.

Questions of the Week:

1. Who is the Rosemontite who has embittered Bill Shilling?
2. What has happened to "Freddy"?
3. What will Knobby Walsh do now.

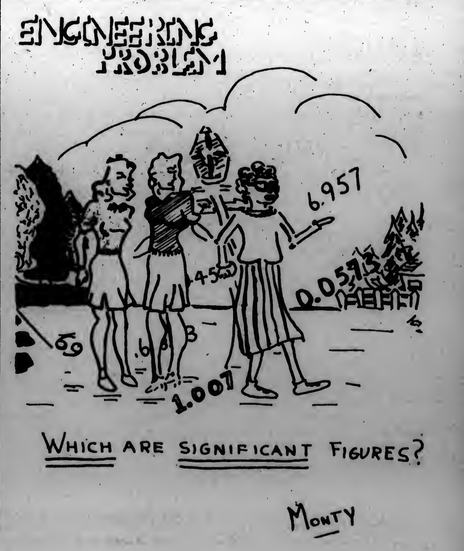
Malcolm MacGregor is buried knee-deep in valentines from his feminine admirers. The boy's makin' out. It's going to his head though, for he has come through with the prediction of the week. Quote "I will get an A in Physics 102." unquote.

If you see Mike Mascarella and Tim Malloy walk around letting loose with loud "HONKS", don't pay any attention. They think that they're brothers to the Ol' Wild Goose.

Harry Postupack is walking around with a glum look this week as the rubber band in his favorite model plane broke and the plane is a total loss. Cheer up, Harry. Joe Dugan said he'd lend you one of his as he is now in the Thimbledrome business.



Flash . . . A news item of great importance to all Villanovans. Do not go too near the Naval Science Building! It is suspected that they use real bullets in their pop-guns.

Have you seen Bill Miller's cute little mustachio. He claims he uses it to turn the pages while he's playing the organ between halves at the Field House.

Band; Glee Clubs Feature Comedy On Concert Tour

Last Tuesday night found the Villanova Concert Band and Glee Club playing before a capacity crowd at the Merion Academy. The popular musical organization performed ably under the direction of its moderator the Rev. Ralph Handran, O.S.A., in this its second appearance of the current concert season.

This year, as in the past, the program was divided into two parts. The first consisted of several classical selections including the overture Morning, Noon, and Night Funiculi Funicula, The Red Mill Overture and various vocal selections by the Glee Club featuring Miss Joan Barret of Immaculata College and John O'Hara, Villanova, on the solos.

Feature New Entertainment

The second portion of the program featured something new in the way of musical entertainment as Father Handran relinquished the baton to George Beitzer and allowed Tom Pasha to act as master of ceremonies for the remainder of the program. This allowed the student musician an opportunity to give vent to their comical inclinations. John McNamara acted the part of a disheartened piccolo-player in an arrangement of Little Brown Jug, Lou Havens, popular drum-major, handled the silver stick with great dexterity during the playing of Semper Fideles and The Stars and Stripes Forever. These, a community song-fest, and the Pasha-provoked laughter gave the assembly a most enjoyable evening.

Next Tuesday this musical aggregation will journey to the hinterlands to entertain the girls at Chestnut Hill College with another program.

The pictures above shows Bob Probert, student Philip Morris representative, Rev. Mother Immaculate of St. John's Orphanage, and Brian McLarnon, Student Council president, inspecting the TV set presented to the orphanage by the Philip Morris Company in conjunction with the recent cigarette wrapper drive. The set was presented formally at a band concert and party for the children sponsored by the Philip Morris Company on February 9th.

Sponsored by the Student Council, the contest was the first such in any major college in the U. S., and netted a total of over 67,000 wrappers. This figure included donations to the Villanova drive from colleges, high schools and social groups in the Middle Atlantic States. Wrappers are still coming in, and the Student Council has asked that further collection of wrappers be discontinued.

WILDCATS LOSE TO EAGLES, 64-61 IN LAST 55 SECONDS

Arizin Leads Beaten Club With 26 Points

By Harry Range

The Eagles flew in from Boston last Saturday night and in the last six minutes and 47 seconds of the season's roughest basketball game overcame a 57-52 deficit to upset the Arizin-less Wildcats, 64-61.

After scoring 26 points to bring his season total to 558 Paul Arizin was forced to leave the game because of five personals and at this point the Villanova cagers fell apart and were handed their fourth defeat of the current campaign. With Arizin out Boston College was able to net 8 points to the Cats 2 and with one minute and 5 seconds left the score stood at 60-all. Here the Blue and White got the break that should have been the difference between victory and defeat.

Brennan Puts Cats Ahead

Tom Brennan, Tall Paul's replacement, drew one free throw after some blocking and tackling practice under the basket and as the usual hush fell over the 3500 spectators stepped up to the foul lines. Brennan, who had hardly touched the ball up to that time came through and the Cat's had a 61-60 edge. Under the two-minute rule Villanova no wtook possession of the ball and had the Mainliners been able to hold on to it for 65 seconds they'd have emerged winners.

But six seconds later Francis Higgins, B. C.'s 5 foot 11 inch guard had stolen the ball, driven-in, and scored to put the Eagles ahead 62-61. The Cats got two more chances to score but both Shy Raiken and Brooks Ricca, who were hard-pressed for time, missed. At this point the Eagles got the ball and held it for the last 16 seconds. As the horn sounded Higgins took his last shot, scored and B. C. won, 64-61.

Long Uphill Drive

Higgins' last minute shots climaxed a long uphill drive by the Eagles who were behind 21-8 at one point early in the game. Tim O'Connell and Captain Tom O'Brien combined to even things up at 27-all late in the first half before Ricca and Arizin sent Villanova ahead 31-27 at intermission.

Arizin started the second half scoring out again O'Brien and O'Connell were hot and the Eagles forged to a 39-34 lead. Perry Del Purgatorio and Arizin then started hitting and the Cats moved to a five point edge at which point Tall

SPRINTERS SET NEW RECORD AT 1:53.6

John Joe Barry Wins Mile Run

By Bill Cooney

Villanova's sprint medley relay team set a new world's record of 1:53.6 for the event in winning the American Championship at the National A. A. U. meet last Saturday night at Madison Square Garden. It was the second title for Villanova in this event, the Wildcats having won top honors last year with the time of 1:55.5. The new mark, which is naturally the Championship record also, shatters two standards. The old worlds record of 1:54.1 was set by Fordham in 1942; while the old American Championship mark of 1:54.4 was set by N. Y. U. in 1940.

Jim McKenna ran the lead off 440 for the Blue and White, followed by Jack Holmes in the 100 yard leg. Johnny Furlinger did the 220 stunt, and Joe McCreary sprinted the 330 yard anchor leg. Second place went to the New York Pioneer Club, who were also runners up to the Mainliners last year with third and fourth going to the Grand Street Boys' Club of New York and N.Y.U. respectively.

Barry Wins Mile

John Joe Barry, late of Ireland and now a Villanova frosh took the mile without serious opposition, and registered a snappy 4:11.5 doing it.

'Cats Top Scranton By 50; Win Over Rider, 65-42

Arizin, Ricca Are Cat Big Guns in Easy Contests

By JIM GALLO

During the past week, Villanova's wildcats played host to two collegiate quintets and annexed their thirty-first and thirty-second consecutives victories on the Field House hardwood. In Monday night's contest, the Severancemen humbled the Royals of Scranton University, 83-33. With only one day of rest the 'Cats trounced Rider College of Trenton, 65-42.

Scranton Never Close

Scranton was never in the game. The Main Liners hit the cords consistently from the game's start and gradually widened the gap in the score. The Upstaters were unable to penetrate the home club's defense while the locals were scoring almost at will. Being the one-sided game that it was, the spectators seemed to be enthusiastic only when Paul Arizin was dropping shots through the orange rim. After rolling up a first-half total of 16 points, Paul seemed hesitant to shoot in the second half, despite the pleas of the fans. During his ten-minute stay in the second half, the nation's leading scorer rang up seven more points to run his game total to 23, and his season total to 510. Brooks Ricca turned in the first of two great performances for the week as he hit in 9 of 10 field goal attempts to rack up a total of 19 points for the night.

Rider Keeps Score Down

Rider College invaded the local Field House intent on keeping the score down. In order to do so, they employed a two-one-two zone defense, designed to keep three men sliding back on Arizin. For the first seven minutes of the game, the Jerseyites were successful, managing to keep the score down to 9-7. After missing on his first four attempts, Tall Paul hit on five straight shots. Meanwhile, Ricca and Hannan were pouring shots through the rim and the Villanova score gradually mounted. Rider continued to play possession basketball, shooting only from close in, but just couldn't match the fast-moving Wildcats in the scoring race. Dawson and Cottrill scored 11 and 10 points respectively, to pace the visitors' attack.

Frosh Trim Brown Prep, St. James

By GEORGE SCANLON

Villanova's high-flying freshmen quintet rolled to their thirteenth and fourteenth consecutive victories last week. Saint James High of Chester gave the Little Wildcats no trouble as they raced to a 77-45 win. In Wednesday night's preliminary game, the frosh beat Brown Prep of Philadelphia in a high-scoring 71-57 victory.

The Blue and White's accuracy and experience were too much for a game St. James High to cope with. The frosh took the lead and never relinquished it. The sharp-shooting of Larry Hennessey and Nick Maguire gave the 'Cats a 41-19 halftime lead.

Glassmire Brilliant

In the second half, the frosh poured it on. Sam Glassmire, the 5'9" wizard of Major McDonnell's charges was unstoppable. His dazzling ball handling and fine assists put the game on ice. Steve Gepp and Danny Gallagher had complete control of the glass. Steve seems

SOUTHERNERS SEEK TO AVENGE 1949 WILDCAT SETBACK

Mainliners Face Hawaii Tomorrow

By NEAL FAHY

As the basketball season reaches its final stages, and an epidemic of tourney fever sweeps over the colleges of the nation whose teams are rated among the top twenty in the AP weekly poll, the Villanova basketeers find themselves in an unenviable situation. A clean sweep of their last six games could assure them of a bid while a loss to any one of the six would make the tournament selectors turn their gaze in a different direction.

Of course, if the Wildcats do manage to finish the season successfully, it will mean ending in a blaze of glory because the last six games are against top-notch teams with two of them, Duquesne and North Carolina State, rated in the top ten.

Travel to N. C. State

Although the 'Cats can hardly ignore their clash with Hawaii tomorrow night at the Palestra, the game on Saturday night at Raleigh, N. C. against the Wolfpack of North Carolina State is the one they are really pointing for.

All 12,500 seats in the huge new basketball plant at Raleigh have been sold out for months and the Wildcats are set for their toughest opponent since Louisville. The Southerners are definitely out to avenge last season's loss to the 'Cats at the local Field House. Villanova won that one 62-59, but trouncing the Wolfpack in their own den is an entirely different operation.

This year, N. C. State has one of the top scorers in the Nation in Sam Ranzino whom Wildcats fans will long remember after his performance in last season's thriller against Villanova. They will also have the services of Dick Dickey, an All-American, who was forced out early in the game last year after receiving a broken nose.

Tomorrow evening's contest with the University of Hawaii can also turn out to be very tough. When a team travels 5000 miles to play a game, it doesn't like to lose. The Hawaiians are known for their fast type of play featuring long passes and one-handed shooting.

Ricca takes a two-handed set shot in a losing game against Boston College. Very seldom did the play allow far enough time to set in the rough and tough tussle which ended in an upset 64-61 win for B. C.

The blond Irishman, who ran in Villanova colors, but not under her name, shocked and surprised the crowd by soundly defeating his nemises and co-favorite George Wade of Yale, who faded and finally wound up eighth. Horace Ashenfelter was runner up ten yards backed followed by John Twomey and Josh Tobey.

Foursome Proved to Be Champs

The final of the sprint medley was a real crowd pleaser. At the gun Herb McKenley of the Grand Street Boys seized the lead as is his usual style. Trailing him closely was Jimmy McKenna, but at the 220 mark Hustlin' Herb had 5 yards. McKenna capitalized on McKinley's weakness of tiring in the last stretch however to come with a rush, and shade him by a foot. Jack Holmes who has been running the mile relay all season, but is best in the sprints really showed it on the 100 leg.

Failing to let his outside position, which can be fatal in such a short race, bother him he outsprinted Lenny Grace around the turn to give the 'Cats another slim but important one point advantage. Johnny Furlinger quickly jumped into the lead, grabbed the sole for his 220 leg, and that was all for the Grand Street Boys or anyone else. The speedy sophomore who is the youngest man on the club turned in a performance which had the crowd roaring in approval. Joe McCreary probably could have walked his 300 leg, but didn't. Running in the manner which left many would-be tacklers far in the rear in last year's 150-pound contests, Joe went so fast that if their had been any dust on the boards it probably would have settled by the time the now second place Pioneer club came by.

Team Sharp in Trials

The race was almost an exact duplicate of the trial heats of the afternoon including McKenna's nailing McKinley in the stretch, Holmes coming up fast on the outside, Furlinger's "pass work" and McCramp's all outeffort when he could have taken it easy. Even the time was indicative of things to come. The flying foursome registered 1:54.5 in the trials, only 4 tenths of a second off the world standard and one full second better than their winning time in 1949.

The mile started as a real thriller. Wade grabbed the lead at the outset and rested past the quarter in 60.2 and the half in 2:05.2 with Barry hanging on right behind him. Then suddenly the big boy from New Haven cracked, and the whole field led by Barry flashed by. The rest of the boys was no match for the Ballincerry Hare however. John Joe went by the three quarter pole in 3:09.2 all alone and on to the gold medal in spite of a determined rush by Horace Ashenfelter which carried him to within ten yards of the tiring Hibernian.

IC's Next Week

Next week the club runners take the night off as the college boys take over in the annual IC-4A championships. Villanova will be represented by Jim McKenna in the 600, Browning Ross, who was fourth in the NAAU 1000 in either the 1000 or mile and ditto for George Thompson. The mile relay may also lock horns with the other collegiate quartets, but the loss of McKenna to the 600 lineup may cause Coach Jim Elliot to decide against it, McKenna being a regular on the team.

Ricca Approaches 1000

Once again, the lanky Arizin led the Wildcats' attack with 22 markers. Ricca continued his late-season scoring splurge with 19 points, and is gradually approaching the magic total of 1000 for his collegiate career. Perry Del Purgatorio and Joe Hannan put on a great passing exhibition in breaking the Rider zone.

I-M LEAGUE BEGINS SECOND HALF PLAY

Doms, Bks. 2 & 3, and Alumni Win; Austin Romps Over Mendel

Mondschein Inc.

Four games last week opened the second half of the Intramural Basketball League. On Tuesday, a hustling Dom quintet upset the dope by beating a strong Bks 1&4 five 53-43, and Austin ran rough-shod over hapless Mendel 81-35. Thursday's encounters saw first half titlists, Alumni, meet stiff resistance from an enthused Fedigan squad, but finally emerge with a 62-42 triumph. Bes 2 & 3 topped Good Council 48-34.

The Doms, led by the sharp eye of Natiello, surprised everyone but themselves as they upset favored Bks 1&4, 53-43. Natiello tallied 22 points, with 15 of these coming in a see-saw first half battle. The lead inthat first canto changed 8 times before the Doms took a halftime lead 27-23 which they never relinquished. A lot of credit must also be given to The Doms Bill Knecht, who besides garnering 11 points, almost completely controlled the backboards. Tom Falkowski and Don Smith with 10 points apiece led the scoring for the losers.

Austin Romps

In the other contest, Mendel, although trounced 81-35 by Austin, came up with a bright new star in little Joe Billera, former Allentown Catholic ace. Joey was like a cat on the floor as he consistently stole the ball from his opponents, and also tallied 12 markers to lead the losers scoring attack. Bill Lemmer, of Austin again showed his prowess by tossing in 28 points to lead all scorers for the week. His great rebound work and passing were also commendable. Lanky Tom Brennan hooped 18 points and was a workhouse under the baskets.

Thursday saw a bitter ensue between Alumni and Fedigan. The tension in the game was great and a few times it was feared that the game would wind up earlier than expected. But things settled down before any serious damage could be done. Alumni knew it was in a battle from the outset, as a determined Fedigan team sensed the possibility of an upset victory. But the deadly accuracy of Bobby Celz in the second half ruined the Fedigan hopes.

Bobby took over the second half scoring chore from Bucket Buckley, who had tallied 16 times to give Alumni the intermission lead 23 17. Buckley added 7 more in the second half to bring his game total to 23. Celz sank 6 field on long set shots in the second half for a night's total of 12 points. Joe Crossin and Dave Frink, with 11 and 10 points respectively led the losers attack. Referees for this contest were George Scanlon and Paul Hutnick.

Good Council Wins

The last contest of the week saw an improved Good Council squad give Bks. 2&3 a tough battle before going down to defeat 48-34. The first half saw the lead change a number of times and the score at halftime read 19-15 in favor of Bks 2&3. The Barracks gradually increased their lead until it was impossible for Good Council to overcome the advantage. A new star shown on the Barracks in the person of Bob Smith. Bob tallied 17 points and took away scoring honors from teammate Bob Ruggerio who made 11 points. The Scoring for Good Council was well distributed with Boyle and Sollami each getting 6 and DiSimone and Mulcahy getting 5 each. The officials were Bill Decker and Fred Giorgi.

NROTC Rifle Team Seeks New Men

Villanova's NROTC rifle team has now participated in four shoulder to shoulder matches and hold a record of one and three. In the NROTC postal matches the Blue and White holds a .500 average.In the riflemen have split in a home and home series with the Marine Barracks of the Philadelphia Navy Yard, have lost to Drexel Institute and last Friday lost to the Army ROTC of the University of Pennsylvania.

Last year the Villanova team won the Commandant's Cup of the Fourth Naval District by defeating Penn, Princeton and Penn State.

At present the team is composed only of members of the NROTC but there is a need for two or three additional experienced men from the rest of the school for competition in the remaining shoulder to shoulder matches. to have recovered fully from his ankle injury as he hit for 12 points. The "Dynamic Duo" of Maguire and Hennessey tossed in 15 and 13 respectively. Sam Glassmire got 10 counters in addition to his brilliant floor game. Jim Klepsacki led the "Jimmies" with 13 points.

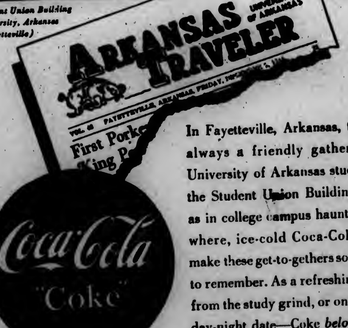
Brown Prep Falls

A highly respected Brown Prep five fell before the Wildcats' claws but not before a heated contest. The first half saw a nip-and-tuck scoring batle. The downtowner's tricky center, Don Kaulkin hit for 12 points in the first half with some fine pivot shots. Sam Glassmire and Dan Gallagher matched points with the Prep and the half ended in a 33-33 deadlock.



Second Half Explosion

In the final 20 minutes the frosh big guns began to boom. Larry Hennessey's hitting from the outside and Nick Maguire's driving twin pointers began to tell. Steve Gepp grabbed the opponent's rebounds and led the scoring with 14 points. Steve's goals came on tap-ins as he outjumped the Prep's Kaulkin who had a few inches on the blond demon. Hard-fighting Reds Mooney and Gepp are an unbeatable combination under the boards. Larry Hennessey and Nick Maguire contributed 12 points apiece to the 77-57 final count. Don Kaulkin pushed in 20 points to lead the Brown Prep dribblers.

The Frosh have but two obstacles in their quest for a season's clean slate. Penn's Freshmen and Penn's J. V.'s will provide plenty of opposition to this goal.

Characteristics Of The Visitor Job Department Of Public Assistance

College Seniors who have not decided on a career after graduation may be interested to know that a Civil Service examination for Visitor positions in the Pennsylvania Department of Public Assistance will be held on March 25, 1950. Entrance salaries are $2124 and $2496 per annum. The results of the examination should be available by graduation time. Applications must be postmarked by March 3, 1950. They can be secured at the Placement Office.

The position of Visitor is the basic social service position in the Department. Visitors work in their county of residence and are employed by the County Boards of Assistance. Tenure, salary increments, and promotion are based on meritorious job performance under provisions of the Civil Service Law, rules and regulations.

The work of a Visitor has many characteristics which should appeal to college graduates. With training on the job it approaches the nature of a profession. It is concerned with helping the needy people of Pennsylvania, not only in the authorization of assistance grants to those who, after investigation, are found to be eligible for such grants, but in helping them to regain self dependency. This constitutes a challenge to persons interested in the social well being of their fellow men.

In the course of investigation. Visitors meet with and interview persons in all walks of life — employers, government officials, teachers, physicians, landlords, and many others whose knowledge of the needy family assist him in his duties. The interviewing skills developed in these contacts are an asset to any person whether he or she continues in public welfare work or branches into some other line of endeavor. Much of the work is done way from the office, thus introducing an element of individual responsibility. With each family situation different from the others, the work is never routine. In surprising degree, the Visitor finds many instances where his experiences on the job utilize class room knowledge which at the time of learning seemed to have little practical application. As indicated above, the job carries with it the satisfaction of having performed a real public and social service.

Hughes Lectures For English Maj's

Mr. Riley Hughes of the Georgetown School of Foreign Service lectured on Thomas Merton February 13 in the library. The lecture was sponsored by the English Department.

The speaker examined all of the published works of the author, and emphasized that Merton is not a great writer, either in his prose of poetry. He said that in view of the Catholic Apostolate, Merton must not be heralded as a great writer of things Catholic, for to overevaluate him, Catholics would do harm to the cause of Catholic letters in this country. One of the reasons Mr. Hughes gave for his evaluation of Merton was that, in much of his poetry the author uses unpoetic and sometimes too startling metaphors. Also, Mr. Hughes said, Merton is limited in his prose because his subject matter is necessarily autobiographical in nature; instead of being able to handle general themes, he is forced to treat only of his past experiences before his conversion.

Rev. R. M. Sullivan, O.S.A., head of the English Department, introduced the speaker and led the fifteen-minute question period after the lecture.

New Music Club Organizes Under Fr. Vrana's Direction

The College Library has recently reorganized an informal Music Club in order to afford to the students of Villanova a better appreciation of music in the classical and semi-classical fields. The club is under the guidance of Father John Vrana, O.S.A., who is assisted by Fathers Handran and McMenamin, O.S.A. The club has been inactive for several years and since its reorganization, a complete schedule of weekly programs has been formulated by the moderators.

The first two of twelve recorded musical programs to be sponsored by the group took place recently in the music room of the library. The initial program, held last Tuesday night, included selections from Blossom Time, Beethoven's Piano Concerto, and the Peer Gynt Suite. Last night's program featured the Grand Canyon Suite and other classical recordings plus a talk by Father Vrana.

The next program, scheduled for March 1, will feature an interesting lecture entitled "Fundamentals of Music" by Father Handran. Future recitals to be presented will include additional lectures upon music fundamentals by Father Handran and also lectures upon musical form, instrumentation and interpretation, in addition to the playing of other recorded classics.

The Library Corner . . .

On a national scale, February is a month of remembrance, with the birthdays of several statesmen prominent in American history. But, to us at Villanova, this month bears not only national interest, but is a month of local commemoration as well, in that it was just one year ago that the Villanova Library opened the doors of its new building, and became one of the more important physical as well as intellectual centers of the campus.

Formerly housed in what were cramped quarters in the basement of Austin Hall, the Library has in the past year gone through a period of expansion and reorganization so that now it can boast a smooth-functioning and ever-helpful staff housed in one of the most modern and best equipped buildings of its kind in the country.

On this first birthday of the new Villanova Library, a bit of retrospect is in order. Chronologically, the first of the things which bring pleasant memories, is the way the students of the college pitched in during the early part of last year to help in the herculean task of moving all the books from Austin Hall to the new location, and helping to set the Library on its feet in the new quarters.

Dedication Last Easter

Then came the dedication, during the Easter vacation, last year, which will remain one of the highlights in the life of the building and another pleasant memory for all concerned. This ceremony, presided over by the Rt. Rev. Monsignor, Francis J. Furey in the absence of His Eminence Cardinal Dougherty, was attended by several hundred guests, who gave both ecclesiastical blessing and popular approbation to the project.

Next came the introduction of the faculty members and through them, the students, to the various facilities which had become available to them with the opening of the new building. Guided tours were conducted almost daily, and included demonstrations of the various pieces of new equipment, such as the modern mircrofilm reader, the microcard reader complete with several thousand microcards, the radio-phonograph-television combination in the Music Room.

Library Use Increased Slightly

Finally, and perhaps the most gratifying feature of this past year to the library staff, is the use which the student body has made of the new library. Although not as much as could be, the fact that more and more students are finding out the value of the library and its staff is encouraging. But, the fact still remains that the number of students who do make use of the library is slight when compared to the number of students who do have academic problems that could be solved through the use of this unit and the aid of its staff.

There are eighty-seven thousand books on the shelves available for student reference and research, pleasure and enjoyment. Even at that, this number is less than one-fourth of the capacity of the new structure. New books are constantly being added at the request of the students and teachers, on every subject from algebra to zoology.

Interesting Programs Sponsored

Besides academic assistance to be gained from using the library facilities, culture and enjoyment are also offered by the various programs of the library which are for the benefit of, and open to all the students of the college. These include the various exhibits, lecture programs, and the frequent meetings of the library-sponsored Music Club, all of which make use of the seminar rooms, Music Room, and other facilities of the building.

Now at the end of the first year of operation in new quarters, the library staff would like to encourage all the students of the College to make more frequent use of the library facilities, and find the treasures of culture and enjoyment that are contained in its modern equipment, its collections and pleasant surroundings. About the only service the library does not offer the students is the actual writing of term papers and other assignments, and that's a pun, suh but, it can certainly help.

Courtship, Engagement Next Pre-Cana Subject

Fr. Sullivan Will Conduct Marriage Conference Next Sunday Afternoon

Rev. Robert M. Sullivan, O.S.A., head of the English Department of Villanova College and Chaplain of Rosemont College, will give the second talk in the initial Pre-Cana Conference for engaged couples being held at Villanova Sunday afternoons during Lent. His topic will be "The Meaning of Courtship and Engagement."

Pre-Cana Speaker

The lecturer, who holds a M. A. degree in English from Oxford University, in England, will speak next Sunday, March 5th., at 3 P. M.

Last Sunday, Rev. John J. Coffey, O.S.A., gave the first talk in this Lenten series. He first outlined and stated the necessity of the conferences, showing how the social upheaval of today has loosened holy bond

Navy Instructor Made Full Lieut.

Lieutenant John Earwaker, Assistant Professor of Naval Science at Villanova College, was recently notified by the Navy Department of his promotion to the rank of full Lieutenant. Mr. Earwaker is in charge of the instruction of the freshman class of the N.R.O.T.C. unit.

The officer, now completing his second year of services at Villanova, was transferred here from the 4th. Naval District Headquarters in Philadelphia. After graduating from West Chester State Teachers College, he entered the Navy in 1942 under the V-7 program and attended the U.S.N.R. Midshipman School at Columbia University. After receiving his commission he saw active duty in the Pacific Theater of Operations.

The administration would like to again call to the attention of the student body the seriousness of the results which tampering with the fire equipment might bring. Fire precautions are now installed and in working order in all the buildings on the campus, but will be of no use in case of an emergency if tampering has rendered them unserviceable. When life and property are concerned, fooling with fire equipment ceases to be funny. Remember, "The life you save may be your own."

Bussolari Member Voted Sec., World Affairs Group

At a meeting held at Haverford College on February 17th., Roger Hanafin was elected Secretary of the Student Council of the World Affairs Council of Greater Philadelphia.

This is the first time that a Villanova student has had the honor of holding an office in this organization. The Council represents twenty-five colleges and universities and handles all United Nations publicity and education on the college level. In addition to this, the council acts as an organ of the World Affairs Council.

Hanafin who is also Secretary of the Bussolari Foreign Affairs Club here on the campus, was originally nominated for the presidency but lost to Paul Smith, of Haverford, in a close vote.

Model Meeting Held

Prior to the elections, a model Atomic Energy Commission meeting took place with the various colleges representing the several nations on the commission. The Villanova delegation, led by Roger Hanafin, represented Ecuador and was influential in the formation of a block on small countries which resolved many of the difficulties between the larger powers.

At a meeting of the Bussolari Foreign Affairs Society, held February 21st., Leroy Kendall was elected President of the Society for the new semester. Kendall took the place of Don Smith, who had been president for a year.

There will be a meeting of the Bussolari Society today at 5 P. M. in 215 Mendel.

Trenton Alumni Sponsors Dinner

The annual President's Dinner, sponsored by the Villanova Club of Trenton, New Jersey, was held on February 27th. at the Trenton Country Club. The principal speaker was Very Rev. Francis X. N. McGuire, O.S.A., President of Villanova College. In addition, progress reports on the activities of the Alumni Association were made by Mr. Martin Gill, Alumni president, and by Mr. William Friel, National Alumni Secretary-Treasurer.

Plans were also discussed at that time for a Sports Night to be held on Easter Monday. Sports Night is an annual affair sponsored by the Trenton Club, and will be attended by Villanova's coaching staff, including Coaches James Leonard, Alexander Severance, James Elliot and Arthur Mahan. The Night has as its purpose the honoring of Villanova varsity athletes from the Trenton area, and local high school coaches and sports writers will be invited to attend. The date has been arranged so as to facilitate the attendance at the affair of all varsity seniors from the Trenton area and their fathers.

'PIPER HEIDSIECK '98' TITLE FOR TURF AND TINSEL PRODUCTION

Last week, the men of the Turf and Tinsel Club rolled up their sleeves and went to work on their Spring production. They are preparing to add "Piper-Heidsieck, '98" to their scroll of hits. The best of champagne in its best year of that decade has been chosen as the title of the May production.

Bob Whelan and George Noake will again be at the helm of this new musical comedy with the ever popular "gay-nineties" setting. The book and music have been written, the cast picked, dancing chorus and glee club formed, and now they are starting to mold these together to produce a show great enough to top the memorable "John Smith, Esq." and the high-toned "Cleo Was A Lady."

Appeal of Gay Nineties

In addition to having the appeal of "the gay-nineties" touch, the story will be set in our own locale of the Main Line envolving the plight of a new family trying to crash its society. The settings will move about freely taking us to Vienna, London, and then to Paris where the much awaited "can-can" will be performed. The music will do its share to attain the gay tempo of this period.

While the show has been cast in its entirety, there is still a possibility that those interested in dancing might find their way into the production. At present there are two dancing choruses, but in order to relieve them of some of the work required by high-stepping routines, the possibility of a third group was discussed. Anyone interested in becoming a member of this additional group should contact Bob Whelan.

Council Conducts Frosh Elections

The Student Council will conduct elections for the Freshman class in order that two student Council representatives may be chosen for the Spring semester. Paul Hennessy, Chairman of the Elections Committee, will make arrangements.

Rev. John Tuohy, O.S.A., Dean of Freshmen, has announced a meeting will be held at 5:00 this afternoon in the C. & F. Auditorium. This will be the first meeting of the class of 1953 since the Fall Semester. Last year the freshmen had difficulty getting a representative group at the nominating meeting.

The date of the election will be announced as soon as nominations are completed, and ballots will then be cast at the Alumni Hall gym.

Men elected will serve through their Sophomore year, and regular class elections will be conducted at the same time as those of the other classes.

Sympathy

On behalf of the Villanovan Staff and the student body, sympathy is extended to Robert E. Kelly, Sr. 2, E. E. and Theodore Reimel, CF Jr. 2, upon the death of their mothers. Mass was said in the College Chapel for the happy repose of their souls.

Half-Million Dollar Heating Plant To Rise On Land Across Pennsy Tracks

A new half-million dollar plant to provide central heating for all the buildings on campus will be the next addition to the physical facilities of this college, announced Rev. J. McMenamin, O.S.A., College Procurator, this week. Construction is expected to begin within the next six months on the east side of the college grounds behind the C&F Building, just the other side of the Pennsylvania Railroad tracks.

In his announcement, Fr. McMenamin stated that the new heating unit, which he expects to be operating during the fall semester of the next school year, will replace the present facilities in the basement of Mendel Hall.

To Service Campus

The new plant will service all the campus buildings, including the Field House, St. Mary's Hall, St. Rita's, and the Belle Air building, which are now being heated with individual units. From its location about 75 feet from the railroad tracks, heat will be piped in a single conduct under the railway bed. From there the system will split into two parts, one going south to heat the Field House and the buildings at that end of the campus, and the other going to Mendel Hall where a header will pipe out heat to the remaining buildings.

Although there is no information at present in regard to the American Education and Church Topic Of Final Forum Meeting

"The Church, the State and American Education is an extremely timely and more disturbing American issue than anything today." Thus charging, Father William E. McManus, fourth and final speaker for the regular season of the Villanova Forum, made the problem of church and state relationships in democratic America the most important issue of the day.

Seeming to reverse the Catholic Church's position on this tremendous subject, Fr. McManus stated, "We must admit that public schools can not turn out educated pupils without teaching religion." What the speaker meant was that these schools must teach or make available such teaching that will give the true picture of religion and not the false one that is being spread by such authors as Paul B. Blanchard.

Father McManus is one of the

SUICIDE

Have you ever watched someone commit suicide? You may say no, but we claim you are watching the most gigantic suicide of all time.

The suicide I speak of is that of our civilization. Yes, it is happening so slowly many of us are hardly aware of it. The steps which lead to total destruction are marked by the headlines of our daily papers — the bloody World War II, the awful atom bomb, insidious bacteriological warfare and now the fearful hydrogen bomb.

The scientific genius which has unlocked the door to the tremendous storehouse of energy which is being tapped cannot be blamed, but the combination of modern politics and scientific warfare can and must be blamed.

We may not be able to cope with the scientist's instinctive curiosity but something we can all understand is a very fundamental element, which appears in politics. The men who guide the destinies of the respective nations are very human and being human quite prone to fall victim to those frailties attributable to men.

It is important that people realize the important connection between the men who govern and the men who invent the weapons. The potential overwhelming power of scientific warfare could easily give the human race an inferiority complex which could lead to dangerous hopelessness among the laymen. Many are ready to succumb to the juggernaut which scientific warfare has become, but we see a possible key to the solution in the understandable human element of politics.

The men in the world governments control the whole picture. Science has become their instrument. That instrument is now being considered as a weapon — why is it not being considered for constructive purposes? It can be used both ways. These men have been serving their own selfish interests without thought of the consequences. The desire to acquire a more destructive weapon than his neighbor has brought us to the doorstep of possible annihilation.

It should be obvious that the enlightenment must come in government circles. Modern warfare is a radical departure from that of yesteryear, yet modern government carries on with same basic policies and outmoded motivations. Peace should be the keynote of all relations with other nations. Peace may not achieve this position by the usual idyllic motives, but at least we should see us driven to its protecting light by the very terror that is promised by another war.

There is still time. This generation must produce leaders with a full realization of the responsibility that rests upon them not only in their own narrow sphere but also in the entire civilized world. College men of today are of the generation that must produce such leaders. They are the logical source. As a group, college men will be responsible for the education of those less fortunate. People will have to realize that there is an answer to be found to the problem raised by a backward political viewpoint and a highly advanced stage of weapons for war.

The answer lies in the enlightened minds of leaders who see peace as an objective not only necessitated by the threat of horrendous war but as a morally good objective to be attained for itself.

By Jim Griffin

Lent. A week old tomorrow. And how well is it going? Have all the old habits wrought havoc already with the good resolutions which came with Ash Wednesday? Has your humanity asserted itself, battling down all good lenten intentions with that indomitable weakness of will? Or have you not even given it a struggle? Did you toss in your chips just because it seemed to be too much trouble to draw a few more cards?

Where Are We?

In any case, it might be a good time to take stock of the situation as it now stands, and try to puzzle out just where about in the woods we are, how many branches are trying to lead us away, and how many roots of evil are lying around to trip us up. It might be a good idea to remind ourselves of a few important facts that we might prefer to forget.

Did you ever burn your finger? Did you ever grab a red hot frying pan? Did you ever get a dose of sun-poisoning? Did you ever try to imagine how purgatory feels?

A Chance

And here we are in Lent, the season of penance, when we have a chance to help the souls in purgatory, and therefore a chance to insure help for ourselves when we get there. All that we need to do is to make some small sacrifice every now and then, say a few prayers extra, give up the extra piece of pie or the milk-shake we usually buy after lunch. Or even just to think. Think about Christ and what he suffered to give us a second chance at salvation. Tell him that we appreciate it. After all we don't think anything of telling our room mates 'Thanks' for bringing up our mail. And yet sometimes we go along for weeks and never even bother thanking Christ for his struggle up Calvary, and the agony of His dying three hours.

Something Now

And remember that each little thing we make ourselves do this Lent will cut down the time we will have to spend in purgatory. If we offer it for the souls in purgatory now it will release them that much sooner; in return we will have their gratitude, and their help when we find we need it. And if you find that you have a hard time bringing yourself around on this line of thinking, if you just can't seem to appreciate the reality of purgatory, take the cigarette you're smoking and try grinding it out in the palm of your hand. I think we'll gain a lot by trying with every bit of effort we have to make this a good Lent, and I think we'll regret later what we miss now if we let any of our chances roll by us.

The "New Look"

Have you noticed the new look on the VILLANOVAN? As of now we have the paper printed half and half which gives you an opportunity to make a comparison. We feel that the larger type will be more appealing to you, the reader, who after all is the one who counts.

The next issue will be entirely made up of the larger type which will make reading much easier and give the paper a fresher appearance.

If you have any suggestions for any improvements contact any member of the editorial board. We want any reasonable suggestions.

WOMEN IN COLLEGE

By Bill Breninghouse

Several times within the last two years this space has been devoted to the study of that rare specimen known as the college woman. One time the writer received threatening letters for his efforts. Another time he was sent a package which ticked ominously. Undaunted by these rebuffs, he will again attempt to delve into the mystery of why mothers send their daughters to college when they would be much wiser to send them out working till they get married.

It Costs

Going to college costs the old man plenty. Unless the girl was a WAC or a WAVE, there are no checks from Uncle Sam and thus far, at least, no colleges have instituted female NROTC units. On the other hand, if the girl goes to work for a while the green engravings will be rolling in and, although most of the cash will be spent on clothes, she might be able to save enough to offer something to a prospective husband. A college girl is only an educated liability while a working girl is a valuable asset.

Girls Have Place??

It is to be understood that some girls do have a place in college. There must be nearly twenty girls in the country who are seriously thinking of getting an education. They are to be congratulated. They usually wind up at MIT or Chicago or some other big school. Then there are girls who want to be teachers. They go to teachers college (this is much too logical). What then, is the status of a girl that goes to a girl's school such as Vassar, Smith, Radcliffe, and others too numerous to mention? These poor creatures are just willing away the time until they hook an unsuspecting male into matrimony.

Lots of Fun

During the time that the college girl spends at college, she has a lot of fun. In fact, that seems to be her major course. Instead of counting credits for a degree, she counts prom invites to Yale and Winter Carnival Invites from Dartmouth. She usually tries to arrange her class schedule so that her only classes are from ten to one on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday. This will give her a fairly long weekend. When two young college girls part one says, "Don't work too hard," and the other cleverly quips, "You mean don't party too hard don't you dear."

College Girls Work Hard

Of course the above may be a little exaggerated. College girls do work hard at their studies. Of course mother could have taught Home Economics better than any expert who never had to cook and wash and sew, but it would be too easy that way. As for girls taking Chemistry, Calculus, Shakespeare, Accounting and other college subjects, it would be much better if they took a course in furnace tending and window-washing. The latter subjects would be much better suited to their future occupations.

The Truth

If by chance, a copy of this article reaches the hands of some college girl, it is hoped that she will forgive the writer for omitting so much that could be said. Space doesn't allow him to print all he would say about her breed. If said college girl disagrees with the views of the columnist, he is very sorry and realizes that he has done you a favor by showing you the truth about women in college.

Outlook of Future Teachers

The largest single profession in the United States is that of teaching. The trend for more education will probably maintain this large number of employed. According to the Bureau of Labor, the outlook is good for future teachers, although it naturally varies with respect to the locality, and the subject. The future teacher's chances are enhanced by an ability to teach a number of subjects, and past experience in extra-curricular activities, particularly athletics.

At the present, colleges need capable men to teach subjects pertaining to medicine, business administration, engineering, and the physical sciences. Teachers shortages in high-schools are most found in rural areas, but the shortages of English, history, and foreign language teachers will be filled most quickly of them all.

Training

The usual requirement for state certification is a bachelor degree including a number of courses in student teaching, education, psychology. Most large cities will require a written examination in teaching methods. Each further degree after the Bachelor's has been achieved will add to the bargaining power of the teacher. Colleges require a Master's degree of the aspiring teacher or if he is accepted with a Bachelor's degree it is generally only if he is studying for a Master's. In general, it takes an average of 12 — 17 years or outstanding achievement to attain a professorship.

The chief asset of a teacher, it can be easily seen, beside an education is a strong constitution. As we all know, a good nervous system means a great deal, it is job that can easily irritate a nervously susceptible person. Furthermore, to do the proper work there should be a deep interest in, at least, one subject and a real love for the profession.

Salary

The earnings of an Assistant Professor, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, will average $3,300, while the Instructor averages $2,850. High school teachers in a city with a population of about 20,000 average $2,500.

Letter to the Editor

The ABC Chesterfield letter contest is in its second week now, the winner this week being Roland Ryan. Get your letter into the Villanovan office, Commerce and Finance basement. You too can win a carton of Chesterfield cigarettes.

Dear Editor:

Since I have been here at Villanova, I have noticed that the administration frequently sponsors a series of conferences. The majority of these have met with marked success. However, this year, the Villanova Forum has been instituted and since its beginning, it has been evident that the students of Villanova have little or no interest in the forum. There has been a very poor representation of Villanovans at every lecture; lectures on a very important and controversial subject in the present age, the relation between church and state.

I think that it is a shame that Villanova students have such poor judgment and that immaturity is so rampant on the campus. There is a conference coming up in March and only that will tell whether or not there are a few more men at Villanova. Come on, fellows let's get on the bandwagon, the forum is held for your benefit. Take advantage of it.

ROLAND RYAN

By Roland Mayer and Bruce Taten

Improvement

Those of you who were at the dance last Friday night, and what good ex-engineer wasn't, may have noticed the great improvement in the Villanovans. That is if your girl's upswept hairdo wasn't dittering your air supply and cutting off your vision. The boys really have improved and much if not all the credit belongs to Vince Palma. The band has really come a long way from its humble beginnings, and now that they are providing us with good danceable music lets show them that we appreciate it.

True Artist

Billie Holiday scores again! One of the true artists of the musical world, Lady Day is often up and down but never out. "Crazy", one of her newest recordings, shows once more that age, adversity, criticism; none of these, can keep a real feeling for music from being heard. It isn't necessary to recount at this time the various setbacks encountered by Billie in her long tenure as a vocalist of no mean ability. Many times her fans have felt that she was a poor representative for the musical profession and thus have not stood behind her. Many have felt that she belonged to another era of jazz, that she was great in the past, and that was precisely where she should stay. Nothing could be farther from the truth. True ability and a sincere feeling for jazz entitle a musician to a niche in the music of any age. Talent is timeless. Billie Holiday was great in the past, but in the future she should prove to bring more worthwhile contributions to the field of jazz; be it dixieland or bop.

Some Are Pretty

Under pain of not eating next Sunday I am forced to make the following statement: there are some good looking girls at Immaculata. The trouble lies in the reprehensible fact that anyone who has a sufficiency of fortitude to get out there is just too tired to do anything except go back home.

Correction Made

First and foremost, for my part this week, I'd like to make a correction on last week's fiasco. Contrary to what you may have read here, Bill Cooney and Jerry Battle's new record show on WVIL is not called "9:20 Spew" but "9:20 Special" as is their theme song.

What ever happened to that poor battered word we'll never know but somewhere in the long devious process that converts the written word to the printed page, it took an awful going over. Can I come out of hiding now, fellas!

Laine Does it Again

Seems like Frankie Laine has done it again with "Call of the Wild Goose". First thing you know he'll have made enough dough to start buying back the United States from Bing Crosby. As for the record itself, Frankie's delivery and style make it more than an average waxing, but I believe that the arrangement of the back-ground music is what really gives it that something extra. The next time you hear it, listen for the french horns and various novel effects incorporated by the arranger, they make all the differences in the world.

While we're on the subject, Frankie Laine is at the Click this week so if you've never seen the guy in action here's your big chance.

Peggy Makes Oldie

Sometimes, when I haven't heard Peggy Lee for awhile, I can almost forget what a great Vocal-gal she really is, but it only takes one song to refresh my memory. Heard her do an old-timer called "Sugar" a few days ago. I don't know whether it's a new pressing or not, but old or not, it's well worth a listen. Easy and breezy — it does things to you.

No doubt this will come as a shock to all his fans at the local finishing schools (bobby sox and loafer crowd), but I'll go on record against Vaughn Monroe and his latest wax lemon "Bamboo". How monotonous can you get? The guy hasn't done anything worth mentioning since he turned out "Three Little Sisters" way back around 1941. That includes Ghost Riders, Ballerina, and all his other recent much-profit-no-talent stuff, too. Perhaps a long vocal vacation might help. Who knows people might like his band if they could only get to hear it.

That's all for now.

SENSE and NONSENSE

By Tom Pasha

I walked into my humble "Villy-knowva" abode the other day only to be greeted by the wild-eyed, half-hysterical, red-headed youth to whom I like to refer as "roomy". What was the cause for this sudden surge of lunacy on the part of a usually meek and quiet person?

Come on up

Well, boys, it seems that he had been very much impressed by a penny-postal-publications from one of the feminine diploma-distribution centers publicizing a forthcoming "metatarsal mangler" and general congenial get-together. You know the typical pleading postal propaganda — "Girls — Girls — Girls". The Hilldown College Junior girls cordially invite every Villanovan (Man and Boy) to their beautiful Bunion Bumper Ball. Entertainment — Refreshments — Admission — Free!!

And so he Does

But getting back to my little rummy — er — I mean roomy! Having been impressed by the notice, the kid decided to follow up the invitation and see how well his "make-out" tactics were keeping up with the times. He donned his chocolate-colored, tab-collared, white-cuffed Van Doosen, his green tuxedo with the leopard-lapels, red-sweat socks and yellow shoes and set out for Hilldown College in a cloud of Mennen After-Shave and a hardy Hi-Ho-Arrid!

Welcome

Arriving at the feminine sheepskin-sheker, Junior found that the admission was free, however, there was a donation of a half-raspudnik asked primarily to cover the expense of the crepe-paper and lighting. Oh, well, what's a half raspudnik? He still had seventy cents left for carfare home, didn't he? As he walked into Hoofer's Hilldown Haven, a sweet ballerina took his hand and with that, the gruesome twosome began to circumnavigate the floor while entertaining each other with a witty circumlocution.

Such Fun

On and on they danced, tolerating one another's toe-nails while admiring the elaborate decorations which adorned the floor (the boys in one corner and the girls in the other corner). As they worked their way through the confettied maze, the red-head's new-found filly steered him toward the "Free Refreshments" for a bottle of Gastric Acidity and a bag of Soggy Spud Shreds. Of course, a donation of thirty-five cents per person was asked to enable the sponsors to purchase some snow-shoes for the Florida Foundling Home. Oh, well, he could always thumb home.

Try Again?

Well, from what I can gather, "roomy" left the gal at the counter, and took leave of the dance a few minutes later after dancing with a chick who turned out to be a chaperone. Now, after four hours on the road, he was home and was once again approaching sanity. And then it happened! The fellow from across the hall sauntered in and casually mentioned that there was to a trot at Velleyup College next week-end.

Around The Town

By F. A. VARALLO

Movie fans who enjoyed the antics of the Wilkins family a couple of years ago in the screen version of "Dear Ruth", will be delighted with its sequel "Dear Wife". While not so fresh perhaps as its predecessor, "Dear Wife" is nevertheless a lively, chucklesome comedy in its own right. It's the kind of film which can best be described in terms of "good entertainment for the whole family".

Connection

The story begins where "Dear Ruth" left off. Bill who is now out of the Army is married to Ruth. He has taken her old job at the bank as a teller, but, because he isn't making much money, they are living with Ruth's parents and teen-age sister, Miriam. You will recall, Miriam is the little brat who specializes in meddling and messing up everybody's life. It was because of her that Ruth and Bill met and married despite the fact that Ruth was engaged to Albert Kummer at the bank.

Family Crisis

Politically conscious Miriam causes a family crises this time, when she writes an editorial denouncing the new candidate for state senator as a fat head and stooge and putting up an opposition candidate endorsed by her little political organization. Too late, she learns that the "fathead" is her own father, the judge — but this isn't all, the new candidate is none other than her brother-in-law, Bill. Further complications result when Bill's campaign manager turns out to be a pretty red-head. Ruth's loyalty is torn between the candidates in the family. Things aren't made easier, either by the prissy presence of Ruth's old beau who hasn't lost hope of winning her, despite the fact that she is married.

Return Performance

The same players who gave such fine performances in "Dear Ruth" have their familiar roles. Joan Caulfield and William Holden as Ruth and Bill; Edward Arnold, the Judge; Mona Freeman, the kid sister; Mary Philips, Mom; and the same old Billy De Wolfe come through with topnotch performances.

"Tight Little Island"

Based on Compton Mackenzie's novel, "Whiskey Galore", this droll British comedy is both enchanting and delightfully different. It has no complicated plot and the humor is dry and subtle. Filmed entirely in the Hebrides Islands, the picture deals with the alcoholic problems of the islanders.

Contents: 100-Proof

Specifically "Tight Little Island" tells of a terrible calamity that came to pass on the island of Todday during the

All we know is that three strikes and you're out. This is the third time this semester that this column has appeared, and for the third time it is under new management. Rather than have the column counted out, our distinguished editor has decided to throw two foul balls. So, here we are!

While roistering at the Lower Merion Uplift Society and Social Club, one evening last week, we ran into a fellow Uplifter, (C&F-DSe-6), who, in the spirit of the penitential season, had vowed to forsake the filthy weed come Wednesday. Not for Wednesday alone was he to hold to this admirable promise, oh no, but for the entire forty days of Lent. Two days later we met our Uplifter Brother, resolute but shaken. As he crawled from behind the cigarette machine (he was meeting temptation head on at this stage), he pointed to his head where he had the number of hours of deprivation painted in a brilliant hue. This was sacrifice.

Yesterday afternoon, however, we ran into our brother again. But this time his trembling hand had become steady and there was a twinkle in his blood-shot eyes. To us it seemed as though virtue had conquered and he was, in truth, a new man. We complimented him on his appearance, etc., and inquired as to how he was standing his fast. At this he became very secretive and his whole manner reeked with intrigue and mystery. We decided that from this point our friend should bear watching.

And watch him we did. From Doc Hartman's to P.S. 123, to Fr. Grimes Hist. 456, to the chow hall, to the Alumni tower we trailed him. Here at last we discovered his secret. He had been visiting that last resort of fallen sinners, that smoke filled den of depravity . . . the weed-easy. Well, kiddies, and we do mean you how have shown signs of faltering, don't give up. BE FIRM. (Note to the rest of you: If you can't hold off Phone B. M. 9169 for reservations at the K&K W.E. Mail orders also accepted).

Poll of the week: Place — The Chow Hall. Question — What is your favorite meal? Results — Food, 98%; Franks & Beans, 1%; Mystery Balls, .0006%; All Others, .9994%.

We were going to throw in a joke about a drunk right about here but, in co-operation with the Chaplain's office we've decided against it. Drop in after Easter.

Just to get serious for a moment we thought that we should put in ink just what we have heard at least a zillion times during recent weeks. To wit: Why not retire Paul Arizin's number at the close of the season? Paul is undoubtedly the greatest hoopster to hit the Main Line, and has already been called the greatest collegian since George Mikan.

By the way, has your Fifth Column read different lately? Well, we tried to get the usual assortment of names. But listen to our sad tale of woe. If you think you had it tough look what Ours Truly had to do. We went to Rosemont, Immaculata, Chestnut Hill, The Belle Masque, an Intramural swimming meet, shook hands with the cows at the Delta Pi Moooo meeting. We visited the I.R.C., the P.T.C., the R.A.G.G., and the M.O.P.P. After that we saw three basketball games, went to the opera, and even went to a class a few times. Alas! there wasn't a single campus luminary that we saw who hadn't had his name in the Fifth Column at least five times.

Well, that's about all for a couple of weeks.

But before we go, we would like to remind all dogs that new matriculation cards will be issued at the Business Office for all those desiring to eat at the College Chow Hall, or Pie Shop this semester.

Levi Jackson To Get Inter-Racial Club's Annual Award

Yale Grid Star to Follow Harrison Dillard in Receipt of Medal

John Kennedy, President of the Inter-Racial Club of Villanova, announced yesterday that Levi Jackson of Yale University has been chosen to receive the club's Excellency Award for 1950. The purpose of this award, inaugurated by the club last year under the leadership of George Guida, is to give recognition to the one college student in the country who has done outstanding work in the promotion of understanding, tolerance, and brotherhood among all.

Mr. Jackson, first Negro football captain in the history of Yale University, was chosen by unanimous vote of the club members in recognition of his personal achievements as a student, an athlete, and a gentleman who in his quiet way has done tremendous work in the furtherance of good will and understanding among the white and colored peoples of our society.

The Jacksons have been a part of Yale even before Levi was born. His father, George Washington Jackson, has served for thirty years as chef or steward of various clubs and restaurants on or near the Yale campus. Levi was one of the kids who hung around the bowl watching practice and on the big football days acted as messenger boy. He attended Hillhouse High School just across the street from the University and quickly carried the football squad to a league championship while maintaining a high scholastic standing.

After graduation, Levi volunteered for army service and rose to the rank of staff sergeant. Returning to New Haven Levi entered Yale in the fall of 1946 and started out on his college career which saw him play four seasons for the Blue.

Herman Hickman, football mentor at Yale, was asked what he thought of Jackson, and he replied, "Aside from being a great player, I want to say I never coached a finer or more responsive boy anywhere. He'll go places, and I don't mean just on the football field."

It was originally hoped to make the presentation of the medal and citation to Mr. Jackson in the Palestra March fourth, but due to previous commitments he will be unable to attend. However, a representative of the club will journey to New Haven in the near future to make the award.

Last year the Inter-Racial Club chose Olympic Star Harrison Dillard to receive their first annual award.

exterior of the new building, it was announced that the interior will contain two large boilers, designed to generate thirty thousand pounds of steam per hour. The boilers, each of which will take about six months to construct, are now being built.

Feeding the boilers will be two local bunkers, each holding 50 tons, or one carload, of anthracite coal. This type of fuel will be used instead of bituminous coal, the fuel now being used in the present heating system.

The heating plant will have a completely automatic system of feeding and disposal of fuel. Consulting Engineers for the project are Gilboy and O'Malley of Scranton, Pa.

ARIZIN TOPS SEASON RECORD AS CATS DOWN HAWAII 80-56

Garners 37 Points to Pace Area Scorers

By JIM GALLO

Surpassing another of his own records, Paul Arizin tallied 37 points to pace Villanova's Wildcats to an 80-56 victory over the Rainbows of the University of Hawaii. The Phenomenal Philadelphian ran his season total to 595, eclipsing by one point last year's figure of 594. In doing so, Tall Paul connected on 15 of 22 goal attempts and 7 of 10 free throws.

The paltry few patrons of the game who paddled through icy puddles to Penn's Palestra were well rewarded for their pains. In the preliminary tussle, the Quakers of Pennsylvania stepped out of the Ivy League and met defeat at the hands of Georgetown, 77-73. Although it was a close contest throughout, the Hoyas' great passing baffled the Red and Blue in the closing minutes to clinch the victory.

Rainbows Tie up

In the nightcap, the Hawaiians managed to stay within close range of the Wildcats throughout the first half. The score was tied three times and Villanova trailed the Rainbows twice within the first twenty minutes of play. At the intermission, the Main Liners held a 38-33 lead. At this point, Arizin had dumped in nine field goals and four free throws to amass a total of 22 points, displaying his usual variety of jump shots, tap-ins, and twisting lay-ups. Al Maniglus paced the visitors with a deadly one-handed shot from the outside.

The second half saw the Hawaiians tire and gradually drop behind. Arizin, Sabol, and Ricca controlled the backboards and the 'Cats outran, outpassed, and outshot their opponents until the final buzzer. Paul dropped in 15 points more before he left the game with a bruised elbow. Captain Ed Loul and Tom Yokomoto both left the game via the personal foul route, further minimizing Hawaii's chances to catch the rampaging Wildcat. Coach Severance substituted an entire team with more than five minutes remaining in the game. Jack Crossin and Tom Brennan paced the five who finished Villanova's destruction of Hawaii.

Harry Kahuanui, Hawaii's six foot — four inch center, is also a footballer of some distinction. He played end in the annual East-West game this past year.

"Helium Heels" Arizin is ready to drop the ball in for a dance as the opposition expresses the usual amazement. The opposition in this case happens to be Hawaii.

ROSS; M'KENNA MILE RELAY SCORE AT IC CHAMPIONSHIPS

Barry Second to Wilt in 2-Mile Special — 2-Mile Relay Out

By Bill Cooney

Scoring in three of the four events in which they were entered, Villanova's boardsmen snagged a total of nine points and ninth place in the IC-4A indoor championships at the Garden last Saturday night. The Wildcat thinclads placed in the 1000, the 600 and the mile relay. They looked good for additional points in the two mile relay also, except they had a very bad break when they could not avoid the rough stuff which was plaguing all relay events at the meet.

Browning Ross was top man for the 'Cats by virtue of his second place in the 1000 to defending champ Phil Thippen of Seton Hall. The little Olympian, who was fourth in the NAAU 1000 last week, ran a beautiful race in this hotly contested event, but Thigpen hotfooted it down the stretch just a shade too fast and beat Ross by about a yard and a half. His time was 2:15.2.

The trials for the 1000 the 600 and the mile were changed this year. For the first time the best 6, 8 or 10 best times were taken in the trials and these men went to the finals. Thus although Ross was second in his heat, his time was among the best six registered.

Wilt Beats Barry

John Barry, who as a freshman was ineligible to compete, was second to Fred Wilt of the N.Y.A.C. in a special invitation two mile. Wilt did 8:55.2 in winning over Barry by about 12 yards. This was the fastest of the four special two miles which have been run at this meet. Barry defeated Horace Ashenfelter, the early pace setter, by

SIX FRESHMEN HOPE TO FILL VARSITY GAP IN 1951

All Were High School Stars; Three From Phila. Area

By GEORGE SCANLAN

With this year's hoop season near its finale, we look at the freshman club's stars who will be expected to wear the varsity blue and white next year. Their positions are important as graduation will hit Al Severance hard.

Steve Gepp, the likeable 6'2" blond hails from Belmar, New Jersey, where he attended St. Rose High. Steve won an all-state berth and paced a flashy St. Rose quintet. He had the honor of playing in the annual Interscholastic North-South basketball game played last year in Merry, Kentucky.

Hennessy Gift of New Rochelle

New Rochelle, New York, has gifted Villanova with lanky Larry Hennessy. Larry attended Blessed Sacrament High where he was the big gun on their quintet as the New Rochelle club went to the Glens Falls tournament and won the Westchester Private and Parochial Schools Championship.

Sam Ghassmire is a Philadelphia product, having attended West Catholic High and Columbia Institute. Sam's high school achievements were many, the greatest being chosen on the Philadelphia all-Catholic squad. This little court wizard's presence will be felt greatly next season.

Nick Magiore, another Philadelphian, has something in common with a guy named Paul Arizin; neither of the two could make the squad at LaSalle High of Philadelphia. Nick is high scorer of the undefeated freshman club and the way it looks, "O'Bie" O'Brien, the fine coach of LaSalle, had made two mistakes. Last season, Nick was the pacemaker of a classy Brown Prep team.

Mooney, Quaker City Son

Mooney makes the third Quaker City son on Major McDonnell's club. Reds attended Bartram High of Philadelphia, but only played one year of ball there. This fact is not noticable in Reds' fine play which shall be counted on next year.

Dan Gallagher, 6'7" center, has

TOLEDO AND BONNIES ARE 'MUST' GAMES FOR TOURNEY BID

'Cats Must Win Both Games This Week

By Neal Fahy

Two more 'must' games are on the agenda this week for the Wildcats as the basketball season reaches its final stage. Tomorrow evening at the Palestra, Villanova engages a tough Toledo outfit, and on Saturday night St. Bonaventure's crack court quintet comes to town for a duel with the Wildcats in the second part of another twin bill at the Palestra.

These two opposing squads present the most formidable season's records yet encountered by the Wildcats, Toledo having lost four out of twenty-three and boasting a big win over LaSalle, and St. Bonnie's having received only two defeats all season long.

Tourney Bid in Offing

If the 'Cats can get by this week unscared, they should be well on their way to receiving a major tournament bid with only the final stumbling block, Duquesne, in their way. Georgetown does not promise to give much trouble next Monday night.

Sidecourt Splinters: With all the attention being given to the scoring feats of Paul Arizin, everyone seems to be overlooking the fact that Big Brooks Ricca is nearing the 1000 point mark and is likely to become the second Villanovan in history to reach the envied mark. Ric now has 929 markers to his credit in fou ryears of play . . . Against Georgetown on Monday night, the 'Cats will be looking for their 32nd straight win at the local Field House . . . Brennan's Field Goal Wins for Cats in Extra Period

By Leo McLaughlin

Opening a short and decisive homestretch drive, the Villanova Wildscats cleared their first barrier Saturday night, when they downed the Wolfpack from Raliegh, N. C., before 12,000 fans, 65-64, in an overtime thriller.

Unheralded reserve center, Towerin' Tom Brennan's double-decker in the opening seconds of the overtime period enabled the Blue and White courtmen to ice the victory over the eighth nationally-ranked North Carolina State team and move themselves up further among Tourney-bid candidates.

The Severancement set the pace for the entire contest until when, with seconds of play remaining, the Southern squad forged ahead, making the count 63-61. At this spot All-American Paul Arizin sent the regulation game into an overtime, with a perfect pivot shot from the foul line.

Miss Last Chance

With only seventeen seconds to go the game reached its most tense point when, with the score tied, 63 all, and a packed William Neal Reynolds Colliseum on their feet, State's Warren Cartier was awarded two charity tosses, and then proceeded to muff both of them.

Behind for almost the entire game, the Wolfpack snapped close on the heels of the Wildcats, forcing Coach Al Severance to stick with his starting five until the timely substitution of hero Tom Brennan in the extra period.

Although outscored, 25 to 21, by the State great, Dick Dickey, Tall Paul managed to raise his season's total output to 616 points, and his total collegiate record to 1447.

The game was a bruiser, all the way, down in Raleigh, the backboard work being particularly rough but the "Tall One" goes up for two points getting plenty of argument from an unidentified North Carolina State player.

From The Sidelines . . .

By HARRY RANGE

As the weeks pass and the current court campaign draws to a close, more and more the sports writers and publications have come to realize that Paul Arizin is one of the greatest, if not the greatest player in the country.

According to statistics discovered in the files of the VILLANOVAN, the first paper to mention anything on Arizin's greatness, and the first sports scribe to type along those lines was Harry Jacobs in the February 24, 1948, edition of this paper. At the time of the writing, Villanova had just beaten Seton Hall in a return match, and Tall Paul had scored 27 points. The 27 markers was the highest that he had hit for the '47-'48 season.

A point worth noting in this story is that this new star had not yet become popular enough for the VILLANOVAN sports writers to find out the correct spelling of his name.

Arizen with 27 Points Leads Quintet as Villanova Evens Season Series

By HARRY JACOBS

Paced by the all-round brilliant play of Paul Arizen, who scored 27 points, Villanova, by a score of 68-60 upset twice-beaten Seton Hall College last Thursday night before a capacity crowd at the field house.

Having just shown the first acclaiming of Arizin's greatness we now set forth a few quotes from Sporting News, which has recently named him as the number-one choice for All-American honors.

"Arizin, pacing the major teams in the nation with a 24.6 average, is entitled to the edge over Cousy for most valuable honors. He is purely a natural when it comes to court spirit."

"His tournament play was sensational!"

"Arizin was the first choice for the all-tournament team."

And, on, and on, and on, went the praises of Tall Paul. After three years of brilliant play, even the hometown scribes have seen the light. We no longer look into the dark corners of the fourth sports page to see if our favorites have won.

Incidentally, the other four members of Sporting News All-American were Dick Schnittker, of Ohio State, at the other forward, Rick Harman, Kansas State center, and Bob Cousy, Holy Cross, and Bill Sharman, Southern Cal, at the guards.

The first man on the second five is also a Villanovan but he now has an "X" before his name. That is, of course, Sherman White of L. I. U. who played for the Wildcats Freshman club in '47.

Sports Review, in its special basketball issue, had a good spread on Arizin. This feature, penned by Frank Eck, was the only one in the mag on an individual ballplayer and it was Villanova's boy who was taking the bows.

In reading elsewhere in the paper, you'll probably read about an idea of an ex-sports editor to retire the number 11 which Tall Paul has worn with such distinction for the past three years.

We're in complete accord with this idea, since anyone who has done as much for this school and has not even appeared in "WHO'S-WHO" certainly deserves some recognition from those who are benefiting from his greatness.

Arizin's accuracy average is now 50%, having hit for 221 field goals in 442 attempts. His point total is now 616, already 22 points over last season's total.

AUSTIN WINS OVER DOMS 56-51; IN ONLY I-M GAME

Bill Lemmer Sparks Kemme-Men

Mondschein Inc.

Because of a schedule conflict, only one basketball game was featured in the residents Loop I. M. activity of the week. This game took place Tues. nite and in a thrilling encounter a consistently good Austin quintet outfought and outclassed a spirited Dom five 56-51.

From the start of the game, Austin took the lead as Bill Lemmer tossed in a long set shot — but the Doms refused to let this discourage them. They kept pace with Austin's scoring throughout the first half and at the intermission found themselves on the short end of a 24-23 struggle.

Once again Lenny Lemmer sparked Austin in their second half attack and even though the Doms put on two scoring spurts to tie the game at 33 and 38 all, the victors showed their superority in the waning minutes of the game. Besides his great defensive work, Bill Lemmer notched 16 points to take high scoring honors for the night. Tom Brennen with 8 counters aided Austin in the offensive chores. For the losers, as usual, Bill Knecht played his fine defensive brand of ball, by controlling the backboards, and contributed to a losing cause by garnering 13 markers. Behan with 10 points and Heigl with 9 helped the Doms in preventing themselves from being routed. Referees for the game were Roy and Russo.

McKenna 4th in Fast 600

Jim McKenna stepped out of his role as anchor man on the mil erelay to run the 600, his first race at that distance this season. The speedy junior showed he hadn't lost the old form though, in winning his trial heat and taking fourth in the final.

The final had some fast company, with six place man Smarro of Fordham scarcely five yards back of winner Charlie Moore of Cornell. Favored Hugo Maiocco of NYU was second and Dianetti of Michigan State was third. Moore's time was 1:12.2, but in winning his trial he did 1:11 even to set a new IC-4A record.

Mile Relay 3rd

The mile relay quartet looked very good in taking third behind favored Seton Hall and Colgate. Johnny Farlinger took over McKenna's anchor duties, while Bob Cunjals moved into the breech on the third leg. Joe McCreary ran lead off and Pete Linigan ran second leg.

The two mile relay reached the finals easily, but were literally knocked out in the final. On the very first term of the first leg Billy Curran was pushed, suffered a bad fall and badly twisted his ankle. He could nnot go on so the Villanovans were out of the race. The quartet was composed of Curran, Charlie McKee, Lany Patieryo and George Thompson.

leading proponents of Federal aid to the Catholic school system. He came directly from Washington to make his forum appearance last Thursday evening and his first-hand description of the situation was very revealing.

Stating the stands of Barton and Jacobs as against such legislation because of so-called "tradition" and history, and the depriving of much needed funds from the public school system, and showing that Kennedy, a Catholic, is not fully for legislation to aid the Catholic school system, although his stand is in favor of "legal aid," Father went on to show that tradition, law and political wisdom are not contrary to such support.

Traditional divorce of Church and State in education began around the Civil War period. Therefore, that premise is out for argument against Federal aid, he pointed out.

Between 1775 and 1840 the "majority of schools were supported by government funds," said Fr. McManus, "and this was a period of many more private schools than today, by percentage, when we have but about ten percent non-public."

The "political wisdom" argument was also discounted as being false and ungrounded.

With all the arguments that the speaker put forth in favor of government aid to Catholic educational establishments, he did say that he was in favor of, "No federal aid at all" rather than half-way or discriminatory aid.

He warned, as an added caution, that, "if you are not identified with a society you can not do much with that society." And this is why he actually wants federal aid. Not so much that it is needed, but so that future legislation will not be passed that is against the Catholic Church in America, which will be an integral part of the governmental system.

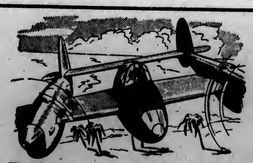
Major Bill Reynolds, Oregon '40 Pilot-Professor, U.S. Air Force!

Bill was an all-round athlete. He chose football as his favorite sport, made the varsity teams at Pomona Junior College and also at the University of Oregon.



A Theta Chi, Bill enjoyed campus social life. Found that it eased the pressure of rugged athletics and his heavy study schedule in Personnel Management.

Upon graduation, Bill chose a future in the Air Force. He "flew" his first Link trainer as an Aviation Cadet in 1940. By March, 1941, he had won his pilot wings.

The 1st Observation Squadron, Fort Riley, Kansas was Lieutenant Reynolds' first assignment. While there he met the future Mrs. Reynolds. They married a year later and now have two fine sons.

The Squadron moved to Panama, then to the Pacific. Bill advanced from pilot to operations officer to squadron commander. He came home a Major and qualified for a Regular Commission.

Recently commended for peacetime work —organizing and improving instruction techniques—Major Reynolds, a "Pilot-Professor", looks forward to a long and gainful career in the U. S. Air Force.

If you are single, between the ages of 20 and 26½, with at least two years of college, consider the many career opportunities as a pilot or navigator in the U. S. Air Force. Procurement Teams are visiting many colleges and universities to explain these career opportunities. Watch for them. You may also get full details at your nearest Air Force Base or U. S. Army and U. Spanish Club Meeting Features Skit; Fete Plans

An all-Spanish skit, entitled, "El Encuentro", was enacted as the feature of a Spanish Club meeting last Thursday evening, at 7:30 P. M., in Room 201, C&F Building.

The skit, whose title translated into the English is "The Meeting", was acted out by six members of the Club, who spoke all the lines in Spanish, the mother language of the organization. Performing in the skit were: Carl Rahr, James Dugan, James Moser, Francis Mullin, Paul McCarthy, and Francis Kelso.

Following the presentation of the skit, the business portion of the meeting was held, with John Roesgen, President of the Club, in the chair. During this part, Rev. L. Lozano, O.S.A., Moderator of the group announced the preliminary plans for the Club's annual celebration on Cervantes Day. Traditionally, this event is held on April 26th., but for this year date is as yet undecided, though it will be held at some appropriate time close to the birthday of the great Spanish literary figure.

The celebration, a dinner-dance, is open only to members of the Spansh Club and their friends. It is on this occasion that the awards are given out for the annual Spanish literary contest, in the form of a gold medal and diploma from the Columbia University Spanish Institute.

Rules and requirements for the contest were also announced during the meeting by Fr. Lozano. No definite date was set for the next meeting of the group.

LENTEN READING

"The Christophers' Choice: Lenten Diet, 1950": was the title of a reading list suggested in a recent issue of America, the national Catholic weekly. Rev. James M. Keller, M. M., founder of the Christopher movement, compiled this list to satisfy the spiritual hunger of Catholics with some of the well written, current Catholic literature. Concerning this listing, it was commented that, "The selection of Catholic books has been made by Fr. Keller, author of You can Change the World and Three Minutes a Day. These titles, too, might well have found their place on the list, had not Fr. Keller's modesty tied his hands."

Included in the "Christophers' Choice: Lenten Diet, 1950" are the following volumes which are on the shelves of the college library, available and recommended for student reading during Lent:

A Procession of Saints — James Broderick, S. J.

Studies of twelve little-known, early English and Irish saints, all told with a dry wit, and warm human interest.

The Chosen — E. J. Edwards

A simple, yet dramatic story of five young seminarians who, one by one find themselves inadequate to the demands of their calling until only one — the chosen — attains his great goal.

Cardinal Mindszenty — Bela Fabian

The story of the modern Hungarian martyr to communism told by a man who was in Hungarian politics, and can vouch for the character and good works of the Cardinal.

The Passion of the Infant Christ — Caryll Houselander

A deeply spiritual work which develops the parallel between Bethlehem and Calvary to show that return to the Divine Infant is the logical answer to the peculiar sufferings of our age.

A Popular History of the Catholic Church — Philip Hughes

A fine summary of the history of the Catholic Church from New Testament days to Pope Pius XII.

To Every Man a Penny — Bruce Marshall

This novel concerns the efforts of a humble French priest to walk in the footsteps of the Master who rewards the last even as the first.

The Waters of Siloe — Thomas Merton

A defense of the contemplative vocation and a study of the life, history and ideals of the Trappists, by the author of The Seven Storey Mountain.

Seeds of Contemplation — Thomas Merton

Beautiful meditations on monastic life containing a message, addressed to all men of today, whether they lead an active or a contemplative life.

The Road to Damascus — edited by John A. O'Brien

Description of the paths which have led fifteen men and women to conversion to the Catholic Church.

The Teaching of the Catholic Church — edited by Canon George D. Smith

One of the most important works to appear on Catholic doctrine. It presents the complete theology of the Church in two easily read volumes.

The Commonweal Reader — edited by Edward S. Skillin

Representative selections in various fields of writing which have appeared over the twenty-five years since the Commonweal was founded.

Father Flanagan of Boys Town — Fulton and Will Oursler

The warm and human story of the man who believed there were no bad boys.

Saint Among the Hurons — Francis X. Talbot, S. J.

The epic life of St. John de Breheuf, the Jesuit martyr who shed his blood to implant the faith among the Indians in New France.

The Story of the Trapp Family Singers — Maria Augusta Trapp

A story of how one musically gifted family transplanted to America the best of the religious and regional music of their native Austria, and found an appreciative audience for it here. Told by the mother of the family.

Saints Are Not Sad — assembled by F. J. Sheed

A serious collection of forty biographical portraits showing the diversity and vitality of sanctity in men and women of essentially different personalities.

Peace of Soul — Fulton J. Sheen

A work of spiritual and psychological analysis. It shows that the way to salvation for postwar man lies in the realm of the soul, and that peace does not come from recourse to human but to Divine aid.

Cast Choosen For Turf and Tinsel Production In May

Doyle, Resnick, Kelly, LeBlanc Return

The directors of the Turf and Tinsel production "Piper Heidsieck, '98", scheduled for May 13-16, have announced that casting for the show has been completed. The rosters of the dancing chorus and the glee club have not yet been filled, however.

Many of these in the cast are familiar Turf and Tinsel members. Edgar LeBlanc, Dick Lauman and Bob Resnick are all two show veterans. LeBlanc comes into the cast after two years in the dancing chorus, while Lauman returns after having cleverly portrayed the title role in last years hit. Dick was a member of the dancing chorus his first year. Bob Resnick, well remembered for his fine performances in the last two shows, is back again for the third time.

Holdovers from last years show are John Kelly, Ted Doyle, Herbie Mathews, and William Fleming. Few will forget Ted as the "Mummyman" and Jack Kelly as the hilarious "Morphina." Bill Fleming is a repeater from the previous year and Herb Mathews comes up

Phi Kap Discusses Hop Results, Plans Dinner-Dance

On Monday afternoon, February 27th., the Engineering Fraternity held a business meeting. The final report on the Owl Hop was made, and initial plans for a Dinner Dance were discussed.

Gene Valerio, chairman of the Owl Hop, made a financial report on that dance, and he also announced that over three hundred couples attended the affairs. Valerio thanked the members for their cooperation in helping to promote the dance and expressed hope that this social function could be held again in future years.

Al Scarcelli, treasurer, gave a general financial report and announced that the fraternity will definitely hold a dinner dance sometime in May.

President Michael Nowlan suggested that the fraternity reorganize the athletic program it was forced to discontinue because of the war. Several members volunteered to inquire about arrangements for this program.

Psychology Professor To Lecture At Sunday's Marriage Discussion

Rev. Francis A. Diehl, O. S. A., will take the speaker's podium in the third Pre-Cana Conference in the current Lenten series next Sunday. He will speak on "The Psychology of the Sexes."

Father Diehl is a Professor of Education at Villanova College. He received his A. B. degree from Villanova in 1916, did graduate work at the University of Pennsylvania and received his M. A. from Villanova College in 1919. From 1919 to 1921 he attended Catholic University, in Washington, D. C., for more graduate work and later studied at London University, from 1936 to 1938.

His broad educational background combined with the knowledge of Father's position as a Psychology Professor in the Education Department at Villanova will justify an expectation of an informative and interesting talk and discussion on the part of the engaged students and their fiances who will attend the Conference next Sunday at 3:00 P. M. in the Commerce and Finance Auditorium.

A reminder that only one party of an engaged couple, or of a couple who expect to become engaged shortly, may attend if necessary is again expressed.

Student Council To Hear Changes

The student council will hold its regular bi-monthly meeting next Monday evening in Room 215, Mendel Hall with Chairman Brian McLarnon, presiding. The meeting was scheduled for last evening but postponed because of the Georgetown basketball game.

At the meeting to be held next Monday evening George Schuster, Chairman of the Constitution committee will submit suggested changes to the council which will be acted upon at that time. The new constitution will then be approved and entered into the student's handbook.

There will also be reports on several problems which have been acted upon by the Board of Governors of the college.

ORATORICAL CONTEST PRELIMINARY FOR HEARST NATIONALS

Mr. J. T. Jonas, assistant professor of the Villanova English department, has announced that an oratorical contest will be held next week at Villanova to prepare for the National Tournament of Orators, sponsored by the Hearst Newspapers.

A preliminary contest will be held Monday, March 13th., at 7:30 P. M. in room 215 Mendel Hall. Semi-finals will be conducted two weeks later in the same room, and the finals will take place April 3 in the C&F Auditorium. The judges will select one student from all the entrants to represent Villanova in a series of four events qualifying for the finals in the national contest. All students interested in entering the competition must see Mr. Jonas or Mr. Frayne not later than March 10th.

Competing students must prepare an original speech of not more than five minutes length on the subject "James Madison." The speech must be delivered without reference to notes. Any view of Madison's life, influence, or role in American history may be presented. To aid students in writing their speeches, Mr.

Students Attend P. L. C. Training

Twenty-two students of Villanova will attend the Marine Corps Platoon Leaders Class Program at Quantico, Virginia, for six weeks this summer.

At Quantico they will undergo training in preparation for commissioning as Second Lieutenants U.S. Marine Corps reserve when they graduate from Villanova. Those who have attended this encampment in the past report the training to be well worth while with plenty of hard work and fun on the side. While at Quantico students are paid approximately $125 per month.

Major Dayton on the Staff of the Naval ROTC Unit states there are a few vacancies still existing. Freshmen, Sophomores or Seniors who are not members of any state or federal military or naval organization and in good standing are eligible.

Anyone interested is requested to see Major Dayton in Commodore Barry Hall.

Sympathy is extended to the families of Mr. Frank J. Bradley, Class of 1910, and Mr. Robert M. Egan, Class of 1938, on the death of each of these graduates of Villanova. Masses have been said in the College Chapel for the happy repose of their souls.

Frosh Nominate Men For Student Council

Elections Scheduled for Thursday Fr. Kemme Introduced As Class Moderator

Last Tuesday afternoon, Feb. 28th., the first official meeting of the Class of 1953 was held in the C&F Auditorium, for the purpose of nominating candidates to the Student Council. The frosh were introduced to their new faculty moderator at the meeting, and had the procedure of elections explained to them, and then proceded to nominate their candidates.

Rev. George J. McLaughlin, O.S.A., Dean of Student Activities, opened the meeting and introduced the freshmen to their Moderator, Rev. Joseph W. Kemme, O.S.A., who explained the purpose of the meeting, and thanked the group for its attendance which he termed "good". There were about forty men present from a class of over six hundred Freshmen.

Fr. Kemme then addressed some opening remarks to the assembly, and introduced Paul Hennessey, Chairman of the Elections Committee of the Student Council.

Explains Procedure

Hennessey explained the procedure of elections for the Student Council, and announced that the election of Frosh representatives would be held Thursday, March 9th., from 11 A. M. to 2 P. M., in the Alumni Hall gymnasium.

Delta Pi Votes New Constitution For C. and F. Frat

Delta Pi Epsilon, the Commerce and Finance fraternity, held its regular monthly meeting last Thursday evening in the C&F Auditorium. A short executive meeting preceded the regular assembly which was presided over by frat prexy, John Weglicki.

A new constitution, the work of a committee led by Bill McCann, was ratified by the members to replace the older code of laws which has become somewhat outdated.

President Weglicki, in a statement to the fraternity brothers, stated that although it had a rather shaky post-war revival, the frat is now running smoothly and has much to offer to all Villanova undergraduates.

The Initiation Committee, under the stewardship of Bob Ham, introduced preliminary plans for the coming spring initiations. Posters will be displayed throughout the campus buildings and definite plans will be forthcoming in the very near future. As far as could be determined at this early stage, all Sophomores will be eligible for pledging.

Contest Begins Today For Queen Of Junior Week

Girl to Be Chosen From Pictures By Modeling Agency

The VILLANOVAN, in connection with the Junior Week committee, will conduct a contest to pick a Junior's date as Queen for the week, and the announcement will be made at the Prom on Friday night of Junior Week. Selection will be made by a Philadelphia modeling agency.

Selection will be made from pictures of the girls sometime during the week. The five finalists will appear in the special Junior Week edition of this paper. Four of this number will be the court for the Queen on the night of the Prom. Pictures will be published weekly in the paper of those who are entered.

The Queen will present to her date a ticket for the Dinner-Dance, from the Junior Class, and will take home a special gift for herself. The bandleader who will be Blue Barron, from all we hear, is scheduled to congratulate the Queen and the other finalists.

Pictures must be of the head and shoulders and should be at least two inches by two inches. Entries should be given either to Harry Range, Chairman of Publicity for the Junior Prom, Austin Hall or to Frank Gobes, Managing Editor of the Villanovan, 305 Fedigan.

Pictures should be submitted as soon as possible since the paper will run the pictures each week until the edition of Junior Week. Only Juniors are eligible to enter the contest.

FACULTY ADVISOR — Rev. JOHN A. KLEKOTKA, O.S.A.

SUBSCRIPTION: $2.00 per year. Of the amount students pay as a tuition fee, $2.00 is for a year's subscription to the "VILLANOVAN."

True Stand

We congratulate THE ADMINISTRATION, for the admirable and definite stand they have held in the recent NCAA sanity code discussion.

"VILLANOVA is most unwilling to make any modification in the present system of granting aid to worthy and needy young men." And to expand: "At the same time Villanova is unwilling to discriminate against the student enjoying a full scholarship by barring him from participation in intercollegiate athletics."

It seems ironical that such a straight-forward and reasonable statement of policy should be the instrument which will prevent our All-American team from consideration for the NCAA tournament this year. And yet this very circumstance serves only to make our stand that much more to be admired — and to put down completely any suspicions of commercialism which may have survived through all the frank and honest discussion which Villanova has carried on with the NCAA.

It is obvious that principles are guiding Villanova, and they are principles which no one has ever attacked as unreasonable. These principles are almost elemental: that a young man need three meals a day, that a college man has enough to do without working, that subterfuge is unbecoming to an institution of higher education, especially one dedicated to the principles of Christ. Villanova has been honest; is there an honest person in the country who will call an athlete a professional because he eats three meals a day?

We think that our school deserves our applause and that of anyone who is seriously concerned over the future of intercollegiate sports, for we hold the opinion that frankness and genuine sincerity are the important factors in checking the widespread commercialism in Sports today. To us Villanova's cause is the cause of American intercollegiate sports, — and we applaud the men who are willing to sacrifice immediate considerations to preserve the system which is making the youth of America the best in the world.

Great Team

The showing at the Garden during the NCAA Championship tournament last spring was enough to make everyone expect a great team on the basketball court this year. Certainly none of us could say that we are disappointed. Even though we have a sense of regret that such talent was not recognized as well as it might have been, there is no doubt in our minds that this club is one of the best teams in the country. There were bad nights of course. There always are. But not once throug hthe entire season, while they played the top teams in the country, were they ever outclassed, nor did a score ever indicate a trouncing.

Among them is it not amazing that one should spring forth to be classed by the sports critics as being on that highest of high levels in athletic endeavor: All-American. Paul Arizin is a modest star who as an athlete, a student, and a gentleman will do honor to the campus for many years. It would be a fitting thing to do to retire his number eleven.

In spite of his greatness, the games were won with four other tremendous players on the floor. Tomorrow, these men will play their final game against highly touted Duquesne. For their accomplishments in the past we offer congratulations and for tomorrow and after that best wishes to the finest hoopsters in the country.

JIM GRIFFIN

Did you ever reach a decision about anyone on circumstantial evidence — only to find later that there were circumstances you hadn't even thought existed? Did you ever get slightly steamed up at a guy for scrounging your homework the third day straight, and then feel disgusted with yourself when someone mentioned later that he has been up the last few nights while his baby fought through pneumonia? Or did you ever get annoyed at someone bumming your smokes one after the other, and then find out that the reason he didn't have his own was because his allotment check was three weeks overdue, and that as a matter of fact he didn't even have dinner money the last couple days before it came?

Another Viewpoint

Or, to take it from the other fellow's spot, how many times have people misinterpreted things you have done, because they didn't know enough of the details to make a fair judgment? How many people have jotted you down in their notebook as slovenly, because you overslept one day and had to face five straight classes with a twelve-hour beard? Probably a lot more than you know, and undoubtedly a lot more than you'd think you deserve.

A Good Rule

It would be a good thing to think of that beard the next time you pass a decision on someone just because it looks to you like he's irresponsible, or unprincipled, or whatever he seems. In fact, it might be good to try to make it a general rule NEVER to judge a person, never to reach a definite decision about him, because it seems that as soon as we make up our minds, we close them to further evidence. Once we decide that Ted Head is an egotist, it will take twice as much humility on Ted's part to make him normal in our judgment as it would take to make anyone else to become St. Francis.

Impressions Vs. Judgment

Actually it is impossible to avoid forming opinions of people and, in fact, inadvisable to try; but it is not impossible to avoid forming judgments. Impressions are inevitable, and they are rather harmless, because they and seem more pliable in our minds, more capable of chang- and seem more pliable in our ing slightly as the character in question rises to various challenges. Judgments are quite the contrary; quite often they are malicious, sometimes the product of anger, resentment, annoyance; and they are brittle, all but impervious to reconsider-

EXPERIMENT IN LIVING

By Bill Breninghouse

In this modern age when there is a week for everything and anything we find that this week is Be Kind to Your Roommate Week. BKTYR Week is a great sociological achievement. It is time that people realized that roommates are human beings. Now, with this week dedicated to the roommate, his true value will be clearly illustrated.

Roommates

What is a roommate? This question has many answers but it can be answered with little trouble. A roommate is a person about your size, that is, he wears the same size shirt, pants, shoes, etc. He is intellectually your inferior. You can talk circles around him. It is his good fortune to receive many packages from home. A good roommate will always be a source of ready cash in any necessity. It would be wise to have a roommate who took the same courses as you, but one semester ahead of you. Another quality is that he has many connections in the local girls' schools and is willing to share his influence. He is also the boy who will answer the phone. Invitations to spend week-ends at his home are frequent, and his mother always thinks you look hungry. This, then, is the essence of a roommate. He may have other attributes, but they need not be much more than those mentioned above.

To be kind to your roommate requires much patience. It means that you can't fix up the room when he is out on a big date. There will be no cracker crumbs in his short-sheeted bed. You will not spread tacks by the door and pull out all light plugs. Spreading limburger cheese on the door knob is frowned upon, as is hiding alarm clocks set for 4:30 A. M. During this week you will be asked to provide your own soap, towels, toothpaste and shaving gear. It will be difficult to observe BKTYR Week, but it will be worth the trouble. Just think, he, too, might have a roommate.

Kindness Pays

A good roommate, of course, buys the daily paper and all the more popular periodicals. To be a true roommate lover you must allow him to read these first. When he receives a box of cookies in the mail, wait for him to offer you some and then don't take all the filled ones. Stop making hi mpay your bus fare every time you set out for the movies. In other words, to be faithful to the tenets of BKTYR Week vou will have to reverse your behavior toward your roommate.

A good roomate is a valuable asset. Don't let him go unrewarded. Give him a piece of candy from that box you've got locked up in a drawer. Instead of buying comic books and burning them when you're through, bring one back to the room. Your roommate will appreciate little gestures like this. Remember that BKTYR Week was meant for you, too. So, the next time you look into your roommate's ugly face, say something nice to the poor kid.

Careers

By Joel Pannuzzo

Recently the Dean of Villanova's journalists sent his alterego, Oscar Twomp, to view the career outlook of Villanova's grads. It was evident in Oscar's report that he wanted to keep the field of journalism in the shadows, since he failed to even give it a line in his column. And, for obvious reasons, the field borders on the over-crowded stage. There is no reason to look for added competition, such is Oscar's viewpoint. Fortunately, Bosco Twerp spotted Oscar's selfish neglect and volunteered to look into the possibilities of the future journalist.

Qualifications and Training

First and foremost is the ability to write; nothing can take the place of talent despite anything Oscar may say to the contrary. Practice, of course, is the vital requisite needed to develop dormant talent. The aspirant would do well to use as his model a man of Oscar's caliber. And, if necessary, write plays, radio scripts, a column for the Villanovan, and send articles to magazines. Don't worry about the time, Oscar doesn't. Writing requires only ten minutes of his time per week.

Most hopefuls will start their journalistic careers as copyboys, a higher sounding name than general flunkey, or as cub reporters. But that is only for the average graduate, Oscar's ability no doubt will be recognized immediately.

Salary

As far as the earnings of journalists are concerned, the American Newspaper Guild declares that the minimum pay for an experienced newspaper man is approximately $100 a week. The cub reporter usually receives from $35 to $40. The same Guild tells us that Oscar Twomp will be fortunate to receive all the bottle caps he can put on his propeller beany. A more valuable pay-envelope would be all the Psych exams a person would care to take the chance of selling.

Oscar's Outlook

Looking into the future, say 1970, the Twomp story should be one of notable success. Oscar Twomp started from nothing with a minor handicap, lack of talent, but quickly rose to the position of Chief Menu-Writer for H. S. T. in the White House.

Dim Outlook For Twerp

Our reporter, Bosco Twerp, will now bow his head and bare his neck in preparation for the blow that must necessarily follow.

SYNCOPATTER

By Roland Mayer and Bruce Taten

Truly, Jazz must be coming back and even Philadelphia is beginning to recognize the fact. What could be more indicative of this than a second jazz concert that is to be held this coming Saturday at the Academy of Music Foyer. That is March 11 at 2:30, ducats go at a buck thirty, a bargain, believe me.

Wild Bill

This session will feature such greats as "Wild Bill Davison" on trumpet down from Eddie Condon's in New York; Buster Bailey, one of Bob Crosby's old Bobcats on Clarinet; Vic Dickenson on trombone and others. Wild Bill is a show all by himself, kind of a Peck's bad boy with talent. His version of "When Your Lover Has Gone" offers just about the greatest horn you can hear anywhere.

New Symphony Introduced

Got quite a jolt Sunday; in the midst of our weekly culture absorbtion hour a new (you should excuse the expression) symphony by Leonard Bernstein was introduced for the first time on the air. Technically it is Mr. Bernstein's Symphony No. 2 based on the poem, "The Age of Anxiety", by Ogden, but the jazz rhythms running throughout its entirety were unmistakeable. If you like Gershwin's better stuff you'll go for Symphony No. 2, I did. Wax of the Week: Mel Torme's excellent version of "Gone With the Wind". This may be the greatest of many fine waxings by Mel. His smooth vocal is contrasted against a soft guitar doing "Adios" in the background. A wonderful piece of arranging, probably done by Mel himself. Now here's Bruce.

Thanks, Bo

For some unknown reason it seems to be a deep dark secret that there are organizations on campus whose main function is to advance the understanding and appreciation of music. It is not untrue to say that our Concert Band is better known off the Villanova Campus than on; after all thoge girls don't go to the concerts at their schools only to hear the music! It has even been rumored that bands been scouring our campus in of desperate coed seniors have search of men capable of being trapped into getting one of their frustrated membership a ring.

Music Club

The Music Club, whose meetings are held in the library and whose agenda is on the bulletin board, provides an excellent opportunity for those of you who don't know a flatted fifth from a full one to sop up a bit of culture. In fact you might even discover that there is more to it than the ability to crack a whip or honk like a goose. Try one of the meetings; you can't lose anything, it's free and the seats are comfortable. As for the Band Concerts the situation is about the same. Music is played, and stray girls wander in occasionally to wait for a bus; it's all a marvelous opportunity to meet some live college girls (a rare sight no one should miss). In conjunction with the writers of the Fifth Column, sometimes referred to as the "golly golly boys", we have conducted a poll and discovered that college women placed a close second in the Popularity Poll; girls came first with 99.44%, the others float.

Sense and Nonsense

By Tom Pasha

One A Week

In one of the recent periodicals, a fem physish made the bold assertion that "Daily bathing washes away natural oils which protect the skin and, therefore, only one bath a week is necessary". I wonder if she realizes the devastating effect this statement might have upon the whole human race in general? You know, fellers, things like this start out as minor issues and end up as major problems. One bath a week, then one every two weeks, and finally none at all. All of our industry and literature would suffer enormously from a situation like this.

Soap Industry Suffers

Take the case of the soap industry alone, it not only promotes the use of Sudsy-Suds, and Flecker-Flakes, but also controls the heart-strings of our very existence. Just think of all the engagements that would never come about because of the infrequent use of soap by the fairer-sex. No longer could we say "She's lovely, she's engaged, she uses soap". The decline of engagements would only mean a shortage of marriages and the gradual extinction of the human race.

Downfall of Humanity

Unemployment would soar. Scientists would be thrown out of jobs by the score, because with the going of the perfumed-fat they wouldn't have to worry about the missing one-per cent in those bouyant-bath-tub companions. Mothers and those children of pre-school age would have virtually no day-time entertainment because "Our Gal Tuesday" would be looking for a five-day a week job along with "Gangerene's Other Husband" and this would eventually lead to twenty-four solid hours of Arthur Godfrey and his OOOOOkalayle.

Decay of the Family

The country's commerce would be absolutely on the rocks with the going of Lifebouy and the ship's masters not knowing whether or not the Tide's in or out. Competition between housewives would be at a stand still with no washing being compared and they would probably take twice as long to do their laundry with the doing away of all time-savers.

Hope?

Perhaps the only individuals that wouldn't be affected by the absence of soap would be those poor slobs that only hit the water during the summer months and forget about it until the completion of winter. I don't know about you gang, but I am sure looking forward to July and August.

Around The Town

By F. A. VARALLO

Have you seen Hollywood's latest screen personality? He is none other than Francis, the talking Army mule. Francis who is twelve years old was brought from his home in Missouri to play the title role of the movie comedy adapted from the book penned by David Stern, son of J. David Stern, former Philadelphia newspaper publisher.

Four-footed GI

If you think that a talking mule is unusual, you'll be even more surprised when you meet Francis, the most pompous and sarcastic talking mule you've ever seen. There is no denying that he is clever. Francis knows all the answers and delights in putting the junior officers in their place — especially the second lieutenants. In his ornery way, he shows a definite contempt for the way the Army does things much to the delight of all GI's.

The action takes place in Burma during the last war. The hilarious opening scene shows the disgusted mule rescuing Donald O'Connor, a newly commissioned second lieutenant who has become lost behind enemy lines.

Mule Strategy

Although it is quite evident that Francis doesn't have a very high opinion of the intelligence level of the junior officers, he takes a liking to Donald and gives him important information as to what's going on behind Jap lines. Donald, then, is able to perform some amazing feats of strategy and heroism.

There is only one catch to this. When Donald reluctantly admits to his superiors that his knowledge of the enemy's plans came from his four-legged friend, he is promptly locked in the psycho ward where he is put to weaving baskets. And since Francis stubbornly refuses to talk for anyone but Donald, there is little doubt in anyone's mind that Donald is just a little wacky. Finally, however, Francis meets the General who mutters in surprise "I'll be double-triple blasted in 72 languages! So you can talk?" The secret is out! News of the talking mule who saved a battalion and brought about the capture of a spy causes a furore in the states and Francis is flown home as a hero.

Competent Cast

Donald O'Connor is convincing and amusing as the not-to-bright Lieutenant Peter Stirling; Zasu Pitts, a veteran screen actress, scores as Donald's fluttery nurse in the psycho ward; Ray Collins portrays the colonel who won't believe that a mule can talk; Patricia Medina, John McIntire and Edward Franz also take part in this fantastic farce.

Chances are you'll enjoy this gala laugh riot now playing at the Boyd Theater.

Well, what do you know? After crossing our fingers for the past week, we have survived the axe and are back, to plague you again. We took a trip down to the swimming pool the other day, and we saw Roger Hanafin, Villanova's channel-swimmer getting in shape for the 1980 Olympics to be held in the ruins of Upper Slobovia which will be wiped out by an XYZ-Bomb in World War XXVIII.

We squeezed a juicy morsel out of the grapevine this week. It seems that the school authorities are going to station scarecrows all around Austin Hall. From all appearances, a large group of the black marauders has nested in the first and third floor regions. Neil O'Boyle, Vice-Regent of Club 134, has been appointed head crow-catcher. He will be assisted in this secret assignment by Corporal of the Guard, John Bogan.

A new line has been formed for Villanovans to stand in. The Philip Morris Company is conducting a free clinic for all participants in the recent wrapper drive who have been stricken with "Nicotinosis." Whitey LeBlanc was the first in line. R. I. P.

All students are urged to attend a lecture tomorrow night by Bob McRoberts. Bob will speak on "HOW TO FALL INTO MANHOLES." He should.

All students are advised to keep a sharp lookout for two shady characters seen loitering about the Library. They have been tentatively identified as Jim Caulfield and Shy Raiken. Secret Agent Mickey Frinzi informs us that they are suspected of peeking into many back issues of Life.

Questions on everybody's mind:

1. What does Joe Hall do at the Post Office every night?
2. Why does Bill Breninghouse, misogynist extraordinary, have a service flag hanging on his door? Could it be that all his feminine friends have forsaken him after last week's barrage?
3. Will some brave Noodnik please give Peno a bath?

What local girls' educational institute has been ejected from the N. C. A. A. because one of the students accepted a date with a Wildcat wheel who is without "Wheels"?

Ask Nick "S. P. C. A." Travaglini to pronounce the name of that brilliant German dog that he raved about in P. S. 113. However, be sure to bring an interpreter along.

At this point, we would like to endorse our predecessors' proposal that Paul Arizin's number be retired at the close of the season. It would surely be a fitting tribute to the greatest collegiate hopster in the nation.

Leo "Lime Crasher" Martsukis is the kingpin of all the residents this week. He weighed himself last night and after careful checking, a startling announcement was made. Leo has gained a whole pound since his arrival on the campus. Oh well! Some guys have all the luck.

Barracks 4 is in mourning this week. Their favorite citizen, Joe Kupres flunked the fingernail test for the eleventh time and has just buried his last, hair.

Prior to our departure, we would like to remind you to eat your Ranger Joe every day, and also give a pat on the back to the photography staff. That picture of the N. C. State game was the best we have seen since last year's. Toledoodle-oo.

Operation Yule Report Shows Party's Success

The final report on "Operation Yule", made this week by George Schuster, Junior Class President, showed that the Christmas party sponsored by the Class for the children at St. John's Orphanage was a financially solvent as well as an entirely enjoyable project.

Over one hundred eighty dollars is now in the hands of the Class as a balance from the $1159.63 that was contributed to the program. This balance will be forwarded toward a similar party to be held next year.

A list of the expenses for the party, held just before the Christmas vacation, as released by Schuster, includes:

Advertising & Misc. ...	$ 44.00
Refreshments	304.66
Toys and Gifts for Children	450.00
Gift Certificates for Sisters	170.00
Costumes for Show ...	10.00
Total	$ 978.66
Balance	$ 180.97

Rev. Thomas Purcell, O.S.A., Junior Class Moderator, and Rev. Edwin T. Grimes, O.S.A., College Chaplain, expressed their thanks to all the students who donated money and time, and otherwise aided in the success of the affair. The gratitude of the orphans, they assured, warranted the efforts the Villanova students made. Particular thanks were extended to the Student Council, Delta Pi Mu Arts Fraternity, and the Junior Class itself, for the generous donations these groups made to support "Operation Yule".

ABC Phone Quiz; Win Free Smokes

A 'Telephone Quiz Contest' is now being conducted on campus by the Chesterfield cigarette representatives, Mike Marshall and Neal Fahy, who pose the question five times each Thursday night to students called at random from the directory. The award which builds up with two packs of Chesterfields for each unanswered call, has reached two cartons, since the first ten men have been unable to answer the question "What governor of Pennsylvania approved the act of the State Legislature granting a charter to what is now Villanova College." Stand by for a possible call Thursday night!

Music Club To Present Bizet's Opera "Carmen"

"Fundamentals of Music" were discussed last Wednesday night at a Music Club meeting in the Library music seminar rooms by Rev. Ralph Handran, O.S.A., director of the College Band and Glee Club.

Illustrating his talk with the use of the new piano in the Music Room, Fr. Handran defined and demonstrated the basic factors in music: rhythm, harmony, and chords. This was his first appearance before the music appreciation group, and he is slated to conduct three more such meetings this semester.

Future Concerts

The remaining weekly meetings will be conducted by either Rev. John McMenamin, O.S.A., or Rev. John Vrana, O.S.A., moderator of the seminar group, and will consist of recitals of recorded classical and semi-classical selections.

Tonight, another meeting will be held at 8 P. M., featuring Bizet's famous opera, "Carmen". All students are invited to attend this recital, which, like all the other gatherings, will use the facilities of the Library Music Room.

Belle Masque

Tickets for the Belle Masque production of Beaumont and Fletcher's play, "The Knight of The Burning Pestle," are now on sale. They may be purchased from any member of the society or members of the cast. Student tickets sell for seventy-five cents and General Admission for one dollar. The play is scheduled for March 23rd., 24th., 25th and 26th, in the Field House.

RILEY HUGHES SEES BRIGHT FUTURE FOR CATHOLIC WRITERS

There is a great future for writers of American Catholic fiction, Riley Hughes, essayist, critic, and professor of English at the Georgetown School of Foreign Service, said here last week. Mr. Hughes gave the second of six lectures on modern Catholic literature which are sponsored by the English department during the spring semester.

The speaker quoted a Protestant critic as saying that Catholicism is an important segment of American thought, but that it is necessary to select European writers as typifying the Catholic in literature.

The "Catholic regions" of America provide a fund of material for the development of a Catholic fiction integrated into American life, Mr. Hughes said. And there is an increasing demand by publishers for the work of Catholic writers.

The content of American Catholic fiction would come from two sources: tradition of the Irish in New England, the English in Maryland, the French in Louisiana, and the Spanish in the Southwest; and from the interplay of Catholic and non-Catholic elements in the American community, the speaker explained.

Making clear that "there will never be a clear-cut definition of Catholic fiction," Mr. Hughes discussed the works of Richard Sullivan, J. F. Powers, Francis X. Connolly, Harry Sylvester, and Leo Brady as potential followers in fiction of the lead set by Thomas Merton in non-fiction. All were "good writers, craftsmen," although none had yet reached full maturity. Sullivan he termed "the most thoroughgoing Catholic regionalist," and Powers' short story, "Prince of Darkness" as "close to major art."

The second speaker to be introduced was Mr. Ed Casey, a Villanova graduate of 1937, and presently employed by General Electric Company. He spoke on modern power switch gear, and used slides to illustrate his topic.

CAGERS FACE DUQUESNE IN SEASON CLOSER; BEAT ST. BONNIES, TOLEDO

CATS EXPLODE IN CLOSING MINUTES TO WIN BY 20

Arizin Nets 29 to Bring Total to 678

The St. Bonaventure College cagers became the 23rd victim of Villanova's Wildcats last Saturday night in the feature contest of a Palestra doubleheaders. 6500 paid customers saw Paul Arizin score 29 of the winners' 55 points, while the visitors from Olean could crack the Villanova defense for only 35. It was a fang and claw battle throughout, each team refusing to abandon any last hope for a tournament bid. The score was close and low until the final minutes, when the Wildcats ran away from the Bonnies' desperate all - court press.

Sabol Starts Scoring

Tom Sabol got Villanova off to a fast start by scoring the first five points of the game. Arizin picked up the offensive burden at that point and had to carry it most of the way as his mates ran into great difficulty trying to throw the ball through the orange rim. After 15 minutes of play, the Wildcats had tallied only 19 points, Arizin having accounted for 14 himself. The Bonnies, however were even less successful, being unable to solve the Main Liner's defense. They were forced to fire away from the outside and only Ken Murray and

Frosh Cagers Crush Penn Five, 69-52; J. Hannan Coaches

The Villanova freshmen swept to their fifteenth consecutive victory at the expense of the Pennsylvania frosh at the Palestra last Wednesday nite. The final score of 69-52 does not, however, present the true picture of this spectacular tussle.

Nip and Tuck Ball Game

Both clubs got off to a fast start with the lead constantly changing hands. Big Ernie Beck hit for 10 points in the first half to keep Penn on even terms. Dan Gallagher and Larry Hennessey matched tosses with the Red and

Toledo Crushed, 82-62 As Arizin, Sabol, Ricca Star

Victors Over LaSalle Baffled by Wildcat Offense, Defense

A cocky and confident Toledo team, upset conquerors of La Salle two weeks earlier, invaded the Palestra last Wednesday, determined to make Villanova another victorious stop on their NIT express. Approximately an hour and a half later this same outfit, now thoroughly beaten, left the floor, bewildered by the devastating power of the Wildcat attack and smarting under the sting of an 82-62 defeat.

Their passing attack confounded by numerous interceptions; their attempted shots blocked by the alert Villanova defense and their defense riddled by the shooting and passing of the Wildcats, Toledo seemed glad for the few consolation baskets scored in the last few minutes against a team of second and third-stringers.

Again Fool Experts

The Wildcats, only four days after their upset win over North Carolina State, again fooled the "experts", as they outplayed, outran, and outfought their favored taller opponents. Sparked as usual by All-American Paul Arizin's sensational shooting, and aided by the fine all-around play of Tom Sabol and Brooks Ricca, Villanova broke out in a scoring rash after being held to an early 5-3 lead and enjoyed a 41-24 edge at halftime. Paul registered the first seven points for the 'Cats after the intermission and left the game at the seven minute mark with 33 points — an average of one a minute. Tom Sabol contributed 14 markers and Ricca checked in with a total of 11.

Arizin's first goal of the second half broke the single season record of 636 formerly held by Tony Lavelli of Yale. This record is recognized as the top mark among major colleges and Arizin now has a total of 649 with three games remaining.

Barry Takes Boston Two-Mile, K. of C. Mile In Garden

John Barry went on a high-flying spree last weekend and snagged first place in not one but two important indoor races. On Friday Johnny Joe won a special invitational two mile at the Heptagonal championships. The following night he journeyed to New York and continued in his winning ways by taking the K. of C. mile in the last meet of the season in Madison Square Garden.

In both races Barry conquered his arch opponent Fred Wilt. At Boston, Barry came from behind to rip Wilt at the tape and defeat him at his own distance. So close was the decision that both men were considered to have the same time, 8:57.9. The race was very fast. Even fifth place man Curt Stone was timed in 9:04.

WILDCATS LOOK TO AVENGE '49 DEFEAT BY STRONG DUKES

Last Regular Game for Arizin, 8 others

The Palestra will be the scene tomorrow evening of the 'game of the year' as far as Villanova is concerned. The Iron Dukes of Duquesne University come to town sporting a 22 and 3 record and a bid to the National Invitation Tournament. The Wildcat five would like to spoil that and also avenge last season's defeat to the Dukes suffered in Pittsburgh.

It will be remembered that the Wildcats had won their first twelve games last year, then met Duquesne's quintet and were downed 65-37. That night marked the last time Paul Arizin was handcuffed when he was held to 8 points by big Charley Cooper, the Duke's 6'5" center. While Cooper is anxious to prove that it was no fluke, the 'Cats hope to show it was.

Game Rated Toss-Up

According to the experts, neither team can be called the favorite although Villanova's record appears to be slightly better. The Dukes boast of a big win over L. I. U. but have lost to such little regarded clubs as Akron and Baldwin-Wallace. Both Villanova and Duquesne were beaten by Louisville.

An anticipated attendance of 9000, what should be the biggest crowd of the year at the Palestra is expected to be on hand to witness the twin bill. Penn takes on Duke in the opener.

If the 'Cats win this one, it will be a fitting climax to the greatest team to represent Villanova in thirty years. This squad has won the most games, has scored the most points, has maintained the highest scoring average, and has played against the best competition. It will be the last chance for Philadelphia fans to see the

Wildcat Nine To Play 20 Games Under New Coach

Things are beginning to stir in baseball land here at Villanova. At a meeting held last week, a total of 50 veterans and aspirants reported to their new mentor, Mr. Artie Mahan, a former Villanova ace. It was decided at the meeting that light workouts would begin tomorrow for the batteries.

The situation in regard to talent looks bright from this quarter, but the schedule is rugged. 13 holdovers from last season's edition of the Wildcats are back for another fling.

Good Background

Art Mahon has a colorful baseball background. Upon leaving Villanova in 1936, he was signed by the Boston Red Sox. He played for various farm teams and then in 1940 he was signed by the Philadelphia Phillies. The war interrupted Mahons career in baseball, but after four years in the service he returned to baseball as manager of the Providence Chiefs in the New England League.

Veterans returning to the Cats this year are John Moroney, a star pitcher, along with Bob Sexton a sophomore hurler. At the receiving end will be catcher pitcher Red Wright, Jack Jameson and Tom Clavin. Two first basemen have reported; John Weglicki of basketball fame, and Reds Coletta of football fame. Coletta's playing depends on football mentor, Jim Leonard.

Veteran Tommy Jones will be down at the second sack, with the great Larry Aigeldinger at short. The hot corner will be capably filled with Mickey Frinzi alternating with Jack Morris. Home-run hitter Shy Raiken will be out in the daisies with Joe Till and Jack Sabol. Many newcomers will be pressing the vets for their respective positions, and the going will be rough for it is rumored that there are quite a few boys around these hallowed halls who are good at the game.

Chumps Snub Champs

By Harry Range

Just what does Villanova's basketball team have to do to receive a bid to a major basketball tournament? At this writing the Wildcats' record is better than nine of the teams in the National Invitation Tournament, being surpassed on averages by only Bradley, Kentucky, and small-time Arizona.

It is certainly a sad situation when the whims of one individual, namely Ned Irish of the tournament of the same name, can have such a stranglehold on collegiate basketball that one of the nation's leading clubs is left out in obscurity while teams such as Niagara with six losses and Syracuse with seven setbacks are invited to play in what is considered a tournament of champions.

Somebody permitted the Collegiate basketball setup to get way out of hand when one man is able to stop the leading offensive club in the country which has All-American Paul Arizin, the nation's leading scorer, from participating with the other good clubs of the country in a "national championship" tourney. By good clubs we mean Bradley, Kentucky and Western Kentucky and NOT C. C. N. Y., Syracuse, Arizona, or Niagara. We feel that we are not too presumptious in saying that the Wildcats are better than at least nine of the club in the NIT and are just about even money with the other three.

Just as in the football season Villanova is a bridesmaid but not a bride. There's something rotten in places other than Denmark!!!

Arizin takes the ball with ease from Toledo players as the Cats win 82-62.

St. Bonaventure

Fred Diute were in any way effective. At halftime, Villanova enjoyed a 26-22 lead.

In its first minutes, the second half play was similtar to that in the first. Arizin got ten more points, the Bonnies were still trying to hit from the outside, and the score was 40-34 at that point. And then the entire pattern of the game changed. St. Bonaventure came out of their tight, deep defense and pressed the 'Cats al over the court. It must have been just what the Severancemen were waiting for, because they suddenly caught fire. Brooks Ricca led the late splurge with three successive field goals, Leo Wolf cracked the scoring column for the first time, and the Bonnies were dazzled by the Wildcats fine passing. Throughout the last seven minutes of the game, the visitors were able to score only one point to wind up their scoring at 35.

Arizin Dominates

Arizin dominated the scoring all night. He maintained his season's average of .500 by hitting on ten of 20 field goal attempts, despite a lot of pushing and shoving that went unnoticed by the officials. Once again Tall Paul's performance was undoubtedly of All-American calibre. Ricca was a demon on defense, grabbing rebounds and intercepting passes. Murray and Dinte led the Bonnies with 11 and 10 points respectively.

In the opener, Cornell downed Penn, 60-53, in an Ivy League contest. It was an improvement for the Quakers, who were soundly drubbed by the Big Red in their last meeting at Ithaca.

Snub Champs

Now we turn to another farce, the N. C. A. A. and their tournament of champions. Who will carry the District II banner to Ned Irish Garden? Will it be highly rated Princeton (11-9) winners of the top-notch Ivy League, or New York's big bid, Columbia (19-7) or maybe Syracuse, Canisius, or Cornell, all pwoers in the East?

But all you lily-white members of the N.C.A.A. can rest assured that Villanova, the team that deserves to represent District II, will not be in the garden. You remember that Villanova is the club that feeds its players and that is not in compliance with the Sanity Code which has been set up by those who would never help an athlete by giving him his room, board and tuition. Money is so much easier!!!

Maybe next year the hypocrites will have departed and college sports will return to the honest position they deserve.

ALUMNI WINS OVER DOMS; FEDIGAN UPSETS AUSTIN

17 Teams in New Day Hop League

Mondschein Inc.

Resident Basketball I. M. games were hotly contested and in full swing as last weeks results, now in the record books, will indicate. The weeks activities commenced on Tuesday nite when Fedigan upset the applecart by dumping a favored Austin Quintet 52-43 while the great Alumni combine had to come from behind to defeat a fighting Dom aggregation 62-42. Thursday evening's tilts finally saw Mendel hit the victory trail as they topped a still winless Good Counsel five 46-40 and Brks. 1 & 4 nosed out their rivals, Brks. 2 & 3 by a 46-48 count.

Austin took a quick 5-0 lead in their encounter with Fedigan but by virtue of the brilliant play of "Little" Joe Crossin they had to taste bitter defeat from the hands of their first half victims. In his offensive contributions, Crossin poured 17 points through the hoop and his defensive manuvers was attributed to his slick and classy passing added to holding Austin's highly touted star, Bill Lemmer to a mere 6 points. Tom Brennen with 13 markers was high for the losers.

Gecker Stars

Bill Decker's fine play was the decisive factor in Alumni conquest of the Doms. He notched 15 points while Heigl, Natiello, and Knecht each tallied 8 points for the losers. Hubbert and Russo refereed the games.

Brks. 1 & 4 Wins

Brks. 1&4 had a big scare from Brks. 2&3 before they could prove their superiority. Tom Flynn with 18 and Tom Falkowski with 12 led the scoring parade for the winners. Ruggerio's 16 and Wills with 10 copped scoring honors for the losers. Healey's 16 counters paved the way to Mendel's first win since the League began in the Fall semester. The only consolation for the winless Good Counsel crew was the 8 baskets and one foul conversion netted by Flaherty to make him high scorer for the game. Scanlon and Russo tooted the whistles.

Great Interest

Because of the great interest shown among the Dayhops, it was necessary to form two sections in the I. M. Dayhop League. The first section is represented by the following teams: Dugan's B. M. Hot Shots, Swayze's Educators, Fitzpatrick's Warriors, Gecker's Black Flames, Donato's Kryuhs, and Lynch's Engineers. The second section is comprised of the following teams: Brown's Bombers, Avengers, Cavaliers, Barons and the Hornets.

Last Week's Results:

SECTION I

Kryuhs, 60 .....Educators, 36
B. M. H. S., 39 .....Educators, 24
Kryuhs, 59 ..... Black Flames, 45
Warriors, 52 .....Engineers, 28

SECTION II

Blue and the half ended in a 28-all deadlock.

The second half saw a repetition of the first stanza with Penn's Mackenback finally hitting for three quick baskets to put the Quakers in the lead 47-44 with ten minutes remaining. The Wildcats then settled down and began to pour it on. Sam Glassmire and Red Mooney hit for two pointers to put the Cats ahead for a lead they never lost.

Great Display of Fight

The frosh showed as much fight as the big auditorium has ever seen. Mooney and Steve Gepp controlled the glass with uncanny ability while Glassmire had the Penn five ready to commit hari-cari as he stole the ball and gave off sensational passes to his hustling team mates. With Nick Maguire and Larry Hennessey sitting it out because of the danger of fouling out, two subs, Tom Redmond and George Etanko helped crack the game wide open. Stanko hit the cords three times with terrific sets as did Redmond.

Sam Glassmire, the clever floor general of the club played his usual fine floor game besides leading the blue and white scoring parade with 12 points. The rest of the club was close behind in scoring.

Joe Hannan Makes Debut

In the abcense of Major McDonnell fiery Joe Hannan of the varsity took over the coaching reins and did a fine evening's work. Joe's four years of college ball certainly were evident as he showed much basketball sense equal to his ability as a player.

Barry Takes

week end came when he won the New York K. of C. mile with a very nice 4:11.6 timing won by twelve yards over Johnny Twomey of Illinois. Tom Kiuwana of Penn was third; while early pace setter Fred Wil folded in the last lap and wound up fourth.

Villanova's mile relay quartet was second to a surprising Penn State team. The boys from State College, who have been smoldering all season with an almost-but-not-quite foursome, suddenly exploded and registered a 3:21.2 to surprise the Wildcats. Georgetown wound up third behind the Blue and White. Villanova ran for the first time without seniors on the team. The lineup included sophomores Johnny Furlinger, Bob Cunjak, Pete Simigan, and junior Jim McKenna as anchor.

Boss Third

Browning Ross, who has run and placed in two major thousand yard runs so far this year, made the string three by placing third in that distance at the games. Phil Thigpen won this very swift jaunt in 2:12.4 and Roscoe Browne was second. Ross' other noteworthy performance at that disance were a fourth in the NAAU and second in the IC-4A championships.

Barry's two mile victory in Boston was right out of the story books. Pacing himself nicely the slender Irishman dogged Wilts heels until the last lap then suddenly he came to life. In a thrilling finish, timed to perfection, Barry won by a chest length over the F.B.I. man.

In the New York mile Barry again tailed Wilt for the second half. In the last lap he again let go with his phenomenal "kick". Wilt folded under this withering blast and Barry went on to the tape alone.

Arizin's Number 11 To Be Retired

Villanova's All-American, Paul Arizin, will be the last men to wear the number 11 basketball uniform as his number will be retired after the Duquesne game. This is the first time that this has been done for any athlete at Villanova.

At present their are no definite plans for the ceremony but there will be an assembly to honor Arizin in the manner that he deserves.

Arizin now has 678 points in 27 games for an average of 25.1 which is tops for major colleges. He was also picked on the United Press All-American which makes the fourth "All" club that he has made.

Exacting Profession Of Marriage Requires Serious Preparation

By Jerry Micallef

There are many, many people who do not prepare for the most exacting profession in the world, the Sacramental "profession" of marriage, though they would not think of entering any other profession without sufficient preparation.

Pope Pius XII was thinking this way when he expressed the fact that in many cases "an instant's thought to preparing . . . for the arduous work of educating their children, which awaits them" is given by engaged couples.

Pre-Cana Conferences for engaged couples are for this purpose: to stimulate this thought. From this one correct thought a couple can not help but follow the natural thought trend to the ultimate end of real preparation for marriage.

Ironically enough, Chicago, the city of so much crime, was the sanctum from which these conferences emerged. Research and suggestions, consolidated by Father James C. Voss and newspaperman Clem Lane, made up the first Pre-Cana Conference. It was a complete success.

Today, however, the Pre-Cana Conferences are very well planned. They are not all religious, but present an almost perfect balance of clerical and lay thinking. As is the case here at Villanova, in the first Pre-Cana Conference held on the campus, talks, not Lectures, by priests are supplemented with talks by married persons who know the trials and tribulations of married life and also can speak authoritatively on the joy of a family, on patience, humility, and togetherness in Christ.

A doctor's very important "two cents" is added to the barrel of preparation for joint living. So often this very important aspect is skimmed over in some attempts to better acquaint the two with God and His purpose in Marriage.

Sometimes the fact is not realized that Marriage is not open to the trial and error method of finding happiness. It amounts to more than finding someone attractive, popping the question, slipping the ring on the finger, and waiting to see what happens. Marriage is one of the many ways of doing Gods Holy Will.

Pre-Cana Conferences are aiding in telling the world, Catholic and non-Catholic, that Marriage is an institution, raised to a Sacrament by God, for the propagation of the faith and race. They seek to build up in the live of those to be wed the great Christian ideal of the family; every family a sanctuary in human society.

The Library Corner . . .

The latest in the current series of pictorial exhibits prepared by the editors of LIFE magazine is now being displayed in the second floor corridor of the College Library, and will continue to be shown until March 20th. The new exhibit, entitled AGE OF EXPLORATION, deals with the great period of discovery, from 1400 to 1650, when the physical world was expanding from a flat Medieval island to the great whirling sphere of the Renaissance.

In 15th Century Europe the world of Ptolemy still dominated the minds of most men. They had heard of the fabulous East, but they knew little of the ways to get there. AGE OF EXPLORATION describes the adventures of men daring enough to brave the unknown terrors to find new ways to the East.

Portugal was first in the field, sending Vasco da Gama around Africa to find new trade routes to India. Then Spain sailed west for the same reason but discovered a new world instead. Then France, Holland, and England all entered with force the great game of exploration and world trade.

Fifty Pictures Displayed

AGE OF EXPLORATION was assembled under the direction of Miss Margaret Scherer of the Education Department of the Metropolitan Museum of Art. There are 24 panels and some fifty pictures including, in addition to photographs, reproductions of 15th and 16th Century engravings, woodcuts, drawings, and paintings. Included also is the reproduction of a rare map, the chart of the new world made in 1500 by Juan de la Cosa who was an officer on Columbus' second voyage. Many unusual pictures come from the little known Voyages of De Bry and of Linschoten, as well as from the Travels of Hans Staden and Thevet's Cosmographie Universelle.

The urgent need for a sea route to India plagued all 15th Century Europeans except the crafty Venetians who had monopolized all East-West traffic for centuries. What curious results came from this need are pictured in AGE OF EXPLORATION. The immediate needs of trade were not, however, the only impetus behind the great discoveries. The Renaissance had begun a a spiritual ferment in art, in literature, in learning, philosophy, and science. And the Age of Exploration and the Renaissance are but two names for the period of creative energy that was bursting over Europe.

Give-It-A-Try

Perhaps you already have developed an instinctive Charity that makes you tend to soften your reactions against others, even when the evidence seems unmistakeable; probably you do not make a habit of nursing hatreds. But it is almost a sure bet to suggest that some improvement along this line is possible. It might be a good Lenten side-line to develop this habit of Charity in considering our neighbors' shortcomings; it certainly will be no waste of time, and at worst it is likely to smooth over some of the abrasive spots in your contacts with others.

Belle Masque Builds Old Theatre Set

Beaumont and Fletcher Drama Requires Unique Stage

The Belle Masque Dramatic Society is in its second last week of rehearsals in preparation for their spring play, "The Knight of The Burning Pestle."

The Elizabethan comedy, replete with appropriate stage settings, is something which has never been produced at Villanova, and is a challenge to any dramatic group. This Beaumont and Fletcher comedy will be a radical departure from any previous production of the organization.

A scale model of the Globe Theatre's interior (illustrated on Page 7) has been the guide from which the Belle Masque stage crew is constructing the set within the Field House stage. The finished setting will be comparable to the interior of the Globe Theatre as seen in the film, Henry V. produced by Sir Laurence Olivier. It will rise twenty-one feet from the present stage and constitute three tiers. The first level, known as the inner-stage, is used to depict general scenes from the play as called for in the script. The second level is used for interior scenes and the third is a musician's balcony. The sides of the Elizabethan stage on the second level are also used to represent different scenes in the play and inthis case, the homes of Merrythough and Venturewell respectively. Another characteristic of the Elizabethan stage is that it does not require scene changes. The action moves from the outer stage to the inner stage and is integrated from one level to another. This accounts for the fast moving theatrical plays in that particular era. Since all productions in the Globe Theatre took place in the afternoon, Belle Masque plans to make use of modern lighting effects to further create this atmosphere. A circular seating arrangement has been proposed for the audience in order that they might also experience the feeling of actually being seated in the Globe Theatre.

Jacques Maritain To Give Forum Lecture Here Next Monday

Noted Catholic Philosopher Conducts Special Forum

Considerable attention will be focused on the Villanova campus next Monday evening, March 20th, when the distinguished Catholic philosopher, Jacques Maritain, will deliver a special lecture in the Villanova Forum series. His topic will be "The Rights of Man and Natural Law."

Referred to by T. S. Eliot as "the most powerful force in contemporary philosophy", Dr. Maritain has attracted world attention to himself in this field. A convert to Catholicism in 1906, he has received Doctor of Philosophy degrees from several European Universities.

Since his early teaching days at the Institute Catholique de Paris, he has specialized in the scholastic system of St. Thomas and lectured on Thomist philosophy at several European universities, including Angelicum, in Rome, and of Geneva, Fribourg, Milan, Oxford, Bonn and Louvain. Dr. Maritain has also lectured at the Institute of Medieval Studies, Toronto, and the University of Chicago.

From 1945 to 1948, Dr. Maritain served as Ambassador of the French Government to the Holy See. In 1948 he accepted the position of Professor of Philosophy at the Institute of Advanced Studies, Princeton University, which position he holds today.

Dr. Maritain has written several books. Some of his published works are "Formal Logic," "The Person and the Common Good", "An Introduction to Philosophy", "Are and Scholasticism", and "Art and Faith." His most recent book, "Existence and the Evistent," was published in 1948 and has been widely received.

Frosh Pick Mooney And Hamas In Council Election

Freshmen went to the polls last Thursday, March 9th., to elect two student council representatives. When the final tallying had been completed, Steve Hamas, of the School of Arts and Sciences, and Jack Mooney, of the Enginering School, were the winners.

The two winners outdistanced the field that included thirteen candidates. Five of that number were in the running until the final ballot had been counted. Mooney, amassing an early lead, was never headed, as he wound up the top man with sixty-two votes. Hamas, on the contrary, wasn't in until the very end. Steve wound up with forty-eight, edging Jim Moser, with forty-six. Paul Sollami and Dan O'Connell also topped the forty mark.

Oddly enough, Jack and Steve were campaign mates. The two winners waged a vigorous campaign, and it paid off when the votes were in.

In all, 188 Freshmen went to the polls, which were open between 11 A. M. and 2:30 P. M., Thursday. For those interested in statistics, the Arts candidates led in the balloting as a group, garnering 154 tallies, the Engineers following with 100.

In addition to the top five men in the totals, other nominees included Eugene Hughes, Frank Rafferty, Eugene Schramm, Bart Starkey, Dick Cashman and George Kaelin.

Campaigning that included everything from pictures of girls in the "Pie Shop" to the handing out of gum about a hundred feet from the ballot box during the voting accompanied the election. One duo of ambitious nominees had all traditional vote-getting devices from an election banner hung on the wall of one of the dormitories, to a stick of gum for each voter during the polling hours.

The "Pie Shop" was deluged with campaign posters from the very beginning of the race. There wasn't a candidate who wasn't represented on at least one of the many, varied and colorful advertisements adorning the walls of the shop. One of the most-looked-at was a simple

The Queen of Junior Week contest enters its second week today. As yet none of the contest officials have been deluged by the flow of pictures coming in, but then it is still early in the game. Most of the fellows are not sure that the thing isn't a hoax on the part of someone who needs pin-ups for a bare wall.

As a token of assurance that the contest is on the up-and-up, the VILLANOVAN is running this week two of the entrants in the contest. THE EVENT

After he has forgotten the courses, the classes and the marks, the college alumnus holds dear the memories of ball games, dances and big weekends, connected with his alma mater. They are an integral part of college life, constituting the completeness of a college education. We might just as well go to night school if lectures and lessons are all that we seek. For college, after all, is not classes five days a week for four years, but an important part of life and probably the best-remembered years of life.

Every college has some "big event" during the year. Dartmouth has a renowned winter carnival, Miami has the Orange Bowl festival, and we on the Main Line call our big event Junior Week. Early in the month of May the Juniors play host for a week of social activities.

The Junior Prom stands as the highlight of that week. A name band visits the Field House to play for this, the only spring formal. One of the nicest traditions we know occurs on Monday of that week when the Juniors invite their mothers to their campus for the celebration of Mother's Day. On Wednesday the Juniors sport their blazers at the informal Blazer Ball. Then as a beautiful end to the week the Juniors and their ladies gather at a downtown Philadelphia hotel for the formal dinner-dance.

It is certainly a memorable week for Villanova men and a tremendous responsibility for those who undertake to make the arrangements. The way each class executes the activities is important. For it is on the results of these efforts that the class as a whole is judged. So the leaders will determine the character of the entire class. It is much more than a feather in their caps if Junior Week is a big success, it is a credit always to the memory of their class.

During the war years, these events were less enthusiastic and some of them had to be dropped because they did not fit the wartime schedule. Even since the war though, Junior Week has not been equal to the sentiment of the traditional celebration of the week. There are many reasons for their not being more successful. Yet we feel that this year there is nothing that should prevent that week being the most memorable in Villanova's history.

Already the plans have been drawn for this year. The committeemen for each event have begun their individual tasks. It is to these men that we would like to offer some words of encouragement. They have undertaken a big job. It remains for them to determine the degree of success or failure of that week. It would be in keeping with this record breaking year which has witnessed highly-rated football and basketball clubs from the Main Line, to have a new high in Junior Week. We are sure that everyone is behind the efforts of the Juniors to make this a success.

Many times this part of the paper is reserved for criticism after the job is done, criticism which is often useless rather than constructive. Let us now offer inspiration to your efforts, with the hope that after Junior Week this year will have nothing to offer but congratulations for a job well done.

So, Juniors, let's see you go out of your way to make this the biggest success in the history of Villanova. We warn you, though, it won't be easy. But then nothing that is worth striving for is easy to achieve.

You are in a cold sweat. Beads of perspiration stand out on your feverish forehead. You try to raise your arm, it is strapped tight to the bed. You scream, but the figures in white do not seem to notice.

Finally, one of them turns toward you, with a small needle in his hand. You scream again, but his eyes are merciless executioner's eyes, the color of cold steel. You struggle with the belts which fasten you, you try to kick, you sob, you pray to God to have mercy on you. The figure grasps your arm . . . you feel a sting, a spinning blackness . . .

This is mercy murder in its ultimate phase, legalized killing grown to adulthood, the full flowering of euthanasia. And today euthanasia is threatening the inalienable right to life. It has organized and persistent support from such groups as the Euthanasia Society of America and from such persons as Dr. Chas. F. Potter, a director in that society. Recently 379 Protestant and Jewish ministers sponsored a petition in favor of mercy killing in New York which stated in part that they "no longer believed that God wills the prolongation of physical torture for the benefit of the soul of the sufferer".

Actual Cases Admitted

And not only is "dignified death" proposed and supported, it is administered. From Dr. Potter himself in the New York Journal-American: "If, for instance a baby is born a hopeless idiot, the doctor may go to the parents and say there is a delicate operation from which the baby has a chance in a thousand of emerging. The father understands what he means, the nurses understand, the doctor understands. There is no chance in a thousand."

Present Sales Method

Obviously, euthanasia, in any form, is contrary to the moral and natural law. At present the euthanasiasts are trying to sell it on a voluntary basis, because they feel that the public will accept "mercy killing" more readily in this form. But that is by no means their ultimate goal. The right to kill is what they think should be secured, not merely the right to assist at suicide.

Up to us

And apparently the burden of organized defense is falling entirely on t[illegible] Catholic Church. The others s[illegible]n to support "the easier way", [illegible]regarding the law of the God whom they claim to worship. Let us then, as Catholics, rise to the challenge. Learn something about dreaded euthanasia, talk about it to your friends; make the issues clear and there can be only one judgment.

Oscar Twomp And The NCZZ

By Bill Breninghouse

Oscar Twomp was quite an athlete. Last year he scored 400 points for the football team and 1690 points for the basketball team. He ran the mile in 3:27 and, in baseball, batted a lusty .990 while driving in 600 runs, mostly with his 120 home runs, 20 with bases loaded. He was very happy in his suburban Philadelphia school, about twelve miles from the city, on the famous Main Line. Happy, that is, until the day the monkey wrench was thrown by the NCZZ.

No one seems to know what this NCZZ stands for. From their tactics they look like a subdivision of the NKVD. It seems that Oscar had been going to a school steeped in crime. Not only were they paying his way through school, but they were also feeding him. Yes, feeding him! They were feeding him three complete meals a day or a reasonable facsimile thereof; even when he wasn't engaged in sports. When the NCZZ cracked down, Oscar confessed that he had been eating regular. When asked if he ever got anything else from his athletic talents, he admitted that he once jumped over the fence with a pair of socks hoisted from the gear locker. That was probably the killing blow. That school was purged and Oscar left for more honest territory.

Today Oscar is content. He is at a large Midwestern school which religiously complies with every rule the tried and true NCZZ makes. He only receives one meal a day. That meal consists of three steaks, one chicken, four pounds of roast beef, several pork chops, a bushel of potatoes, a bushel of mixed vegetables, a gallon of milk, two gallons of ice cream and other goodies. It seems that it's always some season or other. When it's not football it's tiddlywinks, when it's not baseball it's Mah Jong. He receives travel expenses to games, items like taxi fare to San Francisco and back. He's so good that once a week a little leprechaun climbs into his room and leaves a crisp new fifty-dollar bill under his pillow.

Oscar also has a little job with which he scrapes together spending money. He tests the horn on the coach's car every other Thursday morning for $400 dollars a month. He could have had a nice little job reporting all strange tropical birds in the gym on Tuesday nights between the hours of nine and nine-fifteen but he didn't feel that the work was commeasurate to the reimbursement received.

Despite the fact that he now has to work and only gets one meal a day, Oscar is glad he is not a student at one of those sinful schools who do so much to ruin the athletes of our nation. To him nothing is more valuable than a pure heart and honest mind. He has only contempt for the school that wanted to use him for its own selfish gains and then cast him aside. Now he is at a place where virtue is paramount in the hearts of all.

The ABC letter of the week is from a woman, but the carton of Chesterfield cigarettes is hers if she will contact Mike Marshall, Chesterfield representative, at O'Dwyer Hall or call Bryn Mawr 9086.

Dear Sir:

I would like to register my vote in favor of the new type used in the Villanovan. The improvement in the paper as a result of this change appears to be twofold: the general appearance of the paper is improved, and the individual articles are easier to read. Therefore, it appears to me that the change in type represents an improvement and should be retained permanently.

Yours truly,
A reader

Dear Editor:

It is the custom of many schools to have graduating classes make an evaluation of the courses they have taken. This, I believe, is done so that the teachers of the courses can gain an overall picture of the opinion of the students who have seen how various classes are interrelated. In this way they can more readily understand the desires and anxieties of their students and so modify their classes in accordance with the conclusions they reach.

Because of the above-mentioned factors, many of us here at Villanova would favor such a plan.

Sincerely,
Interested

SYNCOPATER

By Bruce Taten and Roland Mayer

Once again several new records of note have come out in a group. This lumping of good releases on certain days, whilst the public waits in vain for something worthwhile until the next such occasion, is one of the seemingly unfathomable mysteries of the music business.

Some Bop

Henry Belafonte, who has sometimes been referred to as a smoother edition of Billy Eckstine, gives excellent feeling and tone to a ballad called, "Lean On Me." A bit out of the usual, it combines sultry feeling with a soft beat to provide good music for the public. Johnny Bothwell, of Duke Ellington fame, has released a platter in the modern trend that shows how pleasing the results can be when talent and bop get together. "Bolero Balinese", by name, it is what might be termed the Afro-Cuban style, but posesses far more estimable ideas than are usually connected with that style.

Some Sweet

Naturally a few sweet numbers are needed to round out the picture and thus we have "Free", by Billy Eckstine and "When You Speak With Your Eyes", by Peggy Lee. The former is in the true Eckstine method, catchy and slow with an infectuous beat, and while the latter is not too far above the ordinary of itself, the efforts of Peggy Lee always seem to make all her records just a bit better than they really are. It's another instance of how talent can do things that all the publicity can't, it can make it worthwhile listening to. Now to Ro . . .

Some Kenton

It would seem that Stan the Man is finally getting the Kenton crew into gear, as the local disc dispensaries are now taking advance orders for his forth coming album of "Innovations". With forty Joes on the payroll he should be able to innovate like crazy but how the resulting confusion will sound remains to be seen. With that kind of a mob scene he could rewax "Peanut Vendor" and have six men and the Christie gal left over just to crack peanuts for effect. Seriously, we expect great things from the tall one, and he's never disappointed us yet.

Ridges and Grooves — Not exactly brand new, but well worth a mention, "Son of God's Country" by Frank Sinatra, is the nicest thing the "Hoboken kid" has produced in quite a stretch.

Some Jazz

In the jazz vein, just about two weeks old and starting to be played around, we have "If I knew You Were Coming" featuring Georgia Gibbs on a solid vocal with Max Kaminski's combo producing the din in the background. Maxie has long been considered one of the great dixieland trumpet men around, and is currently holding forth in various spots around New York, Eddie Condon's village bistro, Jimmy Ryan's on 52nd Street or any free for all jam session that might come along. Now with his finger on a potential hot record he'll probably get some much deserved recognition from the public not to mention some of that much sought after long green. It couldn't happen to a better man.

Sense and Nonsense

— Tom Pasha

Gentlemen, there are parasites lurking about the campus in constant search of a host. The individuals to whom I refer are those fagless nicotine nincompoops that are prevalent, not only on this campus, but on all the collegiate greens in the country. In fact, the instigator of this group has acquired so many followers in the past few years that the SSS (Smoke Seekers Society) has a representative body in every educational institution in the world, including the prep, grade, and barber schools.

The Types

These smokeless-wonders are specialists in their own fields and, therefore, must be given individual consideration, depending upon the line of grubbing to which they devote their endeavors. The more general groups are the aristocratic dramatic, economic, ignoramic, and futuristic; these differ primarily in their approaches rather than in their purpose.

You Owe it to Him

The aristocratic type of weedwanter is the forlorn-looking fellow who approaches you lamenting his financial difficulties, and toying with your sympathy in such a way that you feel duty-bound to give him a tube of the stuff. After obtaining the much sought cig, Ambrose hauls out his hundred-dollar silver-plated Spiffo lighter and without a word of thanks, turns on his worn heels and walks away.

What Can You Say

The dramatic Raleigh-relisher depends entirely upon his theatrical experience in obtaining a fag. This individual stands in front of you while he unconsciously goes through his pockets and saddle-bag debris looking for the "goods" and finally, after carefully studying your growing interest, ceases in his search and catches you off guard with a coy "Say, have you a smoke, pally?"

The Business Men

The economic and ignoramic types of ciggy-catchers are the most prevalent in the C and F schools of Economics and Merchandising and have approaches apropos of their respective schools. The economist thinks that he is saving you time, money, and trouble by taking three to four cigarettes at a time. Of course, there is some truth in this line of thought because you don't have to worry about him until the next day. The ignoramic or salesman-type steals up behind you, slaps you on the back, calls you a fictitious name, and before you have a

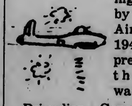
Around The Town

By F. A. VARALLO

Wind and waves, a creaky old tramp steamer, and a two-fisted ex-captain seeking revenge on the vessel's commander — these are the principal ingredients of "Captain China", a lusty sea story now on the Stanley screen. As the latest Pine-Thomas production, "Captain China" is, in several respects, better-than average drama. The series of incidents which make up the plot have been skillfully woven together to keep the action moving along at a brisk pace. Much attention too, has been given to character study and this lends depth and realism to the story. Moreover, "Captain China" affords John Payne an opportunity to play a red-blooded role and he certainly turns in a creditable performance.

Suspense Unlimited



The action takes place aboard the "Tradewind," a battered old tub carrying a cargo of scrap metal. Payne, or rather China, as he is called, is a passenger aboard the ship. His one objective is to clear himself of the charge of drinking on duty, wrecking his ship, and nearly losing his own life. However, it's his word against that of Jeffrey Lynn, China's former first mate and now captain of the Tradewind. China also has bitter enemies among the members of the crew. One of these, Lon Chaney, promptly tangles with him in one of the most savage screen fights of the year.

In addition, the Tradewind runs into a howling typhoon and with ten tons of metal loose in her hold, it's anyone's guess as to what the outcome will be.

Seafarers

Others in the cast on board the steamer include Gail Russel as the restless, adventure-seeking girl from Council Bluffs, Iowa, who wins the hearts of both Payne and Lynn; Michael O'Shea, the third mate who drowns his troubles in drink; Edgar Bergen and Ilka Gruning, as a fussy couple on their way to Manila from Java; and Ellen Corby as an eccentric writer of mystery yarns.

"12 O'clock High"

The daylight precision bombing of Germany by the Eight Air Force in 1942, is the impressive story of this first-rate war film.

Brigadier General Gregory Peck replaces the easy-going commander of the 918th Bomb Group. In his relentless effort to whip the men into good fighting shape, he becomes very unpopular. The men hate his iron discipline. Things get so bad that the whole outfit applies for a transfer out of Peck's command. Before the transfers arrive, however, the men begin to realize what Greg is trying to do. They begin to be proud of their record as their losses diminish remarkably.

By KUHN and KEATS

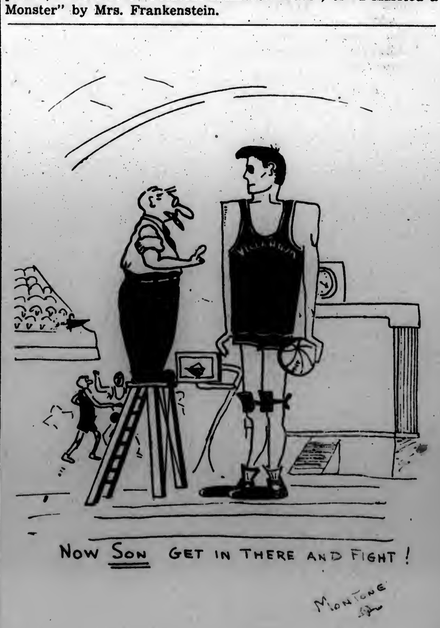
Before we say another word we are going to get in the swing of "Paul Arizin Week" by voting orchids, roses, and a whole botanical catalog to the person or persons responsible for retiring the Tall One's famous Number "11" for all posterity to see, admire, and marvel at. Modestly we note that "you heard it here first," but we were just putting into print the sentiments that the whole school felt.

While we're patting ourselves on the back for our most recent success we thought it would go one step further. Why not give the nine seniors something in the way of a gift? Our suggestion is a traveling bag, a most useful object.

A tip of the Keats and Kuhn caps to the Philly writers for selecting Tall Paul as the nation's top player, also for the selection of Paul Arizin and Brooks Ricca, on the All-District team. Latest word has it that Mr. Schaefer has retired the Tall One's Accounting Book.

Keats Unmasked

Now to less important things. For the benefit of the character who wrote to the Editor demanding that Ours Truly come across with our "for real" names so that he would have the correct dope (or dopes) on the bomb he is planning to send us, we have decided to print a hangnail sketch of ourselves. So for the edification of all pale pink-blooded American boys we present first, The Life of Ray Keats.



Raymond Obnoxious Keats was born. That much we're sure of. Early in life he showed a great talent for writing. At the age of five he wrote excuses at two cents a word for his little classmates in kindergarten. His writing career progressed until at the age of ten, and still in kindergarten, he was writing numbers. For this little caper the state graciously offered him a free prep school education at dear old Malcontent Country Day, where he spent four happy years, with two off for good behavior.

A Real Pro

Feeling that this background fitted him admirably well for Villanova, he entered these hallowed halls of hilarity in September, 1944, in the school of Pre-Medism. This was followed by stints in the Schools of Engineering, Liberal Arts and Commerce and Finance. His last love was the strongest, however, for after 15 semesters, again with two off for good behavior, he is now attending C&F classes, part-time, and working in the Pie Shoppe for practical experience.

With all this talent Keats felt the need of artistic expression. Where else could a person of this caliber pour out his soul? The Plumbers Journal? Wrong. The Fifth Column?? Wrong again, but nobody else would take the darn thing, so here he is, your enemy and mine, Ray Keats.

Next week, then, kiddies, another story of a poor boy getting poorer, "The Life of Octavius Hamhock Kuhn", or "I Married a Monster" by Mrs. Frankenstein.

Band, Glee Club Play At Parish

Villanova's Band and Glee Club entertained the parishioners of Holy Child parish in Philadelphia, last Monday evening, with another brilliant musical presentation. In this, their first Philadelphia appearance, and fourth road performance of the current concert season, the traveling troubadors of Villanova thrilled the capacity crowd with their renditions of both classical and popular selections.

The band played the familiar Morning, Noon, and Night Overture, Funiculi Funicula, a medley of Irish Aires, Cole Porter's ever popular Begin the Beguine. They then combined with the Glee Club in a very pleasing arrangement of The Red Mill Overture which featured Miss Joan Barrett, of Immaculata College, and John Greene, of Villanova, as soloists.

Tom Pasha acted as master of ceremonies during the second half of the concert and the band was under the baton of George Beitzer. This portion of the program featured Dick Reinhart singing the number he made famous in "Cleo Was A Lady", I've Got the Blues for Memphis.

Synod Judge to Address Couples in Auditorium, Sunday

Rev. Joseph A. Quigley, J. C. D., Pro-Synodal Judge of the Archdiocese of Philadelphia, will speak next Sunday afternoon at 3:00 P. M. in the Commerce and Finance Auditorium as the fourth speaker in the Pre-Cana Conference series. As a judge in the marriage court of the Philadelphia Archdiocese, Father is an outstanding authority on the next topic of "The Law: Canon, Liturgical and Civil in Marriage."

Fr. Quigley teaches Canon Law at nearby St. Charles' Borromeo Seminary, in Overbrook, Pa., where he maintains his residence. He has a Doctor's degree in Canon Law, which was preceded with an M. A. degree in education received from Villanova College in 1939.

The above-mentioned points are sufficient to point out the speaker's authoritative position with relation to his topic. Being a jovial and congenial person helps him to be the fourth "friendly talker" in this first Pre-Cana Conference series ever held at Villanova College.

Last Sunday afternoon's talk was given by Rev. Francis Diehl, O.S.A., Professor of psychology, at the College. He opened his talk by calling attention to "the over stress in modern times to the physiological in sex."

Fr. Diehl pointed out very strongly that no one condition or state is solely responsible for this human power. "There is a mental side to this most meaningful human side," Father said.

Stating that we must understand that the true meaning of love includes the expression of "Man in his capacity as a rational being." He further drove home his key-note point by saying that "For a complete understanding of sex and all it implies we must heed the admonitions of morality and religion" among other things.

Next Sunday afternoon's conference will be the fourth in a series of six such Pre-Cana Conferences being held for the benefit of engaged students of Villanova College and their fiancees and students who expect soon to become engaged.

ELECTRIC COMPANY EXECUTIVE SPEAKS TO MECH. ENGINEERS

On Tuesday evening, March 7th., the American Society of Mechanical Engineers held their regular meeting in 215 Mendel Hall. As a guest speaker the Society had Mr. Klupper of the Philadelphia Electric Company, who lectured on Reverse Refrigeration.

Joe Sullivan, prexy of the club, introduced Mr. Klupper, who described the modern method of heating through the use of the Heat Pump. While using slides for illustration, he gave details about the efficiency, practicability and installation of this device. He explained that the Heat Pump absorbs heat from the earth through underground tubes filled with a refrigerating agent.

Mr. Klupper went on to describe the bright future that is predicted for this new apparatus. Its process can be reversed in the summer to cool buildings. The device can be used either industrially or in the home.

Following the lecture questions were asked from the floor and many fine points were discussed by the group.

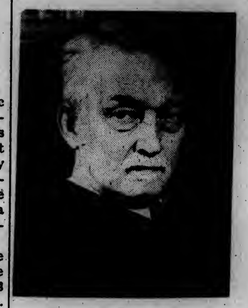
Students Help In Parish Census

Last Saturday, over a dozen Villanova students teamed up each with a Chestnut Hill College girl to help in a monumental undertaking in making a census in the Negro neighborhood centered about St. Elizabeth's parish. These teams along with those of other Catholic colleges in the area canvassed 60,000 colored people around 23rd. & Berks Sts., Philadelphia, under the direction of Father Vermeiren, pastor of the parish. Working several hours, they gathered interesting religious data, and benefited from their personal experience with sociological problems, since most of the volunteers were Sociology students.

Belle Masque To Aid In Chestnut Hill Production

The Belle Masque Dramatic Society has accepted an invitation to participate in a series of one act plays to be held at Chestnut Hill College, Friday evening, March 17th. The Villanova group is one of the three men's colleges in the local area to be invited, the others including St. Joseph's and La Salle.

As its contribution, Belle Masque is slated to perform the 5th. act from their last Spring's triumph, Cyrano De Bergerac. Taking part from Chestnut Hill are Ann Marr and Geraldine Glackin, while representing Belle Masque are Ted Doyle, Robert Resnick, and Richard Zande.



A social is scheduled to follow the dramatizations and all students from Villanova are cordially invited to attend.

Fr. Vrana Guest Delta Pi Meeting

Delta Pi Mu, the Arts Frat, held its monthly smoker in the Field House Blue Room last Thursday evening. A short business meeting preceeded the social. Rev. John J. Vrana, O.S.A., Professor of Engineering Drawing, was the guest speaker of the evening.

In the absence of George Keenley, President of the organization, Ray Mac Williams, Vice-President, conducted the meeting. He made a report on the recent showing of the motion picture, Henry V, and thanked the members of the fraternity who had helped to make the show a success by selling and collecting tickets.

Father Vrana spoke on the appreciation of art in commonplace things. Using buildings on the campus as examples, the speaker showed that architecture involves the artistic as well as the practical.

Forum Lecturer

As an added feature, all members attending the meeting participated in a drawing for tickets to The Wisteria Tree.

FORUM —

The final lecture in the Villanova Forum will prove a fitting climax to what has been an excellent series of interesting and timely discourses, sponsored by the Villanova Forum. Dr. C. P. Bruderle, Forum Chairman, looks forward to a record turnout for the very special lecture, in the Commerce and Finance Auditorium, and will begin promptly at 8:30 P. M.

Admission to student is free upon presentation of matriculation cards, as has been the policy. Regular admission tickets and student tickets will be on sale at the door.

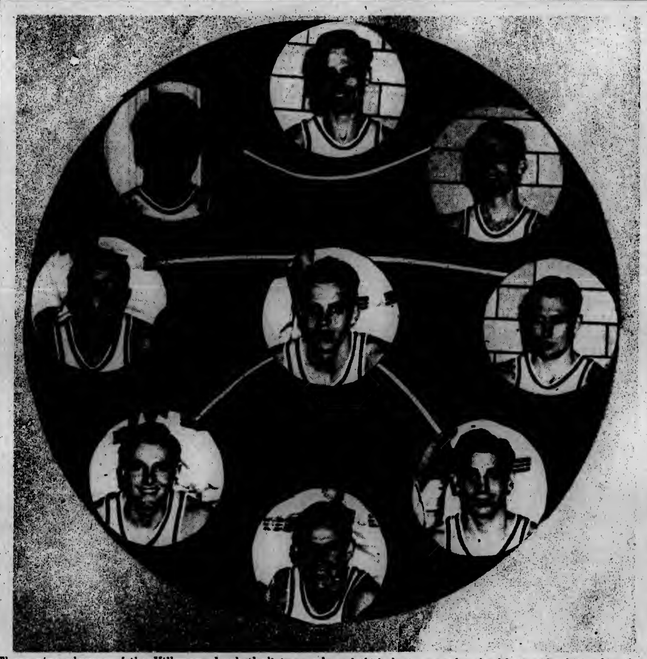
ARIZIN NETS 30 IN LAST APPEARANCE BEFORE 8735 FANS

Villanova's Wildcats, paced by All-American Paul Arizin, toppled Duquesne's tournament-bound basketballers, 68-52, before the largest Palestra crowd in a decade.



Some 8,735 fans arose and rendered Villanova's greatest an ovation that he will never forget. But neither will the paid customers forget the exhibition with which Arizin awarded them. He scored 30 points against Charlie Cooper, another All-American candidate, and repeatedly stole rebounds from his taller opponents. Tall Paul hit on 12 of 24 shots and 6 of 7 free throws to wind up his three year career total at 1,596 and his season output at 735, which is just five short of the all-time high for major college players.

At the contest's outset it looked as if the Iron Dukes might live up to their national rating. But after 15 minutes, the Wildcats began to show the "experts" the folly of their figures. It was at this point that Brooks Ricca gave the Main liners a 22-21 advantage and a lead which they never relinquished. Arizin had scored only three points in the first ten minutes, but Perry DelPurgatorio took advantage of the solitude he enjoyed while three men watched Paul and sent three set shots through the hoop. Thereafter the amed jump-shot was zeroed in and at half-time, Villanova led, 27-24.

2 or 3 Fouls?

The second half was only one minute old when a difference in opinion between the official scorers precipitated a lengthy confab. The jack-pot question concerned the number of fouls Duquesne's Cooper had cmmitted. The nearest available Hagistrate was Coach Severance, who deliberated the case and submitted it to a jury of sportswriters. A close verdict found Cooper guilty in two instances, and the game was resumed.

These nine players of the Villanova basketball team played their last game for the blue and white after three years of varsity ball together. In the center, Captain Leo Wolf, at twelve o'clock high is Brooks Ricca and then clockwise Tom Sabol, Paul Arizin, Perry DelPurgatorio, Joe Hannan, Shy Raiken, Jack Crossin and John Weglicki.

McKenna Wins 600 With 1:12.5; Barry Second To Wilt

Jimmy McKenna gave New York track fans quite a shock last Friday night by defeating favorite Hugo Maiocco at his own distance, the 600, at the New York Pioneer Club games. McKenna's time of 1:12.5 was, to say the least, remarkable considering the meet was held on the flat floor of the 369th Armory.

DEL PURGATORIO TOP SCORER WITH 28 POINTS; ARIZIN 27

Not at all impressed by pregame ceremonies honoring Paul Arizin and eight other seniors on the greatest Wildcat team in Villanova's history, the Hoyas of Georgetown gave 4000 Field House fans a scare before bowing, 82-72, last Monday.

The Hoyas came up with a unique defense in their attempt to shackle the scoring of Arizin, who had scored 33 points against them earlier in the season. Three men surrounded the tall center constantly and at times were joined by their two teammates when Paul managed to get a pass from his teammates. The flaw in this strategy was that it left the outside men free to attempt setshots.

DelPurgatorio Unstopable

Unable to work the ball into the pivot consistently, the 'Cats started popping from the outside early in the game. The crowd gasped in amazement and roared their approval as Perry Del Purgatorio, connected with seven screamer shots in the first half, the first four coming on consecutive shots. Georgetown, undismayed by the accuracy of the 5' 11" guard, put on a blistering offense of their own and trailed by only five points at halftime.

Perry continued his terrific pace iin the second half, throwing in four more set shots. To cap the most brilliant night of his four year varsity career, Del scored two baskets on drive-in shots and two-for-two from the foul line. His 13 baskets and two charity shots gave him scoring honors with 28 points. Tall Paul caged 27 markers, despite the tight defense, scoring nine in the last three minutes, after the Hoyas had pulled to within two points of the Wildcats.

Frosh End Undefeated Season; Beat Penn J. V.

By George Scanlon

The first undefeated freshmen basketball team in Wildcat history, that is the achievement of the 1950 edition of the junior Blue and White. Monday night, the frosh defeated Penn J. V.'s 66-60. The game was close and hard fought before the yearlings racked up their sixteenth consecutive win.

Gallagher Controls Boards

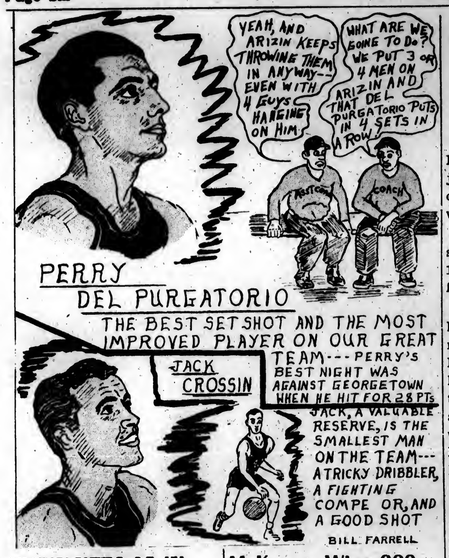
From the opening tap off the game was a tight battle between two fast and classy clubs. Larry Hennessy's set shots and Nick Maguire's "wiggling" drive ins kept the little Wildcats a few points ahead of the hard playing Red and Blue.

Big Dan Gallagher did yeoman work under the glass as he came off with the majority of the rebounds and played a brilliant defensive game. The Wildcats spurted to a six point halftime advantage as Reds Mooney and Sam Glassmere hit for two quick goals to make the intermission count stand at 35-29.

Penn Rallies

The second half saw the frosh quickly increase their lead to twelve points but the Quakers started a rally. Led by Don Scanlon, a member of Penn's varsity, the red and blue whittled the lead to one point. At this point dazzling Glassmire started his specialty, stealing the ball, which he did three times and resulted in three double deckers, two of them being made by the mercurial Sam.

The Frosh's control of the boards and defensive play held Penn at bay for the remainder of the 66-60 win.



The dynamic duo of Maguire and Hennessey led the victors with 19 and 14 points respectively. Don Scanlon dunked 14 counters to lead the Red and Blue. Once again Joe Hannan coached the club in the absence of Major McDonnell.

A Fine Team

The climax of the 1949-50 season saw the undefeated freshmen quintet at their best. Their fine ball handling, potent scoring punch and teamwork will be looked for next season when these fellows will carry the colors of Villanova to the court wars.

Paul Arizin sinks two of his thirty points against Duquesne. Duke's Cooper (15), Goldberg (10) and Skendarovich (4) watch.

The decision had little bearing on the game however, because Arizin continued to pour in points, Ricca added a few, and Tom Sabol supplemented Arizin on the rebound job. The Wildcats refused to be humbled by any candidate for the "Tournament of Champions". They completed the season with a fine record of 25 wins and 4 losses.

Arizin left the game with a full minute of play remaining and received an audible tribute. But there were eight other seniors on the team that put Villanova in basketball's big league. They received a more quiet tribute from more than one Villanovan who was overheard expressing the feeling—"I'm sorry it's all over. I could watch those guys play basketball forever!"

Villanova Star On All District Team; INS All-American

Over the weekend Paul Arizin was named on two more "All" teams, the International News service All-American and the Philadelphia Basketball Writers Association All-Philadelphia District team.

Arizin was a unanimous choice on the Philadelphia mythical team along with Paul Senesky of St. Joseph's and Jim Reilly of Swarthmore. In the INS poll Bob Cousy, Dick Schnittker, Bill Sharman, and Paul Unruh made up the rest of the team.

Of a possible 25 votes of the Philly writers, Brooks Ricca polled 14, enough to place him on the second team. Wildcats Leo Wolf and Tom Sabol both received honorable mention.

route, Hugo's favorite tactic. McKenna's speed was too much for the N. Y. U. star, however, and he lost by a yard.

Maiocco was favored by virtue of his season's record. He won the American indoor 600 title and was runner up at this distance in the IC-4A Championships. McKenna was fourth in the IC-4A meet. Because of this brilliant triumph he was selected as the outstanding performer of the night. This is not bad considering the race was his second 600 of the season.

Wilt Shades Barry

Fred Wilt defeated John Joe Barry in the slowest mile of the season, a 4:25 affair. The time was held down mostly by the flat track and the reluctance of Wilt and Barry to commit themselves. Barry led most of the way, but the G-man flasked home with a 56 second quarter to out kick Barry.

Track moves west next week with the running of the K. of C. games in Cleveland, Ohio on Saturday night. The following Saturday the last major indoor meet, the Chicago Daily News Meet, will be held and the curtain will ring down on another great season.

"Where's Arizin" Banner Hung At Balcony In Garden

Villanova might have been absent from the National Invitation Tournament but certainly the sentiment of the fans was with the Mainliners.

At the La Salle-Arizona game in the garden last Saturday nite a thirty yard banner which read, "Where's Arizin and Villanova?" was hung from the balcony to the cheers of the entire crowd.

Responsible for the banner were two men of the VILLANOVAN, Ralph Skoron and Al Delago who had painted it of thirty yard square cards. Dallago and Skoron had enlisted the aid of a number of LaSalle men in carrying the cards to the Garden and hanging them from the balcony.

Fitzpatrick and Niccolo set the pace for the winners with 12 points apiece. Mandarano was hich man for the Kryuhs with 12 points.

Bks. 2 & 3 Wins

Last Tuesday night saw Barracks 2&3 surprise a highly regarded Austin quintet and walk off with a very deserved 67-61 triumph, and Alumni keep it's slate clean for the season with a 60-45 conquest over the much improved Mendeleers.

The first game produced probably the best played game of the second half thus far, as the two squads fought on an even par throughout most of the game. But the ability of the Barracks to hit from the field consistently, and also control the backboards, proved too much for Austin to cope with. High scoring Bob Ruggerio, besides cashing in on 24 points, played a great backboard game. His hook shots from the Pivot were deadly. Phil Brennan of the Barracks and Tom Brennan of Austin put on a good exhibition of fine basketball know-how. Phil netted 15 counters and Tom garnered 18. Bill Lemmer of Austin was kept down to 18 points and his inability to hit consistently from the field proved the downfall for Austin. Also hitting for double figures were Scanlon of Austin with 13 and Wills of Barracks with 12.

Alumni notched its fourth win in the second half as they topped Mendel 60-45. Two new scorers blossomed out on the Alumni squad in Decker who made 15 points to tie veteran Hal Diot foh game scoring honors, and O'Donnell who basketed 13 markers. For Mendel, Boehling with 10 points and Jim Gallo, former Allentown high ace, with 9 points were high.

Fedigan Upset

A stunning upset featured the tail end of the weeks I. M. activities as Brks. 1&4 edged Alumni's chief contender the Fedigan five in a 52-51 thriller. Setting a fast scoring pace, the victors took a commanding lead and held a 33-21 halftime advantage. In the second half, mainly through the efforts of Joe Crossin and Joe Galyo, the losers managed to close the gap to two points. A bitter struggle ensued with teams matching point for point and wit honly six seconds remaining, Lou Maiero calmly converted a foul try to give his team their great triumph. Once again the "Tom" trio led the scoring parade for the winners with Flynn, Madonnia and Falkowski netting 15, 11 and 9 points respectively.

In the opener of Thurs. nite's tilt, the Doms after a hard struggle finally subdued the improved Good Counsel quintet 56-47. At intermission, the losers trailed by a 31-27 count.

Golfers Meet

Over fifty men turned out for the first meeting of the golf team held last Thursday in 215 Mendel. The number of men attending as well as the known calibre of some of the players gives indications that this should probably be the most successful post-war golf season yet enjoyed at Villanova.

Heading an excellent group of performers remaining from last year's squad is Don Weiland. Last summer, Don won the 36 hole qualifying prize for the Philadelphia Amateur Championship. The soft-spoken Senior has led the linksmen for the last three years in addition to winning the Phoenixville Club championship twice.

The golf team should have plenty of depth this year with many men left over from last season's squad including John Trayer, A. J. Murray, Jack Crossin and Joe Moran who can all shoot consistantly under 80.

At the meeting last Thursday two movies, obtained through the courtesy of Wilson Sporting Goods Company, were shown. They were "How to Play Golf" and "Golf Doctor with Cary Middlecoff".

Any men who did not attend the meeting but are interested in signing up should contact John Trayer in room 110 Austin.

Stage Model

Above is a scale model of the Globe Theatre's interior designed and built by Mr. Jacob Krupa. The model shows the three levels of the Elizabethan stage which is being reproduced for the Belle Masque spring play, The Knight of "The Burning Pestle." The first level is the inner stage, the second level is used for interior scenes, and the third is the musician's balcony. The board in front of the inner stage represents the apron.

Men at Work

The stage crew is shown constructing the set in accordance with specifications from the scale model. The set is twenty-one feet high, and a member from Belle Masque's stage crew is shown at work on each level. On the first level is Jerry Battle, second level Jerry Micallef, and on the third level, Jack Schneider. An eighteen-foot apron has already been completed and is to border the Field House stage.

FROSH ELECTIONS

picture of a girl, with a candidates name written across it. Winners and losers alike waged vigorous and colorful campaigns, with even a bit of "button-holing" going on in the cafeteria during Thursday's lunch hour.

An efficient committee compiled the final tallying within twenty minutes after the polls had closed, and immediately posted the results in various spots on the campus, where anxious Frosh were eagerly awaiting them.

Mooney, the top man, assumed his lead almost with the first ballot counted, and kept on rolling. The next four men began slowly, but kept pace with one another throughout the counting. Starkey, Hughes, Rafferty, Welch, Kaelin, Flaherty, Cashman and Schramm dropped out soon after the counting began. With Mooney a "shco-in" all the way, each vote had an important bearing on the four-cornered race for the other available position. Hamas, the eventual winner, Moser, O'Connell and Sollami kept right together down to the last vote. In the end, Steve edged Jim by the slim margin of two votes.

An interesting sidelight to the election was gained by the writer shortly after the results were in. He learned that the "professional politicians" of the Engineering school were reported to have run a school "primary" prior to the general election, thus throwing their full force behind one candidate, Mooney, the eventual winner. Thus, although the Arts School garnered more votes for its candidates than any other group, a "politically-wise" engineering school maneuvered its candidates in.

The final tally was: Jack Mooney (Engr.) 62, Steve Hamas (Arts) 48, Jim Moser (Ed.) 46, Paul Sollami (Arts) 42, Dan O'Connell (Arts) 41, Gene Schramm (C&F) 31, Dick Cashman (Arts) 23, Dick Flaherty (C&F) 21, George Kaelin (Engr.) 18, Jack Welch (Engr.) 17, Gene Hughes (C&F) 13, Frank Rafferty (C&F) 13, Bart Starkey (Engr.) 3.

Four Bussolari Members Attend Meeting At Penn

Four delegates to the Trusteeship Council Conferences to be held at the University of Pennsylvania were chosen last Tuesday night at a meeting of the Bussolari Society in 215 Mendel. The delegation is to be headed by Joseph Tyszkiewicz, and the advisory delegates to be Charles Butler, Frank Duffy, and Roger Hanafin.

The topic for this discussion will be Jerusalem. To be decided by the delegates will be whether or not Jerusalem should be under the the United Nations Trusteeship Council. The conferences, at which twenty-five colleges are to be represented, are sponsored by the Foreign Affairs Council of Philadelphia.

Recently the Bussolari Society was represented by one of its members on a radio program transcribed for broadcast to Europe, it was announced at the meeting. The purpose of the program was to induce correspondence between European colleges and those of this country.

The Library Corner . . .

A fine collection of books is the greatest asset of any library, but it would not be an institution to merit the name if that were all it contained. A library is in itself a center of culture, and as such, must provide not only literature, but the other culture forms, music and art, as well.

By this criterion, it may be noted that our College Library is truly one of the best. It now boasts an extensive collection of books numbering eighty-seven thousand, and Music Room facilities which are available to student groups for music appreciation. And to complete its inclusive avenues to culture, this institution also has a collection of art works, including original portraits and copies of several masterpieces.

Pictures to be Reviewed

These paintings, though are often overlooked in the emphasis that is given to the other facilities of the building. So that these might receive the recognition and appreciation that they merit, the next few of these weekly articles will be devoted to calling attention to the various pictures that hang on the Library walls.

The first of these is perhaps the most interesting to the students of this college, a portrait of one of Villanova's presidents in the late 19th. century, painted by Thomas Eakins, the famous American portrait artist of the same era. This full-length painting of Rev. J. J. Fedigan, O.S.A., was painted in 1902, and now is on display at the stair landing on the south side of the Library building.

Father Fedigan, after whom one of our residence halls is named, was president of Villanova from 1878 to 1880, the time during which the present Monastery building was built. In his portrait the priest is depicted resting his left arm on a picture of the old Monastery which was replaced by the building he constructed.

One of Eakin's Best

Eakins, a Philadelphia artist noted for his executions of almost photographic likenesses, did one of his best paintings in this detailed reproduction of Fr. Fedigan in his black Augustinian habit. Particularly realistic in the portrait are the hands, so important a feature of a priest, which Eakins pictured with typical exactness. The artist's signature and the date can be seen in the lower right hand corner, on the frame of the easel holding the picture of the Monastery.

In the Villanova Room of the Library there is another painting done by a predecessor of Eakins in the Realist school. This is also a portrait, a Lamar Julian copy of "Innocent X", one of the masterpieces done by the famous Spanish painter, Velazquez.

This picture, too, is remarkable in its detail and character. Beruete, in his criticism of this work says of it, "The scrutinizing gaze, which has an irresistible fascination, the face, one of the most living which Velazquez ever modeled, on which the perspiration is visible, the robust and ample body, the rich harmony of the reds and whites; the magic of the whole, in short, impress the spectator who is mute with admiration."

The original portrait, which now hangs in the Doria-Pamphila Palace in Rome, was painted by Velazquez at the request of Pope Innocent during the early part of the 17th. century. The exactness of the reproduction is remarkable when it is considered that the portrait was done in only three sittings. Since Velazquez was in the service of the Spanish King at the time, he refused payment for this, the largest portrait he had produced.

The copy in possession of the Library is a small reproduction, about twenty inches square, but bears all the detail and brilliant actuality of the original Velazquez which earned for him the title, "Painter of the Truth".

But just in case there might have been some poor unfortunate Junior (something which doesn't sound impossible) who missed the scoop last week, it will be repeated:

As a publicity stunt and an added bit of decorum for the Junior Prom, May 6th, the bandleader will crown some lucky maid, who must be the date of a Junior, Queen of all of Junior Week. She will receive a prize and in addition will earn for her date a ticket to the Junior Dinner-Dance the next evening.

A modeling agency will be the sole judge of the contest, and will pick the Queen from pictures which must be submitted to the committee. How else could they tell what your "Queen" looks like? The pictures, of a size at least two inches by two inches, must be of the head and shoulders, (no cheese-cake accepted). They should be given to either Harry Range, Chairman of Publicity for the Junior Prom, 130 Austin, or Frank Gobes, Managing Editor of the VILLANOVAN, 305 Fedigan.

Five finalists will be chosen by the time the paper publishes the Junior Week edition and they will all be presented at the bandstand on the night of the Prom.

Nine Seniors End Careers After Three Successful Seasons As 'Cat Cagers

Arizin and Mates Put Villanova on Basketball Map

By JIM GALLO

When the final buzzer sounded, announcing the end of the Villanova-Duquesne game last Wednesday night, it also concluded the collegiate basketball careers of nine Wildcat athletes. Paul Arizin, Leo Wolf, Brooks Ricca, Tom Sabol, Joe Hannan, Perry DelPurgatorio, Jack Crossin, Shy Raiken, and John Weglicki will no longer carry the Blue and White to the basketball wars. During the past four years, these nine men have helped write basketball history, not only at Villanova but on the national scene as well.

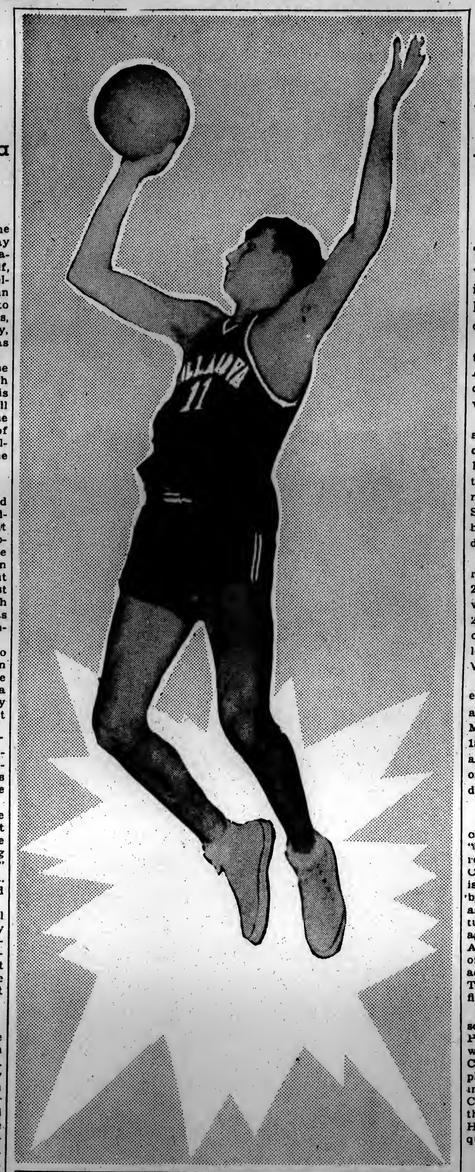
Basketball fans everywhere are familiar with the story of Paul Arizin — his failure to make the high school squad, his courage and perseverance, and his rapid climb to the top of the All-American list. Tall Paul's deadly jump shot put many a grey hair in the heads of opposing coaches. By the admissions of more than a few court mentors, the Phenomenal Philadelphian ranks with Luisetti and Mikan as the greatest basketball players of all time.

Captain 3 Years

For the past three years the Wildcats have served under the court generalship of Leo Wolf. The Villanova captain has had one particular assignment in almost every game — that of guarding the opponent's number one scorer. He has turned in some great defensive jobs on men like Frank Saul of Seton Hall and Dick Dickey of North Carolina State. But his best known accomplishment came during last year's N.C.A.A. tournament when he held Ralph Beard of Kentucky without a field goal. Leo has also been a consistent scorer, employing a fine, high-arching set shot.

One of five scholastic stars from Philadelphia who came to Villanova, Brooks Ricca has followed Arizin in the scoring parade for three consecutive years. He always labored hard under the hoop and made a habit of intercepting enemy passes. Brooks' ability to come through under pressure was one of his best contributions to the team's success.

At 6 ft. 2 in., Tom Sabol was one of the best rebound men in Eastern basketball. An All-Philadelphia scholastic while at Southern High, Sabol became the kind of college ball player who deserves the label "steady", often registering twin-figure scores.



One observer remarked that Joe Hannan "drove in fast to the foul line, then went faster when he got there". Joe put his speed to use, breaking out of the weave and displaying a fine assortment of driving lay-ups. A good set shot, "Hannan the Cannon" reached his scoring peak against Yale in the N.C.A.A. tournament last year when he dumped in 13 field goals, most of them from the outside.

Until this year, Perry DelPurgatorio was a vital sixth man in the Severance attack. When he finally broke into the starting quintet, Union City's contribution to Villanova certainly lived up to pre-collegiate expectations. Perry was always a scoring threat by virtue of a deadly set shot. He found the range against Georgetown and totaled 28 points in his last appearance at the Field House.

High School Standouts

In addition to the aforementioned six, the three other seniors came to the Main Line school with high school records that would please any coach. Jack Crossin shattered all the records once held by his famous brother "Chink" Crossin at Lucerne High School. Shy Raiken was the most prolific scorer ever to come out of Dobbins Vocational High School in Philadelphia. John Weglicki starred for La Salle High School of Philadelphia. Each was a highly-talented athlete, of whom great things were expected. But only five men may start a basketball game and only five may play in it at one time. Though they were not starters, they all performed well when called upon by Coach Severance, and each one will be remembered as a member of Villanova's greatest basketball team. Who could forget Crossin's speed and ballhandling, Raiken's left-handed dribbling, or Weglicki's performances against Rhode Island State?

The Villanova team that went to the N.C.A.A. tournament a year ago, participated in the Sugar Bowl classic and put on a great stretch drive in the last two weeks of this season, was a "team" in every sense of the word. Arizin provided the scoring punch, but four other men worked hard to "pass the ball to Tall Paul." Defeating top-flight teams like North Carolina State, Toledo, and Duquesne required good defensive work and rebound control, which is never a one-man job. Yet despite its record, its accomplishment, its greatness, the Villanova team and its nine seniors, one of them everybody's All-American, were denied a fitting climax to their fine collegiate careers by being overlooked in the post-season tournament selections.

Nation's Finest Player Rose From Obscurity To Claim Top Spot With Villanova Greats

Arizin, Student and Gentleman, Unaffected by Publicity

By BILL CANINO

"There just isn't anything else to say". That's what Villanova's greatest athlete said when we approached him with hopes of finding a new angle. But here he was, not only the best that collegiate basketball has to offer, but a most unaffected star at that.

While his story is one that makes for fine reading the amazing part of it all lies in the fact that Paul Arizin doesn't particularly care whether he's famous or not. He came to Villanova, with no reputation but with an eagerness to get a college education.

But that was when Paul shuffled about the campus and played basketball at night in South Philadelphia church leagues. It was in this outside activity that he began the rise to the pinnacle of basketball, in the undergraduate ranks. For, at the close of Villanova's regular campaign in '46, Wildcat mentor Al Severance watched the 6:03 wonder who was to break scoring records as easily as he masters academic work.

With an entire Sophomore club Tall Paul jumped right into the starting center berth, promptly scored 27 points in an early game against Seton Hall and walked off with scoring honors with 267 points in 24 contests. While he improved continually throughout the season, few realized that before Paul Arizin left Villanova he would displace any and all former Villanova greats in the Wildcat list of luminaries.

A year ago Arizin began to be known in the several parts of the country. While he scored prolifically in every game, he splurged against Naval Air Material Center and scored 85 points. While only 1500 fans watched the greatest single contribution by a college ball player any place at any time, millions of hoop fans across the nation read of the wondrous deed.

NCAA Tournament

However, it was not until the regular season had closed did Arizin make what is referred to as the "big time." For, the Wildcats with a 22-3 won, loss record, were invited to participate in the National Collegiate Athletic Association tournament. In Madison Square Garden, Paul astounded over 18,000 fans by outplaying everyone's All-American Alex Groza as Villanova dropped an 85-72 decision to the Kentucky Wildcats. The following night Paul ran against another All-American, Tony Lavelli of Yale. Again the huge gathering was amazed. Paul not only scored 22 points but his excellent defensive play accounted for Lavelli's failure to score consistently. The Eli star finished with but eight points having two field goals and four foul conversions.

From the outset it was certain that the 1949-50 season would be even greater than prior years for Paul. During the summer months he spent his time working at Nevele, one of the classier hotels in the Catskill Mountain range. During his off hours Paul played with and against every All-American prospect in the country. Undoubtedly the Couseys and the Coopers and the Beckers were high class performers that offered top-flight competition for the Villanovan. His backboard play improved tremendously and acquired the necessary finesse.

Reluctant to Shoot

Before the campaign opened Paul was selected on virtually every pre-season All-America team. Not one selector was disappointed. In the early stages of the season Paul was reluctant when it came to shooting. His usual plan of attack was to put the team ahead by a good margin and then retire to the bench. As the year progressed and the fan's pleas became even more uninhibited Paul obliged by averaging nearly 30 points per game.

Now, it's all over. Paul Arizin will never wear the Number 11 again for Villanova. But neither will any other Wildcat hoopster. In retiring his uniform and placing it in a showcase at the entrance to the Field House the Villanova students and administration have said, "Thanks for a job well done". To many this may seem a feeble way of showing gratefulness but to every Arizin fan this is their own way of speaking and it means more than money can buy.

This is but one of the many, many stories written about Paul Arizin but it is the Villanovan's act of appreciation to the guy that said, "there's just nothing to say."

ARIZIN SETS MORE RECORDS THAN ANY OTHER HOOPSTER

Scored 85 Points in Single Game; Ends Career with 1596

By NEAL FAHY

If there is any college coach or sportswriter in the country who denies that Paul Arizin is the greatest collegiate basketball player of our era, it is either because he has never seen Arizin perform, or else has never looked at the amazing figures compiled by statisticians about this phenomenal demolisher of records. It is for an evaluation of these latter named figures, which defy comparison, that this article is written.

Perhaps the best way to demonstrate Arizin's consistent and prolific scoring ability, which coupled with his tremendous backboard work recently earned him The Sporting News 'Player of the Year' award, would be to divide all the lanky center's cumulative totals by the 29 games he performed in this year for Villanova and come up with what might be called 'Arizin's average game'.

The following are statistics for that mythical contest:

1) He was in action 34 out of the possible 40 minutes,
2) He took 18 shots from the field and made good on 9 of them,
3) He converted 7.7 of 10 free throws,
4) He scored 25.4 points,
5) He dominated both backboards and came down with 50% of all rebounds.

Only Average Game

Remember this is only Arizin's average game. On at least 10 occasions this past season he has bettered all of these percentages. In a majority of the games Paul has had two and sometimes three men guarding him most of the time. No coach has ever come up with a defense which stopped the 'little giant'. In a total of 17 different contests, at least one opposing center fouled out trying to guard Arizin.

There is no player anywhere who can claim the distinction of outplaying Arizin and Paul has played against the best of them. The modest and unassuming Pride of Villanova has never had an 'off' night and does his best work against the so called 'big name' performers of the game.

At the NCAA Tournament last spring he dropped in 30 points while being guarded by 6'7" Alex Groza of Kentucky. One night later Arizin poured 22 markers through the hoops while holding Yale's Tony Lavelli to 1 field goal in the entire game.

In his only meeting with Chet Giermak of William & Mary, the one major college player to score more points than Paul in a season, Arizin scored 24 and completely handcuffed Giermack who got only 6.

Last summer Paul performed in the Catskills' Borscht League and played against Bob Cousy of Holy Cross weekly. In almost every one of these meetings Arizin came out on top.

Records Innumerable

The scoring records Arizin holds are almost innumerable but some of the major ones follow. Most points scored in a season by a major college player (exclusive of tournament play, 735. Most foul shots converted in a season by a major college player 215. Most points ever scored by a player in a game 85. Most points scored by a player in the Palestra 41. Most points scored by a player in the Washington Armory 33.

One of Arizin's best nights came this past season when he scored 41 points against Seton Hall in 28 minutes of play. He has made over 30 points in a game on nine different occasions this past season. His three year scoring total at Villanova of 1596 points will probably never be surpassed.

On the basis of statistics alone Arizin must be an All American.

Coaches, Sportswriters All Agree That Paul Arizin Is All American

By HARRY RANGE

It is one thing for a VILLANOVAN sportswriter to say that Paul Arizin is the greatest basketball player in the country but it is indeed another to prove this statement. In order to give weight to this we present the following quotations from unbiased coaches and writers from all over the nation who have seen Paul Arizin play.

Even before the current season began the scribes were beating the drums for Arizin. Frank Eck, Sports Review, "This year, his final as a collegian, should find him ranked among the greatest in history. He's that good." Stan Lomax, Sport, "Paul Arizin, one of the finest scorers in the game wins one of the forward berths on the advance All-American."

Then, after leading the Wildcats to seven straight victories, Arizin went South to the Sugar Bowl Tournament where he set a new scoring record. Said Abe Silver in the New Orleans Times Picayune, "A new Sugar Bowl Record was established by the most colorful player in the tournament, Paul Arizin of Villanova, although he was with a losing team twice". "Tulane played an inspired game but the Greenies could not overshadow the all-round performance of Arizin." Harry Martinez, New Orleans states, "Paul Arizin was a standout for Villanova. The tall center is a polished basketball player and it is a treat to see such a star in action."

Paul then set his sights to helping the 'Cats to a 25-4 season and incidentally broke a fistfull of records. His fame both before and after each game was fabulous as we can see by the words of sportswriters and coaches.

"Arizin, who seems to have acquired a distaste for shooting except when it counts, ended as high scorer-as-usual with 25 points." Bob Vetrone, Bulletin, after the Rutgers game. Again Vetrone, "Add the name of Matty Bagovick to the list of basketball personages who say that Paul Arizin is just about the best player around."

Then Paul Menton in the Baltimore Evening Sun, "Villanova comes here with six straight victories, mainly through the efforts of long Paul Arizin, one of the really fine performers on the hardwood.

After the second Seton Hall game Stan Baumgartner had this to say in the Inquirer, "On his last appearance against Seton Hall he scored only 16 points but last night Paul dropped them in from all angles. Half of them were off balance shots that brought ohs and ahs from the throng. At one point in the game he had seven points more than the entire Seton Hall team.

Paul scored his 595th point and Don Donaghy wrote this in the Bulletin, "Life has new complications today for basketball fans whose hobby is auditing Paul Arizin's scoring data."

After his team had lost by 20 to the 'Cats, Coach Jerry Bush of Toledo was quoted, "Arizin is an all-time, All-American if I've ever seen one. I've been around the game more than 20 years and he is without a doubt one of the finest players I've ever seen."

Mort Berry of the Inquirer had a few words of praise after the season closing wins over St. Bonaventure and Duquesne. "Paul Arizin, Villanova's matchless All-American tallied 29 points and found time to be conspicuously valuable during his nonscoring moments as the Mainliners whipped St. Bonaventure." "Paul Arizin wrote "thirty" to a brilliant basketball career with a thirty point fling that lifted Villanova to a 68-52 closing victory over National Invitation Tournament-bound Duquesne."

Paul made all the "All" teams and Cy Kritzer in Sporting News spoke for the selectors when he said, "This season Arizin left no doubt about his All-America greatness".

At the end of the season, after having seen Paul perform eleven times at the Palestra, Coach Howie Dallmar of Penn stated, "Arizin definitely belongs on an all-time, All-American team. Arizin ranks with Luisetti, Holman and the rest."

Tall Paul came into the h'ghest possible at the close of the campaign from an expert who learned about him the hard way. Coach Dudley Moore of tournament-bound Duquesne who nervously watched Arizin score 30 points last Wednesday night as the Wildcats beat the Dukes 68-52 stated flatly: "Arizin is the greatest college basketball player I've ever seen and that includes George Mikan and Alex Groza." From a coach who has an All-American on his own club that is certainly the greatest possible compliment.

And finally the praise of Paul's own coach, Al Severance, "Arizin is of priceless value to the team even when he's not scoring" and "If Arizin isn't All-American then they ought to stop picking them."

Sporting News' Player of the Year; to Play in East-West Game

By BILL KLUCSARITS

In 1945 he couldn't make his high school basketball team. In 1950 he is an All-American and ranked by many with the all-time greats of the sport court. This is the unparalleled Horatio Alger-like story of Paul Arizin, outstanding player on a team of stars, national high-scorer in an era of prolific point gatherers and "a natural when it comes to court spirit" according to the Sporting News.

Recognized Locally

While recognized locally in his junior year, especially after his great play in the NCAA tournament, it was in his senior year that the honors came thick and fast to the unassuming South Philadelphian. In its pre-season forecasts Sport magazine tabbed him as a potential All-American. His play in the Sugar Bowl Tournament justified the crystal-gazing experts, as he set a new scoring record and was first choice for the All-Tournament team. This aggregation included such standouts as Unruh of Bradley and Line of Kentucky.

Towards the end of the season, he was voted the outstanding collegiate basketball player in the nation by the Sporting News, national sports weekly. Arizin was chosen over such men as Cousy of Holy Cross and Schnittker of Ohio State, by the panel of experts who covered every conference and sector of the hardwood game. He was subsequently edged by these two in the United Press All-American, finishing third in the national ranking and being picked for the first team by over 40% of the voters.

East-West

Look Magazine had a total of 300 experts on their All-American voting board who put Arizin on the first team with Cousy, Cooper, Schnittker, and Unruh. When the All-Catholic team was announced Villanova's pride and joy was again the top point gatherer, joining such stellar performers as Cousy, Lofgran of San Francisco, O'Shea of Notre Dame and Murray of St. Bonaventure. He was the first player chosen for the All-East squad, for the annual East-West charity game sponsored by the New York Herald Tribune. The nation's leading major college scorer also has been invited to join the College All-Stars, who will play the famed Harlem Globe-Trotters in a series of post-season exhibition games. Again he was one of the first invited to this team of college seniors drawn from all over the nation.

Associated Press All-American has just been announced and Paul placed 2nd. The team is the same as U. P.'s in the balloting.

Besides first team honors Arizin has also been selected by some farther down in the ratings. Colliers and the Police Gazette have seen fit, for some, unexplained reason, to choose Paul on their second teams.

Belle Masque Stages Elizabethan Drama Of Beaumont And Fletcher

"Knight of Burning Pestle" to Run Thurs. to Sun., Mar. 23-26

No curtain will part this Thursday night, when you attend the Belle Masque presentation of the Beaumont and Fletcher comedy, The Knight of The Burning Pestle. Upon entering from the Field House lobby, the theatre-goer will find himself inside the Globe Theatre, and the drawn curtains of the Field House stage will reveal a typical Elizabethan set of that theatre's stage. The efforts of the Belle Masque stage crew are responsible for the reproduction of this setting from a scale model built by Mr. Jacob Krupa.

The inspiration for this comedy by its co-authors was derived from an influence of Cervantes' Don Quixote, written five years before The Knight of The Burning Pestle. Beaumont and Fletcher followed the Cervantes theme in their play to the extent of dubbing Ralph, an Elizabethan Don Quixote. Ralph, portrayed by Richard Lauman, is a reader of chivalric tales and invites the opportunity to pursue adventure and distressed damsels. Ralph's antics as will be seen in the May Pole sequence, his fight with Barboroso, and a death scene recitation are considered highlights of the drama.

The action starts as Robert Resnick recites the prologue to a play which is to be held in the Globe Theatre. During the pro-

Basketball Team To Be Honored At Student Convocation March 28

The Spring convocation of the student body, originally scheduled to be held April 4th, has been moved up so that it will now be held in the Field House one week from today, on Tuesday afternoon, March 28th. As customary, classes will be suspended for the hour during which the convocation is to take place. This will be the first general student assembly to be held since the last convocation held after the Thanksgiving recess.

Although the program for this meeting has not yet been announced it is known that one of the main purposes of the assembly will be to honor the nine men of the varsity basketball team who recently completed their college playing careers.

This was announced at the last meeting of the Student Council on March 13th., where the suggestion was made that this opportunity could be taken to give fitting tribute to the men who have brought so much recognition to the college.

Contest Interest Rising

After the first pictures in the Queen of Junior Week contest were seen in last week's edition of the paper there was a noticeable increase in interest among the Juniors, not that our office is over-flowing, but at least we received more than the first week.

The two below were some of the first received this week. Please contact Harry Range or Frank Gobes if you have a picture of a possible Queen.

Peace-?

The United States, today, is in an unenviable position. Having risen to the position of one of the two most powerful nations in this little globe, and the speaker for all lesser republican governments, our country must needs guide the destiny of the world if only for a brief span.

Taking a major position in two world-wide holocausts in the past fifty years our leaders have ever held that we only fought that free men might live in peace. How many times during those long years did we hear the cry: "This is a war to end wars"? Where are we today? In the middle of a most amazing cold war! Amazing because we are not yet five years celebrating peace and men no longer talk of inevitable war but of the time when it will be fought.

To bring matters to a more critical responsibility, the UNITED STATES holds the terrifying atom bomb in readiness and has good prospects of completing the more awful Hydrogen in a matter of months, which scientists now tell us can be rigged to destroy all life on the face of the earth.

War never has been a constructive force. Throughout all time, ever since Cain killed Abel, war has failed to gain that peace and happiness which is man's goal. Hate has ever been the seed sown, and death the harvest. Destroying all art, architecture, culture and lives, war has swept on for what, to gain a piece of earth that one man could govern for the flickering of a life time.

If we are tempted at times to sugar-coat the idea of war and entertain ideas of fighting to the death our present adversaries let's take another look at a picture of Hiroshima and think of what our home town might look like.

It is a great responsibility for our elected representatives in government. The bungling has got to stop. Petty politics cannot be valued over millions of human lives. If politicans think smugly that war is that last measure which would only be used if all other things fail, so there is nothing to worry about, it may very well prove to be end, period.

Awakening....

Spring . . . probably the most talked about season of the year. Poets eulogize it; writers describe it; artists try to paint it; workers talk about it on the street car, washwomen pull it out over the back fence. Even students discover it, or perhaps it discovers them.

At Villanova, the advent of spring is unmistable. The winds that whip around the chapel lose some of their bite, the rains that come seem warm and soft, the grass wakes up and begins to grow. Down by the Field House the baseball team begins to get hot, and the football team drags out its togs for some off-season scrimmaging. Basketball has gone, although it has left memories that will indeed be slow in going, and track holds the headlines till the batters and batteries can warm up.

In the individual Villanova student's life the change is just as obvious. Thick winter blood seems to be revitalized, and ambition stirs activity. Later, sunsets make the day longer, and more things to do make the sacks less inviting. Golf clubs come out for a little driving practice, and more people seem to be showing up for breakfast. Spring is a good thing, for Villanova, and for everybody.

JIM GRIFFIN

I guess last week seemed like a normal enough week to us. Classes came and quizzes went, and we floundered on, sinking or swimming. But there was one thing about last week which made it quite an unusual one. Or perhaps we should say two things.

The Irish Should Know

The first of the two most of us couldn't miss for the green, March 17th, St. Patrick's Day. It's quite a big day for us who think that St. Patrick managed to Christianize the best inhabitants of the best island in the world.

Why And So What?

At any rate, just in case we passed him by last wek, and even in case we didn't, we should try to remember St. Patrick with a little extra honor, for his service to Christianity was unparalleled. Through his efforts was created the single lighthouse where the light of faith has never blinked, and still shows no sign of weakening, while communism seethes elsewhere over the world. Surely St. Patrick must have very special favor with God; can we lose, therefore by seeking favor with St. Patrick?

Second But Not Secondary

The second came just two days later, the Feast of St. Joseph, the protector of Christ and His mother, Mary; the gentle, obedient carpenter; the guiding hand through the helpless years of the human Christ. Joseph it was who took Mary to Bethlehem to be enrolled, and to fulfill the prophesies of the birth of the Saviour. And it was he who arose at the command of an angel, and fled to Egypt to save the Saviour from the soldiers of Herod. And it was Joseph who worked as a carpenter to provide for the temporal needs of Mary and Christ during His youth.

And As For Us

And so this week we have celebrated the feasts of two of the Church's greatest saints. It might pay us to review the qualities which made them what they are in heaven today, their humility, their kindliness, their obedience, and above all, their love for God. After all, what they are, we are striving to become. Why not learn by watching?

The Main Line

By BILL BRENINGHOUSE

In the current issues of a large and expensive magazine there is an article of doubtful worth concerning itself with the Main Line. Oscar Twomp, after reading this article in the Periodical Room of the Library, suddenly realized that he was part of the Main Line at that very moment. Thrilled to the very marrow of his bones at this thought, he decided to take a trip around the famous aristocratic territory.

Bryn Mawr

His first stop was the quaint little hamlet of Bryn Mawr (formerly Humphreysville). The name Bryn Mawr comes from the Language of the Welchers; it means, freely translated, One Horse. The neighboring village of 'Ard Mawr' means Two Horse. This exclusive and aristocratic town of Bryn Mawr has some of the lowest dives this side of Scollay Square. Oscar should know for he's been thrown out of all of them.

Next, Oscar visited the famous Merion Cricket Club. It seems that the club is now taking in people as members after being exclusively for crickets for one hundred and sixty-eight years. On his way to the club he passed many beautiful houses. He saw Tudor houses, four-door houses, houses with Gothic arches, etc., etc. They were all set back from the road and were surrounded by beautiful shrubbery. It was really a shame that people had to spoil them by living in them.

Haverford

A major part of Oscar's tour was spent in the fine educational institutions of the Main Line. At Haverford he was cracked on the skull by a cricket bat with which a zealous Haverfordian was playing a rip-roaring old game of cricket. The girls with crew cuts scared him away from Bryn Mawr, and the girls who acted like Main Line debs scared him away from Rosemont and Immaculata. At Villanova he found peace. There, among the peasants, although he was run over by a stray tow-truck, he felt at home. As for Baldwin, Shipley and other kindergarten schools, Oscar felt too old anywhere near them.

Hunt

A major feature in Main Line life is the hunt. Oscar was tremendously interested in hunting, so he visited one of the Hunt Clubs where people in ridiculous red costumes were chasing after something. The dogs that they used were better taken care of than the children of the brave young hunters. It was a shame to see those nice horses running around with over-portly gentlemen on their backs. Oscar can't describe the hunting costumes, but he is sure that a person would get arrested appearing in public in such get-ups.

So there was the Main Line to Oscar. All the glamor, all the aristocratic splendor, all the nothing was his. Going back to the beautifully illustrated magazine article he decided that he could really show the author the Main Line. He was certain, however, that the author really knew the Main Line; the poor guy has to live.

Sense and Nonsense

— Tom Pasha

Last week we had the pleasure of journeying to the big stone metropolis to visit our old friend Regina Glutts. Who is Regina Glutts? Well, gang, she is a little fem from across the Pennsy tracks who was about the most intelligent, delectable dish in old Podunck Junction. At present Pudgy (name acquired in reform school) is taking a lap-sitting, pencil-sharpening course down at one of the East River city's secretarial schools. It's a branch of Henrietta Nibbs School Fer Sultry Secretaries and Sulking Stenographers.

Since the Henrietta goil's brain factory is a non-campus school, the foochure salemanshooers stay at the very beautiful Amazon Motel in the heart of Noo Yawk. This palatial sand-stone structure is a striking building over-looking ten saloons, two salons, and Snezetel's Delicatessen. Roomy and I were very much impressed with the entrance of this multi-storied edifice partly due to the fact that several stately palms flanked each side of the doorway giving somewhat of a campus atmosphere to the big city dormitory. We found out later in the evening that the palms are used to the same advantage as those found on the local college greens, that is, to shelter the Amazonian-inmates and their respective dates from the elements after their night of doing the various brew-halls . . . if ya know what I mean!!

After we made our way through the bear-trap maze of this monument to feminine pulchritude, called Regina, and settled in one of the time-hardened sofas, we began to observe the many interesting things about us. The lobby was apparently fashioned after an Elizabethan stage and the many frustrated, bridge-playing, ex-school teachers which adorned the mezzanine actually resembled something from that same period in history. Of course, the vanity- totin' models from the Amazon School of Modeling did add a bit of satisfying splendor to the scene.

Knowing that no male had ever gained entrance to the elevator in this fabulous structure, Red and I envied the four elevator-operators who were on duty at the time. Finally, Regina arrived with her roomy and we started out to do the town planning to return at the Cinderella hour to avoid campusing our friends.

Oh, yes, another thing! In the long history of the Amazon Motel, there has been but one instance in which a male tried to get above the first floor and as soon as my arms and legs are on the mend, I'd like to relate it to you.

SYNCOPATTER

By Bruce Taten and Roland Mayer

A week ago Saturday I had the pleasure of catching Sidney Bechet and his Dixieland Combo at the Rendezvous. To my knowledge it was the first big name outfit of this type to play Philly in at least the past four years. Seems that it should have happened sooner as Sidney and his crew pulled in a record crowd and are being held over for a couple more weeks.

Mob Scene

We arrived at 9 o'clock expecting plenty of tables open for the first show only to run into a mob scene. When you find SRO that early in the evening you know the show must be good. Along with Sidney was "Chief Russell" Moore on trombone, and Kansas Fields on drums, two of the regulars that played with the outfit at Ryan's in New York a short time ago. As usual the music was great and incidentally there's still time to catch some of it if you're interested.

Frankie Laine

In the record roundup this week we find that Frankie Laine has finally deserted the animal corner in favor of people, the weird variety, but people all the same. His latest pair of waxings are labeled "Swamp Girl" and "Satan Wears a Satin Gown". The former is a real "weirdie" even for Laine but "Satan Wears a Satin Gown" has definite promise, in fact I like it better than any of his more popular sagas of the animal world. It's done up a la Duke Ellington with a female voice singing in the background and the effect is great. Now here is Bruce.

No Letters

In reply to no letters from Immaculata, (we did receive something, but it's unprintable) I should like to agree that the girls do have a great deal of character; but how so many characters ever got together is truly a marvelous catastrophe. Traveling out there for a date is analagous to travel in the Swiss Alps, it's a long climb to the top and once one gets there he finds nothing but the view, not that the girls are a sight, you understand.

Jazz

Jazz has been defined on occasion as emotion set to music. This definition finds fulfillment in a new waxing by Ella Fitzgerald, of "Tisket A Tasket" fame, entitled "A Man Wrote A Song". Ella is well known for her melodious renditions of tunes with an upbeat but in this instance she shows true versitality by putting a great fund of feeling in her singing of this ballad. Not destined to be on top of the Hit Parade, it is nevertheless the type of song that will still be recorded occasionally in years to come.

Short Life

For some reason songs with a message seem to be short-lived if we can ever consider them alive at all. A tune called "Tenement Symphony," and one that began, "send me your tired, your poor," are among the more recent examples of the fact that the public does not care for this type of music. Sinatra by now is probably sadly aware of this fact via his recording of "A Song of God's Country." Let's hope he won't try it again, we all know he can do far better.

Careers

By J. R. Spence

One of the most versatile of the scientific fields is that of Physics, undoubtedly because the science of physics forms the basis for almost all of the remainder of modern science.

Preparation

To one preparing to enter the field of physics, a B. S. degree is an absolute minimum, with an M. S. almost a necessity for rapid advancement, and a Ph. D. very much to be desired. This is a result of the wide field which Physics embraces, so that the undergraduate curricula, being spead over all the phases of physical theory, almost demands a year or more of post-graduate specialization as preparation for more advanced work.

Requirements

Personal requirements for a physicist include: an aptitude for mathematics (this is almost indispensable, since Physics' very language is Mathematics), a willingness for prolonged study, and a natural curiosity about natural or scientific phenomena. These are mentioned on the assumption that the physicist will be doing research, and a realization that monetary returns are not likely to be so great as from other fields requiring similar time and effort in preparation.

Opportunities

Industrial opportunities are multifold, with the greatest number of opportunities appearing in government service, or in the employment of large industrial concerns such as Bell Telephone, Westinghouse, etc. There is also a great need at present for good physicists to fill the gaps made in the ranks of college and university faculties by the war and the demand it caused for scientists in governmental research. This need, incidentally, might well be considered by the young man thinking of physics as a career, since it offers him a possibility for doing graduate work in return for his services, once he has obtained a B. S.

Overall Outlook

Although the salary is, on the whole, less in the educational field than in the industrial world, this factor is compensated in the degree of freedom which education allows, and the opportunity for individual research or cooperative original research.

Around The Town

By F. A. Varallo

Our entertainment tour this week takes us first to the Stanley Theater whose current offering, "Young Man With A Horn," should have special appeal for Harry James fans. Although the wizard of the trumpet does not appear at all in the film, it is his off-screen playing that gives color and atmosphere to a rather mediocre story. Actually the script is based on Dorothy Baker's novel about jazz musicians of the 1920's and is patterned more or less on the life of the late Bix Biederbecke.

Success Story

In general, "Young Man With A Horn" is a jazz era success story — a long sad tale about the rise and fall of a trumpet player. Kirk Douglas portrays the horn playing genius, who learns his trade from an expert and slowly climbs the ladder to fame and fortune. Included, too, are the usual characterizations for the nice normal blues singer who doesn't have a chance with our hero, the admiring friends who are always ready to extend a helping hand, and the insensitive hordes who just don't understand.

Although handicapped by a pretentious script, the cast turns out creditable performances. Hoagy Carmichael registers as the hero's piano-playing pal; Doris Day is convincing as the sensible little band singer ignored by Douglas, while Laureen Bacall is mean and moody in her role as "the other woman"; Orley Lindgren, a blond young star, appealingly portrays Douglas as an adolescent.

Guilty Of Treason

"Guilty of Treason" which opened at the Aldine deals with the trial and imprisonment of Hungary's Josef Cardinal Mindszenty. The story has been pieced together from the public utterances of the Cardinal and a chapter from "As We See Russia," as compiled by the Overseas Press Club of America. Interwoven with the tragic story of Mindszenty is a less effective, unrealistic romance between a doomed Hungarian music teacher and a young Soviet officer. Although at times the script is rather dull and given to lengthy speeches, it is always impressive when dealing with the factual records of the primate's ordeal.

Excellent Performance

Charles Bickford is outstanding in his portrayal of the man who courageously upheld his faith and his country in the face of Communist persecution. Paul Kelly is excellent as the American correspondent who risks his life to get the Mindszenty story. Bonita Granville and Richard Derr provide the

It's amazing, but after standing in line for three weeks to reserve our room for the coming semester (if we're still around), we have come through the merciless grind and are still alive to relate our harrowing experience. We had the good fortune to snare a room on the fifth floor in Mendel. Of course, we have to share it with 37 other budding geniuses and the Dean of Dogs, Peno, but "C'est la vie."

Memo to the students in Pinochle 101: Next week will see the placing of signs in the Pie Shoppe — Excuse us, the College Store — saying: "No Card-Playing, Students Towed Away." We predict that this will give rise to an outbreak of notorious dens of iniquity called "Card-easies." Anybody want to join a hot "What's Trump?" club?

Flash . . . Chuck Bogan and Boopsie Rinehart are organizing a force of hardy adventurers to dig for buried treasure on the wild, unhibited shores of Somer's Point. Chuck has an authentic map cut out of the latest issue of the Hobo News and also a chest full of petrified candy wafers which he claims are old Hibernian Guineas. All embryo millionaires who think that they are qualified for the hunt are urged to get in touch with those in charge immediately.

Questions on everybody's mind:

1. Who is our other reader?
2. Will Bubbuh Bean prove to be a greater player than Ozark Ike?
3. Is anyone interested in taking over Harry Range's subscription to Collier's? If so, WHY?

We took in a rehearsal of the Belle Masque's latest dramatic endeavor, The Knight Of The Burning Pestle, recently and, from all appearances, the show is a humdinger, a real jim-dandy. It will run from this Thursday evening through Sunday evening. Don't miss it as we get a commission from each ticket sold. If we sell 60,000 tickets, they'll give us the Field House.

We now turn to the Gripes Department. Mario Piazzolla, boy day-hop, has turned up with the latest complaint. Says Mario, in reference to the ABC Phone Quiz, "What about the poor day-hop? He still has to pay for his smokes." He also suggested the next query for the contest, "Which governor of Pennsylvania first said that day-hops are human?" Along the same line, Charlie Root wants to know what you have to do to get the smokes after you win the contest. It seems that he's been waiting for a few packs for three months now and all he's been able to do is empty the ash trays for the big mohoffs around the campus.

In closing, we would like to remind all Paul Arizin fans that the Tall One will be with the College All-Stars when they play the Harlem Globetrotters in the Arena on April 17th. Get your ducats now before the joint is sold out. We'll be back again in two weeks with another daring expose of goings-on at Villanova or "Can Life be Beautiful?" Be good little boys now, and don't punch too many holes in the walls. Bye, bye.

Obstetrician To Speak At Fifth Pre-Cana Conclave

Finally the lay mind will be heard in the Pre-Cana Conferences when Dr. James P. Quindlen, M. D., speaks next Sunday

Dr. James P. Quindlen, M.D. as a 'Catholic Doctor Looking at Marriage.'

Doctor Quindlen is a Lecturer in Obstetrics and Gynecology in the School of Medicine at Temple University. The main subjects that he will talk about will be sexual intercourse and post-marital causes of female fridigity.

In 1928 Dr. Quindlen received a B. A. degree from Villanova College and in 1929 received an M. A. degree, also from Villanova. He traveled the world for the next two years, and then in 1934 received his M. D. from Temple University Medical School. In addition to his position on the staff of Temple, he has a successful practice in Philadelphia.

Next Sunday's conference will be the fifth in the series of six such conferences held on the campus for the first time for the benefit of Villanova students who are engaged and their fiancees.

WVIL Features Original Mystery

Original dramatic shows, written by Villanova students, are a weekly feature of the campus station, WVIL. An original mystery drama, written by James Mullin, will be this week's presentation.

During the past week the staff of the station improved reception in areas of the campus where the signals had previously been poor. The poor reception long prevalent in Alumni Hall has also been corrected.

Another feature of the station's special Lenten programs is a series of broadcasts being aired in co-operation with the Chaplain's office, and supplementing the Pre-Cana conferences.

romantic interest. Rounding out the good supporting cast are Roland Winters as the villainous Commissar Belov; John Banner, a colloborating playwright, Elizabeth Risdan, as the Cardinal's mother and Alfred Linder as a Hungarian patriot.

"Guilty of Treason," by very nature of its momentous topic, is to be strongly recommended to all movie-goer's.

Spanish Group Plans Fete

The eve of the birthday of Cervantes, April 22nd, was set as the date of this year's dinner-dance in celebration of Cervantes Day at a meeting of the Spanish Club last Thursday evening in the C&E Auditorium. The celebration is an annual program of the Club, and this year is tentatively scheduled to be held at the Norristown Elks' Club.

John Roesgen, President of the Club, announced at the meeting that the annual literary contest held in conjunction with Cervantes Day will close on April 12th. Prizes are to be presented at the dinner-dance to the students writing the best prose work and piece of poetry on some aspect of the life of Cervantes.

In the business portion of the meeting a $25 donation was voted for the Student Council's collection to buy gift for the nine graduating members of the basketball team. After this, Joseph Dugan, one of the members of the Club, presented the feature of the meeting, an all-Spanish speech concerning the textbook used at the College.

W. McKenna Dies; Wrote Fight Song

William J. McKenna, the composer of "Let's Go Villanova" and the 'Fight Song', "March of the Wildcats", passed away March 4th. after a long illness. Mr. McKenna, a native of Jersey City, N. J., turned out many songs, the most notable of which was "Has Anybody Here Seen Kelly". He wrote the two songs for the student body of Villanova in 1937, and was connected with the National Broadcast Company. The old-time showman wrote many songs for stage productions and also designed stage settings.

Student Beats ABC Telo-Test

The "Chesterfield Telephone Quiz Contest" saw its first prize-winner last Thursday night when John Lopategui of Mendel Hall came up with the correct answer to the question "What governor of Pennsylvania approved the act of the State Legislature granting a charter to what is now Villanova College?" John won twenty-six packages of Chesterfields with the reply "Governor Shunk". Good research, old boy, it paid dividends!

The current question which is already worth four packages of Chesterfields is "who was the first football coach at Villanova?" This should be a natural for the sports fans. Five more calls will be made Thursday, and it the question is unanswered, the prize will increase two packs with each call. As soon as the question is answered a new one will be posted, and Chesterfields will spread more cheer around the campus.

AIEE To Hear Hoberg, Ex-Editor

At the next formal meeting of the A. I. E. E., the guest speaker will be George Hoberg, a graduate of Villanova and editor of the Villanovan in 1944. Mr. Hoberg, a lab instructor before graduation, received his graduate degree at M. I. T. and is now with the Burroughs Company. The meeting will be held Tuesday, March 28th, at 8:00 P. M. in Room 215 Mendel. Charles Rodden, chairman of the A. I. E. E., announced that Mr. Hoberg's topic will be on computing machines and that the arrangements for the meeting were made by the Rev. Thomas A. Burke, O.S.A. Refreshments will be served after the meeting.

Easter Vacation

One full week off from classes will be given to the students of this college during the annual Easter recess. Classes will end for the students after their last period on Wednesday, April 5th., and be resumed with the first class the students have scheduled on Thursday, April 13th.

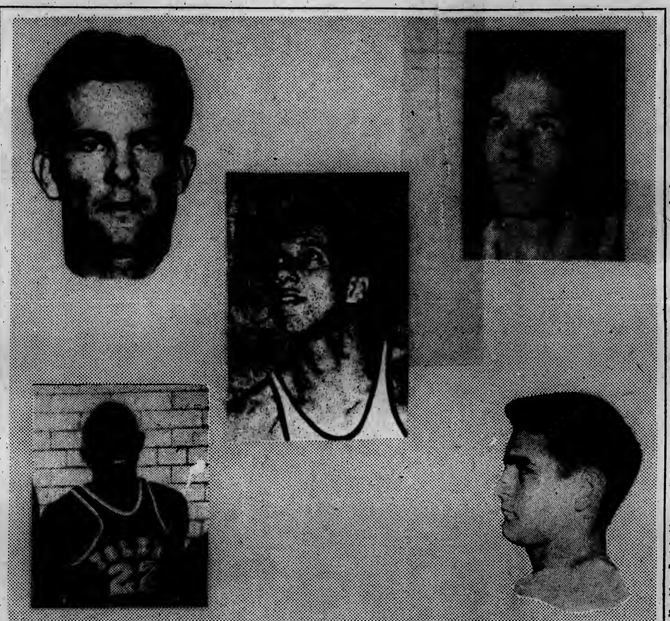
TRACKMEN PRACTICE FOR SETON HALL, PENN RELAYS

Veterans, New Men Give Bright Outlook

The boarrs are up and the Villanova track team has now moved on to the cinders to start practice for the 1950 outdoor season.

Genial Jim Elliott, Wildcat coach and sprint start of the thirties, has virtually the same team as last year with the only major changes being in additions to the squad. Although George Guida graduated last June, he cannot actually be considered as a loss since he was unable to compete last Spring because he had used up his eligibility the previous season.



The first meets coming up are the Seton Hall Relays on the 22nd of April and the Penn Relays a week later. As a result most of the stress of the first few weeks will be placed on quarter, half, mile, and two-mile relay teams.

Many Sprinters

Sprinters for the quartet and half mile teams include Joe McCreary, Jack Holmes, Jim McKenna, Tom Irish, Bob Cunjak, John Furlinger, Ed Bausewein and Ji Riordan. However, most of these boys are available for the mile relay and the Blue and White team will probably be composed of McKenna, Holmes, McCreary and Furlinger or Riordan.

In the longer relays, the two-mile, four-mile and distance medley, Coach Elliott will have the old reliables, George Thompson and Browning Ross, as well as Charlie McKee, Bill Curran, Art Klepper, and Pete Simigan.

In the first meeting of the Seton Hall Relays two years ago, Villanova's distance medley team captured the event. In an effort to again take this title it is expected that Jim McKenna and possibly Jim Riordan will be moved up to the longer distances.

Villanova's All-Opponent team which was picked by the Wildcat players. In the upper right hand corner, Dick Dickey, unanimous choice from N. C. State; around the clock, Virgil Risner, Tulane; Bob MacDonald, Toledo; Glenn Combs, Louisville, and at the center Chuck Cooper, of Duquesne.

Veteran Nine Have First Practice Under New Coach

By TED FERNANDES

With opening day less than two weeks away Coach Artie Mahan, a former Villanova star, is busily engaged at the task of putting together a well balanced starting nine. To accomplish this task Mahan has in hand thirteen veterans returning from last year's squad plus a formidable array of newcomers who will be fighting for first string berths.

High on the list of returnees is John Morony who is expected to lead the Wildcats in the pitching department. John should receive plenty of able assistance from Bob Dietz and Robert Sexton along with a pair of sophomores new to the team, but showing good stuff, Jack Nugent and George Decker. Red Wright also can hold his own among the pitchers but is expected to spend most of his time behind the plate with capable aid from Tom Clavin, Jack Jameson and newcomer, Wally Donnellon.

The inner defense should find John Weglicki filling the shoes of Charlie Comerford at the initial sack, Tommy Jones guarding the keystone station, Larry Aigeldinger at shortstop and Jack Morris over on third base. A great season is predicted by all for Larry who gatted a nifty .387 during the '49 campaign.

The outfield also will be built around a brace of hard hitting veterans, Sherwin Raiken and fleet Mickey Frinzi. Raiken will supply plenty of power at the plate with Frinzi sparkling afield. Fighting for the remaining berth will be Reds Coletta, if Jim Leonard gives his okay. Joe Till and Jack Sabol along with other aspirants are also in the running.

Coach Mahan is looking forward to a good season in his freshman year as mentor of the Wildcats and hopes to improve over last year's record of twelve wins and seven losses.

Coach Artie Mahan gives the boys the word in early practice session. Sliding in—Jack Morris; covering the bag—Benny Moskal.

SPRING FOOTBALL DRILLS BEGIN WITH SEVENTY CANDIDATES

Fourteen Lettermen Return, Heavy Drills

By G. SCANLON

Seventy candidates greeted Coach Jim Leonard as spring practice commenced last week. Fourteen lettermen were among the hopefuls as the squad swung into heavy workouts. Graduation has hit the Wildcats hard since 12 men receive their diplomas. With but two starters returning for the 1950 season the coaching staff has its work cut out for them.

The battle for positions in the line is wide open with keen competition marking the scrimmages. At the wing position Jim Leonard has some dependable performers, although he lost his two starting ends from last year's great team. At left end John Bogan, a letterman, is returning to the gridiron wars. John is an excellent pass receiver and an all around dependable performer. Big Ed Coughlin and Dan Simeone are defensive specialists and will be counted on heavily next fall. At the opposite wing post shifty Joe Rilo will continue his stellar play. Joe excels as an offensive threat. Jake Patrick's burning speed and hustle also will be present. John Markus, Joe Pastic, and Frank Rehak, all highly

WOLFPACK'S DICKEY UNANIMOUS CHOICE: COOPER SECOND

Jinx Referee Gains Honorable Mention

North Carolina State's Dick Dickey was the only unanimous choice on Villanova's All-Opponent team selected yesterday by members of the basketball squad. Charley Copper of Duquesne was a very close second receiving all but one of the first team votes. Cooper was the only repeater from last year's All Opponent team.

The other men chosen on the first team were Glenn Combs of Louisville, Bob MacDonald of Toledo, and Tulane's Virgil Risner. Thirty-one out of a possible 236 different players were nominated in the balloting.

Voting Close

Bill Spivey, seven-footer from Kentucky, and Tom O'Keefer of Georgetown missed out by one vote each for positions on the first squad as the balloting was close all the way.

A rather humorous aspect of the voting turned up when it was found that Referee Jim Osborne, who worked in three of the four Wildcat losses, had received three votes for Honorable Mention.

Rounding out the second team were Sam Ranzino of North Carolina State, Rutgers' Buckey Hatchett, and Bob Lochmueller, the big center of Louisville.

The men were picked on a basis of 2 points for a first team vote and 1 point for a second team vote. The Results:

First Team

Dick Dickey	No. Car. State
Chuck Cooper	Duquesne
Glenn Combs	Louisville
Bob MacDonald	Toledo
Virgil Risner	Tulane

Second Team

Bill Spivey	Kentucky
Tom O'Keefe	Georgetown
Sam Ranzino	No. Car. State
Bucky Hatchett	Rutgers
Bob Lochmueller	Louisville

regarded candidates are first year men making their bid.

Mantone and Smith Return

The guard slot appears to be well taken care of by such proven performers as Nick Liotta, Tony Marallo, Bob Wells and Teddy Oroski. Tony Tungo and, Al Shannon will also be in the thick of the fight.

At center hustling Joe Aowanski, Tom Gilden and Pete Brett should ably fill the pivot position.

Backfield Promising

Backfield coach, Art Raimo, is whipping his charges into shape and it looks as if the 'Cats will have a powerful offensive next fall.

At the fullback spot murderous Pete D'Alonzo, 215 pounds of dynamite, has lost none of his drive and line blasting ability. Pete will be depended to carry much of the Wildcat attack on the gridiron in 1950. Bob "Kentucky" Haner is a promising fullback up from the frosh team.

The halfbacks are many and good, led by Mickey Frinzi and Johnny Geppi. Both boys were offensive standouts last season and should roll well in '50. Jack Moran, Franny Dunn, Tony Colleta, Bill Padula, Jim Scullen, Joe Till, Don Scott and Walter Zuber all appear as topnotch men.

O'Boyle at Quarterback

Neil O'Boye, a 6' 1" football wizard has looked excellent in drills and will perform at the all important quaterback position. Neil's smooth ballhandling, accurate passing and experience will be counted on heavily come September. The freshmen club contributes three fine QB's in the persons of Bill Brannau, Tom Dent and Paul Tomko.

Golfers Start Practice With Six New Men

The members of Villanova's golf team passed a busy weekend getting in practise for their opening day match with Seton Hall. It was revealed that there are six very promising new candidates for the squad in the persons of Jack Baker, Hubert Flaherty, Dick Solo, Don Lemaire, Jim Underwood and Frank Stone.

A new course is going to be obtained for the 'home' matches but a selection hasn't been made yet of the several under consideration. Don Weiland is almost in top summer form now and seems ready to again take over the coveted number one position. John Trayer, with his new grip under control, appears destined for his best season on the Lynx five. A. J. Murray is much improved after having played all through the winter.

Scheduled Announced

The prospective schedule has the linksmen playing matches with Penn, Haverford, and Drexel away, with home matches with Seton Hall and Loyola of Baltimore. A few more opponents are hoped to be obtained soon. The first match is a home one with Seton Hall on April 25th.

FAREWELL TO GREATNESS

In the halls that you have walked through,
Near the courts on which you've played,
There will linger there the mem'ry of your mast'ry of the game;
And the seasons that have passed you,
Just as schedules to be made.
Will bear in them a tribute to the greatness of your fame.

Then in voices reminiscent
With perfection of your skill,
Your laurels will be gilded with the gold of echoed praise;
And the young will wide-eyed listen
As the old relive a thrill
That they've treasured from the era of Paul Arizin's College Days.

For no one will shoot a jump shot
Just the way that you did, Paul
Nor will they attain the marksmanship of your left-handed hooks;
Thus, reserved will be the pivot spot
For the master of them all,
And your name will gleam with glory in the dog-carred record books.

So 'round lockers you have dressed in,
On the benches you have sat,
There will hover there the spirit of the master of the court;
And the fans will clutch mem'ry lest
They've seen the last of that Great era of creation that gave you to this great sport.

Warriors Upset By B. M. Hotshots Alumni Still Undefeated With 56-48 Win

By MONDSCHEIN, INC.

Basketball fans following the Resident I.M. loop were treated to two differently contested ball games with opening of Tuesday nite's titlts.

Commencing the evening's activitles, Austin's quintet, after two successive defeats, showed their determination to get back in the win column by unleashing a terrific offensive power thereby unmercifully drubbing the improving Good Counsel five, 83-31. So completely outclassed were the losers that they were reluctant to leave the floor at halftime with a mere 7 points while the victors notched 39 markers. Leading the scoring parade for the assaultees were Lemmer with 17, Scanlon with 14, Rosegen with 12, and Brennen, J. Bogner, and L. Bogner with 10 each. The only successful point production man for the losers was Haggerty who notched half of his team's low output.

A complete reversal of form was witcnessed in the nightcap as Fedigan nosed out Brks. 2&3 by a 60-59 count. The outcome was in doubt throughout the entire game and with only two seconds left in the game, Reismeir missed his first foul shot but made good on his second attempt which proved to be the clinching point in this hard fought affair. That these teams were evenly matched and were scrapping all the way can be easily realized since the teams were deadlocked 31 all as intermission time rolled around. A personal duel took place between Jumping Joe Gaylo of the victors who managed to net 12 field goals and Bob Ruggiero of the losers who garnered 23 points. Aiding in Fedigan's offensive chores were Reismeir and C. Rossin who tabbed 15 and 12 counters respectively. Brennan's 13 and Decker's 9 points was a useless attempt in averting their setback. Refereeing the tilt were Tom Dondero and Dave Jones.

Thursday night's encounters saw Alumni keep their perfect record in tact with Brks. 1&4 supplying the opposition, victimizing them to the tune of 58-46, while the Doms humbled Mendel's five in the preliminary contest 68-35.

In the latter game, the Doms, although minus their scoring ace Bill Knecht, found the scoring range early, mainly through the efforts of Natiello and Heigl. With the end of the game, they had contributed 42 points between them, 26 and 16 respectively. B eahan's 10 and Becotte's 8, added further insurance in administering the rout. Healy's 8 and Billero's 7 were high for the losers.

In the week's finale, Alumni was hard pressed in gaining their fifth straight league triumph and had to be content with a 23-21 half-time advantage. However the final 30 seconds proved the downfall for the fighting Brks. combine as the fast breaking winners netted 8 points to give them a 58-46 victory. Oels and Buckley had 16 points to lead Alumni in their scoring while Tom Flynn's 17 and reliable Tom Madonnia's 15 were the chief contributors for losers. Tooting the whistles for both games were Tony Russo and Tom Mulcahy.

The Dayhop League was in full swing last week as 7 games were played. Most games ran true to expectations but the Bryn Mawr Hot Shots surprised a previously undefeated Warriors outfit by subduing them 40-23. Other Section 1 games saw B. M. Hot Shots top the Kryuhs 72-56, and then the Kryuhs came back on the victory side with a 52-37 conquest of the Engineers. A second defeat was chalked up against the engineers, this time at the hands of the Blackflames by a 57-23 margin. Taking their upset defeat in stride, the Warriors retained their loop dominance by drubbing the Blackflames 52-29 and edging the Educators 42-40.

In the slow moving Section II Loop, only one game was on this week's agenda in which the Cavaliers proved too strong for the Barons, annihilating them 52-37.

This Week's Schedule

JIM LEONARD SINGS THREE YEAR CONTRACT

Wildcat Coach Had 8-1 Record in '49

Villanova's head football coach, Jim Leonard, last week signed a three-year contract which will keep him as Wildcat mentor through the 1952 season.

Leonard was originally hired on a year to year basis but as a result of his excellent performance during the past season his contract was extended. In the 1949 campaign the Wildcat gridders won 8 games and lost one for one of the finest seasons in the history of the school. But this fine club was not invited to a post-season contest which more or less started a precedent.

Leonard, who played collegiate ball at Notre Dame came to Villanova from St. Francis College by way of his asparagus farm in Jersey. He had been inactive for two seasons. During the war Jim coached the Pittsburgh Steelers of the National Football League.

Art Raimo, Larry Kirschling, and Bernie Bradley will stay on as Leonard's assistants during the coming season.

logue, John Rowe, The Citizen, interrupts humorously. His argument is in defense of the every-day man, the person who is never portrayed in plays, and demands that a play be performed to feature the hitherto forgotten average man. He argues that all plays need not involve the nobility and aristocracy. From this point on, the Citizen's desires are realized, as a play is incorporated within the original play. It is the Citizen, a grocer, who bestows the title of the play on his apprentice, Ralph, when he names him The Knight of The Burning Pestle. What today signifies a druggist's trade, that is, the pestle, was in that era the sign of a grocer.

Those participating in the leading female parts are Kathleen Rowan, as Citizen's Wife, and Mary Ann Connor, as Luce, both appearing by the courtesy of The Jest and Gesture Club of Rosemont College.

The play is scheduled to run four evenings, commencing Thursday, March 23rd., up to and including a performance Sunday evening, March 26th. Tickets may be obtained from any member of the cast, and sell for seventy-five cents, student rate, and one dollar, general admission.

Many of the larger universities in the country maintain elaborate laboratories for physical research, which, as a rule, are open to M. S.'s or Ph. D.'s on the faculty. It is worth noting, too, that a large percentage of recent contributions to physical science have come from universities rather than industry.

Educational institutions are, at present, pressing forward the frontiers in low temperature research, cosmic ray, and other nuclear investigations. Perhaps the most popularly known example of original effort is that of Dr. Einstein, who, in one short lifetime, has contributed the general and the special theories of relativity, and has very recently proffered a new unifying field theory. This is admittedly an exceptional case, but it indicates at least the possibilities which exist in the educational atmosphere of freedom and individuality.

Literary Revival Topic Of English Department Talks

"The Catholic literary revival in the world today is following a pattern peculiar to each single country", Rev. John Simons said last week in a lecture sponsored by the English Department. A priest of the Philadelphia diocese, Father Simons has contributed articles to America and Commonweal, and is Assistant Chaplain of the University of Pennsylvania's Newman Club.

The Catholic revival is taking place not only in literature, but in all phases of intellectual and spiritual life, Father Simons stated. France is the key country in the revival, he said, because Paris is the capital of culture and of the opposite extremes of liberalism and tradition.

Father Simons pointed out that the revival in England is flavored by the fact that the country was once Catholic and that the Faith was almost wiped out.

In his next three talks, Father Simons will deal specifically with authors of the Catholic literary revival in France, England, and the United States.

Major Roy Carlson, U. of Iowa, Training Executive, U.S. Air Force!

Born in Red Oak, Iowa, Roy graduated from Thomas Jefferson High School at Council Bluffs. He was ready to enter the University when war changed his mind.

He went to work at Consolidated Vultee in San Diego, building PBY's and B-24's. But it wasn't long until he had put in his application for Aviation Cadet training.

Cadet Carlson won his wings in April, 1943, was assigned to P-47 "Thunderbolts" with the 368th Fighter Group in England, to break ground for the Normandy invasion.

Roy completed 125 combat missions, leading many of them, supporting the invasion and the advances on into Germany. Won Air Medal. D. F. C., many other decorations. Promoted to Captain, then to Major.

Back home, he married the lovely Army nurse from Lowell, Massachusetts, whom he had met at Cannes, France. After the honeymoon, he returned to finish his studies at the University of Iowa.

Major Carlson is now Chief of Operations, 2471st Air Force Reserve Training Center, at O'Hare International Airport, near Chicago. Has two husky sons, a fine job, a great career still ahead of him!

If you are single, between the ages of 20 and 26½, with at least two years of college, consider the many career opportunities as a pilot or navigator in the U. S. Air Force. Procurement Teams are visiting many colleges and universities to explain these career opportunities. Watch for them. You may also get full details at your nearest Air Force Base or U. S. Army and U. At 10:00 o'clock the curtain will drop on what should be one of the best shows accumulated for so worthy a cause. After a twenty-minute intermission, dancing will begin and will last un-Williams Orchestra will supply the music.

Disregarding the fact that such an outstanding cast has been brought together for this tremendous evening the admission will only be two dollars per head. Each body coming without a head will be admitted free.

This variety show will undoubtedly be one of the high points of the stage in this theatre area this season and for many seasons to come. Arrangements are now in process to have even more outstanding talent on the boards of the Field House.

Girls from local colleges are expected to attend the affair as they have attended the bingo-card party dances in past years. In fact, the variety show should have a much better appeal than the parties of past years.

The Library Corner . . .

St. Jerome

Madonna of the Chair

Perhaps you have noticed that in the Reading Room of the Library, on the wall between the two main doors, there hangs an oil painting of a Madonna, enclosed in a large ornate, gold frame. So striking are both the picture and the frame they must have aroused some curiosity in regard to the story behind them. It is true that this picture, like all others, tells a story better than a thousand words, but the story it tells is not of itself. We may examine the painting itself for the emotional effect the artist portrays in his subjects, but for information about the artist and background of the picture, we must consult other sources.

From encyclopedias of art and other books on the subject, here's what we have found: The original painting, of which the one that hangs in the Library is an exact duplicate, is one of the Madonnas, The Madonna of the Chair, painted by Raphael, a famous painter of the Italian Renaissance in the early 16th. century.

Raphael's Madonnas

Most of Raphael's original works were portraits of the Blessed Mother with the Infant, as is this picture that we are discussing. All of these representations were characteristically gentle and lovely, and the Madonnas themselves have been described as, " . . . more human than pious, yet more ideal than realistic. They are all harmoniously balanced, and have pure, oval faces, with refined, regular features."

This Madonna of the Chair is one of the most characteristic and deservedly popular of Raphael's numerous versions of the Virgin and Child motif. It was painted during his visit to Rome, four years before his death in 1520. In it, the Virgin, seated in a chair, clasps Jesus to her bosom with both arms, leaning her head on his. At the right the infant St. John is depicted with his hands clasped in adoration.

The copy in the Library, like the original in the Palazzo Pitti, Florence, is approximately thirty inches in diameter. Its frame is also a copy of the frame on the original, hand carved, and covered with gold leaf to form a fitting enclosure for this "masterpiece of indescribable charm; perhaps the most popular picture ever painted".

Both the reproduction and the frame displayed in the Reading Room were copied in the early 19th. Century, and donated to the Library by Princess Ruspoli of the House of Ruspoli in Rome, Italy.

Symbolism In Art

If it is symbolism that you like to see in a painting, you would no doubt appreciate the picture of St. Jerome on view opposite the portrait of Fr. Fedigan at the stair landing in the Library building. This picture is belived to be an original by Murillo, the Spanish painter of three centuries ago. If not an original, it is at least a fine reproduction that copies the style of Murillo.

Saint Jerome was one of the Fathers of the Church, and author of the Vulgate, the Latin translation of the Scriptures. In this picture he is shown in a penitential pose, kneeling with a crucifix in his left hand, naked except for a cloth that covers his loins and the red robe of a Cardinal over his shoulder. On the rock at which he kneels there is a thick book, and on top of the book, a human skull. In his right hand he holds a stone.

The Saint is shown in this picture, as he is traditionally shown in all his portraits, as an old man with a bald head and long beard, attired in the robes of a Cardinal. The death's head is an allusion to his conquered fear of death, and the stone in his hand, is a token of the penance he inflicted upon himself during his solitary life.

Several Anachronisms

Actually, several of these symbols are anachronism, and are associated with St. Jerome only by tradition. One of these is the use of the Cardinal's robes. In reality, the office of Cardinal was not in existence until three centuries after his death. When the office was created for advisers to the Pope the robes were probably given to Jerome because of the high position the "Cardinal of Bethlehem" held in the early Church, and because he at one time had served Pope Dalmasius in an office that would today correspond to the one of Cardinal.

The crucifix also was not in use as an emblem of devotion until after the death of St. Jerome, but like the robes, were attached to him by pious tradition.

Painter Of The Conceptions

Murillo, is perhaps most famous as the "Painter of the Conceptions", since the Immaculate Conception was the most frequent subject he depicted in oils. He has also painted several well-known pictures of St. Thomas of Villanova, the patron saint of this college.

NFCCS Begins Drive On Campus For Old Clothing

A Passion Week drive of spiritual and material charity began Sunday, under the sponsorship of the Villanova chapter of the National Federation of Catholic College Students, and will continue until next Sunday, April 2.

A campaign of spiritual exercises "for Christ, for Peace" will unite Villanova men with 200,000 Catholic college students throughout the country in an offering of Masses, Communions, rosaries, and other spiritual acts as a Holy Year gift from American Catholic collegians to the Holy Father, Pope Pius XII.

Spiritual bouquet blanks will be distributed to the student body during the week. Students are asked to list the spiritual exercises which they have offered for the Pope's intention, so that Villanova's contribution can be added to the national total.

The material aspect of the Passion Week drive will be a collection of used books and clothing for the intellectual and physical relief of displaced students in Europe whose education has been interrupted by war and exile.

An NFCCS spokesman pointed out that the Federation's Overseas Service Program is trying to provide for all the needs of as many students as possible, in

Publisher's Wife Will Give Final Pre-Cana Lecture

Culmination is inevitable, but seldom so notable, as the final conference, in the Pre-Cana series given on Sunday afternoons of Lent, is held next Sunday in the Commerce and Finance Auditorium at 3:00 P. M. The speaker will be the well-known author-lecturer-publisher, better known to her public as Maisie Ward. Her subject will be "Marriage and the Home."

Co-founder of the Sheed and Ward Publishing house, Maisie Ward has lectured in this country and in Canada, from coast to coast, in England and Scotland, and at the American College in Louvain. She has also lectured at the English Seminary where her grandfather, although a layman, was Professor of Theology.

The five conferences thus far have all been given by qualified speakers who had a real interest in their listeners, as was noticeable in their attitudes. Such will also be the case when Mrs. Sheed, who has had twenty-eight years of experience on the outdoor platforms of the Catholic Evidence Guild, talks to the betrothed.

She has written many well-known books, including "Gilbert Keith Chesterton," "The Splendor of the Rosary," "Insurrection Verses Resurrection," and "This Burning Heat," to mention but a few. She has also given lectures on about fifty different topics.

As a national figure representing the lay Catholic movement in this country, Mrs. Sheed is

Buddy Williams To Play At Seminary Guild's Variety Show In Field House

Ed Roecker To Sing At Annual Affair For The Benefit of Augustinian Seminary

"Wow 'em," a typical expression in show business, is the perfect way to describe the Augustinian Seminary Guild's variety show. Carefully planned to entertain and lift the strain from everyone's shoulders, this year's complete change from the old time bingo-card parties of the past sixteen years is expected to draw more people to the Villanova Field House than any other one-night stand in the building's history.

Cooperating to the fullest extent, as everyone is, the weather man has promised a suitable forecast for the big night, Tuesday, April 18th., or Paul Arizin night plus one.

Nationally known Buddy Williams, who began his career in Philadelphia and worked his way to the top, via Glenn Miller, the Dorsey brothers, Paul Whitman, and other great band leaders of our time, will be one of the "big-name" attractions to be in the show. As M.C. for the evening, Buddy will be using his regular talent, "One Ton of Fun!". and

Belle Masque Receives Plaudits For Success of Elizabethan Comedy

By Frank Pitocchelli

Those of us who heard of the unusual, read about it, but were not satisfied until we saw it, had an interesting experience last week. The tremendous undertaking by the Belle Masque dramatic society proved its worth and those who missed a performance of the Beaumont and Fletcher comedy, passed up an opportunity that many refued to ignore.

The ingenuity and labor behind the Belle Masque play, The Knight of the Burning Pestle, was expended in the interests and love of an art to which this group denied imperfection. Planning an Elizabethan play is not an every-day affair, and Villanova has been the third College from this area to undertake such a production. A stage simulated to that of the Globe Theatre was a prerequisite; actors had to be trained to read a different style poetry and adapt themselves to precision stage direction. The absence of scene changes in the usual manner was symbolic of the fast-moving drama in Shakespeare's time. An Elizabethan stage provided for an appreciation of the drama as it was presented in that era.

In giving credit where credit is due, one generally takes the work of the stage crew as granted. Anyone remotely appreciative of the dramatic art will testify the indispensable service this group represents to any production, for without them, the best actors are powerless. It is with no uncertain words that the Belle Masque stage crew is to be congratulated for their completed task in reproducing such an imposing set of the Globe Theatre.

The play began with a carefully enunciated Prologue by Robert Resnick, which was immediately interrupted by the demands of The Citizen, a grocer, played by John Rowe, seeking recognition of plays to be performed in honor of the common man rather than the nobility or aristocracy. His entrance from the rear of the theatre was effective and dynamic and he was followed by his wife, Kathleen Rowan, with his apprentice, Ralph, played by Richard Lauman. Their antics throughout the play controlled the plot in a sober yet entertaining manner.

John Paul Kelly, in the person of Merrythought, played his part in typical "opera buffo" fashion and his varied songs kept the audience hilariously disposed. The Mistress Merrythought and her son, played by Ellen Solodow and Robert Quinn, acted their parts in an impressive and convincing tone. The

Three Weeks Left In Queen Contest

During the past week we have had many inquiries about this Queen of Junior Week Contest. For the benefit of those who are not willing to part with the pictures of their "one out of many", we will take another photo from those submitted and the pictures will be returned within a week.

At any rate there are only three weeks more of school time in which to submit these pictures, so we would like to see some action from the Juniors. Pictured below are some of the lovely girls who have already been entered in the contest.

Sentiment vs. Reason

The papers have been full of stories and editorials about mercy killings for the past three months and most of these articles have indicated a sympathy for the killer. Naturally, the issue is touchy and so many people have let sentiment overrule reason that the papers are catering to this element.

The church has again made a stand for right reason as it had in the questions of divorce and birth control. The church is not being influenced by public sentiment which will make it out an unfeeling ogre. The stand against mercy killing has come about in Manchester, New Hampshire where two Catholic hospitals have refused to allow the recently acquitted mercy killer, Doctor Herman Sander, to practice in their wards. The charge against Dr. Sander is malpractice.

The heads of the Church have made their position clear and it is up to the laity to take as determined a position for the cause of moral right. The need is obvious as evidenced by the proceeding in a small up-state Pennsylvania town where the townspeople have rallied to build a fund for the defense of a "mercy killer". Of course, the motivations are admirable. It is neighborliness at its best, but the truth is overlooked. The man whom they wish to save is a killer. It is hoped that the Catholic citizens have not let their reason be swept out of the way by overwhelming public sentiment. They must see the truth, recognize it, and standby it.

The Catholic church is being called on more and more to defend right reason and so responsibility lies also on the laity to set the proper example.

Easter Nears

As Lent comes to a close, the church celebrates Passion Sunday. The statues and crosses are covered with purple so that attention will be focused on the altar where is re-enacted the sacrifices that Christ made almost two thousand years ago on Calvary. During this season the church recalls the most important events in the life of Christ, the Saviour, our Lord. That is His passion, death and resurrection.

Radios begin to blare an old favorite called "Easter Parade"; the ladies spend hours at the milliners picking out a new bonnet; and the youngsters hear stories about the Easter bunny who, like Santa, brings new togs, toys and candy for them. All these sentimental, extraneous practices have become accepted adornments at Easter time. In themselves they are good, and yet, let's not let them becloud from view the true meaning of the Easter season.

There is enough of the material to take up all the rest of the year. We should take some special measure of the spirit of this season. All who profess Christianity, all who call Christ: Lord and Saviour, should celebrate this season with the respect it deserves. It is a time when we should have a deeper realization of what our Lord suffered for each of us. Easter offers the opportunity for many to regain the spiritual drive and ambition that has been lost.

"Unless Christ be risen again from the dead, your faith is in vain, and you are still in your sins." Such is the importance of Easter Sunday. For the fact that Christ did rise again do we offer at mass, for the first time since the begining of Lent: "Glory to God in the highest . . . "

By JIM GRIFFIN

"Congress shall make no law respecting the establishment of religion, or prohibiting free exercise thereof."

Perhaps no other sentence could more tersely sum up the outlook of the constitutions's authors than the concise first amendment. It was a guarantee of benevolence and non-intervention to religion in the new democracy. And its purpose was obvious: to prevent hindrances or restrictions upon religion, so that it might be certified that religion would remain an integral part of American life. It was therefore framed as an encouragement and an aid to religion.

An Admirable Plan

But the first amendment is losing its meaning. The words are being twisted to wring from them new implications, and meanings different from those intended by their authors. That this is true is evidenced by the recent Supreme Court decision concerning the use of public schools for the teaching of religion in Champaign, Illinois.

A group of religious leaders in Champaign had arranged a plan whereby they might make use of local public school classrooms to give religious instruction. The plan was approved by the local school board. It should be emphasized that no single religion or group of religions was favored; the plan was open to all religious leaders on the same basis.

Atheism Is Heard

Apparently someone in Champaign found it disagreeable that a means was being offered for fellow citizens to come to know God. Mrs. McCollum, an avowed atheist, protested, and carried the case to the Supreme Court. And there the honorable justices handed down the myopic judgment that "the use of tax-supported property for religious instruction" and "the close cooperation between the school authorities and the religious council in promoting religious education . . . falls squarely under the ban of the first amendment."

Rip Tide

Such a decision should not be passed over by anyone who believes in God, for it is a definite threat to his right to a belief; it is an indication of a shifting tide, a trend from a paternal attitude toward religion to a disinterested one, tinged almost with passive belligerence. And when such a tide begins to run, we ought to battle to stem it lest it carry off the foundation upon which our freedom is built.

THE VANISHING COLLEGIAN

By BILL BRENINGHOUSE

Not long ago Oscar Twomp was seated on a stool at a local ice cream parlor watching a basketball game on television. There were also a few others there who couldn't swing the wherewithal to make a pilgrimage to the Palestra. Midway in the second half a stranger entered and sat down at the ba. . . . counter, that is. During a time out Oscar managed to get a good look at this stranger.

What A Character

This boy was amazing. He was wearing a brown baggy tweed suit, Scotch-grained shoes, a white button-down collar white shirt and a red and white-striped knit tie. He strode confidently up to the mahogany slab, placed his size 13 shoe on the brass rail and ordered a soda, a scotchend soda. This young gentleman certainly did not go to the same school as Oscar. All he had to do was look around at his companions to realize this. The youngsters watching the television were dressed in dungarees, T-shirts, (green for marines) and several varieties of flight jackets. They were unshaven and drank nothing but foaming birch beer. Then he began to realize that this breed was going out, that the fellow in the tweeds was coming back. Public Laws 92-8376 and 0003985 were losing their grip on the colleges of the country. Before long the only people going to college will be the ones that can afford it.

The Trend

Now there are three leagues in the East. There is the Ivy League, with schools like Penn and Princeton. Next, comes the psuedo Ivy League. Haverford and Rutgers typify this. And then comes the Poison Ivy League. The PIL is made up of schools like the one Oscar attends. Before the war 90% of the people who went there paid their own way, the old man did, that is. After the war the government footed the bill for 90% of the students. Now the pendulum is swinging toward the old man again.

Soon Oscar will be seeing his school go collegiate. Already he spies the white bucks and gray flannels that point out the Ivy Leaguer. It won't be long before he will be seeing racoon coats on the campus. He weeps to think that boys from this school will soon go to the games, not to see, but to be seen. The Public Law Collegian is slowly vanishing or is being absorbed by the Rah-rah Collegians.

But Oscar Is Safe

By the time he finished with his thoughts provoked by the tweedy individual Oscar discovered that the ball game was over and that the man behind the counter was putting away the ice cream scoops. Oscar slowly got off his stool and walked out to the bus stop. As he boarded the last bus, his spirits were raised. There, on that public conveyance, was a large group of dissipated college men, some dazed, some bewildered but all true to the tenets of the Public Law Collegian, even though many had only adopted the garb and habits of the government supported boys. Oscar sighed a joyful sigh when he realized that he will graduate before these fine traditions die.

For Your Guests By Herb Mathews

(Editor's Note — During the next few weeks this column will contain information regarding places to stay and various restaurants in the Metropolitan Area. This information should prove helpful to those Resident students who will be having out of town guests for such events as Junior Week, and the Graduation week-end.)

For those who would like to accommodate their guests somewhere outside of the city there are quite a number of conveniently located and comfortable small hotels and Lodges which have excellent dining rooms attached.

Strath Haven

The Strath Haven Inn in Swarthmore is noted for its fine cuisine and beautiful country location. Although a little out of the way as far as public transportation is concerned, it is easily reached by car. The rooms are of a nice size, are attractive and less expensive than the downtown hotels. A small inn of this type might be a change for former visitors to the Quaker Town, giving a pleasanter aspect of Philadelphia hospitality for less money.

Drexelbrook

A little closer to the Campus in the Drexel Hill area a new inn is making a play for its share of popularity. We are referring to the new Drexelbrook Inn and Lodge. The Inn has sixteen double rooms and one two room suite. The main dining room — The Williamsburg Room — is large and well decorated. Curt Weiler plays the piano during the cocktail hour and later for dinner and dancing the Drexelbrook Society Band takes over on the band-stand. Out from the Main room there is a huge terrace which will be used for dining and dancing during the warm weather. This terrace overlooks the adjacent Swimming and Tennis Club grounds. On a Sunday morning the breakfast served in the Hunt room is worth looking into. Room rates are cheaper than downtown hostelries and the food prices are standard.

Haverford Court

Out Main Line way we find the Haverford Court Hotel which is very conveniently located. This fine hotel has an excellent reputation. Both room rates and menu prices are moderate. Situated across the road from the Merion Cricket Club, the Haverford Court is a very attractive building and is only a five minute drive from the college campus down Montgomery Pike.

Next Week

Next week this column will feature information on some of the finer restaurants in the Metropolitan area and some more hotels and Inns. If anyone is contemplating accommodating their guest as any of the above mentioned places we recommend early reservations since their quarters are somewhat limited.

As soon as Louis Prima and his family move out of the Click, and it can't be too soon, one of the better new bands in the country will move in to really play pretty for the people and provide satiny strains for the Velvet Fog. Ray Anthony is rapidly making a reputation for himself as a band that plays the kind of music everyone likes. Such an undertaking is rare in modern times when most bands concentrate on a certain element of the listening public.

His Style

Not boppish nor dixie, neither overly sweet nor progressive, definitely not hillbilly, it is difficult to place him in any particular category. Merely let it suffice to say that for an evenings dancing it is difficult to beat Anthony and his orchestra, not to mention a truly melodious trumpet. The other half of the program, Mel Torme, is guaranteed to put your date way up on a pink cloud. It's up to you to get her down to your level. Definitely not a singer with a beat, Torme can really create a mood when working over one of the better ballads. Often criticized because of his boyish manner and soft voice, he has proven that he has what it takes to hold an audience. Together, these two should swell the coffers of Frank Palumbo, or at least appease music lovers after Prima's travesty.

Off The Record

For those of you who don't care for the cuisine here at Lucky Pierre's Grog Shop, I have a solution. Close your eyes and get yourself a senior from Immaculata, they're allowed to have guests during their stay in the Practice House. Insurance all paid up?

In last week's "Around the Town" column the currently popular "Young Man With a Horn" was quite adequately reviewed from a movie goers standpoint and except to say that the movie version was changed considerably from Dorothy Baker's original story I won't attempt to explain away what Hollywood did to the life story of the one and only Bix Biederbecke. However on the musical side the movie offers some fine vocalizing by Doris Day and just about the best horn Harry James has played since he foretook happy bachelorhood and took unto himself a wife. Grable, that is!

Something Worth Noting

On wax this week I'd like to mention a new release by Alan Dale which probably has its greatest claim to fame in the fact that it is completely lacking in schmaltz. "This Is Heaven To Me" is a good song some what on the style of "Old Man River" and the Dale version of it is just a nice easy bit of crooning with out the numerous frills and fancy intonations so overdone in this, the Vaughn and Eckstein era.

Dorsey Dixie

Under the heading of the new sounds in Jazz music it's interesting to note that Jimmy Dorsey is attempting to play Dixieland with his full size band and doing a rather nice job at it. He has waxed several old standbys to date and although usually played by smaller combos the numbers have lent themselves admirably to the large band setup. Could be the opening of another new horizon in pop music so keep your eye on it. And so till next week.

Sense and Nonsense

— Tom Pasha

Opportunity

Willie Gotnodough, a former resident of South Podunck Junction who is now attending Putcherdoughdown College, received a notice recently to the effect that it would be possible for him to obtain a cubicle on the campus for the future football semester, providing, of course, that he complied with the necessary regulations. Overwhelmed with the joy of obtaining a room in an honest-to-goodness stone and brick dormitory (up until this time he had spent his collegiate days in a Victory Mansion), Willie was blinded to the proceedings which are impossible to bypass when acquiring a new abode.

But First

First of all, there was a slight deposit stipulation which called for a sum of $3.45 which was to guarantee him space in one of the palatial, old English-type structures. As his surname implies, Willie, met with some difficulty in trying to obtain this vast sum. In fact, he had to sell his tux and gargoyle stockings in order to scrape enough lucre together to take out this vital insurance policy.

The Big Day

The day for registration arrived and having been assured of a room, our hero leisurely made his way down to the polling booth to pick his chit for his new sack space. Upon reaching the selection bureau, however, tuxless Willie, was confronted with a new found problem. For here in the early hours of the morning he was greeted with a long line of bewhiskered, baggy-eyeballed Putcherdoughdownians who were either victims of overstudy or of a just plain sleepless night. Inquiring about, Willie found the latter to be the case and that these men had been in line since the preceeding Saturday. Still confident of his plight, our friend took his respective place at the end of the line which extended down to the boiler room and waited for his number to come up on the board.

Worth Its

Four hours later, Williyam, entered the quiet of the contract room and, after being rebuffed at several of his selections, settled for a room suggested by the checker. It was a corner room

Around The Town

By F. A. VARALLO

The frozen Canadian Northwoods supply the beautiful setting for "Mrs. Mike", a film drama with strong human interest. Adapted from the best-seller by Benedict and Nancy Freednam, "Mrs. Mike" is a chronicle of the courage and suffering on the Canadian frontiersman around the turn of the century.

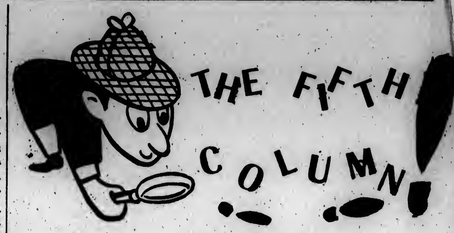
Icy Wilderness

The story gets off to a rather slow start with the long-drawn out courtship of Kathy O'Fallon, Boston girl, and Sergeant Mike Flannigan, a handsome Royal Canadian Mountie. Evelyn Keyes and Dick Powell are cast in these leading roles. Although Mike protests that "the frozen Canadian north is no place for a woman", it's only a matter of time before he gives in and consents to take his bride to Hendrick's Hope, a small trading post in the wilds. By the time they've mushed about 400 miles by dog sled, Kathy begins to wish she were back in Boston. The loneliness, fear, disease and death which surround her is almost unbearable.

Tragic Climax

When she finds that she's going to have a baby, she asks Mike to take her back to "civilization". Well, they move to Fort Manette, a larger settlement, and a cute baby girl is born. Tragedy strikes in the form of a diphtheria epidemic. The serum runs out, and their baby dies along with most everybody else in the neighborhood. Kathy decides that she can endure no more. "I'm going back where human beings have a chance to live," she says. Sadly Mike lets her go and meanwhile is transferred back to Hendrick's Hope. When he gets there he finds that Kathy has returned to him, determined to stick to the bitter end.

Realism Lacking



The screen version of "Mrs. Mike" doesn't quite come up to par when compared with the best-seller. In fact, those who enjoyed the book are apt to be a little disappointed in the Hollywood treatment of this story. It is not that any of the rugged atmosphere of living in the wilds has been omitted. In fact, the film is liberally sprinkled with howling wolves, epidemics, and amputations. But all these details seem unreal and unimportant. One gets the impression that he is watching a group of actors, appropriately costumed and groomed for the particular situation.

Adequate Cast

Evelyn Keyes turns in an adequate, if not too effective performance as Kathy, while Dick Powell is credible in the role of the Mountie. J. M. Kerrigan appears as Miss Keyes uncle; Chief Yowlatchie as a comedy Indian; Angela Clarke as a friendly neighbor; and Will Wright as the wilderness doctor.

Those who enjoy their film fare on the tearful side will find "Mrs. Mike" entertaining. It is now playing at the Goldman Theater.

By KUHN and KEATS

This week only half of us is here. Our cohort, Kuhn, packed his spare head in a suitcase and took what is commonly known as a field trip. And, undoubtedly, he is resting comfortably in some nice field this very moment. While we are on the subject we may as well give a sip-by-sip account of this educational institution.

The primary requisite for a field trip is to enrich the student's understanding of the course. Let us take an example. Should you, by some mistake of course, register for Room Reservation 101 your field trip would have come last week. Since we have moved off campus and have taken up eating this last semester we did not take the sendi-Mendel journey this year but word from the front restores our faith in dogs and leads us to believe that our fellow students are vultures.

Although there has been little bloodshed over the years we have heard of cases involving kidnapping and other violent means being used. And all for the sake of a room in Good Council or a dry spot in the swimming pool. The climax came last week, however, when two seniors waited all night so that they might be the first to make reservations. Little did they know that, contrary to public opinion, Miss Carr could not get them permanent possession of two stools at the Penn House.

Well, strangely enough it's Spring. Spring, when a young man's fancy turns to things that women have been thinking of all year long. Spring, when all the little idiots leave Austin Hall and begin acting like Big Idiots.

Lest we forget. Some followers of this column have asked why we haven't used their names in recent weeks. To satisfy their whims we submit a list of campus characters who, for reasons unknown, think they are important enough to have their names in ink: Jack Sherry, Bob Stockings, Bob Olmsted, Bill Greany and all the little canasta-crazy cellmates. Also Patti Pumpernickle who wants a field goal (two points) for Rosemont and a free ticket to South Pacific.

Just to make sense for a while we would like to throw the following tidbits in. Tickets to the East-West game may be secured at the Publicity Office. There are only 100 being offered so get yours before it's too late. When this supply runs out you can get them directly by writing to the New York Herald Tribune, just add 25 cents for mailing. Prices range from $1.50 to $6.00.

You need not waste your time reading the rest of this because we ran out of words but not out of space and we must continue. Are you still reading? We said it wouldn't be worth your time. That's the trouble with some guys, always want their money's worth. Look, why don't you just jump over to the sports page or something?? What are you prejudice against studying?? What some guys will do just not to pick up a book. Well, we've filled our spot and you haven't learned a thing. Life gets weary, don't it?

Dancers Begin Practice For Turf and Tinsel Show

Anyone entering the Field House last week to watch the Belle Masque rehearsal would have stopped in the lobby to figure out just what he saw there. Quickly he would have realized that it was Spring again, and that the Turf and Tinsel Club had started to practice for their next production, "Piper-Heidsieck, '98".

George Noake has two high-spirited dancing choruses under his tutelage. So far they have gone into rehearsal with an old-fashioned Polka, a Viennese Waltz and a Beach Dance. These require great precision, and the dancers must train themselves severely into "basketball team" condition.

As in the last two years, the dancing is to be the highlight of the show, and this year it promises to surpass all previous successes. The gay nineties setting will have the men doing dances their parents used to do. Three of the eighteen dancers are veterans. Vince Cella returns to the boards for the third year after having danced in the last two productions, while Mike DeSantis and Tom Fucigna are holdovers from last year.

Steve Flinn, Jim Hartnett, Dick Conner, Phil Meads, Paul Hughes, Pete Gutwald, Bob Lovelace, Bill Duffy, John Redmond, Gene Rosenquist, Arthur DiVittis, Pat Rafferty, Henry Schmitt, and Jerry Norton are all making their dancing debuts in "Piper-Heidsieck '98". Al Hevey and Bob Quinn, both one-year veterans will join the group after Belle Masque closes.

Five "can-can" girls will be picked from this group, and so the Field House will resemble a dancing studio from now until May 12th.

Faculty Attends Weekend Retreat

St. Rita's Chapel, seldom mentioned in news stories, was the scene of the second Annual Lay-Faculty Retreat this past weekend. About thirty-five professors attended the session which began Saturday morning at 9:30 o'clock with the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass.

Reverend Dermot McArdle, C. P., from St. Mary's Monastery, Dunkirk, New York, was the Retreat Master. He has done this type of work in many parts of the country.

The Retreat closed Sunday afternoon after Father McArdle led the faculty members in a Holy Hour which included Benediction before the Blessed Sacrament.

Initiated last year with the approval of the College President, at the request of the faculty members themselves, the Lay-Faculty Retreat has become another one of the annual occasions looked forward to each year by the lay-faculty members.

NAVY FORMAL AT CRICKET CLUB TO BILL VILLANOVANS

According to the latest announcement by Emil Borgers, chairman of the Recreation Committee, the Villanovans dance orchestra will provide the music for the third annual N.R.O.T.C. dance to be held at the Merion Cricket Club on Friday, April 21st. In order to provide continuous entertainment Gene Valerio has been engaged to play the piano during the intermissions.

A new procedure has been inaugurated this year which will enable those Midshipmen intending to bring dates from out-of-town to accommodate them at the Haverford Court Hotel. Special arrangements will be made for those desiring to avail themselves of this opportunity.

An added inducement calculated to arouse more enthusiasim among the Midshipmen is the announcement by Treasurer Joseph Friend that the Recreation Committee intends to underwrite the expenses of the dance with money supplied by the unit's Welfare Fund.

The affair will be formal, with the Midshipmen attending in dress blue uniforms. Present plans call for invitations to be sent to all former graduates of the unit as well as to those officers previously connected with it.

Lambda Kap's Dinner-Dance Scheduled For Palumbo's

It was announced today that Lambda Kappa Delta, the Pre-Med Fraternity, will hold its annual dinner-dance at Palumbo's Restaurant, one of Philadelphia's famous eating places, on April 22nd. All the profs of the Biology Department have been invited along with their wives.

The semi-formal dance is under the direction of Mario Piazzola, and tickets may be obtained either from him, from Murray Seitchik, Fraternity president, or at the next meeting of the group. The next meeting will signal the last call for ducats. Piazzola also announced that a show will accompany the dinner.

The menu for the dinner includes: Palumbo cocktail, Fruit Cup, Spaghetti and Ravioli with meat sauce, half of roasted milk fed chicken, and Italian-made Ice Cream.

This dinner-dance will bring to a close a very active year for the group. In addition to the Inter-Frat Ball and many smokers the fraternity has had guest speakers at every meeting, including such outstanding men as: Rev. Edward J. McCarthy, O.S.A. of Villanova who spoke on medical school admissions; Dr. Kennedy, Asst. Dean of the U. of Pa. Medical School; Dr. Timmini, Dean of the Temple University Dental School, and finally Dr. Tropea, Associate Surgeon at Hahnemann Hospital, specializing in cancer, whose talk was on his special field.

Bussolari Club Starts Drive For More Members

At a meeting of the Bussolari International Affairs Society last Thursday evening, Leroy Kendall, president, called for a membership drive. The organization is particularly interested in enrolling members from the Freshman Class.

A report was given by club members Joe Tyszkiewicz and Frank Duffy concerning their participation in a Forum on March 17th. at the University of Pennsylvania. The topic of the forum was "Should Jerusalem Be Placed Under Trusteeship of the United Nations."

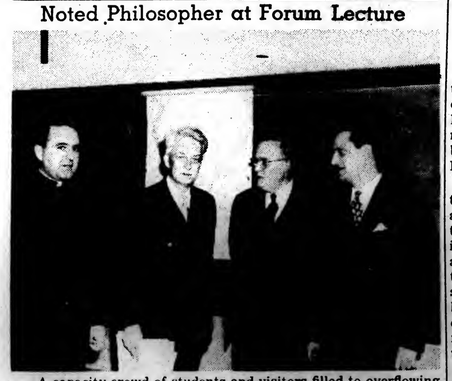
Roger Hanafin, Secretary, represented the Society in a radio program made for transcription for overseas consumption; the Foreign Affairs Council of Philadelphia sponsored the project to induce correspondence between the United States and European college students.

The Bussolari Society meeting discussed a proposal to participate in a trip to the U. N. sponsored by the Foreign Affairs Council of Philadelphia for some time in mid-April.

For the information of Freshmen interested in joining the Society, Kendall outlined the objectives of the club. First, the club is the only international affairs society on campus; its main objectives are to afford the student body a medium for discussion of international affairs with other college organizations.

Second, the club, endeavors to stimulate a broader interest in international affairs. During the year, the club attended many college conferences held under the sponsorship of the Foreign Affairs Council of Philadelphia, to which belong twenty-five area colleges, Catholic and secular. At each conference, the delegates discuss one problem current before the U. N.; a speaking delegate and two advisors attend from each college. These conferences are held once every five weeks.

This year, the Bussolari Society's season will last into the middle of May.



Delta Pi Epsilon Plans Meeting; Looks To Collect Membership Dues

John Weglicki, president of the Delta Pi Epsilon fraternity, of the School of Commerce and Finance, has announced that the next meeting of the group will be held on March 30th. at 7:30 P. M., in 215 Mendel.

The fraternity leader stressed that all members should make a conscientious effort to attend this meeting as it will bear much importance in respect to social activities for the remainder of the academic year. He also stated that as required by the by-laws all Sophomore members of the group must have their fraternity dues paid in full at this meeting or they will be subject to expulsion from the fraternity at the next regular assembly. Upperclass members must also have their dues paid up or they will be subjected to a fine.

It was also announced that March 30th. will also be the deadline for ordering fraternity mugs. A two dollar deposit is necessary and no more orders will be accepted after the meeting date.

Noted Philosopher at Forum Lecture

A capacity crowd of students and visitors filled to overflowing the C & F Auditorium on Monday night, March 20th. to hear the noted Catholic philosopher, Jacques Maritain, deliver a lecture on "The Rights of Man and Natural Law." Maritain, who has been described as, "the most powerful force in contemporary philosophy," is shown in the picture above with Rev. F. X. N. McGuire, O.S.A., President of this college, and Mr. Charles P. Bruderle, Assistant Professor of History and Chairman of the Villanova Forum.

The topic of the lecturer, stated Chairman Bruderle, was appropriate in keeping with general purpose of the Forum, " . . . to bring the message of the Gospel to the public platform where it justly belongs". In his talk this small, slightly-built philosopher traced the history of the rights of man as bounded to the history of the natural law. He gave as an optimum standard a situation in which both the obligations and the rights demanded by natural law are recognized in society.

At the end of this second successful season for the Villanova Forum, Chairman Bruderle would like to extend his thanks to all who have by their interest aided in the success of this cultural and timely undertaking.

'CATS SCRIMMAGE DELA: SHOW FINE OFFENSIVE POWER

D'Alonzo Brilliant 'Cats Score 5 T.D.s

The initial spring scrimmage took place Saturday afternoon as the Wildcats squared off against the University of Delaware. The lack of condition was evident in the 'Cats play. The weather has been against Jim Leonard's charges but their performance was very pleasing to the mentor.

Kerwin & Smith Standout

The starting lineup was composed of Bogan and Rilo at end; Mantone, Kerwin at tackle; Liotta and Mamalo at guard; Joe Howanski, center; O'Boyle at quarter; Frinze and Padula at halfback and D'Alonzo at fullback. The tussle got underway with the Blue and White scoring the first time they had the pigskin. Pete D'Alonzo crashed off tackle for 15 yards; O'Boyle passed to Bogan for 20 and Bill Padula went up the middle to score. The Blue Hens offense was completely stalled by Villanova's hard charging line. There was no scoring for the rest of the half as the defensive play was vicious. Tom Smith and Mike Kerwin were defensive standouts.

The second stanza saw the Blue Hens take to the air and march 65 yards to hit paydirt. The longest gain of this drive was a 35-yard aerial.

D'Alonzo Runs Wild

With the first string backfield in the game the 'Cats had possession on their own 30-yard line. At this point Pete D'Alonzo took over as he smashed his way up to midfield and on the next play went up the middle for 50 yards to tally. The 'Cats struck again as Neil O'Boyle's accurate arm found freshmen end Joe Rustic for a six pointer.

The boys from Delaware scored again on a 30-yard pass.

Wildcat Star on Road for 20 Contests

Villanova basketball fans will have at least two more chances to see All-American Paul Arizin in action before he turns professional.

This Saturday, April 1, Paul will play in the New York Herald-Tribune East-West game in Madison Square Garden. Paul will be playing with and against an all-star team composed of such famous players as Bob Cousy of Holy Cross, Chuck Cooper of Duquesne, and Ohio State's Dick Schnittker.

This game, which is a charity contest, is the most famous of the post-season exhibitions and, with all the great seniors this season, should certainly be a good show. It will be particularly interesting to note Arizin, with 20 shots per game, playing with others who take many more shots but who have become classified on a par with the Wildcats' star.

Tickets for the game may be purchased for one dollar in the publicity office. The game will be televised.

Play in Chicago First

Immediately after the East-West game Arizin will commence a tour with College All-Stars playing the Harlem Globetrotters. This tour will start in Chicago on the second of April and continue until the nineteenth in Buffalo. The All-Stars will hit the Arena in Philly on the eighteenth, Pittsburgh on the seventeenth and Boston on the sixteenth. New York is not included in the itinerary.

Tickets for this game, which will find Paul again playing against Chuck Cooper, will also be on sale at school.

Lud Wray, Former Penn Star, Is New Line Coach

Was Assistant At Penn, Holy Cross

Lud Wray, rightly termed as one of the deans of football has returned to the pigskin scene as line coach of the Mainliners.

The former Penn football star and head coach of the Quakers in 1930 joined Jim Leonard and his staff last Wednesday at the first formal practice of the season. Wray has been noted for the past three decades as one of the great defensive coaches in the game.

Wray's last coaching assignment before coming to the Wildcats was at Camden Catholic High School last year when he produced a very successful club. Besides coaching at Penn, Lud also was line coach for the Philadelphia Eagles and the Pittsburgh Steelers in the National Football League.

1942 Best Season

Perhaps his most famous season was in 1942 when he was line coach under Ank Scanlan at Holy Cross. That year the Crusaders pulled one of the most famous upsets in the history of the game by dumping high-flying Boston College, 55-12.

Recently, Wray started in business for himself working in the asbestos and insulation line. He said that if business was good by the time the football season rolls around that he will travel with the Cats on their cross-country jaunts. However, should business demand his attention he will be staying home.

Lud's first practice with the Main Liners was last Wednesday as he gave the line workouts on the buckers.

M'KENNA SETS NEW MARK FOR 600 AS CATS SCORE 39 PTS.

Irish Wins 50, Mile Relay Victor Twice

Villanova's track team wound up their indoor season last Saturday night by retaining their A. A. U. championship. In the meet held in Camden's Convention Hall the Wildcats scored a total of 39 points to snare the title for the second year in a row.

Browning Ross turned in the most outstanding individual performance, by winning the mile in 4:26.8 and the two mile in 9:389. His two mile time constitutes a new record and shatters the old mark of 9:43.1 set by Herman Goffberg in 1948. Villanova also picked up valuable points in the mile when George Thompson took second to Ross to put this event on ice for the 'Cats.

'Cats Sweep 600

The Blue and White also scored a sweep in the six hundred. In the first heat, in which final placing was on a time basis, Jimmy McKenna was first and Pete Simigan was second. McKenna's time was 1:16.4. Joe McCreary also won his heat in 1:18.4 to rank third behind Simigan in the final standings. McKenna's time breaks the old meet and track record. He established the old track mark of 1:17.2 last year; while the old meet record of 1:16.5 was set by Witters of Penn in 1939.

BROWNING ROSS

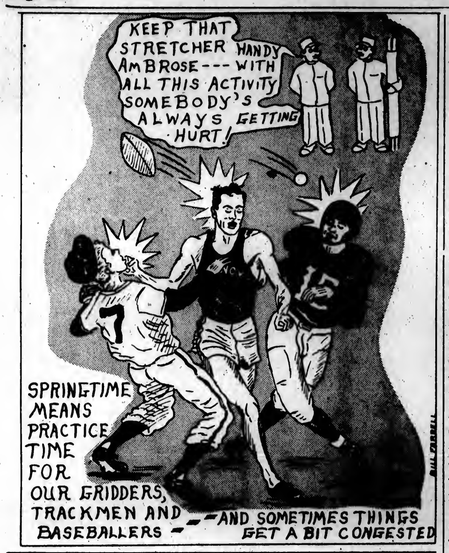
Irish Wins 50



Tom Irish won his trial heat in the 50-yard dash, and then went all the way to win first place in the finals. His time was 05.6 seconds which was good enough to nose out Bill Richards, unattached, and Dick Davis of Temple.

Villanova also went wild in the mile relay. Not only did the "A" team capture first place, but the "B" squad was right there to take second place honors. The time of the winners who ran with Larry O'Brien, McCreary, McKenna, and Jack Holmes, was 3:145.

Small Track Ups Times

The times turned in by the different performers do not accurately measure their true ability as any casual observer might guess. The track at Camden's Convention Hall is merely a flat floor, and quite small, in fact not much bigger than the average gymnasium. When one conjures the times made on other tracks and times made at Camden it becomes evident just how

Volley Ball Tournament Set For After Easter

Two new features to the improved Intramural program have been announced by Mr. Powers, Intramural Athletic Director. The additions are a volley ball tournament which will begin after the Easter vacation and a track meet to take place on the Thursday of Junior Week.

The volley ball tournament will be an elimination affair with no restriction on the number of teams competing. Games will be played on the basis of the best two out of three sets with the winner going on in the tourney while the loser will be completely eliminated.

Six Man Teams

Teams for the tournament will be composed of six men with one man designated as manager. The name of the team, its members, the manager's address and phone number, and the time that the them is able to play must be given to Mr. Powers in the Education Office or to the Sports Editor of the VILLANOVAN.

All games will be played in Alumni Hall gym at the convenience of the competing teams. Schedules and results of the tournament will be published in this paper.

Part of Junior Week

The track meet which has been scheduled as a feature of Junior week will be an interclass meet with the Senior, Junior, Sophomore and Freshman classes entering teams. These teams are to be coached by members of the varsity from the respective classes. Medals are to be awarded by the Junior Class and it is hoped that the Inter-Class Track Meet will become an integral part of Junior Week. Further information will be forthcoming.

Wildcats Scrimmage

Al Derose, a freshmen center, intercepted a Blue Hen aerial and raced fifty yards just as the two-hour scrimmage came to an end.

Linemen Experienced

It was the fans first view of next year's team and left everyone satisfied. The club has a solid starting combination and the freshmen and varsity substitutes are playing fine ball. Mike Kerwin, right tackle played an excellent brand of ball Saturday. He broke up many passes and was in on a blocked kick. Freshmen Joe Rustic came to Villanova with a fine reputation and now we know why. Joe is a fine offensive and defensive end plus being a fine kicker. The experienced men such as Bogan, Rilo, Liotta, Marrallo, Mantone and Howanski gave notice that they will be a tough forward wall to crack next year.

The backfield prospects have shaped up into a fine offensive unit. In Neil O'Boyle at quarterback the Wildcats have a cool performer and fine ball handler. Mickey Frinzi, Bill Padula and John Geppi will be dangerous runners who can go the distance. Pete D'Alonzo will be murder at fullback.

There were no serious injuries to show for the afternoon's work, Mike Kerwin received a cut eye and Pete D'Alonzo's little finger was scraped but no plasma was necessary.

Trackmen Capture

much of a handicap the runners are under. For example Ross has run better than 4:14 in the mile this year, McKenna has done 1:12.4 in the 600 and the mile relay team has broken 3.22 on several occasions.

This victory was a fitting close to one of the most successful indoor season in Villanova's athletic history. The eindermen will now have the next three weeks to rest up from the arduous winter campaign, but at the same time preparing for the outdoor season. It will be a vacation insofar as there will be no competition until the Seton Hall relays on April 22, but of course practice goes on forever.

Alumni Drops Austin To Third Place As Good Council Upsets Fedigan

By MONDSCHEIN INC.

Just as OI' Man River keeps dolling along, so also Alumni keept rolling along on its winning ways as they toppled their arch-rivals Austin, 65-54. Fr. McLaughlin used his reserves throughout most of the game thus high scoring honors were divided among three reserves, Decker with 18 points, Moore with 17, and O'Donnell with 13. Bobby Oelz again played his stellar floor game and also held Austin's scoring ace, Bill Lemmer, to 3 points. Tom Brennan led Austin with 16 counters with Rosegen garnering 11. This defeat dropped Austin to third place behind Alumni and the Doms. Officials for the contest were Sickler and McDermott.

The surprise of the entire season occured in the nightcap when a stroni Fedigan combine succumbed to a greatly improved Good Council squad 49-40. It was the first triumph for Good Council in either half of the basketball race and was a well deserved victory. Good Council was led by the spirited play of Owczykoski who tallied 16 points and Mulcahy who tossed in 13 markers. The fine defensive play of Saganowich, Boyle, and Haggerty also aided greatly in the win. For Fedigan, Dave Frink was held to 12 points and shared scorlig honors with Joe Galyo. Russo and O'Donnell refereed.

Thurs. nite's titls saw the Doms hold on to second place by virtue of their 58-42 conquest of Brks. 2&3 while Brks. 1&4 kept a game behind by downing Mendel 66-41. Thus the stage is set for next week with Brks. 1&4 slated for two encounters while the Doms play one. Should the Doms win their game, the Brks. combine would have to also win both of their games to tie for second place. Therefore next week should prove to be a hotly contested loop finale.

At the intermission, the score stood at 24-26 in the Doms-Brks. 2&3 contest with the Doms holding the top hand. However as the game progressed, the Doms wore down their opposition emerging with their fourth league win as against two setbacks. Bill Knecht with 17 points and Natiello's 12 were high for the victors. The losers were paced by Brennan and Cullen with 19 points each while Decker and Ruggiero netted 8 each.

The second game did not clinch any playoff berth for the Brks. 1&4 but did give them an outside chance by their win over Mendel. The offensive star of night was Tom Falkowski of the victors who notched 23 points with some uncanny hook shots. "OLD" RELIABLE Tom Madonia chipped in with 19 markers while Tom Flynn garnered 13. Taking scoring honors for the losers was Livoti who poured 16 points through the hoop.

Buddy Williams

"Comedy a la King," songs by Kay Justice, and a few other skits, plus additional theatre greats who need take second billing to no one, to put over a full show of good fun.

The Vanderbilts, Dave Monahan, Eddie Roecker, and Jessica Dragonette, to mention some of the better known participants, will be on hand to help the audience have fun and to help the Guild and young men in pursuing their studies for the priesthood in the Order of St. Augustine.

Buddy Williams' orchestra has been dubbed " . . . equal or surpassing the nationwide favorites" who have appeared at the "Click", by owner Frank Palumbo. Glenn Miller, for whom Buddy arranged music before going on his own, says that Buddy " . . . is one of the greatest arrangers and musical minds in America."

Several famous people in their own rights have freely extended praise to Buddy Williams and his orchestra and to his show. But this is only typical of what has been said about each act and combination appearing for this great benefit fiesta.

Another typical personality of note to appear in the show is Eddie Roecker, the famous baritone of the stage, radio and television. Eddie has appeared in the Academy of Music in Philadelphia, but is best known in personal appearance circles in New York City: Carnegie Hall, Roxy Theatre and the Music Hall.

Eighteen months as star of "The Desert Song" plus roles in "Student Prince" and "Blossom Time", and appearances in St. Louis and Chicago opera have made Eddie one of the greatest male voices in this country. Radio appearances with "Pick and Pat" and on the Bell Telephone Hour and the Prudential Family Hour have made Eddie Roecker a name in radio and television from coast to coast.

The evening of variety and dancing is a fitting follow-up of the recent Belle Masque show. Both organizations, though attracting from different angles, are bringing the unusual and outstanding to Villanova's Field House.

Dancing will be to the Buddy Williams Orchestra from 10:30 P. M. to 12:30 A. M., and only two dollars will be the "gate take" for this "all-star" show.

part of Venturewell, played by William Fleming, was managed with the best of Elizabethan poise; his daughter, Luce, played by Mary Anna Connor, also contributed to the fine display of acting.

No Belle Masque production would be complete without the ever-present combination of Ted Doyle, as Jasper, in this play, and Richard Zande, Tapster.

They were two of the Seniors in Belle Masque who concluded their acting in a brilliant way, and meritorious of Villanovans' praises. The fop of the play, Humphrey, whose debonair attitude was portrayed by John Gray, bears mention as another good characterization by a veteran actor.

Bill Breninghouse, of subtle humor fame, did justice to the role of Barbaroso, and when deprived of his tonsorial art, he took the circumstances at hand in a humble retreat to his house in Waltham Forest. One of the busiest actors throughout the entire production was The Page, played by Joe Maiale, who performed his important task of scene-changing with complete accuracy and timing. Steve Keiss and Al Hevey lent humorous support to Ralph, The Knight of the Burning Pestle.

Special services in addition to their acting were rendered by Al Scarcelli who coaches all fencing sequences of Belle Masque productions, and Robert Resnick who became the prompter following the Prologue.

In producing this play, Father Krupa, the Moderator-Director, faced a challenge with courage and determination. The finished product of his hard work was indeed gratifying and in Shakespeare's words, "the play's the thing", we have realized a cultural, educational, and aesthetic contribution to Villanova dramatic history as hitherto unequalled.

The Library Corner . . .

This week, the last in this series on the art collection of the College Library, reviews three more paintings which are on display in various sections of the Library building. These three are perhaps the least famous and subsequently, the least recognized of the paintings in the building, but nevertheless, each has its own particular and interesting story.

Balen, it seems, collaborated during his late 16th century career with Jan Brueghel, one of the contemporaries whom he admired and often imitated. Brueghel was primarily a landscape painter, while Balen did his best work in depicting human beings. Together, in combining their individual talents, they produced some interesting and artistic works. For these, Balen painted the figures in the landscapes of his collaborator, and Brueghel, in return, filled in the backgrounds for many of Balen's works.

Epiphany Pictured

This picture, on the occasion that the Church celebrates on the feast of the Epiphany, demonstrates the combination of the talents of these two Dutch painters. If you will notice, the traditional stable to which the Magi were guided by the star does not appear in the setting, instead, the group is gathered before what appears to be the ruins of some large building, as indicated by the remains of two huge pillars that dominate the background. These, no doubt, are the Brueghel touch in the Balen painting.

The background, anomalous as it may be, still does not distract from the Dutch-looking Virgin and the equally Flemish St. Joseph, and Infant, who are the center of interest.

Balen also painted several other works depicting the Holy Family, and placed in his oils such scenes as The Flight Into Egypt, and The Adoration of the Shepherds.

A Displaced Painting

One of the survivors of the last war, a "displaced painting," is the picture of The Blessed Mother Presenting the Rosary to St. Dominic, which has only recently been added to the Library collection. This eight-by-five-foot oil painting, largest in the possession of the Library, is an original by Daddi, 14th. century leader in the Florentine school, of Italy. He originally painted it for the historic House of Habsburg in Austria, who kept it in that family for centuries. During the war it was sent to Dublin for safe-keeping. There it was acquired by the Princess Ruspoli of Rome, who donated it along with several other paintings, to the College Library. At present the picture is being restored and framed, and will be displayed as soon as the reconditioning process is completed.

Mostaert's Virgin

The last picture, in which we are interested, is the small portrait of the head of the Blessed Virgin which can be seen in the Reference Room to the right of the entrance. This picture bears the name of Jan Mostaert, another Dutch painter who lived But, in spite of the fact that about twenty years before Balen. it is attributed to him, there are strong reasons to doubt its authenticity, since most of Mostaert's works were destroyed in the great fire of Haarlem, and even those which are still existent are not authenticated.

This picture was donated to the Library by Major Edward Bowes, the radio showman of Amateur Hour fame, who was a benefactor of this college before his death a decade ago.

Jessica Dragonette Sings At Guild Variety Show

Student Tickets to Be Sold for Dance

America's Princess of Song, Jessica Dragonette, will enhance the Augustinian Guild Variety Show come April 18th when the Field House will be the tabernacle-of-fun in this area. That Tuesday night hundreds will see and hear lovely Miss Dragonette, Buddy Williams and his Orchestra and many, many other well known entertainers and comic feature acts.

Arrangements have been completed to admit students at a special student rate of one dollar to the second feature of the evening: dancing to the tenor sax and piano of Buddy Williams and his nationally known band. This special rate has been granted so that students who would rather dance than see this variety show and then dance can still have a big night with a date and not be down in the wallet for the next two weeks.

Song bird of the evening, Miss Dragonette, is noted for her supper room, radio stage, and television appearances. This beautiful blonde's experience in both popular and classical music enables her to present a varied evening of song which will appeal to everyone.

Over fifteen hundred people are expected to attend this first Variety Show to be presented by the Augustinian Guild, whose purpose is to supply funds for the education and training of young men in the Order of St. Augustine.

Student and general admission tickets will be on sale at the door. The student tickets will not be honored until after ten o'clock. From 8:30 to 12:30 the Field House will be full of famous talent and people who appreciate a full night of fun and dancing. Will you be there with your friends?

Rev. Daniel P. Falvey, O.S.A., College Librarian, has announced that the Library will sponsor a salon of student art and photographic work to be exhibited in conjunction with Junior Week. The entries submitted by the students will be judged by several members of the faculty including Dr. George N. Quam, Chemistry Professor, and Rev. John J. McShea, O.S.A., Assistant Professor of English. All photographs, sketches, or paintings submitted must be at least 8" x 10", or larger, and mounted on a mat at least 16" x 20".

A title is optional, and each entry must be accompanied by a 3" x 5" card with the student's name, class and department, while each unit must be properly identified on the reverse side of the work. The entries must be submitted no later than April 25th., and all students are urged to participate. The works will be exhibited in the Library and the outstanding entry in each medium will receive a prize.

ACCOUNTANTS HOLD ANNUAL FORUM IN FIELD HOUSE; APR. 20

On Thursday, April 20th., Villanova will be the site of the annual Accounting Forum of the Philadelphia Chapter of the Pennsylvania Institute of Certified Public Accountants.

Professor Leo Schaeffer of the College faculty will represent Villanova in the capacity of official host. He will be assisted by members of the Accounting Society.

Prior to the opening exercises at 2:30 P. M. in the Field House, the college administration will entertain at a luncheon the various speakers and college representatives on the Forum committee.

The gathering will be formally opened by Mr. I. H. Krekstein, C.P.A., Vice-Chairman of the Philadelphia chapter of the sponsoring group. Immediately following this, the Rev. Francis X. McGuire, O.S.A., president of the college will welcome the assembly. Messrs. Roland Christy, C.P.A., and Thomas Carroll, C. P.A., will then speak on "The Independent Auditor's Relationship with the Client" and "Modern Trends in Financial Statements."

From 4:00 P. M. to 6:15 P. M., concurrent meetings held in the Commerce and Finance Auditorium and in 215 Mendel. The topic on discussion in the C&F auditorium will be "Taxes", and at 5:15 the topic will change to "Current Problems in Accounting." Featured in the discussions in Mendel Hall will be "What is Expected of Junior Accountants," and "What a Junior Accountant Can Expect of the Accounting Profession."

The activities will be consummated with a dinner to be held in the Field House at 6:45 P. M. The chairman of the Philadel-

Informal Blazer Ball Initial Junior Dance

Wednesday of Junior Week Date of Annual Blazer Display

The Blazer Ball, last informal dance of the school year, will be held on Wednesday, May 3rd. This dance which is the first of three highlighting the calendar for Junior Week is open to all students.

Joseph Rugo, Chairman of the Ball Committee, is planning to present the biggest and best Blazer Ball in history. One of the most attractive features of the dance is the new low price. In order to insure a large attendance, the Class of 1951 has set the admission price for the mid-week affair at $1.80 per couple, including tax.

In order to accommodate students with early classes on Thursday, and those with dates from the local girls' colleges, dancing at the Blazer Ball will be from 8:00 P. M. until midnight. Tickets for the affair will go on sale in the Pie Shop and Mendel Hall immediately following the Easter vacation.

Music for the dance will be provided by the Villanovans under the direction of Vincent Palma. Marion Stodder, vocalist with the orchestra, will offer her popular stylization of favorite ballads against the background of the attractively decorated Field House.

Contrary to general opinion, the Blazer Ball is not restricted to Juniors; all students are invited to attend. It is not required for Juniors to wear their blazers to the dance.

Any Junior wishing to serve on any of the various committees connected with the Ball is requested to contact the General Chairman.

YEAR BOOK GOES TO PRESS; DUE IN MAY

The preparation of the 1950 Belle Air, the College yearbook, has been completed. Last week Fathers Falvey and Sullivan, co-Moderators of the book, finished checking proofs and stated that, barring unforeseen printing delays, the yearbook will be ready for delivery to the student body during the month of May.

New Format

Under the guidance of Paul York, Editor-in-chief, the Belle Air was designed, featuring a new and somewhat revolutionary format. Campus views have been treated in a different manner; the pages are enhanced by modern layout techniques and unique art work. The book is divided into three parts: classes, activities, and sports. The classes section combines faculty, schools, and classes photographs into an attractive and compact unit. A complete section of the book is devoted to extra-curricular activities. The sports section gives full coverage of football, basketball, and other varsity sports along with a variety of pictures of intramural games.

The introductory section of the yearbook contains memorial pages in honor of the Very Reverend Mortimer A. Sullivan, O.S.A., former Provincial of the Augustinian Order, who died last year. The book is dedicated to the memory of the three deceased members of the Class of 1950.

Neufeld Model Agency To Pick Queen

Arrangements have just been completed with one of the foremost modeling agencies in Philadelphia for the judging of the Queen of Junior Week contest. The famous Oscar Neufeld, who has chosen such lovelies as Miss Philadelphia and Mrs. Philadelphia, has agreed to pick out the loveliest of those girls whose pictures are submitted to the committee.

Things are looking up as time draws closer to Junior Week. Many pictures were received last week and the committee is looking for a deluge of them after the "lovers" return from Easter recess. Please don't disappoint them!

Harry Range and Frank Gobes are still collecting the pictures and will be glad to relieve you of same. Below are some of the prospective Queens.

Easter Message

(Editor's Note: Below is the annual Easter message to the students of Villanova as received from the Office of the President of the College, Rev. Francis X. N. McGuire, O.S.A., which is printed each year at this time in the VILLANOVAN).

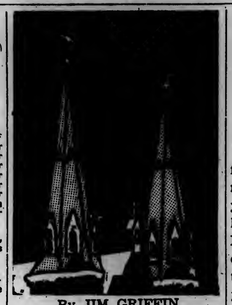
Dear Students:

The annual observance of the Easter time in every Catholic College like Villanova is something very much more than a mere Spring vacation. The holidays have their origin in the liturgical calendar of the Christian Church and have been set aside from immemorial times for two observances: first, of the Sufferings and the Death of the Son of God for our Redemption; second, of the Ressurectoin of the same Son of God from His death. The sufferings and death of Christ for us we commemorate as a recognition of his Infinite Love for us. His Resurrection from the dead, we commemorate as the practically exclusive proof that He was not merely Man but actually God. "For if Christ be not risen again, your faith is in vain".

In wishing you all the joys of the Easter Season, as we most heartily do, the Administration of Villanova takes occasion to recall to your minds the elementary facts of the Passion and Ressurection of Christ, and hopes that the blessings of this Season will be the happiest of spiritual blessings in keeping with the tradition of the most sacred feasts which we celebrate during these well-earned holidays.

Francis X. N. McGuire, O.S.A.

Rev. Francis X. N. McGuire, O. S. A. President



Time Passes

About now, when there is a noticeable feeling of relaxation following quarterlies, and prior to the Easter Recess, about two thousand students from the Main Line realize that the time certainly has slipped by. Whether they hoped it would, or wished that it might not have seemed so short, they realize a certain amount of surprise.

Three-quarters of a school year have passed. When after the recess we return, it will only be for a short month and a half stay. A large group of seniors some of whom we have gotten to know and accept around the campus are ready to take their leave, while the freshmen are beginning to look upon Villanova as theirs.

It is certainly a wistful time, and we are not in a mood to loose a blast on anybody from this corner, although, one thing does deserve our attention. To the large number of men who hit the Honor Roll last semester are due our congratulations. We hope that this past quarter has not slipped by too fast for you to secure a good hold on that same level, if not to soar a bit higher. In any case, don't get struck by that famous disease so prevalent at this time of year. Of course, we mean spring fever.

Lastly we want to extend to all those who trudge about this campus during the year, eagerly taking part in the job of education, best wishes for a pleasant and a blessed Easter recess.

By JIM GRIFFIN

". . . our faith is in vain."

Futility, and wasted effort, an empty echo in a bare room, a weak, pitiful gesture in a struggle of titans . . . these are the efforts of the church, the plodding regularity of her maternal spirituality, the undauntable spirit of her quest for justice and morality; hers are struggles without purpose, efforts without reward, ideals without foundation . . . ". . . if Christ be not risen."

But He is risen, and the stone which guarded his tomb has been rolled away, and the angel is at the tomb to direct His friends who seek Him. "He is risen as He said, Alleluia."

The Hinge

And so is vindicated all that He taught. He had rested his case, and placed upon His word the test of death, and life again, and His word was true. Perhaps in the past we have let Easter go by without ever really knowing what it meant, without ever realizing fully that it is the hinge upon which our faith hangs. For if the resurrection is an established fact, Christ is God, and the religion He taught is God's religion. And the ressurrection is an established fact, by Roman history as well as by the divine revelation of the gospels.

Make It Personal

So let us rejoice with Christ, let us join with Him and glorify the triumph which His resurrection has made over death. But let us first make sure that we are His friends. Let us take some symbolism to ourselves in his resurrection. Let us rise with him in spiritual emergence from the death which sin may have caused in our souls. Let us make Easter a personal triumph this year, so that we may be more able to rejoice with Christ in His divine triumph.

The Easter Privilege

It all ties in to a very well unified picture. The note of rejoicing in the Liturgy of the Church, the major theological implications of the historical fact, and the special incentive and impetus provided for a personal reunion with the spirit of the risen Christ. Perhaps the Church had this picture in mind when she chose the Easter season as the one time in the year when Holy Communion is obligatory. So let us make our Easter duty obligation this year a source of gladness in keeping with the spirit of the time, so that we may be a little less unworthy to congratulate the risen Saviour and join with Him in His joy.

STRAIGHT FROM PARIS

By Bill Breninghouse

With the coming of Spring, fashion is paramount in the minds of all of us. Every living young man on campus is asking himself many questions. "Shall I get my hair cut short? Will cerise slippers be passe? Will trouser legs be longer this year." These and many other pressing questions can be answered by this newspaper's fashion expert, O. Twomp, who has just returned from a field trip to Paris.

The fashion experts who who maintain headquarters at the exclusive Pierre's Saloon held many conferences and showings at which Oscar Twomp was an interested spectator. From his observations he has given us the word on the latest Spring fashions.

Two-tone gabardine suits will be all the rage on Fifth Avenue. Coats will feature the newest delicate colors such as tender organdy and blushing amber. Trousers will be more conservative, sticking to old standbys like gremlin green and Tam O'Shanter tan. For evening wear tuxedos with a tight peg in the trousers will be worn by the men who care.

Gentlemen will try to attain the "slim trim look" for the Spring. Hair will be cut shorter, sideboards being eliminated altogether. This will make the narrow head, which is flattered by wearing a Dempster Derby. Good taste dictates that no man be without the new elbow-length mittens when early Spring chills are in the air. Oh yes, trousers will be at the fashionable five-inch mark. This will serve to show off the latest in argyle socks and pastel garters.

Capes, popular on the continent this year, will find their way onto the American scene. They will give glamour to the short haircuts and the striped and checkered lining will add to an overall colorful effect. Suede shoes, with distinctive Dali designs in beads, will tramp on East Coast sidewalks and office floors.

Flowers, too, take on a new significance. Daisies, pansies and the delicate little buttercups will adorn hats and shoes while lapels will sport potted geraniums. Belts will come in several styles. Most of them will feature sequined buckles this year.

The male's most colorful piece of apparel, the necktie will be a major part of the sportsman's and gentleman's wardrobes. Designs wrought in tinfoil will be popular. A new necktie size will appear. Ties will be a foot wide at the widest part and a half-inch at the knot. Serving as a background to the ties will be shirts of softened sharkskin. All in all it is going to be a colorful and wonderful Easter Parade.

For Your Guests

By Herb Matthews

Too often visitors to Philadelphia get an unsatisfactory impression of this town because they cannot find restaurants that compare favorably with those in other cities that are famous for their eating places. But, after a careful study of the situation, we have found that there are, quite a few dining rooms in the Quaker City.

For quantity and quality of food at reasonable prices we find it difficult not to mention the Homestead Restaurant, at 1913 Walnut St. The Homestead was originally opened in the City by the proprietor of the famous Lavender Hall in Newton, Bucks County, as a temporary measure during the war. Because of the gas shortage most people could not get to Lavender Hall. Its phenomenal success during and after the war period is the reason for its continued existence. We guarantee you won't be disappointed.

One of the most attractive places in the Center City is Stouffer's. One of a nationwide chain, this well known restaurant is noted for the excellence of its service and the attractive way in which the food is served. The prices are right and there is a good selection of food.

Arthur's Steak House, at 216 Chancellor St. (near 2nd. and Walnut), is especially famous for their $2.50 tenderloin steak dinner. For those who like a good hearty meal without too many frills, Arthur's will please the most exacting tastes.

In the suburban area there are not a few restaurants which can be recommended without reservation. The Tavern, in Cynwyd, the General Wayne, in Merion, and the Montgomery Inn, in Bryn Mawr, are all popular. They are all located on the Montgomery Pike and are served by the Paoli Local and Red Arrow bus lines. All three of these are good examples that might be offered in refutation of the statement of a well known author in a recent issue of a national magazine. He stated that a good restaurant would not be successful on the Main Line since Main Liners are not wont to eat out very often; the abovementioned are obvious contradictions.

Williamson's Restaurant, on the Montgomery Pike, in Narberth, is fast becoming one of the most popular dining rooms in Suburbia. Joe Williamson has been a successful restaurateur for many years and his reputation has been enhanced by the fine food and service that he offers in his new and attractive establishment in Narberth.

Not to be overlooked are the dining room of the Alden Park Manor, overlooking Fairmount Park, and the beautiful Mayfair House, on Lincoln Drive. Both of these have a very refined atmosphere, and they are suggested as suitable places to enjoy a good Sunday dinner with your out-of-town guests.

SYNCOPATTER

By Roland Mayer and Bruce Taten

Aside from it being the Easter vacation this coming week should prove significant or at least interesting for those who follow the modern trends in music, Jazz-that is. Stan Kenton's long awaited concert tour swings East for what will probably be the acid test of his "Innovations in Modern Music" and from what we can gather from his advance publicity the man is "loaded for bear".

With the new forty piece outfit he is apparently on an all out crusade to establish jazz as a recognized "highly skilled, highly technical form of music".

Took Blast

Kenton recently took a healthy blast at the music departments of the nation's universities for their failure to recognize modern creative music as a true art form that should be offered in courses to those interested.

Pointing out that Jazz is the sole art form that can be called truly American it would seem that the man may have something worth considering.

Will Be In Area

At any rate the maestro will be in this area over the Easter holidays and perhaps his new music will have more to say for its own merits than a multitude of words. For the New Yorkers who will be in the city at the time there will be concerts at Carnegie Hall April 8 and 9 and for the local talent the aggregation will move into the Academy of Music for a two day stand on April 11 and 12.

Thanks, Ro. Putting one little word after another and what ever happened to Frankie Laine? Ever since he had his "lucky ole sun" beaming down on a "mule train" while the "wild geese" flew overhead, the voice with hands hasn't been heard from too often. His newest releases, "Swamp Girl" and "Satan Wears A Satin Gown", have received a fair, but by no means overwhelming, demonstration from the public and professional purveyors of music, (disc-jockeys).

Laine Earns

It has long been my feeling that Frankie Laine earned his reputation on a flimsy basis. Any singer who bases his popularity solely on the here-today-gone tomorrow songs that he has recorded of late cannot expect that reputation to be very enduring. His earlier releases were by far superior. Such tunes as, "Black and Blue", "That's my Desire" and many others lost in the not so distant past entitle him to a more appreciative following than the inane material he has presented to his public recently.

I quote from the latest issue of the Immaculatan, "The junior party at the barn . . . certainly had all those wonderful Wildcats howling at our lovelies . . ." and from here on proceeds to name some of the supposed lovelies. If I hadn't read it I wouldn't believe it . . . no one here has been heard to brag about that party. Perhaps they were only purring instead of howling?

Easter Scenes

Easter morning usually arrives with the 5 A. M. awakening of the kid brother who immediately starts his search for the lost Easter basket. After he has looked under the sofa, behind all the doors, and in the medicine cabinet, Junior wrests the remainder of the household from the arms of Morpheus by falling down the cellar steps while trying to hang from his fingernails and look in the bread box at the same time.

Pop

Once the rest of the weary-eyed clan is up and about, things really begin to happen. The head of the house sneaks meekly off to 5:30 mass, because after paying for the gang's attire, he's lucky to have a decent crease in his baggy old herringbone. Every other Sunday the 5:30 is considered the alka-seizter Mass, but on Easter it's strictly for the paupers. Most of the family attends the 10 A. M. "Who's Who" Mass.

And Mom

Returning from Mass, Mom takes off her simulated Peacock chapeaux and prepares for the annual ham burning ritual. Don't know how she does it, but the dern thing always seems to come out just right.

And The Girls

Besides taking care of the family appetite, the lady of the house has several other duties to which she must attend on this day of days. She is what one might term the judicial member of the family, and has to pass many judgments before the midnight bell tolls. Take the case of the teen-age fem of the family who is trying desperately to determine whether or not the flower she received from her best beaux is an iris or an orchid. Mom is the one who finally passes the verdict that it is an authentic orchid imported from the Burmese Jungle. The youngest fem of the abode is determined to wear her new light blue gab suit all day regardless of the hail, rain, and violent tornado that is raging outside. It's only after much persuasion that Mom makes her see the light and agree to wear it around the house for that day.

Junior Too

When dinner time finally arrives, Junior is filled with chocolate-covered Easter eggs, and needs a dose of milk of magnesia, little sis' suit is a mass of wrinkles, the 'orchid' is withered after braving the bitter Easter Parade winds; Mom is dead tired; and Pop is hungry as a bear, after his afternoon nap. But, all of these make Easter, and although the day is gone, the fond memories linger.

Around The Town

By F. A. VARALLO

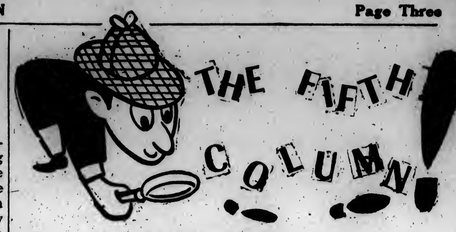
Relentless realism, deft dramatization and impressive acting make "Three Came Home" one of the outstanding films in the current war cycle. The screen version produced and written by Nunnaly Johnson has been adapted from the autobiographical novel of Agnes Newton Keith. It is a factual account of her terrifying experiences during the three harrowing years she spent in a Japanese prison camp in British N. Borneo. All the hardships and denials, the terrible struggle for existence, and the brutality of the enemy are graphically portrayed. There are moments of pathos and wry comedy as well as moments of horror and despair. One cannot escape the overwhelming sense of danger and the ever-present dullness of captivity.

Hope and Despair

Claudette Colbert, minus make-up and the typical Hollywood wardrobe, turns in an inspired performance in the role of Mrs. Keith. The opening scenes which establish the deep affection between her and her husband and the tragedy of their parting after Pearl Harbor, are as moving as the sequences of horror in the camp. Throughout, the picture is alive with action — from the arrival of the Japanese troops in Borneo to that wonderful day when Mrs. Keith and her two year old son find themselves free once more. There are many unforgettable scenes — Mrs. Keith's desperate attempt to contact her husband; the relish with which she eats scraps salvaged from Jap officer's garbage; the sudden machine-gunning of Australian prisoners on the barbed wire outside the women's compound; and finally the joyful reunion of the three Keiths on a mud-caked road just outside the prison gates.

Splendid Cast

Along with Miss Colbert, praise should also go to Sessue Hayakava for his splendid performance in the role of Colonel Suga, the Japanese commander, who is pictured as a man of taste and education, a strange mixture of fatherly kindness and fanatical cruelty. Patric Knowles is convincing as Mr. Keith; Mark Keuning is fine as the brave little boy, and Florence Desmond registers as Claudette's friend.



"Three Came Home", at the Fox Theater, is one film that should be on your "must-see" list.

The Sundowners

Marking the acting debut of John Barrymore, Jr., this rugged Western features a family feud and a range war between the cattlemen and rustlers in the Lone Star State. Robert Preston colorfully portrays Kid Wichita, notorious gun-toter. His brother-rancher, Robert Sterling, helps put a stop to the cattle rustling.

Rather mediocre, "The Sundowners" differs little from the routine horse-opera.

By Hevey and Keiss

Our hearts are heavy this week. Those beautiful examples of classical Moldavian architecture, the snow fences have mysteriously disappeared. However, since the trend in modern journalism is to make predictions, we also must take a similar course. We predict that the beloved snow fences shall return to render all hardy Villanovans service throughout another harsh, blustery Pennsylvania winter. Tootsie Snabely claims that the enclosures should have remained until the end of mid-terms as "everybody got snowed."

The Post Office Department is really competent lately. According to a reliable source, Count Villan IV was highly incensed over the fact that the shipping label on his cage bore the cryptic inscription: "Contents—Merchandise; Open for Postal Inspection if Necessary." Larry DiStefano, who is familiar with postal lingo has translated this to mean: "Why be half safe? Use armor to be sure."

Abercrombie Z. Raspoofnik has entered the photo of his fair dasmel, Susie Slushpump, in the race for "Scream of the Junior Brawl." In a late bulletin from the office of Shmoey Hatrack, brawl chairman, we have discovered that Susie, all 300 pounds of her, has a very good chance at all the wonderful prizes being offered. These prizes include: three mystery balls, a Villanova jacket, one stale, beheaded beer, a two minute tour of the Mane Line stables, one of Louie's famous steak sandwiches and many other phenomenal awards.

We took in a Turf and Tinsel rehearsal last week and here is what we saw: eight bearded ladies wearing monogrammed sweaters, singing their hearts out while another group of cuties pranced and bounced all over the stage under the direction of a bald-headed man with spectacles. Although somewhat stupefied, we have come to the conclusion that the show this year will be a smash hit. Don't miss it!

With the advent of Spring, womens' fashions have literally taken over the recent editions of the newspapers. We, as experts, would like to present to all fashion-conscious males our "nothing" on this subject. As usual, this year, women will be dressed. The new (?) styles decreed by fashion designers accentuate this fact. Color adds its flavor to the costumes, and we do mean costumes. Such aesthetic hues as: Schenley Beige — for the cocktail hour, of course; Ravioli Red — for dinner, natch; Crew-Cut Black — to match the length of the hair styles; and many other exciting shades too horrible to mention.

In closing, we'd like to leave this "pearl of wisdom" with you, dear reader, whoever you may be. Brush your dentist twice a day, see your teeth twice a year, always live up to the rules and regulations of the N. C. A. A., or you may be declared ineligible for the Easter-egg hunt. When you return to campus, have a good time at the K. of C. Card Party and Dance, Friday, April 14th., at the K. of C. Hall, 15th and Race Sts. Happy Easter to all!

General Election Day Is Moved To Thursday, May 4

The student council voted to change the date of the general election for all classes from May 16th. to Thursday May 4th., during the Junior Week. This change will necessitate the nominating of candidates at class meetings at least by Tuesday, April 18th., in order that nominations may be approved. According to this schedule a full week of campaigning by the candidates will be possible.

George Schuster, President of the Junior Class, suggested that the date be moved in order that the official results may be announced at the Class' Dinner-Dance.

The Council's Elections Committee urged that nominations be made as soon as possible, and suggested that the lists of nominees be tendered for approval by April 19th. On May 4th. balloting will be conducted under the supervision of the Election Committee of the Student Council.

A discussion of conditions in the cafeteria laid emphasis on the shortcomings of both the students and the cafeteria administration with particular stress on the problem raised by constant line "bucking".

ACCREDITING BOARD VISITS CAMPUS

The advantage to Villanova students of the visit last week by a crediting committee of the Middle States Association of Colleges and Universities was pointed out by college authorities.

The committee visit was to study and improve American education, it was stated. Its advice could result in improved teaching methods, new techniques of stimulating student effort, and means of encouraging students to use library facilities here at Villanova. Outsiders can come into a college with new points of view from their own institutions and make profitable criticism, it was emphasized.

The committee, representing the most important regional accrediting agency, consisted of Dr. E. K. Smiley, vice-president, Lehigh University, chairman; John C. McDermott, director, evening session, St. John's University; Dr. S. S. Steinberg, dean, college of engineering, University of Maryland; Dr. Daniel Z. Gibson, dean, Franklin and Marshall College; John M. Mullins, assistant registrar, Columbia University; Dr. Vincent W. Lanfear, dean school of business administration, University of Pittsburgh; Rev. J. Eugene Gallery, S. J., president, University of Scranton; Rev. Kevin J. O'Brien, S. J., treasurer, Fordham University; and Dr. Richard H. Logsdon, associate director of university libraries, Columbia University.

Post-Easter Social Events Bring Poorhouse Close

Maybe you-all didn't realize it but from the way the post-Easter social calendar looks, most everybody will be looking to Household Finance Co. for a mortgage on the family farmstead. Things will get off to a fast start on the Tuesday after we get back. That will be the Seminary Guild's Variety and Dance on the 18th of April. Thursday after that the Accountants will have a forum in the Field House. Friday, the 21st our boys in blue will down to the Cricket Club for the annual NROTC Ball. Brothers of the Pre-Med frat will have a Dinner-Dance at Palumbo's on Saturday to round out that week.

Chestnut Hill schedules their Junior Prom for April 28 and Rosemont plans theirs for 22nd of April if you would like to get caught for that sort of thing.

Junior Week will start on Monday, May 1st with Mother's Day, and will include the Blazer Ball on Wednesday, the Prom on Friday and the Junior Dinner-Dance on Saturday.

Turf and Tinsel will put on their production "Piper-Heidsieck '98' " from the 12th to the 15th of May, a Gay Nineties review in the T&T manner.

Scholastic Choir Sings Holy Week Music For Resident Services

Once again a sacred concert of Holy week music is being presented by the Augustinian Scholastic Choir at the residents' chapel services on Monday and Tuesday nights of this week. The choir is made up of the professed seminarians studying at Villanova's St. Mary's Hall, under the direction of the Rev. Ralph Handran, O.S.A. of the faculty of the college, and led in the presentation of this program by one of the seminarians, Mr. Edward Hamel, O.S.A.

At the services last night, Mr. Hamel led the Choir in the recitation of selections from the Tenebrae, the liturgical office which is sung by the religious during the week preceeding the feast of Easter. This program, which will be repeated at chapel tonight, included the following selections: Christus Factus est, Sicut Ovis, O Vos Omnes, Sepulto, Prayer of Jeremiah the Prophet, Psalm 50, and Plange Quasi. Following the Benediction, the program was concluded with the singing of the traditional hymn of the Augustinian Order, Magne Pater.

The thanks of the lay students of this college are hereby expressed to the professed Augustinians for presenting this opportunity for them to hear and appreciate this music which they would ordinarily know little about.

POLITICAL SCIENCE STUDENTS TAKE TRIP TO NATION'S CAPITAL

A group of about forty Villanova history students, under the supervision of Dr. Harold F. Hartman, Professor of History, recently returned from a trip to Washington, where they studied the functioning of our national government. The trip which took place March 21st, 22nd, and 23rd featured with such prominent men of the national scene as Senator Joseph O'Mahoney of Wyoming, Mr. Frank Pace, Jr., directory of the U. S. Bureau of the Budget, and Mr. John Hickerson, Assistant Secretary of State.

Dr. Hartman stated that one of the most interesting points of the excursion was the audience the group had with Senator O'Mahoney, Chairman of the Joint Committee on the Economic Report. Senator O'Mahoney paid particular attention during the talk to the legislative consideration of the Economic Report of the President.

Mr. Pace was another high spot of the trip. He gave special emphasis to the Bureau of the Budget as an administrative unit of the Executive Office of the President.

Mr. Hickerson, the assistant secretary of state in charge of United Nations' affairs, in addition to giving an interesting talk on his own bureau of United Nations Affairs, discussed the present organization of the Department of State at length.

Dr. Hartman related that another very interesting and informative activity of the group was their visiting of two sessions of the Senate Finance Committee and of the House Committee on Expenditures.

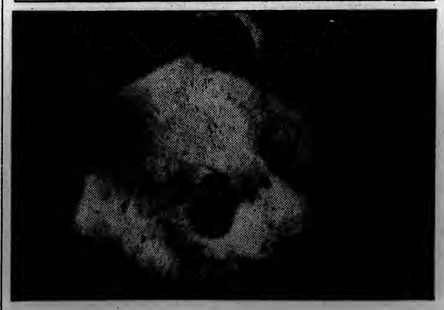
An insight into the functioning and activities of the National Labor Relations Board was obtained through an interview with Mr. Frank M. Kleiler, Executive Secretary, of the National Labor Relations Board.

Col. J. Monroe Johnson, Chairman of the Interstate Commerce Commission, was another noted official with whom the students had a conference. Col. Johnson spoke of the special problems and procedural work of the commission, and gave an interesting discourse on "A Commissioner's philosophy of Transportation."

Via this excursion Dr. Hartman afforded the students a first hand observation of our government at work. Far above the fact that the trip was an interesting experience for all who took it, it should help the students immeasurably in their governmental classes.

Count Villan IV Is Florida's Gift To Villanova Students

The brand new, fighting-mad edition of the Villanova mascot made his appearance on campus at the convocation last Tuesday when the new Count Villan hissed from his cage and showed the spirit and pep of a typical Wildcat rooter. The new wildcat, fourth in what promises to be a long line of Villanova's feline mascots, arrived from his natural habitat in the Florida Everglades shortly before the convocation began. He had been captured a few days previously by Bill Piper, a wild-life officer of the Florida Fish and Game Commission.



Count Villan IV came to our campus, compliments of the Florida Commission, with another cat that the college has turned over to the Philadelphia Zoo. The new Count will take the place of his predecessor who died last September, and appear at football games next season.

His measurements, necessarily approximate, since no one has had enough nerve to get close enough to the spirited cat to check with a tape measure, are: heights, 15 in.; length, 36 in.; weight, 20 lbs. These are subject to change without notice since the Count is but a mere kitten of two years, and still growing fast. He'll be in his cage at the college farm from now on, in case any person is brave enough to want to get a closer look.

Wildcat Nine Opens With Muhlenberg Tomorrow; Princeton Game Rained Out

'Cats Scrimmage Army At West Point

Fight Cadets to Even Terms As O'Boyle, Rilo and D'Alonzo Shine—Stellar Play by Frosh

By G. SCANLON

The Villanova Wildcats invaded the hallowed halls of West Point, Saturday and returned to the Main Line a satisfied and confident crew. The scrimmage with the Kaydets is one that won't be forgotten for many a year.

Rilo Scores

Army was at its best, but it wasn't good enough to tame the savage Cat outfit. The fray began with Black and Gold offense in high gear, driving down to the ten-yard line but at this point the fighting Wildcats smashed Army's speedy backs. With classy Neil O'Boyle at quarterback the Blue and White began to roll. Pete D'Alonzo rampaged for 40 yards down to the three where Joe Rilo scampered over on an end around to draw first blood. The Blaikmen struck back as Vic Pollock raced 65 yards to set up an Army score.

Blaik Stars for Army

The second half saw O'Boyle hit Rilo with a forty-yard aerial to set up Bob Haner's one-yard scoring plunge. Bob Blaik, Army's quarterback, hit Dan Folberg for two six pointers for Army. Blaik's great kicking put the Wildcats in the hole many times as he hit the coffin corner consistantly.

The Cats scored in the last quarter to even it up with O'Boyle's chucking and Dick Bedeesin's fine running. Bob Haner crashed over from the four to finish up the afternoon.

Freshmen Shine

The Wildcats fine showing against such a vaunted opponent as Army was no fluke. The boys from the Main Line have a powerful team. The ability of the freshmen has eased considerably the gaps left by graduation. Joe Rustic at end, Joe Jerry, Al Shannon and Tony Luongo, guards, also Dick Bedeesin and Bob Haner at backfield slots showed no respect for Army's reputation. Space doesn't permit to name the stars of this tussle for each and every Wildcat played his heart out, turning in a great performance.

A Fighting Club

The scrimmage was extremely rough, it proved that this club can take it and dish it out with the best. The 1950 Wildcat edition won't be a team of big men but what these boys lack in size they more than make it up with plenty of fight and sheer guts.

The above trio represents a load of basketball talent which went on display last Saturday evening in the East-West game. In the usual order is Dick Dickey, Bob Cousy and our own Paul Arizin.

First Contest For Two New Coaches

Mahan to Start Either Seton or Moroney; Will Play Dartmouth Saturday

By HARRY RANGE

With yesterday's scheduled curtain raiser with Princeton being rained out the Wildcat nine will start operations for 1950 against the Mules from Muhlenberg.

This contest will mark the first for new Villanova coach, Art Mahan, who recently took over for Phil Weinert. It will also mark the 81st year that Villanova has fielded a team.

For Lou Cardinal, Muhlenberg coach, it will be his first game at the helm of a team that was in the Middle Atlantic Playoffs last season. Although the Mules have lost many of their starters of a year ago they are still expected to have a powerful club.

The Wildcats are slated to feature either Sophomore Bob Sexton or Junior John Moroney on the mound. Sexton was scheduled to take the hill yesterday against the Tigers but due to the rain, the pitching order will probably be changed.

The remainder of the starting nine will be Jack Jameson catching, John Weglicki, Larry Aigledinger, Tom Jones, and Benny Moskal in the infield and John Morris, Micky Frinzi, and Shy Raiken patrolling the outfield.

Arizin Starts Post Season Play In Herald-Tribune East-West Game

West Wins, 66-59 As Schnittker Leads With 14 Points

Last Saturday night in Madison Square Garden, Villanova's All-American, Paul Arizin, played in the first of his post-season All-Star contests.

The Garden was the sight of The New York Herald-Tribune's fifth annual East-West All-Star game in which the foremost seniors in the country took part. The West, led by Dick Schnittker, of Ohio State, who was voted Most Valuable Player, topped the East, 66-59. This marked the second win for the Westerners.

Arizin did not start but after four minutes, Coach Harold Carlson, of Pitt, saw fit to put him in and as a result Paul played about 22 minutes, which was more than most of the players. Surprisingly, Arizin did not shine as a scorer but rather as a defensive player. Paul scored only two points on a push shot from about 15 feet out.

Covered Schnittker

In the second half he covered high-scoring Schnittker for about five minutes and in this time the Ohioan was held scoreless. It is possible that had Coach Carlson kept Arizin on Schnittker the outcome of the game might have been different.

Tall Paul just didn't look like Tall Paul on the Garden court since he was playing on the outside rather than in his customary position in the pivot. Since he was one of the "smaller" men the job was given to Chuck Share, 6' 10" center from Bowling Green who alternated with Duquesne's Charley Cooper. As a result, Paul was unable to feature his famous jump shot. He used this shot twice but both times the ball rolled around the rim and out.

Now Touring

Paul is now touring with the College All-Stars who are playing exhibition games with the Harlem Globetrotters.

VOLLEY BALL TO START AFTER EASTER VACATION

Softball Managers To Meet April 13

Six teams have entered the intramural volley ball tournament which was reported last week as a part of the new intramural athletic program under the direction of Mr. Eugene Powers.

More teams are still being sought for the tourney which will begin immediately after the Easter vacation. Teams are requested to give their rosters and their manager's name and address either to the editor of this paper or to Mr. Powers in the Education Office.

Softball Meeting

On the day that classes resume, Thursday, April 13th, a meeting will be held in the Villanovan office for all managers of softball teams, both resident and day-hop. It is desired to get the softball league under way as soon as possible. Games are to be played in the afternoon and in the evening as soon as day light saving time goes into effect.

Track Meet

The inter-class track meet, scheduled for May 4th, the Thursday of Junior Week is to consist of ten events which will be run off with the greatest possible efficiency. These include the 100 and 220-yard dashes, the quarter and half-mile runs, a mile relay, a quarter-mile relay, shot put, high jump, broadjump and javelin throw.

This meet is to be a class contest with the four classes being coached by members of the varsity. All students, except varsity trackmen, will be eligible with medals being presented by the Junior Class.

HELMS FOUNDATION NAMES ARIZIN AS PLAYER OF YEAR

Tall Paul Also Nation's Scoring Champion

Another, and perhaps the greatest honor has been bestowed on Villanova's All-American and that is the Helms Foundation Award as Player of the Year.

This release was made by Paul Helms, Director of the Foundation, who for the past 30 years has been in charge of the selection of the most outstanding player in the country. This catagory includes Ed McCauley, Alex Groza, Hank Luisetti, Bob Kurland, and George Mikan to mention a few.

The Helms Foundation also picked City College of New York as the Team of the Year. Incidentally, City has been somewhat overlooked by this paper earlier in the season.

First Team

On the first team with Arizin were Cousy, Holy Cross, Ranzino, N. C. State, Sharman, U. S. C., Haskins, Hamline, Unruh, Bradley, Schmittker, Ohio State, Dambrot, City, and Pilch, Wyoming.

In another release from the National Collegiate Athletic Bureau, Arizin was officially named scoring champion for 1950. Paul amassed 735 points in 29 games for a 24.3 average. Second place went to Paul Seneky of St. Joe's with a 22.4 average.

CHESTER VALLEY G.C; NEW 'HOME' COURSE FOR LYNX LINKSMEN

By NEAL FAHY

Villanova's Golf Team will play all its home matches at the Chester Valley Golf Club in Paoli this Spring it was announced late last week by Rev. E. B. McKee, O.S.A., Moderator of Athletics. Over the week-end, the Lynx linksmen got in some unofficial practice there and, in general, were quite satisfied with the selection of the new home course, finding its hilly terrain much to thei liking.

It was also announced that a 36-hole qualifying round will be played by all members of the golf squad immediately after the return from the Easter vacation in order to determine who the first six starters will be.

Plenty of Talent

Competition should be exceptionally stiff among the members of the team vieing for the six starting positions since there is a host of experienced performers as well as a number of promising newcomers. Therefore, Manager John Trayer has requested that only those players who honestly feel that they can play consistently under 85 by April 20th try to qualify.

More information relative to the time of the qualifying round will be posted on the bulletin boards after Easter.

Al Severance

By J. GALLO

The year of 1950 is somewhat of an anniversary year for Alexander G. Severance, Villanova's cage mentor. For the past twenty-five years, the "Judge" has been associated with Wildcat athletics in one capacity or another. He entered Villanova as a freshman in 1925 and has served the Main Line school since then as student, athlete, administrator, and coach, to gain distinction as the oldest member on the coaching staff in point of service.

A native New Yorker, Severance attended St. Nicholas of Tolentine Grammar School and Regis High School. He was valedictorian of the Class of 1929 at Villanova, entered Temple University Law School and graduated from that institution in 1933. While maintaining such a fine scholastic record, Coach Severance still had time for a fine athletic career. He captained the Regis court squad as a senior and immediately earned a varsity berth upon entering Villanova, in the days of freshman eligibility. Al played four full years under the ntuelage of Michael Saxe and Rube Cashman, and co-captained the 1928-1929 Wildcat team with Hugh Nolan. But his athletic interests were not limited to basketball—he also ran on the track team and held the college 135- and 145-pound boxing titles to prove his versatility.

In 1932, Al became freshman basketball coach, a position which he held until 1935. Meanwhile, he was appointed assistant graduate manager, graduate manager, and director of athletics, successively. He succeeded George "Doc" Jacobs as head basketball coach in 1936. Villanova's court records since then are evidence of Al Severance's success as a basketball strategist. His teams have won 249 games, while losing only 95. Wildcat quintets have twice been selected to represent District Two in the N. C. A. A. playoffs, first in 1939 and again in 1949.

In addition to his coaching chores, Alexander G. Severance raps the gavel as magistrate of nearby Teddyfrin Township. As the father of three sons, he is well on the way to forming a family court quintet. As scholar, athlete, and coach, the "Judge" has done exceptionally well in serving Villanova College.

Cummin Clancy

By Bill Cooney

A note in the current Villanova College Bulletin, Catalogue number, reads that the student body is drawn from all the states and from foreign countries, especially the Latin American Republics. With such a cosmopolitan atmosphere on campus then, it was never a surprise to hear the broad A of a New Englander, the clipped Latin accents, or a deep Southern drawl. This past fall, however, the halls rangs with the lilting brogue of a son of Erin, 6 feet, 2½ inches of Galwayman, Cummin Clancy.

Cummin, who 220 pouuds go quite well with his height, is one of the three men from the Emerald Isle who have come to Villanova within the past year. The group includes John Joe Barry the ace miler; Jimmy Reardon, a 400 meter champ, and of course Cummin. As noted all three are track men and they will try thir luck in American competition under Villanova's colors. Getting back to Cummin, however, we find that his specialty is the weights, especially the discus. He throws the shot too, but he confesses that he prefers the discus over the iron ball.

He Made the Olympic Team

It was his discus throwing that first brought him fame. In the British Open, which compares with our Nationals, he flipped the platter 155 feet to snag the title. This performance won him an easy berth on the Irish Olympic team. Among his other accomplishments the big guy won both the Irish shot and discus titles, and hold the record in the latter. One of his proudest moments he recalls is the time he defeated both Jim Fuchs and Olympic decathalon winner Bob Mathias in the discus. He also recalls with a smile, though, that Fuchs turned right around and defeated him soundly in the shot.

On the personal side we see that Cummin lives just outside Galway in the county of that name. Always athletic minded he was of all things a sprinter and a broad jumper in high school in addition to being a standout rugby player. After graduation he entered the National Police Academy and graduated as a Garda or Lieutenant on the force. It was in the Academy that he became interested in the discus. He kept up an interest in rugby too and was good enough to play on several inter-provincial championship teams. Cummin has not yet decided on American football, but thinks he might like to try it out.

Shades of The Irish Giants

Since he is still a freshman, Mr. C. will not see much action in the cinder campaigns this season. Right now it looks as though his first American appearance will be the Middle Atlantic A. A. U. games in Harrisburg next month. From there who knows? However, it looks as though the track fraternity mill be dusting off the shades of Matty McGrath for comparison if all goes well for Cummin Clancy.

Intramural Playoffs Tonight In Field House Will End Basketball Season

BY MONDSCHEIN, Inc.

In order to inaugurate a new phase of I. M. sports—Volley Ball —, immediately after the Easter holidays, the playoffs in the Resident-Day Hop Basketball loop has been scheduled for today in the Field House. The consolation game will commence at 7:30 P. M. and the championship tilt will get underway about 8:45 P. M.

The second place Resident league ended up in a two way tie between the Doms and Brks. 1&4. Because of the ensuing Easter holidays and unlimited playing time, a coin will be flipped between these two teams to decide the Resident second place representative. The winner will compete against the Day Hop second place entry.

Day Hop Playoffs

Yesterday was the official start of the play-off series with all games taking place in the Day Hop league. This was necessitated because the Day Hop league was comprised of two sections. In the preliminary contest, the Bryn Mawr Hotshots who took second place honors in the Section I loop will tangle with the Hornets, victors of the Section II runner up spot. In Monday night's finale, the Warriors, who captured the first place laurels in Section I, will supply the opposition against the Brown's Bombers, who took first place honors in Section II.

The winner of the Monday night consolation tilt will then square off against the decided second place Resident contestant on Tuesday night's preliminary. The victor of the first place competitors will clash with Alumni who copped both halves of the Resident league. The winner will automatically be crowned the I. M. Champion. Should Alumni win the playoff, they will retain the I. M. basketball cup for the third straight year.

The Day Hop league saw four hotly contested games in last week's finale with the Warriors coming through with a 48-41 triumph over the Kryuhs, thus eliminating them from any playoff berth. The big siege in the Warriors attack was Nicola, who netted 6 field goals and fouls while Shane Creamer aided him with 12 points. The losers saw Vince Doyle contribute 12 counters to a losing caushe. The Warriors were further deserving of their victory since they lost their star Connelly in the third quarter because of a sprained ankle.

Black Flames Win

In Tuesday's contests, the Black Flames trounced the Educators 60-38 and the Brown's Bombers came through with a thrilling and hard fought 46-45 conquest. The Bombers maintained an early 25-11 lead but wilted toward the end of the game as Rosato was ejected via the foul route. Smith, Nievies, and Kodis had enough left to hold back the Hornets thus gaining their close victory.

Doms Top Fedigan

In the Resident league, the week's activities found the Doms topping the Fedigan Five 40-36 while Austin succumbed to Brks. 1&4 71-63 on Tuesday night. The Brks. 1&4 combine then came back Thursday night to nip the fighting Good Counsel crew 56-55 which threw the league into a second place two-way tie.

Tom McCollugh, who was contented to play the defensive roll for the Doms throughout the two halves, finally showed his capabilities on the offensive side by netting 16 points to give them their victory. He was ably assisted by Reahan, Knecht, and Natiello who garnered 8 points each. Reismeir and Altman with 10 each led the losers scoring attack.

In both their games, the Brks. 1&4 outfit were led to their triumphs by the usual "Tom" trio—Flynn, Falkowski and Madonnia. On Tuesday night their victim Austin, was led by Lemmer, Scanlon and Rosegen while Good Counsel, their victim on Thursday night, was paced by Mulchay, Saganowich and Ocwczykoski in each teams offensive thrust.

Graham & Sons State College, Pennsylvania

In State College, Pennsylvania, the favorite gathering spot of students at Pennsylvania State College is Graham & Sons because it is a cheerful place — full of friendly collegiate atmosphere. And when the gang gathers around, ice-cold Coca-Cola gets the call. For here, as in college haunts everywhere—Coke belongs.

Hoopsters Honored At Convocation

Honors were rendered to the basketball team last Tuesday at the second Student Convocation of the school year, as the chairman of the Student Council, Brian McLarnon, conducted the assembly. The speakers included Very Rev. Francis X. N. McGuire, O.S.A., Martin L. Gill, President of the Alumni Association, and Coach Al Severance.

Severance said that teamwork played as important a part as did individual brilliance in the success of this year's aggregation. He singled out various graduating members of the team for particular praise and spoke highly of the prospects for another successful season next year.

Mr. Gill presented the Alumni's Most Valuable Player plaque to Leo Wolf who accepted it in behalf of Paul Arizin, who was in New York practicing with the East All-Star team. The award is presented annually to the man who in the opinion of his teammates contributed the most to the team's efforts.

Father McGuire congratulated the basketball team on being the closest approach in the last twenty-five years to the Villanova ideal of "good, smart, able men". He also praised them for their excellent conduct while representing Villanova away from the campus.

Captain Leo Wolf thanked the student body for their support throughout the year and accepted on behalf of his graduating teammates nine $50-Savings Bonds presented by the Student Council.

Camels for Mildness

Yes, Camels are SO MILD that in a coast-to-coast test of hundreds of men and women who smoked Camels—and only Camels—for 30 consecutive days, noted throat specialists, making weekly examinations, reported

NOT ONE SINGLE CASE OF THROAT IRRITATION due to smoking CAMELS!

The Library Corner . . .

After having digressed for several weeks on subjects other than books, we would like to return to the topic most important in the Library, and this week mention books once again. In this case the volumes are the ones now on display in the showcases of the lobby which make up an exhibit dedicated to Holy Week.

The display, arranged by Rev. Michael O'Donnell, O.S.A., Curator of the Library collections, is shown in two parts, one in each of the two cases closest to the entrance. In the case on the left are displayed works of a liturgical nature, and in the other are shown non-liturgical volumes which have some connection with Passion Week that is now being observed.

Liturgical Display

Among the liturgical books, on the left side of the top shelf is a heavy, old and stained missal, opened to the prayers for the Canon of the Mass, with a full-page picture of the crucifixion on the page opposite the prayers. This missal was printed in Antwerp in 1738 by the Plantin Press, one of the earliest and most famous successors Gutenberg's first printing press.

At the other end of the same shelf there is another missal, opened to a page showing the same prayers and picture which was printed in Rome One hundred and three years later than the first one and set in larger and newer style type than the Plantin book. The corroboration of the two works, printed a century apart, is an argument in favor of the authenticity of the present language used in the Mass, since even present-day missals agree to the letter with these ancient copies.

Lenten Features

In the "starboard" case, the outstanding feature is the color reproduction of Da Vinci's Last Supper, the occasion which is to be celebrated on Thursday of this week. Above this, on the top shelf, one can see another worn and stained volume, containing the sermons of St. Thomas of Villanova, the famous Spanish saint, and patron of the College. In keeping with the theme of the exhibit, the leather-bound work is opened to what one can discern as a sermon delivered by St. Thomas for the Palm Sunday celebration.

What are probably the most inconspicuous, and yet interesting parts of this exhibit, are the two small crucifixes placed one against the back wall of each case. Covered with the purple veiling of the penitential season, they are used to illustrate the ruling of the Church that during this time of the year, all statues, except the Stations of the Cross, be veiled to remind the faithful of the sorrow of the season. These, in compliance with the rule, will remain covered until Holy Saturday.

The smaller crucifix, incidentally, was one of the blessed objects that were rescued from the Church of St. Augustine when it burned in Philadelphia during a wave of anti-Catholicism in 1844.

NFCCS Tour Uses Second Ship

A second ship has been obtained for next summer's Holy Year tour of Europe by American Catholic college students, it was revealed this week by NFCCS. Unexpectedly heavy response, which soon booked the original vessel to capacity, made the move necessary.

The new ship will leave New York June 23rd for a 37-day tour. The fare will be 20 dollars more than the price quoted for comparable tours on the first vessel, the Roma. Students who reserved air passage when the Roma was booked may obtain a refund and reservation on the second ship. Students planning to make the trip are asked to register their names in the office of Rev. George MacLaughlin, O.S.A., Dean of Student Activities, as soon as possible.

New Date Set For Cervantes Fete

For a Frenchman it would be a faux pas, but for the members of the Spanish Club it is still a grave error, that is, the releasing last week of the date for the Cervantes Day celebration before final plans were completed. For this reason, the date of the dinner-dance will not be April 22nd, as announced in the last issue of this paper, but will be April 29th for sure. The place, the Elks' Club in Norristown, remains the same.

As a result of this change, the date of the deadline for the Literary contest held in conjunction with Cervantes Day, has also been pushed back to April 16th. announced Rev. Lorenzo Lozano, O.S.A., moderator of the group. He also made known that, as usual, the contest will be in two parts, one for poetry and one for prose work, and that prizes will be awarded by the Spanish Institute of Columbia University for the winning selection in each group. The winners of the contest will also receive listings in the Spanish Cultural Index.

Father Lozano wishes to make known that he is pleased with the progress the various committees have been making with the arrangements during their weekly meetings. A nine-piece combination from the Villanovans dance band has been secured to play for the affair, and several distinguished guests are expected to attend the celebration on April 29th.

Junior Prom Acquires Look Of South In Spring Time

Stage to Be Porch of Dixie Plantation as Class Plans Decorations of Gym

By Harry Range

Friday evening, May 5, the night of the Junior Prom, will find the Villanova Field House transformed into a Southern Plantation complete with mansion, dogwood trees, and southern gardens.

The theme for the highpoint in Junior Week "Springtime in Dixie", will be carried out in such a way as to give the atmosphere of a garden party on a Main Line "Tara".

Blue Barron and his Orchestra will be playing on the portico of the mansion. The stage will be decorated with columns simulating the facade of the plantation house. During the intermission the Blue Notes will take over in a patio on the side so that the promgoers may enjoy uninterrupted music.

The left side of the floor will feature an inovation, a long table containing punchbowls. Punch will be served by butlers in white mess jackets.

A beautiful feature will be the centerpiece, a ten foot fountain having a spray with alternating lights played on it. The centerpiece, which is five feet in diameter, will be banked by ferns and a multi-colored array of fresh flowers.

The lobby will be decorated in keeping with the theme while

JUNIOR WEEK WILL OPEN WITH MOTHER'S DAY ACTIVITIES

Villanova's Junior class will hold their annual Mother's Day Celebration Monday, May 1st. This first day of Junior Week will be devoted by the Juniors to honor their mothers.

The day will begin with Holy Mass, at 11 A. M. in the College Chapel. Mass will be celebrated by the Rev. Thomas Purcell, O. S.A., the moderator of the Class of 1951. The Very Rev. Francis X. McGuire, O.S.A., President of the College, will speak at the Mass. The mothers of the Juniors will be given corsages at the Chapel before the Mass begins.

Following the Mass there will be a tree-planting ceremony to be presided over by George Schuster, the president of the Junior Class. This ceremony will take place in the vicinity of Fedigan Hall at 12:30 P. M.

Lunch in Cafeteria

Luncheon will then be served to the Juniors' mothers in the College Dining Room at one o'clock. After luncheon the Juniors will take their mothers to the Field House where they will be entertained by some of the best talent on the campus. This entertainment will include a concert by the Band and Glee Club. There will also be a show put on by the Turf and Tinsel group.

College Host At CPA Forum; Annual Event Held In Field House

Mr. Albert G. Metz, Jr., C. P. A., with John Helms and Company explains to one of the groups in 215 Mendel Hall the fascination and excitement attached to public accounting.

Professor Schaefer Represents School Before Phila. Chapter

The Philadelphia chapter, Pennsylvania Institute of Certified Public Accountants, held its annual Accounting Forum at the Field House last Thursday. The forum is sponsored in co-operation with the colleges and universities of the Philadelphia area, and this year the Controllers' Institute of America, the National Association of Cost Accountants, the Institute of Internal Auditors and the Tax Executives Institute all took an active part in the activities.

Professor Leo H. Schaefer, head of the Accounting Department at Villanova, represented the college as official host to the convening accountants.

Opening Exercises

Mr. I. H. Krekstein, C. P. A., Vice-Chairman of the Philadelphia Chapter, presided over the opening meeting at the Field House. Very Rev. Francis X. N. McGuire, O.S.A., President of the college, greeted the assembly and gave the invocation. The rostrum was then turned over to Professor Schaefer, who presided while Messrs. George A. Hewitt, C. P. A., Roland J. Christy, C. P. A. and Thomas H. Carroll, C. P. T & T Puts Finishing Touch To "Piper-Heidsieck"

Sparkling as the champagne whose name it bears, the new Turf and Tinsel show, "Piper-Hiedsieck, '98", is now in the final stages of preparation for the opening night performance on May 11th. For several weeks the singers and dancers have been ironing out the kinks in the various acts, and their progress indicates that this year's show will measure up favorably to the originality and freshness of past productions.

For instance, there's a "Barber-Shop Octette" specialty, featuring such prominent Wildcats as Tom Clavin, Jim Caulfield, Shy Raiken, Leo Wolf, Phil Snyder, John Weglicki, Dan Brown and one other, identified only as the "Mystery Man". These well-known varsity athletes will be costumed as Keystone lifeguards in the type of skit that made Mack Sennett so famous.

Jim Clarkin and Herb Mathews are leading the cast this year, and will be supported by such proven actors as Jack Kelly, Bob Resnick, Jack Rowe, and John Bauman. The show itself is under the choreagraphic direction of George Noake, while the music and lyrics have been written by Bob Whelan. Both men have proven their ability in the past shows.

Publicity for the show has al-

Queen To Be Selected On Night Of Prom

A very pleasing change in the method of selection of the Queen of the Junior Prom has been made. Instead of reaching a final decision from the pictures that have been submitted the actual judging of the Queen will take place at 10:30 on the night of the prom in the Field House.

Mr. Oscar Neufeld, the modeling agent, has been kind enough to offer his services as judge, and it is expected that he will bring with him Mrs. Doris Mooney, Mrs. Philadelphia, 1949 to act as second judge. The third judge will be a well-known celebrity whose name has not yet been released.

Sophs Offer New Plan For Student Officer Elections

A new system of nominations for class officials and student councilmen was inaugurated last night as the Sophomore class met to pick its candidates for this year's elections.

A special petition system, which will be adopted as a school-wide custom if it proves successful, was given a trial by the Class when it met in C&F Auditorium yesterday at 7:30 P. M. Under the new plan, a petition of fifty names, rather than a floor nomination, will be required for placing a candidate in the running. The idea behind this plan is to permit more men, who possibly have missed the class meeting, to be nominated. Petitions will be checked carefully to see that no fictitious names are used.

Other classes held meetings in the past week to determine the names of their candidates. The Freshmen met yesterday at five in the C&F Auditorium, and the Junior class gathered in the same place Wednesday, April 19th.

The offices for which men were named are President, Vice-President, Secretary, Treasurer, and Student Council Representatives.

The elections will be held on Thursday, May 4th. in the Alumni gym during the morning and afternoon, permitting all students plenty of time in which to vote. Over a week of hectic campaigning for the various nominees will take place before the elections.

Election Rules

1. All classes will elect four officers. Freshman Class will choose one Student Council member; Sophomores, four; Juniors, four and Senior Alumni Representative.
2. The use of any sound equipment is restricted to the period between classes.
3. Notices in Mendel Hall and the C&F Building are to be posted only on the bulletin boards.
4. As soon as possible, all organizations having representation on the Student Council are to have elections so the Council may be organized late in May.
5. All election posters are to be removed immediately following the elections.
6. Elections are to be held in the Alumni Hall Gymnasium on Thursday, May 4, from 10 A. M. to 3 P. M.

Local Politics

Politics comes to Villanova with all its color, noise and promises. In two weeks the class elections will be held and so for the next two weeks hopeful candidates for the various class offices will do their best to win your vote.

The student is prone to take the class elections very lightly when actually they are as much a part of his education as History 101. There is a responsibility attached to the very fact that the student is a member of a class. The class is a society. The individuals of a society can make it a success or a failure. Part of the responsibility of the class member is voting for the proper men to lead his class. If he cannot be a leader himself, he can at least see that capable men are elected to lead.

The importance of your vote must be realized if you are to attain any concept of what you mean as an individual in any society. You are important and you manifest your power through your vote. That is why class elections can and will be more than an opportunity to plaster the campus with posters and blare out the name of the candidates on P. A. systems.

As for the candidates themselves they must not allow the elections to become mere popularity contests. Their platforms should be built of substantial planks since the future of an entire class of Villanovans will lie in their hands. The ambition, work and determination of its officers make a class rise above the rank and file and achieve the admiration of the entire school. If the candidate has not resolved to live up to the real responsibilities of the office he is campaigning for but is merely running for laughs he should do the class and himself a favor and drop out.

The success of any election is usually determined by the representation in the vote. In the past there has been an average turnout of approximately 50% which is not impressive. The voting booths are in a convenient location and open at convenient hours. Everyone vote. Let's get the most out of these elections!!

Why Not Use It?

Are you making plans for the summer now? Will you be leaving the books in June for a swell summer's vacation with no bother whatsoever about studies and homework and all that awful grind? At last, one more school year is over!

It's a pretty bad situation if that is your attitude. College should never be an obstacle to the college student, for if it is, he has no business here. Rather it should be the very training and preparation necessary for his profession. Are stairs an obstacle in reaching the second floor, or are they the very means by which you attain that higher position. How do you use those stairs, two or three steps at a time? Many fall and more often never are able to pick themselves up again.

Here's how to climb those stairs of college life. Use each and every opportunity offered you. Supplement your required courses with those courses that are so necessary to complete your enucation, Philosophy, History, and English. Spend time in extra curricula activities which are so much an integral part of college and why not even read a fews books this summer?

By JIM GRIFFIN

It was raining in Janesville, a cold penetrating rain, and the five little boys were huddled together in the shelter. There were puddles in the grass, and wild rivulets were swirling the mud along the edge of the road.

Finally the bus came sliding along, and pulled up, splashing to a stop. The door swung open and the kids hopped on, one, two, three, four . . . .

"Hey, Tommy, you can't come with us. You don't go to our school . . . "

Tommy looked up, half guilty. "Yeh, but I thought because it was rainin' and you go right by St. Anthony's, and you always have empty seats . . . . "

The bus driver had no choice. "I'd like to, Tommy, but I'd lose my job. It's against the law."

And so Tommy stepped down, the door swung shut, and a little piece of puddle jumped up at him from under the back wheel.

Fantastic? It happens every week in Janesville, Wis. or Harleysville, Pa. or in any little town in any one of some thirty of the forty-eight states. And it is in direct opposition to the principle of equal treatment under the law which has dominated the American principles of democracy.

The Thomas Plan

At present there is under consideration in Congress the Thomas Bill, a general plan for federal aid to education. This bill demands equal proportional expenditures by the states of the federal funds to be granted for negro children, but it avoids any guarantee of such proportionality to non-public school children.

The American Plan

Just what do we want in this federal aid-to-education bill? We want a plan which aims at equal treatment of all school children, and includes a guarantee of this equality. We want a provision like that in the School Lunch Act of 1946 which would withhold a percentage of the federal funds from states which cannot give fair and equal treatment to all. Federal school-aid bills have been fair since they first struck the news; why should the new general aid bill be otherwise?

SPRINGTIME IN NOWHERE

By Bill Breninghouse

Nobody needs a calendar now to prove that Spring, that season of seasons is here. The trees are budding; the campus is green and so are the students; engineers are beginning to falter and flunk and others are flunking now in order to avoid the June rush. Yes, Spring definitly and irrevocably has arrived. What different people will do with this lovely season is a matter of taste and opinion.

Many stalwart young men like to be Springtime athletes. There are softball stars, expert golfers, tennis magicians, archery addicts like Oscar and many other types of budding athletes. The spring just seems to bring out the virility in these men. Time water their ambition however and the softball stars become baseball spectators, golfers run out of golfballs, tennis players get beaten by their little sisters and the archers send feathered shafts through everything but the targets.

Spring and Art

To others Spring means romantic thoughts and they go about in what they believe is a Shelley-like trance. They want to rhapsodize on nature or love or anything. The only thing that stops them is that they have no talent. This type if Springtimer extends past poetry to finger painting, zither strumming, and just thinking immortal thoughts. A close cousin to these is the reader, the man who goes to the library for the first time of the year and reads poetry, closes the book, sighs, and reads again.

The student in man seems to shrivel up come Spring and May bring social events of all kinds. Junior Week will soon be upon us with all its frenzied activities from Mother's Day to the Blazer Ball. Dinner dances, picnics and parties come fast and furious while Shakespeare and Applied Electronics take a back seat. The people who can attend all these affairs and stay on the ball academically are the ones most likely to succeed in business and life. So says the great philosopher and no-it-aller.

Girls and Spring

Girls like Spring because according to somebody a young man's fancy turns to thoughs of them come the magic season of Spring. The truth of this supposed axiom is doubtful. A young man's fancy usually turns to thoughts of charming young ladies any time. It's just that Spring means walking is possible, where no car can be found and that walking can be substituted for more expensive dates. A young man's fancy is subject to his financial condition.

Spring, then, is a time of promise. Soon there will be warmer days and greener grass, vacation and work, a change of scene, and an escape from the boredom of school. The days one must spend in the oppressive Pie Shop are numbered, only finals stand in the way of the next step in studies. In a few weeks all this will be left behind for other things. Seniors will finally say farewell after an average of five years in college and Freshmen will be released from that adolescent title. Yes, Spring is a time of promise, promise of better things to come.

Sense and Nonsense

— Tom Pasha

The season of love is upon us once again and, as usual, with the advent of this amorous time of the year, we have the Junior Prom arriving on wings of song and dilapidated pocket-books. This phrase, Junior Prom, was devised a few years ago by the members of high sassity to announce that a session of sweat and sway was to be held for those individuals fortunate enough to have completed three years of academic training in some institution of learning. Now, however, after much abuse this misleading phrase has come to mean convertibles, corsages, cocktails, ill-fitting dinner-jackets, and bankruptcy. However, don't let this throw you, men, because there is a way in which you can avoid all of the expense of these extravagances and still have a wonderful time.

Transportation

Since the dance is only a few days away, it would be advisable for you to start looking for a young fem with a beautiful bouncing Buick. In this way, you will cut transportation expense considerably and make a great impression on your roommate.

And Clothes

Once you have the transportation problem taken care of the remainder is simple. Now, you get in touch with your ancient Uncle Louie and request permission to use his tuxedo, the one he had when he was a boy. It has probably been in and out of style three times, however, with the return of the Charleston and hoop-skirts, no one will know the difference. You can get the accessories from the various individuals with whom you have become acquainted during the school year. Get a pair of cufflinks from your anti-social classmate, a pair of socks and garters from the prefect in your hall, and acquire the kid brother's sling-shot for suspenders. This takes care of the wardrobe.

And The Rest

After the vital necessities, you can concentrate on the corsage and cocktails. Call your buddy at the local florist shop and see what he can get together for a buck-and-a-half. Perhaps, an oversized Snapdragon can be fashioned in such a way as to represent four grand gardenias.

Oh, Yes, We Forgot

With your arrival at Joe Oppenheimer's cocktail party, you will find yourself having a wonderful time keeping up with the Social Set because, now, you too, have the essentials for a fine evening. Convertible, corsage, cocktails, and ill-fitting dinner-jacket, and, upon payment of your flower bill, bankruptcy.

Well, here we are back at the salt mines. Ain't it awful and 'nuff said about it.

In New York

While in New York over the holidays, besides some of the most ungodly examples of female sartorial insanity, I did manage to see the Ella Fitzgerald and Mel Torme show at the Paramount. Since this is supposedly a music column, I will fight off the temptation to write a scathing denunciation of the so called weaker sex and plug the show.

Ella Fitzgerald

At the Paramount Ella Fitzgerald turned on her usual fine job of vocalizing. She does a take off on Louis Armstrong with "I Can't Give You Anything But Love" that's guaranteed to have you laughing. Watching Ella is watching experience in action. When she's out there before an audience she's got them right in the palm of her hand and doesn't let go till she's ready to leave.

And Mel Torme

As for the very controversial Mr. Torme, I thought Mel was great.

On stage he's a Mickey Rooney with tonsils. He even has Rooney's boyish face and short stocky build. Even the uninhibited actions are there. Like Ella, Mel latches on the audience the minute he steps out on the stage and before the end of his first number you've gotten over your first impression that he is too young to be in the big city by himself. He did several of his hit numbers for the show including his latest, "Bewitched". Mel himself claims that this is the best record he ever cut, and although I also like "County Fair" and "I Cover the Waterfront", I'm inclined to agree with him.

Of the many good scores of days gone by that are now being recorded, one stands out of the run for musical interest. "Blue Prelude", just released by Ziggy Elman, adds up to good music any year. Nt quite a perennial favorite, it always brings back the days when no one worried about bop, dixieland or swing . . . the only requirement was that it be music of quality, regardless of form. Those were the days when the average person didn't feel that if he cared for dixieland he must necessarily abuse bop and vice versa. One didn't ask if someone liked a certain type of music, one asked if he liked a certain tune, no matter what its tempo. "Bewitched Bothered and Bewildered", another bit of good music from the past is currently enjoying a new popularity via several new recordings, especially one by Mel Torme. It's difficult to say that it is a new popularity, the song is one that will always be appreciated.

More on Records

Billy Eckstine and Sarah Vaughn, two of the foremost song stylists in the land, get together to do a duet on "Dedicated To You", a new ballad that is in a pleasing if not memorable vein. One of the top tunes on all the juke boxes will be "Wanderin'," by Sammy Kaye in short order. Has anybody seen Frankie Lane or George Shearing around lately?

And Something Off The Record

It has been rumored that not only do the columnists on the Immaculatan have a poor source of information and an exalted opinion of their veddy social parties, but one of them can't even keep track of her lipstick . . . must be wonderful to be a worldly wise senior!

another new feature will be added to the entrance of the Field House. This will be a canopy that will entend forty-five feet from the door to the street.

For Your Guests

As the time draws near for the Junior Week activities: Mother's Day, Blazer Ball, Junior Prom and the Dinner Dance, many of us anticipate out of town guests and have not as yet made the necessary arrangements for their lodgings. In the first of this series we mentioned some of the smaller Inns and Lodges in the Metropolitan area, and in subsequent issues we took note of some of the better restaurants in the vicinity. This week we wish to remind you that reservations should be made this week if you anticipate registering your guests at any of the Downtown Hotels.

Most of the larger Hotels in the city are very comfortable and are not exorbitantly priced. The Bellevue-Stratford is considered by many to be the finest in the Quaker town. We offer as equals of the 'Old Guard' hotel such excellent establishments as the Benjamin Franklin, The Barclay and the Warwick. We recommend the latter two very highly. The atmosphere is not that of a transient hotel and the prices are not high. The Walnut Park Plaza and the new John Bartram are also worthy of recommendation. All are convenient and have dining rooms which serve good food and the service leaves little to be desired. But we must mention the fact that the prices in the dining room might be a little higher than in some of the restaurants that we mentioned in former issues.

In closing we would like to bring to your attention another Inn which is quite convenient and very hospitable. The Montgomery Inn on Montgomery Avenue in Bryn Mawr, near the Baldwin School, will prove to be a very appropriate lodging for your guests.

Around The Town

By F. A. VARALLO

"The Third Man", recent arrival at the Stanley Theater, is a superior melodrama, smoothly directed and superbly acted. Produced, directed and written by Carol Reed and Graham Greene, this study in terror is no ordinary cut-and-dried thriller. Unique camera techniques, a plot full of suspense and a most unusual score strummed out on the zither keep the film constantly alive with excitement.

The action takes place in post-war Vienna where the story was actually filmed. It is rather unfair to reduce the plot to a series of incidents and to offer these as an adequate summary. The very essence of the film, the touches of wry humor and the mounting terror — all these are lost in such a procedure. Nevertheless, in order to give you some idea of what "The Third Man" is all about, here is the story in brief.

Man-Hunt

Joseph Cotton portrays a penniless American writer of Western fiction. Having received an offer of a job from an old friend, he goes to Vienna. A few minutes after his arrival, he learns that his old friend, Orson Welles, was killed in a street "accident". Although the police chief advises that he return to America, Cotten suspects that Welles has been deliberately murdered as a result of black market operations and immediately begins an investigation. With the help of Valli, Orson's actress-sweetheart, he learns that a mysterious third man was present at the time of the accident. The suspense builds up to a smashing climax when the identity of the third man is revealed, and a mad chase along Vienna's sewer follows.

Acting honors are about evenly divided among the principals, every one of whom is responsible for a topnotch performance, including Joseph Cotten, Valli, Orson Welles and Trevor Howard. The supporting cast is equally as effective.

"Cheaper By The Dozen"

In a humorous vein, this Technicolor celluloid features the antics of Clifton Webb, as the proud papa of a very unusual family of twelve. As the prolific efficiency expert, Webb comes up with all sorts of ideas about how to bring up a parcel of kids.

Family Fun

Like the book, an affectionate series of family anecdotes, "Cheaper by the Dozen" is more a collection of episodes — many of them amusing — than it is a dramatic tale. Some of these episodes include the taking out of the Gilbreth tonsils en masse; the introduction of the children to their new school in Montclair, N. J.; papa's going to a dance and becoming the "belle" of the ball; the purchase of "Mr. Chairman", a shaggy pup; and the birth of the last of the children.

Myrna Loy, as Clifton's wife; Jeanne Crain as Ann; Edgar Buchanan, the family physician, and Mildred Natwick are all entertaining in their portrayals.

By Hevey and Keiss

Lo and behold- After spending a quiet, relaxing (?) week in the hills of home, we are back again hungover but happy. Happy with the news that there are 22 class days left until exams and after that — anyone want to join the French Foreign Legion with us?

Do you feel drowsy? Does the combination of warm Spring breezes and enlivening classes put you into a semi-conscious state? 'Cat, you have what is commonly known as Springus Feverius. Our little informer, Ebenezer Q. Overcut, attributes his seasonal malady to being hit by a golf ball while traveling between C & F and Belle Air. May we suggest Aunt Amelia's Reefers to rid yourselves of this perennial ill? They come in three sizes, Small, Large, and Pleasant Dreams, Brother!

Frank Gobes, boy journalist, is going to debate with Skip Keenley on the question of whether or not chrysanthemums should be worn by all loyal Juniors at their Promenade. This should prove to be an interesting discussion and to accommodate the expected throng, it will be held in the phone booth in the C & F basement. Admission, including tax, is three matric cards and thirty-two cents.

Speaking of Junior Week, which we weren't, it has been brought to our attention that the shabby appearance of all the "social-lights" on campus is due to the avalanche of impoverishing dinner-dances and what-not that perennially deluges these hallowed halls every Spring. Tom "Silas Marner" Dondero has been indicted by a Congressional committee for lending out pennies to his buddies at a usurious rate of 80%, compounded hourly. Would it be legal to call this practice "Common Cents"?

(Editor's note: The remarks, opinions, puns, and trite remarks do not reflect the policy of this paper. Talent is so hard to get these days.)

We had quite a time for ourselves at the Seminary Guild's Hoe-Down last week. Jessica Dragonette and Eddie Roecker gave magnificent performances while Buddy William's music during the show and after, at the dance, was tremendous. There were quite a few 'Cats there, among them we noticed Tim Donovan squiring Mary Jane Gehrig, Tom Lynch accompanied by Mary Fleming, while John Larkin, as usual, was twiddling his thumbs in the corner.

Questions on nobody's mind:

1. How are chances for the Senators' taking the pennant?
2. Will 'Lil Abner complete the photograph of "Miss Knees of '50?"
3. Is it true that Villanova spelled backwards is Avonalliv?

We took another gander at a T&T rehearsal last week and this is what we saw: A little damsel being tossed about by some 7 or 8 husky, young athletes in long black bathing suits with the words "Life Guard" emblazoned on their chests. Could it perhaps be spring practice for the Ocean City Beach Patrol? The only way to find out is to attend one of the performances on the evenings of May 11th, 12th, 13th, and 14th. Will we see you there, or will you be one of the unfortunates? (Plug.)

And so we set fire to our typewriter and bid our readers a fond "Adieu" 'til the next time we impart our wordly wisdom to your innocent hearing aids.

Dinner-Dance To Wind Up Junior Week Events

The Junior Dinner-Dance, the last of the gala events of Junior Week will take place on Saturday evening May 6th, in the main ballroom of the Benjamin Franklin Hotel, 9th and Chestnut Sts., Phila. Music for after-dinner dancing will be provided by Leo Zollo, popular local bandleader, and his orchestra.

Final arrangements for the formal affair were completed last week. In his report to the Class, Frank Pitocchelli, Chairman of the dance committee, emphasized that all tables are to be reserved in order that parties of friends attending may be seated together. Tickets may be purchased now both in Mendel Hall and in the Pie Shop where plans of the seating arrangements are available.

Juniors Only

The Dinner-Dance is the only closed affair of Junior Week and tickets are being sold only to Juniors. The admission price, covering everything, is $7.50 per couple.

Dinner is scheduled to start at 7:30 P. M. sharp, and an excellent menu, featuring roast turkey as the main course, has been arranged by the committee. Throughout the meal, from 7:30 until 9:00 P. M., soft dinner music will be played by the orchestra.

After-dinner speeches will be short and limited in number, the Chairman promised. As a special feature, the first announcement of the Junior Class election returns will be made at the dinner.

When the dinner and festivities are completed, the tables will be cleared from the dance floor, and the dancing will begin; continuing until midnight.

Parking

Adequate parking facilities will be available for all those driving to the dinner-dance. Students with automobiles can take advantage of the parking service provided by the Benjamin Franklin Hotel. There are also many public parking lots and garages in the vicinity of the hotel.

There are still a number of positions on the Dinner-Dance Committee open to Juniors. Anyone interested in assisting in the sale of tickets should contact the chairman.

Belle Masque Tours Colleges

After several months of planning, Belle Masque has begun its road tour with a condensed, four-act version of "Cyrano de Bergerac." The tragedy was adapted and directed, as was last year's full-length production, by Rev. Wm. Krupa, O.S.A., moderator-director of the dramatic club.

Two stops have been made to date, Rosemont and Immaculata College last Wednesday and Friday evenings, respectively. Next Thursday evening, the roving company of about fifteen actors and ten productionists will be on the Notre Dame Academy stage.

Mendel Bulletin Scheduled For Re-Publication In Fall

The office of the Dean of the Science School has announced that beginnings have been made toward the resumption of publication of the Mendel Bulletin, the official publication of the School of Science.

This magazine was originally published in 1929, and the last issue appeared in 1943. At that time it became a war casualty and was suspended for the duration. The magazine's purpose is to acquaint the students with the faculty, organization, courses and facilities of the department.

This periodical will be published quarterly, with the first new issue appearing in the fall of 1950. Lamba Kappa Delta, Pre-Med Fraternity which has revived interest in the publication, has formed a committee to organize the staff that will be required for the editing of the magazine. The first meeting of the committee was held on Wednesday, April 19th. It was decided that it will feature articles on subjects of general interest to those in the Biology, Chemistry and Physics fields, as well as reports on individual projects and investigations by students in these fields.

A meeting has been scheduled for Wednesday, April 26th, at 5 P. M. in Mendel Hall. All interested Biology, Chemistry, and Physics majors are invited to attend.

The Wynnemore Inn is very popular in the banquet circuit having specialized in banquet service for many years. It is conveniently located at the corner of Wynnewood and Haverford Roads, a block from the P&W Wynnewood Road station. Last year, nearly a hundred accounting students attended the first annual banquet.

The menu will be as follows:

Mahanmen Victors In Two Out Of Five; Distance Medley Winner In First Start

MEDLEY RELAY TEAM SET NEW MARK AT SETON HALL GAMES

Cunjak, Ross, Reardon and Thompson Take Crown

By BILL COONEY

The cinder season for this year of Our Lord 1950 has roned around again, and for Villanova, at least, it has started with a big bang. In the first major Eastern get-together, the Seton Hall Relays, a Wildcat foursome snagged top honors in the distance medley event (440, 880, 1320, mile) and hung up a new meet record in the process. Bob Cunjac, Jim Reardon, George Thompson and Browning Ross ran in that order to set the mark of 10:32.7. This was 3.3 seconds better than Princeton's 1949 record which broke Villanova's 1948 standard. All of which proves you can't keep a good team down.

'Cats Place In 3 Others

Coach Jim Elliot spread the rest of his squad a little too thin for any more firsts, but not thin enough that they couldn't give a representative performance. The Mainliners were third in the half-mile and two-mile relays and fourth in the one-mile race.

The distance medley race was strictly Villanova all the way. Bob Cuniac ran a very nice qlarter to give the 'Cats a lead that the foursome finally ran up to fifty yards at the finish. Jim Reardon, normally a quartermiler, looked very good in the half in his varsity debut. Veterans George Thompson in the three-quarters and Browning Ross in the anchor mile put the race on ice, however. Both men ran stronbly and increased the lead on both their stints.

As unexciting as the race was from the spectators point of view, it gave all the fans in

Sexton Beaten in 9th as Equitable Life Scores Two

By W. JAY KAY

The 1950 edition of the Villanova baseball team came out over the Easter Vacation under Coach Art Mahan who is starting his first season as Wildcat mentor.

In the first five games the Mainliners won two and lost three. After wins over Dartmouth and Canisius the team has dropped hlose ones to Penn, Equitable Life and last Saturday to Georgetown.

John Moroney went the route for the Cats against the Hoyas but he was unable to match his previous performance and the club lost, 7-4. A ninth inning single by Beeny Moskol went to no avail as the Hoya pitcher bore downe and retired the side eliminating any possible rally.

Split in Ecarlier Games

In the earlier games played during and after the Easter holidays, the Wildcats split even in four games. After the Princeton and Muhlenberg games had been cancelled because of inclement weather, Dartmouth invaded the Stadium to give Villanova its first test of the season. Art Mahan's proteges came from behind with three runs in the eighth to cop a 5-3 decision, behurling of John Moroney. The hurling of John Maroney. The stocky Junior, mound ace gave up only one hit, while striking out six. He also issued eight walks and his wildness kept him in hot water throughout the game. Inter-Class Track Meet To Be Held On Thursday Of Junior Week; Pick Coaches

Meet To Feature Ten Events; Medals Will Be Awarded

By HARRY RANGE

The latest feature in the ever-growing Intramural Athletic Program will be the Inter-Class track meet to be held on Thursday, May 4. This meet will be staged by the Junior Class and it is expected that in the future the Inter-Class track meet will become an integral part of Junior Week.

The coaches and managers for the different classes have been selected by Coach Elliott of the track team and Intramural Athletic Director Powers and it is through the work of these two that the meet is being made possible.

The freshmen class will be coached by the Smiling Irishman, Cummin Clancy while the manager is Dick Torpey. Another Irishman, Jim Reardon, captain of the Irish Olympic Team, will coach the sophs with Jack Patrick of the football team acting as manager.

McKenna and Cooney

Star sprinter Jim McKenna takes the reins as Junior coach while Bill Cooney, track editor and expert of the VILLANOVAN, will serve as manager.

Olympian Browning Ross will coach the Seniors and he will be assisted by the genial Tony Russo who has done much for the promotion of Intramural Athletics as well as coaching the 150's.

Tryout and practice schedules for the various teams will be announced by the coaches and managers and we remind you to note the bulletin boards for news of this big event.

Varsity Athletes Eligible

One point that is to be made clear is that all varsity athletes, with the exception of varsity and freshmen track are eligible for this meet.

Points are to be given on a 3-2-1 basis and medals, donated by the Junior Class, will be awarded by the first three in each event.

Frosh Footballers Showing Fine Possibilities

With spring practice almost finished coach Jim Leonard has a full picture of his material. The Wildcat mentor has lost many stalwarts from last year's great eleven and a lot is looked for from the fine freshmen prospects to fill the gaps.

Guards Strong

At the wing positions Joe Rustic, John Markus, Rrank Rehak, Frank Banas and Don Jordan will be counted on to continue their fine end play. Tackles Dick Connor, Joe Leitz, Harold Davis and Joe Roy are all capable of playing good ball. The guards are exceptionally strong, Tony Trunzo, Joe Jerry, Al Shannon and Ray Small are shaping up into future Wildcat stars. Tommy Green and Joe De Rose will be in the battle for the pivot spot.

'CAT LINKSMEN WIN FIRST MATCH OVER ST. PETER'S COLLEGE

By NEAL FAHY

Villanova's golf team got off to a healthy start last Friday afternoon by soundly trouncing the St. Peter's College six, 8½ to ½ at West Orange, New Jersey. This afternoon the 'Cat linksmen will go out for their second win of the season against Seton Hall College at the Chester Valley Country Club.

Don Weiland led the team to victory in Friday's matches by beating the Peacocks' number one man 2 and 1 and turning in a fine score of 73. Don's medal of 72 and 79 topped all cards in the qualifying matches held earlier last week.

This Friday afternoon will find the Lynx linksmen performing at home again against Loyola of Baltimore.

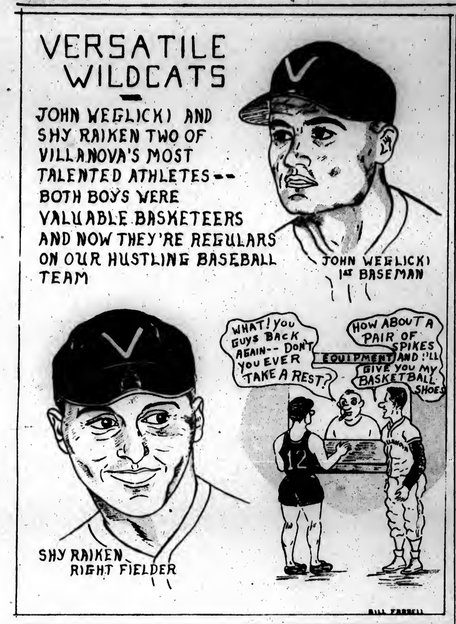
Arizin Gets M. V. P. Award For Globetrotters Tour

By JIM GALLO

A number of loyal Villanova basketball fans formed part of a capacity crowd of 7800 at the Philadelphia Arena on April 18th to get a last look at their favorite All - American, Paul Arizin. On that night, the College All-Stars turned in their best performance of an 18-game transcontinental series with the Harlem Globetrotters. And, it was Arizin who led the Collegians to a 61-52 victory, their sixth of the seven they were able to capture from the spectacular 'Trotters.



The Tall One tailled 14 points in slightly less than three periods of playing time on five of six field goal attempts, and four five free throws. He started the game on the outside and put the Stass ahead with two quick field goals. Later, he assumed his familiar inside position and exhibited the famous jump shot for the home folks.

Great Performance

Paul's performance in Philadelphia was an example of what he has shown to more than 170,000 fans on the recent exhibition tour in which he topped the 200-point mark. After the Arena engagement, Coach Sapperstein of the 'Trotters told the press that, in his opinion, "Arizin stood head and shoulders over any college player in the country." His opinion was undoubtedly shared by the sportswriters who chose the Wildcat ace "Most Valuable" of the "All - Star squad. This is no small honor, for the All-Star lineup was made up of the collegiate game's greatest graduating performers.

The freshmen played but one game last season beating a highly touted Princeton frosh team by a score of 16-7. The frosh are expected to be in the thick of the battle for positions come September. The boys are capable of showing tip top football and are anxious to display their talents this fall.

In a game marred by 25 bases on balls, the Wildcats eked out a 7-6 verdict over Canisius, in winning their second start of the season. The Blue and White batsmen waited out the offerings of two canisius hurlers for fifteen passes, while Sexton of the locals handed out 10 free tickets. John Maroney replaced Sexton in the eighth and received credit for the win. Each team had five hits. Austin of the visitors

All photographs, paintings, or sketches submitted must be at least 8" by 10" or larger, and mounted on a mat at least 16" by 20". A title is optional, and each entry must be accompanied by a 3" by 5" card with the student's name, class, and department, while each unit must be properly identified on the reverse side of the work.

The judging will be based on originality and achievement of purposes. Judges for the contest will be Rev. John J. McShea, O.S.A., Assistant Professor of English, Rev. John J. Verna, O.S.A., Engineering Drawing Professor, and Dr. George N. Quam, Chemistry Professor.

FOUR TO RECEIVE MARINE COMM.

The United States Marine Corps Headquarters announced last week through Major Dayton's NROTC Department here that four Villanova men will receive commissions in the Marine Corps Reserve. The four men named were Donald J. Griffin, John R. McDermott, Robert T. Munday, and Joseph B. Schultes, all members of the Marine Platoon Leader Class Program.

The four men will be commissioned second lieutenants, United States Marine Corps Reserve, at graduation exercises this June.

When Griffin, McDermott, Munday, and Schultes joined the Platoon Leader Class Program, Villanova's quota was five men, but due to its fine reception on the campus, the quota has each year been increased, until this year Villanova has been assigned a quota of fifteen men. Major Dayton of the Naval Science Department says there are a few vacancies remaining for the current year, and interested Freshmen, Sophomores, and Juniors can still join the Program.

All four men named for the commissions are students in the Commerce and Finance School.

After the opening exercises, concurrent meetings were held in the Commerce and Finance Auditorium and Room 215 Mendel.

Question periods were held after each series of lectures under the direction of Mr. Carl E. Allen, Ph.D., Dean of Lehigh University, and Mr. William A. Nagele, Jr., of the Drexel Institute of Technology. The talks in the Commerce and Finance Building consisted of two series of discussions on "Taxes" and "Current Problems". Question periods were conducted after these discussions under the leadership of Mr. Willard E. Stone, C. P. A. of the University of Pennsylvania, and Mr. William J. McKeever, C. P. A. of Temple University.

A roast-beef dinner was served to the assembled group in the Field House Thursday evening and after the dinner, Mr. Nathan McClure, C. P. A., Chairman of the Philadelphia Chapter, Pennsylvania Institute of Certified Public Accountants, presided.

Junior Week Opens With Mother's Day; Prom, Dinner-Dance Highlight Scene

Prom Features Blue Barron Friday Night In Field House

Amidst the splendor of Southern comfort which will emanate from the Field House this Friday, the Junior Class will play host at its Formal Promenade. The music of the inimitable Blue Barron and his orchestra will provide the atmosphere for a capacity crowd on the dance floor.

As always, the highlight of the spring season, the Junior Prom, is one of the most memorable dances of the year. To it will come lovely and lucky girls from all over the East.

Blue Barron, featuring the "music of yesterday and today," has been among the most outstanding "name" bands in the nation for over a decade. Vocal stylists, Bobby Beers, Betty Clarke, and Helen Lowe, will be heard along with a top-notch trio, "The Three Blue Notes."

Under the guidance of Herb Mathews, the Prom committee has prepared one of the most unique settings for any Junior Prom that has been held here.

Dinner Dance Set For Saturday At Ben Franklin

This Saturday evening the Junior Class will end its week of festivity in the seclusion of the Benjamin Franklin Hotel with its dinner dance. This formal affair is exclusively a Junior Class endeavor, and only its members will attend.

The main ballroom of the Ben Franklin, site of the dinner-dance this year, is one of the most beautiful in the Philadelphia area. Some two hundred Juniors and their dates will gather in its congenial atmosphere to dine at seven-thirty P. M. on Saturday.

Following the dinner and a brief word from the Class Moderator, Rev. Thomas Purcell, O. S.A., and the honored guests, Leo Zollo and his orchestra will take charge of the proceedings with their smooth music. Dancing will continue from the end of the meal until twelve o'clock.

Frank J. Pitocchelli, chairman of the dinner-dance has promised a wonderful evening which will be long remembered by the Class of 1951 as a wonderful ending for Junior Week.

MOTHERS AND SONS ATTEND MASS AND CONCERT TODAY

Today the Juniors proudly welcome their mothers to Villanova.

Mother's Day has become an essential part of the events of Junior Week, and rightly so. It is quite appropriate that each class should begin this week which marks the highpoint of their collegiate social life with a loving tribute to their mothers.

This morning, with over three hundred mothers present, the exercise will commence at 11:00 A. M. with Mass and Holy Communion in the College Chapel. Reverend Thomas Purcell, O.S. A., Moderator of the Class of 1951, will celebrate the Mass which will be served by the Class officers. Reverend Francis X. N. McGuire, O.S.A., President of the College, will deliver the sermon.

At 12:30 P. M. the planting of the class tree will take place at Fedigan Hall with George Schuster, President of the Junior Class officiating. Luncheon in the student dining hall follows this ceremony at 1:15 P. M. Entertainment will be provided by the Band, Glee Club, and the Turf and Tinsel Club in the Field House at 2:30 P. M. The day's activities will be completed at 4:00 P. M. with Benediction.

All plans for this Successful Mother's Day were directed by Jay Murphy, Chairman.

Fifteen Finalists To Be Selected In Queen Of Junior Week Contest

The Queen of Junior Week of 1950 will be crowned Friday night at the Prom. Fifteen will be judged by Oscar Neufeld and Mrs. Philadelphia, 1949, Mrs. Doris Mooney, for the honors.

Tomorrow will be the deadline for pictures to be entered in the contest. All those that have been handed in will be examined by Oscar Neufeld. Out of that group only fifteen will be selected to be on the stage of the Field House at the Prom. Wednesday notices will be put up on the bulletin boards mentioning the fifteen that have been selected. Juniors will be notified personally by the committee. They will then be on hand at 10:30 Friday evening for the judging.

Villanovan Plans Dinner-Dance

The annual "Front Page Brawl" for the boy journalists on the staff of the VILLANOVAN is scheduled to be held this year at the Hotel Barclay, Rittenhouse Square, in Philadelphia, on May 20th.

Gold keys are to be distributed to the senior members of the staff of the VILLANOVAN at the annual dinner-dance to be held this year in the Mirage Room. The keys are merited by those students who have given distinguished served on the staff of the paper while at the college.

Arrangements for the affair are being made by Frank Gobes, Managing Editor.

Sketchy Historical Sketch Of Villanova-On-The-Pennsy

By Jim Gallagher

It was thirty years after the Great War of 1812, and the Government decided it was time to end its G. I. loan benefits for veterans' education. Figuring to get in on the gravy before it was too late, a small group of enterprising Augustinians with pockets of worthless Irish sweepstake tickets, decided to start a school. Since there was no market for flying lessons, or barber training, and since Fred Astaire had already cornered the dancing school business, they decided that the only way left to get a good cut of the dividends would be to start a college.

They scouted around and came upon Belle Air, the haunted estate of John Randolph, an erstwhile social climber who died of frustration when he was snubbed by Main Line society. His ghost, it is faithfully reported, still haunts the location, especially on dark nights just before final exams when fleeting shadows can be discerned darting through the corridors of Mendel Hall. Thus, Belle Air offered a perfect site for the new college, and since all the local inhabitants were afraid to go near the place, it was a simple matter for our intrepid founders to establish squatters sovereignty on the land. For paying a mere pittance in taxes, they got it, lock, stock, and whisky still.

There was, however, one previous occupant, a hermit named Will who lived with his dog, Rover, in a shack on what is now Austin Field. The gentry of the area, in their heavy Pennsylvania-Dutch accents, referred

Field House Site Of Blazer Ball

The only informal dance of the very social Junior Week will be the famous Blazer Ball. With music by the Villanovans, informality will be the keynote Wednesday evening as the Juniors act as hosts for the evening. Blazers themselves are not prerequisites for the great event, but of course the tweedy set will be replete in same for the evening.

Joe Rugo is still running about campus with tickets that he won't part with for less than $1.80. Maybe its worth it.

Afternoon Entertainment

The Glee Club of Villanova College will be featured at the entertainment offered by the Band, Glee Club and Turf and Tinsel this afternoon in celebration of Mother's Day on campus.

Wash Behind the Ears, Men

Welcome Mothers! Villanova is yours for a day. This the day the entire Villanova College student body is like the little boy, face scrubbed shiny and hair slicked down, who, shyly but proudly, conducts his mother through his grammar school and introduces her to teachers, until today, considered op-ponents in the imaginary tussle between student and eacher.

Of all the events of our celebrated Junior Week, Mother's Day is the most pleasant and popular on campus. The mothers bring their charm to Villanova, and for one day home is here. After three years of sending her son off to Villanova, mother deserves a holiday with her student-son where he has had a home away from home. After all, in many cases, it is that natural pride of mother for her son which has brought many of us this far along the road.

The climax of the holiday comes early, two-thirds of the way through the Mass held for this occasion, for it is then that the sons pay supreme tribute to their mothers by receiving the Blessed Sacrament in their honor The Mass makes more than just another day out of Mother's Day. And now we would like to give all of the mothers our corsage of best wishes for a pleasant visit.

How To Make Memories

Take it away, Juniors! You have finally arrived at the social climax of your stay at Villanova. Your week is as much a part of our entire tradition as the Alma Mater. For one week the emphasis is on good times, with the keynote set by the Blazer Ball and the one and only Junior Prom providing the icing. The conviviality of the Dinner-Dance is the social ful-fillment of the class.

Preparation for the week is long and arduous, with com-mittees spending many hours working to make this particular Junior Week the finest in the long history of the big week. What many of you Juniors will see and enjoy will be the culmination of the efforts of the men on these various committes; if success-ful the week will be the epitomy of cooperative effort.

Obviously, the success of the Week is not measured by the amount of pecuniary gain but largely by the social success attained. The week is meant to be social. The casual infor-mality of the Blazer Ball, the incomparable Prom and Dinner-Dance mark the maturity of the class as a social entity.

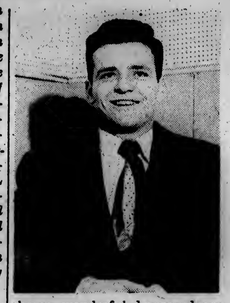
The class of '51 has had the enthusiasm to set new records in its endeavors in previous years. Under the leadership of their progressive president George Schuster new projects have been undertaken which promise to become regular function of the school in years to come. I speak, particularly, of Opera-tion Yule. The Class of '51 has been a wonderful example for other classes, consistently coming through successfully by sheer, hard work.

Great things are expected of the Juniors this week, and we would like to wish them the best on this occasion and remind them that this week is the stuff from which memories are made.

By JIM GRIFFIN

May 1st and the beginning of a month that will change the face of the earth. It will garb the trees with leaves and make the hillside vibrant with the emerald of distant grass. It will splash the countryside with rosebuds, and at its signal the dogwood will suddenly blossom with silent melody. And the days will change, from the dreary April rains to the warmth of sunny mornings and glorious afternoons, from the chill rem-nants of winter winds to the first flutterings of summer breezes. Things will seem new before May has gone.

And it seems fitting that such a month be chosen to honor mothers, for creation is the very essence of a mother. Perhaps we do not consider it as often as we should, but we owe our mothers a debt much greater than the care and worry that they put into our first years, and much more vital than the love for us which they carried through those years, and which they still ten-der. We owe them more than the concern they still show for us, the little boys who seem no different from the little boys whom they sent off to the first grade with warning to keep the new suit clean, but with a smile at the thought of such a miracle.



To our mothers we owe our very existence, for they have made it possible through their cooperation with God's plan for making saints. From an act of love they have given life to a soul, and because of it we have an opportunity to gain eternal happiness. What better reflec-tion, then, for this divine plan, than the month of May, when nature seems to love, and to create a soul for the hills and the valleys? And, what better time to honor motherhood, than this month when nature has chosen to do so by imitation?

And in the spiritual line, the comparison is exact. For in link-ing the motherhood of Mary with that of all mothers, and in re-flecting the joy of motherhood in the happiness of the month, God has unified the picture. In choosing the month of May as a month of honor for the mother of God and a month of rejoining for her position in heaven, the hurch has encouraged recogni-tion of the beauty and the bal-ance which He has created. Let us cooperate with the plan of God for May. Let us honor the Mother of God, who is also our own mother, and let us reflect the honor we give her in our celebrations for our Temporal mothers.

Oscar Twomp, Boy Junior

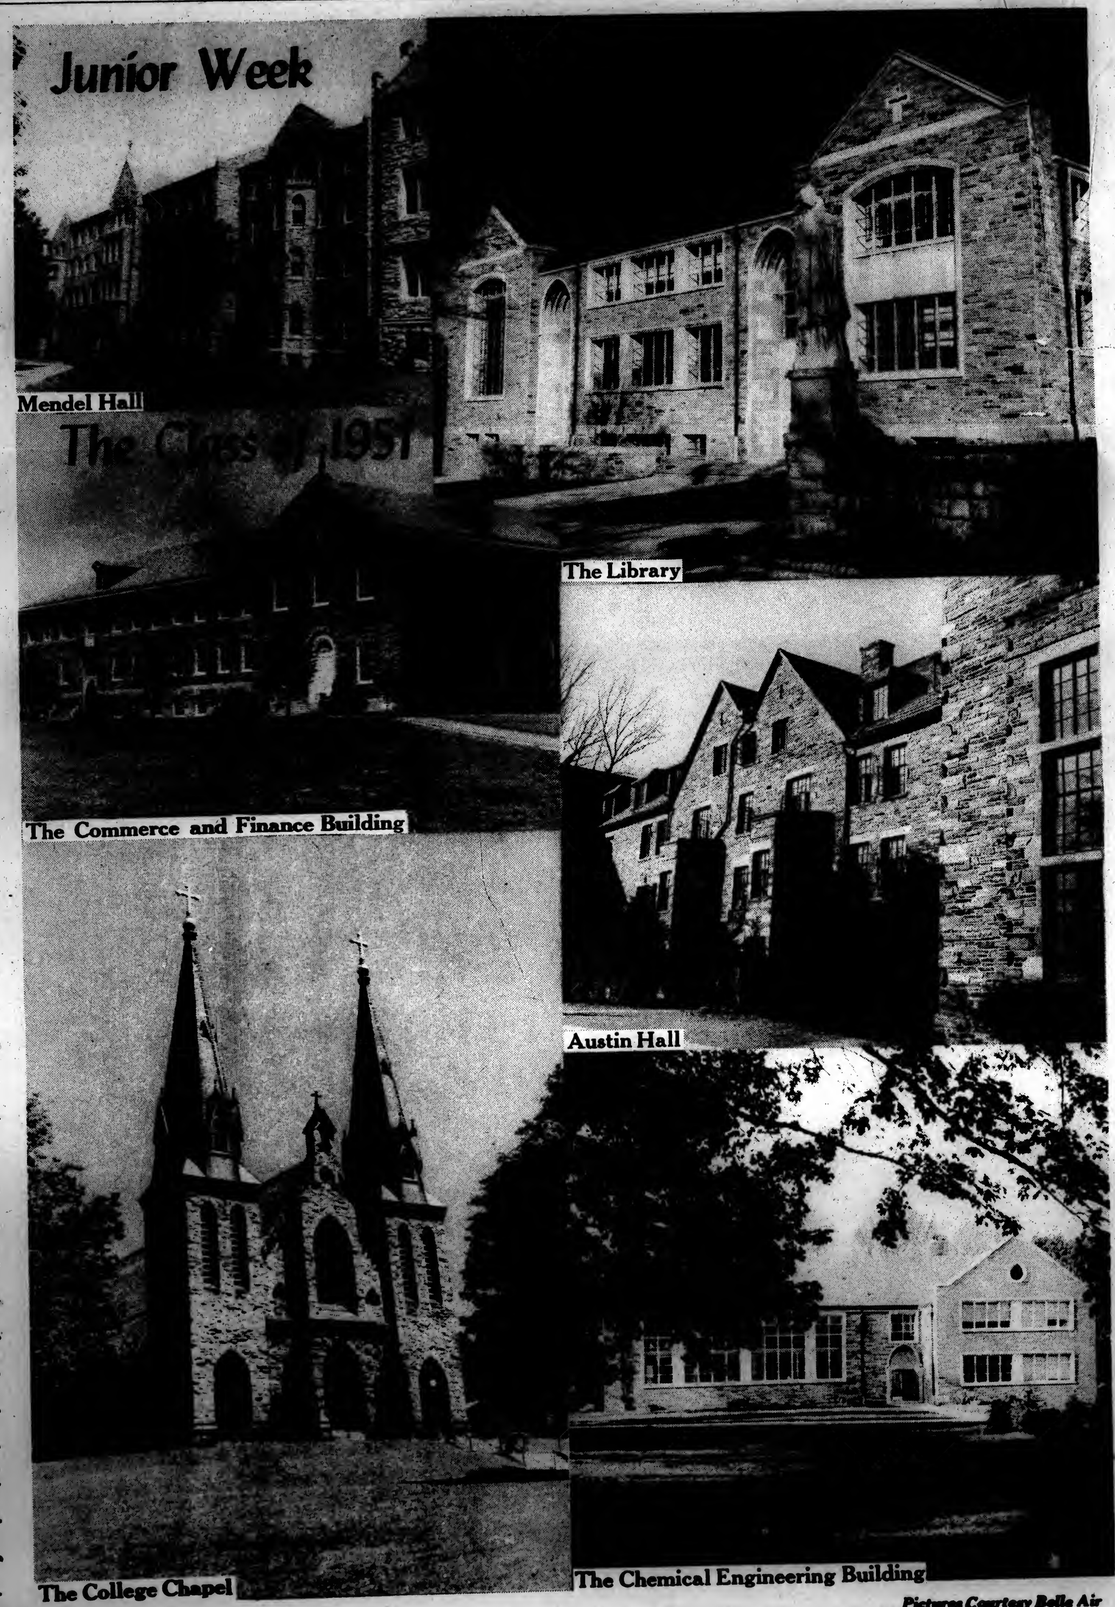
By BILL BRENINGHOUSE

(Editor's note — William "Rollo" Breninghouse has been penning articles for this section of the VILLANOVAN for three years, applying his inimitable style to the life and times of Oscar Twomp, Villanova's fa-vorite "boy about nowhere." Hail-ing from the metropolis of Mal-den, Massachusetts, Bill is study-ing for a Marine commission un-der the NROTC program. WVIL claims him as its program man-ager and he has written several radio plays. He also authored the book for the 1949 produc-tion of Turf and Tinsel. All in all, he manages to keep busy around the campus.)

Oh to be a Junior, now that Junior Week's here. Oscar Twomp is finally a Junior. He has that self-assured maturity, that man-of-the-worldishness that are integral parts of being a Junior at dear old alma mater. This week brings about the cul-mination of everything junior from tree-planting to dinner dancing. Plans for the week have taken years to formulate, and now Oscar and the other Juniors will see them realized.

Mrs. Turgam Twomp, Oscar's proud mother will travel down from New England by way of dogsled to hee her handsome and brilliant son on Mother's Day at Villanova. Today is Mother's Day, and right now Mrs. Twomp is out viewing the campus in the rain with her pride and joy, little Oscar. He is on his best behavior; he has not referred to his mother as "me ole lady", except when he forgot, and hasn't addressed her as "hey you" at all. As soon as the regular exercises are over, Oscar plans to take his mom to some of the places at which he spends his spare time in the im-mediate vicinity. He told her be-forehand to practice her dart-throwing and to brush up on her shuffleboard so that she could help defray some of the ex-penses. Mother's Day will be a gala affair for Oscar unless Mrs. Twomp forgets an age card.

There are so many dandy lit-tle things scheduled for this week that Oscar has had a diffi-cult time in chosing which to attend. For instance, Wednes-day brings the Blazer Ball. At first, Oscar thought this was only for sons of firemen. Then he heard that it was for people who bought blazers. The only reason he didn't buy a blazer was that he didn't have a good pair of white bucks to go with it. This, however, was only a rumor, and now everyone can go that wants to shell out the dough. Oscar invited Susie Schleppelmeyer from across the tracks. The only trouble is that she has to be back in the bar-racks by 9:30 and if they ever smell coke on her breath, she's through no matter who she is.



Friday night the gay pageant-try and college atmosphere of that fascinating affair, The Junior Prom. This will be a beautiful affair. Gorgeous young women in lovely Spring gowns, handsome young men in form-flattering tuxes and din-ner jackets, decorations that would put a Hollywood set to shame, wonderful dreamy dance music all add up to a grand evening of pleasure. Oscar, un-fortunately, isn't going to the Prom. He wouldn't pay that much money for a front row seat at Joe Stalin's wake. The cost of the Prom would keep him in pinball money for the rest of his college career. Every-one tells him that this only hap-pens once in a lifetime; that the Prom will be the highlight of his college life. Oscar is ex-tremely grateful that it happens but once in a lifetime and if the Prom is the highlight of his college life, he wonders what the low-light could possibly be. Seriously though, the Prom will be simply scrumptious.

After the Prom, comes the Junior Dinner Dance. One for-mal isn't enough. The boys figure that as long as they're spending money they might as well go crazy and broke at the same time. Dinner-dances are very nice affairs. You have din-ner and you dance; it's as sim-ple as that. Also, you could eat for a week on what they rock you for this fancy affair. Some people claim that the Prom and Dinner-Dance are only excuses for throwing even bigger affairs after and before each of these events. It just happens that the local movie is having a midnight spook show the night of the Junior Prom and Oscar could never miss a deal like that.

And so the mad social whirls go on and on. The boys with the girl back home bring her down for the weekend while the real operators take a different girl to each dance. Most of the Juniors manage to get to at least one event on the calender even if it's only the free band concert.

Being a Junior means more than Junior Week to Oscar. It means that he is well on his way out of the academic atmosphere of the campus to the material-istic but more enjoyable life in the world. It means only two more registration days, just an-other year of tramping through the mud and only another year of the Pie Shop and chow lines. Nostalgia will overcome him when he realizes that never again will have to pay five bucks to reserve a room. This is what runs through Oscar's mind as Junior Week comes to the cam-pus.

So, here's to the Juniors, may they someday be Seniors. They have gone through the terrify-ing immaturity of freshmen and the shaky self assurance of sophomores to emerge as Juniors, the men who count on campus.

By Mayer and Taten

A musical career commencing with various college groups started Blue Barron on his way to popularizing his "Music of Yesterday and Today". An early rebel against the blare and blast of the swing bands of that era, he formulated his policy of respect for the listeners eardrums. Styling his music along mellow lines, he soon became popular in neighboring colleges. Upon graduation he opened his own booking office in Cleveland and carried on there for some time until he decided to step into the highly competitive field of name bands and present his own distinctive style.

Not a "jump" or "show" band, he has always presented his music in a manner that renders it well adapted for dancing, as is evidenced by his frequent and long engagements at hotels throughout the country. His first break came through the leading woman in hotel management, Maria Kramer. She heard Blue Barron and his Orchestra while broadcasting from a Cleveland night club, and recognizing his ability and pleasing presentation was so well suited to pleasant dancing, signed him to a long term contract in the Green Room of the Hotel Edison in New York. Since then he has appeared in leading ballrooms, theatres and hotels as well as his numerous radio broadcasts such as the Coca-Cola Spotlight Show and many others. Mention should also be made of Betty Clarke who is as pleasing to the eyes as she is to the ears along with Helen Lowe and the offerings of Bobby Beers.

We all know the very favorable reports that were universally expressed after the Junior Prom last year. Tony Pastor did a wonderful job and was appreciated by all. This time we are equally lucky to secure Blue Barron who will prove to all that this year's Junior Prom is one that we can't afford to miss, for in Blue Barron we have a band that is sure to please. Junior Week is off to the best possible start with Mothers' Day, let's be sure the finish is gratifying as well . . . the Prom. Now, Ro Mayer!!!

Other Music Makers

Aside from Blue Barron and his consistently popular aggregation the Junior Week round of bankroll diminishers will bring into focus a couple other music making combinations not unfamiliar to the local social lions.

At the Blazer Ball, Vince Palma will be on the stand putting the Villanovans through their paces, and I firmly believe that they will be a joy to one and all, not to mention a big surprise to those present who were unable to get to the Inter-Frat Ball or the Owl Hop. Since Vince Palma took over the reins, the group has shown a steady improvement with each successive engagement and although congratulation should have been in order we didn't hear any. At the Owl Hop they sounded better han at any time in the past four years. The new vibes helped immeasurably and Marion Stodder was at her vocal best. As a whole, the band sounded much more coordinated and well-rehearsed.

Talented Vocalist Back

Speaking of Marion, as far as I can see the gal has talent she hasn't even used yet. It's always a bit of a surprise to see her back on the bandstand at each succeeding dance. Who knows maybe her big break is on the way and this will be her last one-nighter at the Field House. So, get down to the Blazer Ball and you'll see what I mean.

Blue Notes Take Up Slack

When Blue Barron and his crew go "Cruising Down the River" for their intermission break don't drag your gal off to the Blue Room for cake and pretzels. Stick around and you're likely to hear just about the best small-combo music played around the Philadelphia area. Frank Teti and the Blue Notes have been to Villanova on several previous occassions and on more than one of them the crowd agreed that their music far surpassed that of the name band that got all the billing. With an outfit like that taking up the slack at intermission how can you lose? If you haven't already done so, make a date for the Junior Prom. It promises to be a dilly!

Around The Town

By F. A. Varallo

Highlighting the entertainment scene this week is "Once More, My Darling", hilarious film comedy starring Robert Montgomery and Ann Blyth. This celluloid boasts a good cast and although the plot is not so logical nor so witty as the story by Robert Carson on which it is based, you will probably find its fleeting scenes highly amusing.

Robert Montgomery plays the role of a respectable lawyer turned movie actor — or to be more exact, a strictly ham actor. At any rate, after an amusing scene with his aristocratic attorney mother, the plot changes suddenly.

Special Mission

Bob is recalled by the Army for a special peacetime mission involving the recovery of $600,000 worth of jewels stolen in Germany. In order to do this, he must make love in public to a debutante to arouse the jealousy of the person who gave her a valuable stolen pendant which she wore in a magazine perfume ad. He hopes that this will bring the thief out into the open.

Things don't work out exactly according to plans, however. Bob never gets a chance to make love to the girl, Ann Blyth, for the simple reason that she falls in love with him at first sight and proposes marriage almost immediately. From then on this slapstick farce really gets moving until finally Mr. Montgomery capitulates.

Excellent Cast

Ann Blyth in a decidely screwball role gives the film its vitality and freshness. She wears a sweat shirt with "Killer" printed across the front, goes to a night club in satin pajamas, and wears perfume that nauseates everyone near her. The fine supporting cast includes Taylor Holmes, as Ann's millionaire father; Charles McGraw as Herman, the family chauffeur, and Ray Teal as a friendly truck driver.

The Great Rupert

A delightful bit of whimsy, this entertaining flicker gives top billing to Jimmy Durante and Rupert, a trained squirrel. Jimmy is cast as an old-time vaudeville actor whose "living pyramid" act with his wife and baby daughter has to be given up when daughter grows up and becomes to heavy for the pyramid. A generous man, he gives away whatever he has to his friends. As the story opens, Jimmy and his family have moved into a ramshackle garage — trusting to luck that they'll be able to pay the rent at the end of the month.

Mystery Money

On Christmas Eve, Durante's wife sits alone in the shack and prays. A few minutes later $100 bills come fluttering down from above. It turns out that their landlord, an old skinflint, hides his money in a hole in the woodwork of his bedroom. Rupert, the squirrel who lives in the rafters, pushes the money right out through another hole and it flutters down into Jimmy's hovel.

How the lives of these people are turned topsy-turvy by Rupert makes for a chirpy little comedy you're sure to enjoy.

By Kuhn and Keats

Only I, Pointdexter (Call me Joe) Kuhn am on hand for this week's session of the big 5. It seems Keats found his name on the list of those about to be Senior 4's and deserted the Junior Week edition because he considered it beneath his new exalted station.

Speaking of Junior Week, and everybody should be speaking of it, makes me wonder why they ever started this week stuff at all. Around the campus now we have Paul Arizin weeks, Oscar Twomp weeks, Peno week, Let's Have Real Food in the Chow Hall week, Ned Irish hour and a half — you know all that stux. This thing could get out of hand. Imagine Peno bringing his mother to a band concert! He already brings the rest of the family for a free meal at the chow hall.

The other night a mysterious emissary from the Junior Week publicity committee accosted me in a dark alley and threatened to "give me a C and F" if JW didn't get "lottsa ink dis isshoe". Since I am well aware that college education has made inroads on South Philly and even "de business" goes under a new name now in the quaint patois of that region, I shivered.

The problem was though, what to write? About every phase of the activities of this happy time were covered by our brilliant (hah!) staff. Then it came to me. On Mother's day, Mrs. Glotz, whose boy Marmaduke is chairman of Get-the-P&W-trains-to-stop-at-the-stadium-station-the-night-of-the-Blazer-Ball Committee, will want to see little Marmie's name in print. Instead of having her hunt behind the Chesterfield ad and under the masthead, why not put all the JW wheels in on column? It's good directory, makes a swell souvenir, and fills up space oo.

Well the President and Big Wheel of the Junior class is smiling George Schuster. The harried looking gent with Blue Blazer and ulcer to match is George "Skip" Keenley, General Chairman of Junior Week. All the social lions on campus this glorious week were not seen holding hands with Rosie Mont in Ford's, but were arranging for the social functions. Herbie the Hipster Mathews is casing the field house as ringleader of the Prom Committee in preparation to pulling the job next Friday night. Joe Rugo, well known arsonist is getting hot on the Blazer Ball which will be (1) informal (2) inexpensive and (3) on Wednesday. Everyone knows Frank Pitochelli is a chow hound so it was only natural that he would head that sumptuous repast, the Junior Dinner Dance (Juniors only-no dogs allowed).

Dan Kelly will hold open house for all Junior stags in Ye Forrest in Humphrysville. That other smiling Irishman, Jay Murhpy, will exude charm as chairman of Mother's Day Activities (that nice boy with all those corsages, Mother).

Other campus luminaries will be Jim Gallo and Bob Forsyth, who sell Junior Prom tickets and pencils at the door. They will be assited by a cast of thousands of eager beavers who will sell you a ticket at the drop of a five spot, and a one.

Husky Harry Range of sports page fame is a publicity commissar in charge of no one knowing the time of the dance, its price, etc., even at this late date.

Marmaduke Glotz is, as mentioned above, chairman of "That" committee. Blue, "Are You Lonesome Tonight" Barron and his Ork will make the night air hideous with musical sounds for your dancing pleasure. He will be aided in the hideous sounds dept. by Frank Gobes bemoaning the lack of J-P comps.

The field house will be tastefully decorated to resemble a field house tastefully decorated for a prom. Dick Metcalf will do his worst, but the field house will still be recognized at the Blazer Ball. Jack Gibbons and Paul Jannuzo will tear it all down and make the old place ready for the Prom. We understand it will be an old South theme, sort of a Georgia plantation effect, about three hours after Sherman marched through.

Not to be outdone the Benjamin Franklin Hotel will look like itself after the Penn-Virginia game last year when dinner dancing time comes around.

Refreshments at the Blazer Ball will not be by Roach and O'Brien as announced. Al Banks will be head man at this end; while last but not least is Tom Grady who is attempting to sell $1.80 tickets for $1.69 — get 'em while there hot.

So now we bid y'all farewell and wish all Juniors their nice mothers, their dates and all those who are participating in Junior Week the best Junior Week ever. I know Keats thinks that too even if he is way down in Vineland pretending he is sick.

THESE THINGS GET STARTED; THEN THERE'S NO STOPPING THEM

Be it known that Junior Week was not always a great tradition and that further even when they began calling the week devoted to Juniors and their big fling, Junior Week, it had only the Prom which might be comparable to the activities that will take place this week. Even that was different, in that it was held closer to the lounges in those days, due to the lack of a Field House.

We neglected to mention that this holiday was then held the week after Easter vacation. It was not till the thirties that it was moved permanently to the first week of May. The Field House opened in 1932 for the first Junior Prom to be held there and after this we hear no more remarks about dances lasting till day.

In 1934 the Junior Class decided to invite Mothers' to the campus for the afternoon. Before this Monday had been tree planting and flag-raising day. That year they staved off the planting till Tuesday. Later on about 1938 these ceremonies were again incorporated into Monday and the Mothers' took part in these.

A clever group came along in 1935 which decided that the Prom had suffered since it had moved out to Villanova and as anexcuse to get back down town held a Dinner-Dance in the city on the Saturday after the Prom. Obviously they must have been a rich crowd.

Thus has Junior Week grown through the years, and so have the bills we might add. Back in the thirties the Prom tickets sold for half of what they are today. But then the size of Villanova has grown from a convivial group of 800 gentlemen to a horde of over two thousand social ne'er-do-wells.

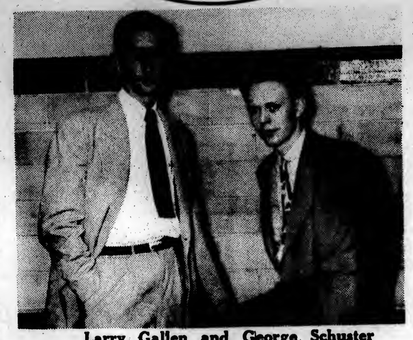
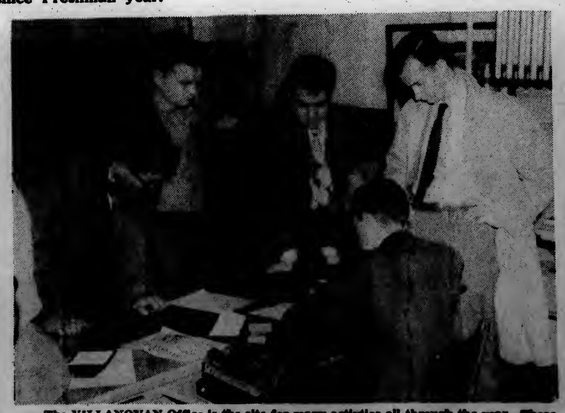
From the Class of '51



The VILLANOVAN has Juniors, too. Seated are Frank Gobes, Managing Editor and Harry Range, Sports Editor. On either end are the Gibbons brothers, Jack and Barry, who handle the Business department. In the center are Circulation Managers, Ralph Skowron and Mario Piazzola.

Few are the journals which go back to the initiation of the Prom. In fact, when the first yearbook was printed in '22 it was a tradition. The Villanovan as a weekly had its miscarriage in 1928. Szymanski, our only possible source, wouldn't talk to us about it. So, suffice it to say, that by the end of the first World War, with a ripping enrollment of something over two-hundred, the Junior Prom was a great tradition.

By '25 the Blazer Ball had its beginnings. Of course that was before blazers so they called it the Kap and Kane dance, and everybody sported a flashy cap and cane emblazoned with class numbers and the like. They had it in what they knew as the gym in those days.



The next year of the roaring twenties our predecessors struted about with gorgeous blue and white striped blazers which replaced the hats but not the canes. Of course the informal was from then on known as the Blazer Ball.

Larry Gallen and George Schuster have been in their respective jobs of Treasurer and President since Freshman year.

Every class in college needs men to direct the formal endeavors of the students. The present Junior Class was no different. The people shown are the guilty parties: George Schuster, President; Richard Spence, Vice-President; Larry Gallen, Treasurer; Dan Walsh, Secretary, and two out of the four Students Council representatives, Jack Gibbins and Harry Range.

The VILLANOVAN Office is the site for many activities all through the year. These have nothing to do with the printing of the paper, but there is nothing like having news in your own backyard. Here two members of the Junior class are shown with the Josten's representative picking out their class rings.

Midshipmen Replace Wartime Program

Mid'n Gilbert Hazard and Richard Hartman, two of the officers of the NROTC Battlion, talk over the spring sessions.

One of the most lasting institutions left in the wake of the war at Villanova College is the Naval Reserve Officers Training Corps. It stands as the strongest organization of men on the entire campus.

For their first year at Villanova, the present Juniors, about sixty strong then, were tutored in the ways and language of the Navy by a shy Swede, Lt. Commander Carlson. Lt. Col. Roose, USMC, then kept the "boys" on the straight and narrow. To wind up the year there was the beautiful trip to Hawaii on the not so glamorous Iowa. After touring the country by Pullman and the Pacific with our Navy, the boys felt qualified to be called Sophomores.

Their kind Swedish friend struggled through the intricacies of gunnery with them, and then made the trip to Pensacola because the Swede was also a "fly-boy" and that is what is done at Pensacola. After a not too short stay at Little Creek in Virginia there was a whole five-week vacation, the longest since they had been in the program. And now they are in their Junior year.

Ten found navigation too hard after first semester and are aiming at the Marine Corps. Twenty other Juniors are all that make up the rest of the class in Navigation.

Besides the three classes each week, there is Tuesday which is better known as Navy Day, when the Middies drill in their uniforms.

At all times the men feel an honest pride about their units, for they represent a training program the like of which has never been offered before. It is something which they seldom treat lightly, for it means a free college education, a commission in the Navy or Marine Corps in which they will serve for at least two years, and a chance to travel during their summer cruises.

The present Junior Class of Midshipmen is the first group to have entered the program under the new system; that is they were the first to go through the formal testing system that went on the year before they entered college. It consisted of aptitude examinations, a rigid physical, interviews and final selection.

Spanish Club Fiesta Features Dining and Music

If the great Cervantes were alive last Saturday night he would surely have been pleased with the fine manner in which our Spanish Club celebrated his four hundred and third birthday. It was to the Elks Club in Norristown that the dons of this group escorted their senoritas, and dinner-danced in a manner befitting this great occasion in the Spanish literary world.

The meal itself, strangely enough, was not Spanish, but a non-Spanish dish of chicken. To be sure, though, this apparent oversight in tradition was atoned for by the remainder of the program that evening.

It began in a proper Hispanic note with the musical portion of the entertainment under the direction of Senor Theodore Garcia who presented a piano selection of his own arrangement of several popular Spanish folk songs. After this he accompanied Mrs. Thomas Moore, in her rendition of "Estrellita", and "Clavelitos", and two members of the Club, "Tex" Houston and Tom Terranova in their Spanish Club duet, "Cuatro Milapos."

The feature of the literary portion of this program consisted of the reading of the two works which were awarded first prizes in the Cervantes Day poetry and prose contest. For his prose composition Louis Lamanna received a gold medal and diploma from the Spanish Institute of Columbia University. Robert Lovelace then received his first prize for his poem, a translation of Don Quixote.

As a concluding feature of the affair, Dr. Bernardo Restrepo, Consul of Columbia, delivered "Palabras Finales", a speech in which he congratulated the Spanish Club for their commendable work in aiding inter-American relations.

Acc'ting Society Finishes Banquet Arrangements

Arrangements have been completed with the Wynnemore Inn to have the second annual Accounting Honor Society banquet in their dining room on Wednesday, May 10th.

Co-chairmen Harry Postupack and Joseph Buckley anticipate over one hundred members of the society to attend the affair which was instituted at the College last year.

The Wynnemore Inn is located at the intersection of Wynnewood and Haverford roads, and is accessable via the P&W or private automobile with equal ease. The Wynnewood trolley stop is only one block from the Inn which is very highly thought of in banquet circles, having specialized in this unique service for many years.

Mr. Linsalata, Moderator of the Society, hopes that all the members of the Honor Society will take advantage of this annual affair, especially all Senior accounting majors.

Profile: A Moderator

When the gentlemen who are now celebrating Junior Week arrived at Villanova six semesters ago they were typical brash and assuming freshmen. Like all frosh, their spirit was characterized by its exuberance, and they were ready to set the college world on fire. To have such spirit certainly isn't bad, but it comes to its proper use only when under the direction of a capable, mature leader who would keep their overzealousness in check, and sustain it for four years. Behind this firm, yet gentle hand these men found Father Purcell, to identify him formally, Rev. Thomas P. Purcell, O.S.A., Moderator of the Class of 1951.

His first contact with the members of this class, he recalls, was in their first year Religion class when a bond of friendship was established on a teacher-student basis. This relationship was carried over to an even greater extent when he was appointed their class moderator at the class organization near the end of that first year.

He Was a Freshman, Too

Oddly enough, it was also Fr. Purcell's freshman year as a member of the faculty of this college. He came to Villanova fresh from an assignment as assistant-master of novices at the Auguistinian Novitiate in New Hamburgh, New York. Before that he had studied for his M. A. in History at the Catholic University, after graduating, himself, from this college in the Class of 1940. His first assignment here was as assistant chaplain, an office in which he takes not only spiritual interest in the students as individuals, but temporal interest in his class as a group.

This priest isn't at all characterized by a long face and sad look, but rather by his ready smile and energetic appearance. He is by far one of the busiest men on the campus, but always has a minute after class, or if that's not enough, time for a chat in the office or a talk in his room in Fedigan Hall. These may be small things, but they mean so much to the student in need of his cheering word or soft-spoken bit of encouragement.

Our Omniscient Chaplain

As a vital personality on this campus, his contacts range far and wide from the hub of his activity in the Chaplains' office on the first floor of Mendel Hall. Without exaggeration it may be said that he knows just about everything that is happening at Villanova. In fact, it has long been a policy of the staff of this paper to consult him when stumped for some unobtainable information. "Just check with the Chaplain, Fr. Purcell will have the scoop." And he usually does.

In appearance Fr. Purcell presents a picture of youthfulness which belies the fact that he is celebrating his 37th. birthday next week. Besides his shock of white hair that adds dignity to his reverent person, there is nothing in his sparkling blue eyes and fair complexion to distinguish him from one of the students. This has been the cause for any number of amusing incidents, especially when he is out of habit, on the ball field with students who do not know him. Usually an embarrassed, "Oh, excuse me, Father" is the quick follow-up on a command addressed to him such as, "Hey Whitey, hustle yourself out to center field and shag a couple of these flies."

Inspiration to All

But happenings like this he takes in his stride, and goes on in his humble unassuming way to lend helping hand of consolation to his boys. Since association with a man like him is an inspiration in itself, it is no wonder that the Junior Class has been so spirited and community-minded under his direction.

His personality must effect everyone the same way, since even after a short interview in his office this reporter felt a strange feeling of buoyancy toward his parting salutation of, "Okay, kid, keep the Faith." When it is given by such a man, how could one fail to live up to his command.

JUNIOR STARS LEAD WILDCAT TEAMS TO FAME ON GRIDIRON AND DIAMOND

BASEBALL SQUAD HAS SEVEN MEN FROM '51 CLASS

Jones, Morris, Wright, Moroney, Jamison, Moskal, Frinzi

By Bill Klucsarits

The class of '51 boasts seven members on this year's baseball squad, most of whom hold down key positions on the team. Included in this array of diamond talent are: John Maroney, Mickey Frinzi, J. Malcolm Wright, John Morris, John Jamison, Tom Jones, and Benny Moskal. All of them throw righthanded and bat from the right side of the dish.

Leading the parade of Junior baseballers is John Maroney, Wildcat pitching ace for the past two seasons. John comes from Englewood, N. J. and attended Carson Long Military Academy in New Bloomfield, Pa. He pitched four years of varsity ball for the Academy and was elected captain in his last two years. As a sophomore at Villanova, John quickly established himself as the leading hurler and was given the most important pitching assignments. He defeated an unbeaten Seton Hall team in one of his starts and pitched a magnificent shutout against our arch-rivals, Penn, to register a well-desreved 1-0 win.

Dominic "Mickey" Frinzi came to Villanova after establishing himself as one of the all-time greats in New Jersey prep school athletic history. Mickey attended Philipsburg high school, where he was an All-State selection in both fotball and baseball. Better known to Wildcat fans as a gridiron standout, Mickey has held down the center field post in the spring sport for the last three seasons. Mickey is the fastest man on the squad and keeps opposing batteries rattled with his daring on the basepaths.

Touted as one of the outstanding school boy stars in New England, John Morris came to the Main Line by way of Lawrence, Mass. Central Catholic and Philips Andover Academy. He also was the outstanding slugger on the Junior Legion team and was team captain at all three places. John was hampered by injuries in his sophomore year and was switched to the outfield this season. The 6'1" Junior has captured the regular left field job and his big bat has again started to rap out the base hits.

Two Catchers

John Jamison attended Augustinian Academy before matriculating at Villanova. The husky receiver was selected on the All-Metropolitan Team in his senior year. He also caught for Brooklyn in the annual Brooklyn vs. The World game. The Legion team of which he was a member reached the Eastern Regional semi-finals. Last year John bat-

150's, Eastern Intercollegiate Champs, Include Ten Men From Junior Class

McCreary, Bottino, Maiero, Lemmer Pace Backs; Linemen Loughlin, Battle, Schreiber, Rowe, Dwyer, Gallo

By George Scanlon

Villanova's 150 lb. Eastern Intercollegiate Champions had on their squad ten juniors who formed the nucleus of this great lightweight team. The juniors' fine team play and spirit played an important part in the championship season.

At the wing position ends Jack Loughlin, Leo Schreiber and Jim Gallo were outstanding performers. Jack Loughlin is a Philadelphia product, having been graduated from Northeast Catholic High. In high school Jack was a fine swimmer and helped North Catholic capture two city titles. Jack's tremendous offensive end play was very evident in every ball game. In the Navy tussle he played his greatest game. Jack is an N.R. O.T.C. student and is an active participant in intra-murals. He has played two seasons with the 150's.

Jim Gallo, an offensive end, was a standout ball player for Coach McConville's eleven. Jim is from Allentown where he played three years of ball for Allentown High. His specialty is pass catching in which he hit great heights in the Cornell game as he snared nine passes. Jim is very active in extra curricular activities; he is an N.R. O.T.C. man, announces for radio station WVIL and is a sports writer for the VILLANOVAN.

Leo Schreiber rounds out the ends that are members of the Class of '51. Leo hails from Altoona where he was a star performer for Altoona Catholic High. Quiet, easy going Leo played excellent ball for the Kittens in 1949. He is a Civil Engineer major, an N.R.O.T.C. student, engineer for WVIL, glee clubber, and an intra-mural basketball and softball star.

At the tackle slot George Strohlein's consistent play was a bright spot in the Blue & White

TOM DOLAN ONLY JUNIOR MEMBER OF BASKETBALL TEAM

Came Up to Varsity From Intramural Cage League

By Jim Gallo

Looking over the roster of Villanova's great basketball squad, one cannot fail to notice that it contains the name of only one member — Tom Dolan. The lean and lanky redhead is a native of Union City, New Jersey. It was right there in the "Hub City of Jersey basketball" that Tom Dolan first gained court renown, pouring in points for St. Michael's High School.

An appointment to the N.R. O.T.C. brought Tom to the Main Line school after he had begun his collegiate career at Siena College of Loudonville, New York, where he was a member of the Junior Varsity squad. As a freshman at Villanova, Dolan captained the Barracks 2 and 3 Intra-mural team. His performance in that league merited him a place on the All-Star squad and also attracted the attention of Varsity coach Al Severance. The following season, "Reds" became a member of the team that represented District Two and Villanova in the N.C.A.A. tournament. Against Kentucky's tournament champs and their great All-American, Alex Groza, Dolan scored four quick points to climax his huge jump from Intra-murals to the intercollegiate "big league."

JIM M'KENNA HEADS LIST OF JUNIORS ON TRACK TEAM

O'Neil, Irish, Holmes, McCreary, Flynn, Bausenwein

By Bill Cooney

Jim McKenna comes to us from New York where he attended Manhattan Aviation. He started his track career there and before he graduated in 1941 he won the PSAL 100 title and anchored the 880 relay which still holds the schoolboy indoor record in Gotham.

Jim served in the Navy and after his discharge decided to run for the NYAC. Known there mostly as a relay man he still managed to set the Junior Metropolitan AAU, record of 48.6 for the quarter. He also anchored the A.C.'s national championship 1600 meter delay in 1947.

Met Guida at Meet

While running in a Canadian-U.S. dual meet he met George Guida who convinced him Villanova was the place for him. The Freshman rule held McKenna down his first year and last year he was under Guida's cloud although he was a member of the championship medley and scored in both the IC 4A indoor 600 and outdoor 440.

As a Junior Jimmy came into his own. After a very successful indoor season anchoring the red-hot Villanova mile relay he took fourth in the IC-4A 600. Not content with that he turned around and beat Hugo Maiocco, Frank Fox and other assorted

TEN '51ERS FORM NUCLEUS OF 'CAT FOOTBALL TEAM

All Are Lettermen From Blue-White '49 Campaign

By HARRY RANGE

On the 1949 edition of the Wildcat pigskin parade we found three Juniors who were considered "first stringers" and in the coming season we will find ten members of the class of '51 playing either on the offensive or defensive first team.

These ten juniors are John Bogan, Pete D'Alonzo, Mickey Frinzi, John Geppi, Joe Howanski, Mike Kerwin, Ray Mantone, Jack Moran, Neil O'Boyle, and Bob Wills.

John Bogan, offensive end, is a local product from West Catholic in Philadelphia. While at West he was captain of the football team in 1946 and led the Burrs on to the Catholic League title. Bogie won his first letter with the Wildcats as a Sophomore and distinguished himself in the Harbor Bowl Game against Nevada. He's an unusually good blocker and a top notch pass receiver, having caught 11 passes for 3 touchdowns last season.

Gaining 450 yards in 87 attempts last season Pete D'Alonzo is rated as one of the top fullbacks in the East for the '50 campaign. The quick starting, pile, driving back is from Orange, N. J. where he received four letters in football and two in track. Pete combines unusual power and speed and can be counted on for yardage on any occasion. His best run came against San Francisco in 1948 as he plowed through 11 men into pay dirt. Pete has won two letters in football and also throws the shot for Jumbo Elliott.

One of the most versatile athletes at Villanova, Mickey Frinzi averaged 7.7 yards per carry last season. Mickey won 13 letters at Phillipsburg, N. J., more than anyone in the school's history. He is one of the fastest halfbacks on the team and made a 72 yard scoring run against Duquesne in '48. Mickey also doubles as centerfielder on the Wildcat nine.

John Geppi, known as the Jet, is the fastest halfback on the team and while in high school at Mt. St. Joseph's in Baltimore held Maryland's 100 and 220 titles. Of the regulars of last year Gep had the highest yard per carry average with 8.9. He averaged 7.8 in '48 and led the Cats to victory in the Harbor Bowl with a sensational 80 yard run.

Last season's defensive center Joe Howanski was a mainstay of the Wildcat line. Joe hails from Ridley Park and played basketball, baseball, as well as football as Malvern Prep. He is

Juniors Claim Five Scribes On Villanovan Sports Staff

By Jim Gallagher

Stories on this page are usually given over to praises of our stellar athletes and gentlemen prominent in the world of Villanova sports. For this Junior Week edition, we could think of nothing more proper than to splash a little ink on the fair names of the biggest of all Villanova sports, the Juniors who write these same stories.

Leading these men behind the headlines we find Harry Range, who has been Sports Editor for three semesters. Originally he started on our staff writing track stories, a job for which he was fitted after majoring in track and sportswriting at Bishop Loughlin H. S. back home in Forest Hills, N. Y. A student on the campus NROTC unit, he'll be getting his commission in the Marines at graduation along with a B. S. in Education for a major in Social Studies.

First on the list of his henchmen is Bill Cooney, a product of the Christian Brothers Academy in Albany, N. Y. He's been our track specialist since he started studying in his freshman year for his A. B. in History. Another NROTC boy, the Coon is famous for his "9:20 Special", a Dixieland jazz program for which he spins the records over at WVIL.

Jim Gallo is the boy athlete of the sports staff in as much as he plays first string offensive end on the 150 lb. team. He came to join the madcap crew indirectly from Allentown H. S., Pa. after spending his freshman year at the University of Mississippi. Another NROTC man majoring in History, Jim also doubles in sports announcing for WVIL.

On every staff you need a utility man who can write just about anything. For this we have Bill Klucsarits, from Coplay, Pa. and Allentown Central Catholic H. S. He's had an interesting past including 18 months in the Army and a year in the poor man's ROTC, as a member of the ASTP at Penn State. When he hasn't been studying for his B.A. in History, Bill has been student intra-mural athletic director and WVIL sports announcer.

Last on the list only because of alphabetical order, George Scanlon is the man who has written up the victories of the 150 football team and the frosh basketball squad. George, one of the Boston Scanlons, did his high school studying at Phila. Northeast Catholic and has continued in that vein at Villanova as a Marketing major in the C&F School.

TRACK

600 kings on a flat track in a dazzling 1:12.5 effort which he considered his best performance of the season.

Jack Holmes

For a quite a while now Villanova has been noted for the high quality of its relay teams. One good reasn for this is Jack Holmes. Jack came to Villanova from Haddonfield High in New Jersey via the Air Force and Collingswood, his present home. In high school he was known chiefly as a sprinter and won the South Jersey 100 and 220 crowns for two years in a row, setting a record in the latter event.

After his tour of duty with Uncle he came to the Main Line, where Coach Jim Elliot saw in him great possibilities as a quarter miler. So the speedy Mr. Holmes joined Guida and Co. and turned in some pretty terrific performances. One of the best, a 3:15.7 clocking ironically enough gave them only third in the IC-4A outdoors one year.

Jack was on a few winning teams too however. In 1949 he ran the 220 leg on the National Sprint Medley championship team. The following year he again was on hand only this time on the 100 leg.

The bland C and F'er considers his past season the best for he ran with the four that broke the Inquirer meet record in addition to the Philadelphia Metropolitan top team and the Middle Atlantic champs.

Joe McCreary

Joe McCreary, also a big gun on the relay team, has a background a little different from that of Holmes. In West Catholic High Joe was a distance man. Then too he served in the Navy in the submarine service, far from the wild, blue yonder.

When he came to Villanova, however, he too showed possibilities as a quarter miler and another good relay man was added to the roster. Joe is another two year veteran of the sprint medley and this year he ran the anchor 300 on that record breaking squad.

Tom Irish and Ed Bausenwein

The next two Juniors on our list of destruction are Tom Irish and Ed Bausenwein, both from Cardinal Hayes High in New York. Both men are sprinters and both starred on Hayes's record-breaking Half-mile relay of 1947. Ed and Tom were on the Freshman mile relay in their first year on the Main Line. Irish is also a 1949 member of the famous medley relay. This year he added to his laurels by unsetting defending champ Jim McKenna for the Middle Atlantic 50 yard title. Eddie who suffered a bad leg muscle injury in his sophomore year is back on the roster and will start in the Penn Relays.

Bob O'Neill

The high jumping gentleman in the photo montage is known to his friends as Bob O'Neill. Bob hails from Flushing, Long Island and attended Chaminade High school.

used on offense as center for all extra point attempts.

Another strong spot on the Wildcat line is tackle Mike Kerwin. Mike served as a replacement for Big John Sandusky in '49 and did a bang-up job both on offense and defense. One of the biggest men on the squad, Mikes comes to Villanova from Donellen, N. J. and St. Benedict's Prep in Newark where he played baseball and football.

Winner of two letters and star offensive tackle, Ray Mantone is one of the best and most dependable men on the club. Ray, room mate of Mickey Frinzi, also comes from Philipsburg where he played four years football and baseball. He was All-State in High School and is certainly one of the finest linemen in the East.

Jack Moran, another fleetfooted halfback, comes from New Rochelle, N. Y. where he was a star player at Iona Prep. Jack averaged 7.1 in '49 and was a great asset as defensive halfback. He has won two letters.

The boy that will carry on the Wildcat tradition of fine quarterbacks — Neil O'Boyle. Neil hails from Scranton Central where he won ten letters. He is an exceptional field general and should prove to be one of the leading ball handlers in the country. Neil throws a sizzling pass and with Geppi, D'Alonzo, and Frinzi should form a great backfield.

Closing out the Juniors is Bob Wills, a team mate of Gep's at Mt. St. Joe's and All-State player from Maryland. Bob played a steady game on defense in both the '48 and '49 campaigns and should be of great value to Jim Leonard to fill the weakened guard post.

BASEBALL

ted .319 for the Wildcats. One of his hits was a grand slam home run against Providence.

J. Malcolm "Red" Wright is one of the most versatile performers on the Wildcat nine. Red was a catcher at Cumberland High School in Valley Falls, R. I. and for the Stanton Legion Post. This team reached the state finals, with Red hitting the ball at a .350 clip. In his first year on the Villanova varsity he was converted into a pitcher and performed creditably on the mound. In addition he also caught and played the outfield, when occasion demanded. This year Red will concentrate on his catching duties.

Another New Jersey athlete, Tom Jones is at the keystone sack for the Wildcats. Tom comes from Snyder High School in Jersey City, where he was a standout performer on both the diamond and court teams. He batted .274 last year and was the leading hitter in the Seton Hall victory.

The other half of the double play combination is Benny Moskal a native of Perth Amboy, N. J. where he attended St. Mary's High School. Benny went out for the varsity in his sophomore year and secured a first team berth. Possessed of great speed afoot, Benny hit just over .300 last season, and followed Frinzi in the base stealing department.

Intramural Basketball Produces Many Stars From Junior Class

By MONDSCHEIN INC.

Since this is Junior Week the authors of this column has decided to devote this week's column in reviewing the feats of some of the outstanding members of this year's Junior class. Because the three seasonal sports, football, basketball and softball have taken the intramural spotlight the past few years, we have decided to talk about Juniors who have excelled in one or more of these sports.

The first man to receive consideration is Robert Oelz. Only last week, this little mite was selected as the most valuable player of the Intramural League. His leadership on the basketball floor played a major role in Alumni's championship conquest. Bobby was a real hustler, a great ball handler, and the best defensive man in the league. His southpaw tosses at the baskets accounted for many of Alumni's points during the season. He also has held down the center field slot on Alumni's softball squad for the past three seasons. His power hitting from the portside was a thorn in the side of opposing pitchers.

Tom Madonia has been the most consistent performer of the Barracks 1&4 teams. During the given the nickname of "Olr Repast basketball season, Tom was liable" because of his consistent great play, especially his defensive manuevers and scoring contributions. On the diamond, he roamed the outer pastures and could always be counted on for his share of the hits. On the football field, his passing and running were the main reasons for Barracks 1&4 triumphs.

Tom Flynn, a running mate to Madonia for the Bks. 1&4 squads, besides leading his team in scoring, also copped the individual scoring for the league with 211 points. Holding down the short field spot on the softball, Tom was also switched at times to first base and also did a commendable job as a pitcher. Pass catching was his greatest asset on the Im football team.

Little Lou Maiero another member of the Barracks 1&4 teams is best known for his prowess on the baseball diamond. Lou played the hot corner as an expert and his timely hitting aided the Barracks on its winning ways.

Bill Lemmer, a high scoring forward of Austin sacrificed his eligibility for league play this past season, to give his all for the 150 lb. team. Thus he played only the second half of the past Intramural season. However, Bill managed to do more than his share of good play and without a doubt rates with the best of intramural players. He also starred on Austin's softball team.

Another great all around Intramural athlete is Bill Knecht of the Doms, who has been leading his team in all respects. On the hard wood, Bill has been great as a rebound man and also led his team in scoring and was third among the league scorers. Last season, Knecht roamed left field and pitched for the champion Dom team. He also led his team on the football field.

Tom Brennan, Jack Loughlin, George Scanlan, and Leo Schreiber, all of Austin were outstanding Juniors on that team. Brennan was selected on the second team of the league All-Stars. Loughlin played all three main sports, and also was a member of the championship 150 lb. team. Schreiber is to be remembered as the person who received the merit award last spring. Scanlan was the man who ably filled Lemmer's shoes during his absence.

Jack Denuel was a three sport man for the halls he resided in for the past three seasons. Jim Gallo was a standout athlete the past season for Mendel, while Ray Artz was a star pitcher for The Barracks 1&4 nine for two seasons before moving off campus. There were many other members of the Junior class who also deserve mention in this column but lack pf space does not give us the opportunity to do so.

lineup. George is from Reveton, N. J. and a Marketing major in the C&F school. George's main asset was his fine offensive blocking. He is a 2 year veteran of 150 play and ex-gob in Uncle Sam's Navy.

Jerry Battle, another N.R.O.T.C. man hails from Detroit. Jerry was a defensive tackle and is a dependable performer. He attended and played ball at Roval Oak High. Bill Dwyer was the "utility" tackle. Bill played both defense and offense for the Kittens. He calls Philadelphia his home town.

Jack Rowe's spirit and fight made him into a fine center. Jack is from Wilmington, Del. where he was all-star center for Archmere Academy. He is an N.R.O.T.C. student, a member of the Belle Masque, the Turf and Tinsel, and WVIL.

Great Backs

The Junior backfield stars includes Joe McCreary, Charlie Bottino, Lou Maiero, and Bill Lemmer.

"Bullet Joe" McCreary dazzling runs scored six pointers in every game of the lightweights season. Joe managed to scamper 50 yards or more to pay dirt at least once in every tussle as he scored 9 touchdowns in 1949. He is also a track man, being a fine quarter-miler and is also a Marketing major in the C&F school. Joe was easily the outstanding back in the Eastern 150 lb. league.

Charlie Battino is the veteran of the squad having played three years for the Kittens. Charlie is a hard running halfback and could go the distance as he proved when he scooted 70 yards against Rutgers. "Choo Choo" also plays a fine game of baseball. Charlie played three outstanding seasons of football at Ridley Township High.

Louie Maieo is a native of Chester, Pa. where he attended St. James High. Lou weighs but 130 lbs. but his "weight" and speed was enough to earn him a starting berth. Lou is an Accounting major and an intramural star. His baseball ability is well known about Chester as he is an accomplished second sacker.

Bill Lemmer, a defensive specialist at the important safety man position comes from Ironwood, Michigan. "Lem" attended Saint Ambrose high where he was a letter winner in Baseball, Basketball, Track and Football which he captained in his second year. He is a member of the N.R.O.T.C. and an Arts major. Bill is an intramural star. He holds the scoring record of 56 points for Alumni Hall gym, also he is a 2 year veteran of the Blue & White 150 lb. team.

SPORTS STARS FROM THE CLASS OF '51

1. Bob Wills, 2. Mickey Frinzi, 3. Bob O'Neil, 4. Bill Lemmer, 5. Charlie Bottino, 6. Jack Moran, 7. Jim McKenna, 8. Joe Howanski, 9. Neil O'Boyle, 10. Tom Irish, 11. Jim Gallo, 12. Red Wright, 13. Benny Moskal, 14. Ray Mantone, 15. John Geppi, 16. Mike Kerwin, 17. Tom Dolan, 18. Lou Maiero, 19. Tom Flynn, 20. Ed Bausenwein, 21. Pete D'Alonzo, 22. Jack Rowe, 23. Joe McCreary, 24. Jerry Battle, 25. Bill Dwyer, 26. John Bogan, 27. George Strohlein, 28. Jack Morris, 29. Tom Jones, 30. JackJamison, 31. Jack Loughlin, 32. Leo Schreiber, 33. Jack Holmes.

"Piper-Heidsieck '98" Cast Set For Final Rehearsals

"And excitement's running rampant everywhere". This line from the musical score of the forthcoming Turf and Tinsel production sums up the Club's own condition on the eve of its big moment. The Field House has become a theater in every respect of the word; dancers and singers are working for perfection. The speaking cast is going through its antics, costume committees committees are running around with needle and thread, the stage crew is hammering and sawing away on the scenery, behind the scenes people are working on the business end, and the orchestra is warming up for the opening overture.

Much interest centers around the "lifeguards" who will appear in the persons of Shy Raiken, Jim Caulfield, Tom Clavin, Phil Snyder, Bud Kane, Leo Wolf, John Weglicki and Brooks Ricca. The boys in the red and white stripped bathing suits almost forget that they are "to save the life of the lifeguard's wife" and toss "her" around as if "she" were a beach ball. This octet will also lend their voices in four-part barber shop harmony along the place of their employment, the beach. This promises to be a show stopper.

It appears that the show may stop again when three haggard dancing "queens" appear to once again perform their act. Under the wigs and makeup of these "has-beens" will be Whitey LeBlanc, Joe Maiale and Paul Zalodny. The possibilities here are limitless.

Some of the other highlights of the show will be the "can-can" and waltz as performed by the dancing chorus; Jim Clarkin's rendition of "For a Moment", one of Bob Whelan's best; Jack Kelly's interpretation of the "fashionable" Mrs. Murphee; with Morticia (Johnny Bauman) by "her" side; the clever deductions of John Rowe in the role of Dectective Ryan; Herb Mathews as the "loveable" Kitty; Bob Resnick as the "very dignified" Russian Countess and so into the night.

The show will start on a terrific note when the glee club renders the opening, "We're Going to Have a Party", and reach a musical climax in The Viennese Park where a stage band will get together with the pit orchestra to form the musical background for the polka.

Such is the condition of the Field House where the men of the Turf and Tinsel Club are striving to give Villanova its best musical yet.

Villanova Delegates Attend NFCCS Conclave

By C. G. FLEMING

The representatives of the Pittsburgh region, especially those of St. Vincent's College proved to be excellent hosts to the delegates from the member colleges of the N.F.C.C.S. Every section of the country was represented by the Catholic College men and women who attended this congress.

About 700 strong, the students met for one purpose which can most easily be expressed in the term Catholic Action. The N.F.C.C.S. has done much, and according to a message which Pope Pius XII sent to the Congress, it is going to do much more in the future. Now you may ask just what have you and I done to aid the cause of the federation.

Through our donations, you and I and many other catholic students helped to raise $750,000 for the education and care of D. P. students. This is the greatest relief sum ever attained by a student organization. These students are of every race, color, and creed. Most of them are refugees from Communist-dominated countries; others are victims of war; all are unclaimed, unsuported and unwanted. Can you imagine being a man without a country, without a family, without security, existing only through the christian charity of others? Well, fellows, they don't have to imagine it. This is there plight. Please do what you can to cooperate with the N.F.C.C.S.

The horizon looks very bright in reference to the Holy Year pilgrimage sponsored by the N.F.C.C.S. for this summer. Both ships chosen are luxurious, the accommodations excellent, and a full social agenda has been planned for those taking part.

Senior I's and Juniors Must Sit For Yearbook Portraits

Special notice has been posted concerning the taking of portraits of all Juniors and Senior I's for the 1951 Belle Air. Appointment lists have been posted in the Pie Shop for all persons concerned to choose the day and hour that they will be prepared to have their portrait sitting.

Austin Lounge will be used for the taking of portraits, rather than the Library, which was used last year. Only the three weeks from May 8th to May 26th will be set aside for the purpose, which is an important part of every year book.

Early signing of the list will insure the hour that you want and also help to entice slower students to sign the appointment lists.

Ready Alumni Hall Gym For Thursday Elections; Expect Large Turnout

Candidates for student offices are putting forh a final drive in preparation for the class elections to be held this Thusrday in the Alumni Hall Gymnasium. The nominations for the various officials have been checked, approved, and posted, and the candidates for the various parties have been busily carrying on their campaigns.

As in previous years, the elections will be held in the Alumni Hall Gymnasium this Thursday, May 4, from 10 A. M. to 3 P. M., permitting all students plenty of time in which to vote.

Petition Plan on Trial

A special feature of this year's elections was the petition system inaugurated by the Sophomore Class as a trial experiment. Under this plan, a petition of fifty names, in lieu of a floor nomination, was permitted for placing a candidate in the running. The reason for this innovation was to permit more men, who may have missed the class meeting, to be nominated. From all indications that the Sophomores have shown, the new plan is popular and will probably be adopted as a school-wide custom for elections in future years.

The Sophomore Class met on Monday, April 24th, at 7:30 P. M. to pick their candidates; the Freshman Class convened the same day at 5:00 P. M.; and the Juniors gathered on Wednesday, April 19th, to choose their nominees. All meetings took place in the C&F Auditorium.

Election Rules Follow

The election rules, which will be strictly enforced this year, are printed below.

1. All classes will elect four officers. Freshman Class will choose one Student Council member; Sophomores, four; Juniors, four and Senior Alumni Representative.

2. The use of any sound equipment is restricted to the period between classes.

3. Notices in Mendel Hall and the C&P Building are to be posted only on the bulletin boards.

4. As soon as possible, all organizations having representation on the Student Council are to have elections so the Council may be organized late in May.

5. All election posters are to be removed immediately following the elections.

6. Elections are to be held in the Alumni Hall Gymnasium on Thursday, May 4th, from 10 A. M. to 3 P. M.

Capt. Paul Buskey, Middlebury, '38
Air Intelligence, U.S. Air Force

An excellent student at Middlebury College, Vermont, Paul found time to win the coveted All Sports Trophy in his senior year. He graduated in June, 1938.

He then joined a coated paper mill firm as research and control man. Pearl Harbor changed all that—Paul went to Maxwell Field to begin Aviation Cadet training.

An outstanding Cadet, 2nd Lt. Paul Buskey was held over as an instructor after graduation. Then he was assigned as a pilot in the Air Transport Command.

His big plane education was topped with 23 missions over the far-famed "Hump," flying C-54 transports. After V-J Day, he stayed on in the Far East until March of 1948—specializing in Air Intelligence.

Back home, after accepting a Regular Air Force Commission, Captain Buskey went to Air Tactical school, was there rated an outstanding student, and won assignment to Command and Staff school.

Today, Captain Buskey is an Air Intelligence Officer on MATS Headquarters Staff at Andrews Air Force Base near Washington, D. C. He looks forward to a rewarding future in the U. S. Air Force.

If you are single, between the ages of 20 and 26½, with at least two years of college, consider the many career opportunities as a pilot or navigator in the U. S. Air Force. Procurement Teams are visiting many colleges and universities to explain these career opportunities. Watch for them. You may also get full details at your nearest Air Force Base or U. S. Army and U. S. Air Force Recruiting Station, or by writing to the Chief of Staff, U. S. Air Force, Attn Aviation Cadet Branch, Washington 25, D. C.

The Library Corner . . .

Not to be outdone by the rest of the school this week, the Library is also participating in the welcome being given to the Junior Class and their guests. All during Junior Week, the doors of the Library will be open with a special invitation extended to the Class of '51 and their friends to inspect the facilities of the new Library building. Several special exhibits have been prepared by the staff which the Library is currently featuring in conjunction with the other Junior Week activities mentioned in this paper.

Student Art Contest

Perhaps the most attractive of these is the exhibit of the works entered in the student art contest that has been in preparation for several weeks. These works are being displayed in the showcases of the lobby from today on during this week. This is just one of the innovations of Junior Week this year and should prove to be an interesting boon to any Junior who wants to impress his guests with what might be termed the finer side of campus life. At the time this report was published the winners of the contest had not been announced, but from the quality of the works that had been submitted, a viewing of this display is a must for any visitor to the campus this week.

Historical Sketches

to his domain as "Vill 'n Rover's" place. Further corruption took place when our founding fathers adopted this name and spoke it in a brogue that they forgot to leave the ould country when they fled the potato famine. Thus we have it today, "Villanova."

In this name our college has its oldest tradition: The next oldest is that of its motto. The founders realized that they would need something to put on their letterheads, and desired a cliche that would bring inspiration to the future students of their school. Hence, with originality peculiar to their order, they lifted three words from the works of St. Augustine, "Unitas, Veritas, Caritas". This was once construed by a benighted latin 101 student to mean, "Truly One-Way Charity."

Such was the firm foundation on which our college was built. The doors f this institution were opened in 1843, and a symbolic number of thirteen students were inveigled into signing their names on the roster by the ten members of the faculty who canvassed the Main Line villages disguised as recruiting agents for the French Foreign Legion.

The first few years were ones of great trial and effort on the part of both students and faculty. It was at this college that the Villanova plan for education was originated as a forerunner of the Chicago plan, the Winnetka plan, and the Hydrogen Bomb plan. Students, amazingly, had to study. And can you imagine, no cuts! Such a system was doomed to failure from the beginning, and three years later, several young men, after flunking Logic for the third consecutive semester, masqueraded as anti-Catholic members of the Know-Nothing party and attacked the school. They swooped down from the heights of Mount Misery and drove the terrorized Augustinians into the cranberry bogs of South Jersey.

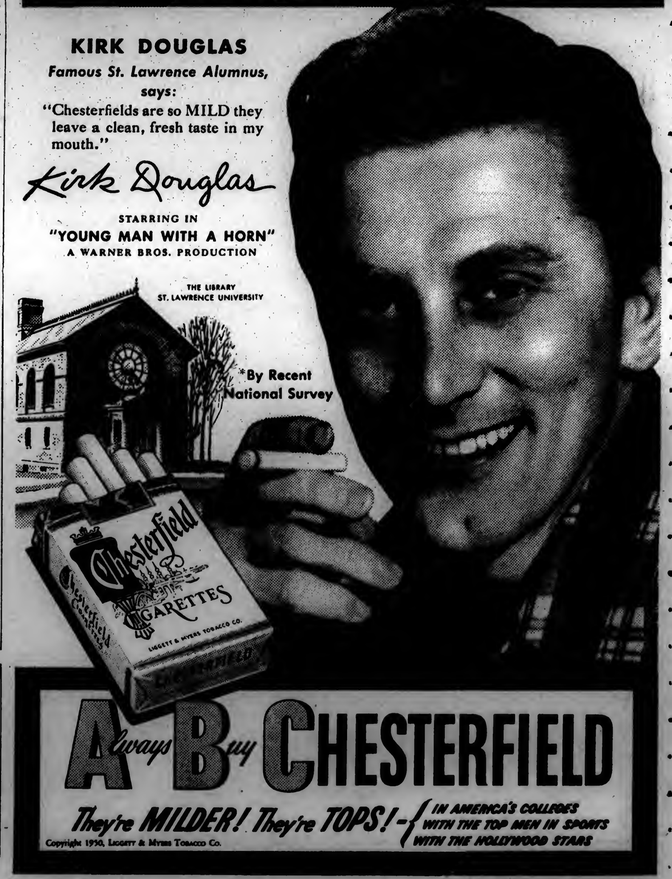
After a recoup of forces, our dauntless crusaders for better education and the honor and glory of Villanova returned, and here they have remained entrenched, still flunking Logic students for three semesters in a row.

The administration, ever mindful of student opinion and needs, has carried on a program of expansion to improve the facilities of the college. Witness the Field House, built by a farsighted administration when Paul Arizin was but three years old. More recently, the administration realized that great minds weary from overwork need some place with soft chairs and quiet atmosphere. So they built the Library, and equipped it with eighty-five thousand books, a majrity of which are Latin, Greek and Sanskrit dictionaries. The remainder are bound volumes of back-issue Life magazines.

Again, our provident administration saw that all work and no play is bound to make our dull students even duller, and built the Naval Science and Chemical Engineering buildings so that the men so inclined could play war with real guns or go swimming in the aeration pond.

Next to psychopathic students, the greatest enemy to the life of Villanova has been fire. The worst of these occurred in 1932 when a misplaced Arts man, performing an experiment in Physics lab, set Mendel Hall afire with a Bunsen burner, and ran for his life. But like Topsy, Villanova again sprang up, courageously carring on its effete tradition of educating gentleman for the cold, cruel world.

Villanova (also spelled Villa Nova, Villanova, Villan Ova) is situated on the famous Main Line of Philadelphia, on the Lincoln Highway, the Pennsylvania Railroad tracks, and the P&W. route. Strictly speaking, there is no town of Villanova; it's just the college, a post office, and one City Service station. In its present state it couldn't even be considered a one-horse town, since the last horse carriage seen on campus was promptly towed to Wayne and never retrieved.



We would like to commend all Juniors in every activity, even though it was not possible in one issue to give credit to all those who deserved it.

Constitutional Changes Adopted By Council

New Article Will Empower Council to Levy Small Fines for Infractions of Rules

Changes and additions in the Student Council constitution, recommended by George Schuster, Junior Class President, Chairman of the Constitution Committee, and adopted by the council at a meeting held last Monday evening, provide for the possibility of a more active participation by the entire student body in its government in the future. The most controversial and potent change before the Administration for approval will empower the council members to levy fines on any student for infractions of rules as set forth by the Council.

Most of the changes recommended concerned procedure and organization, but two of the changes allow for petitioning of the Council by the student body. Under one article any regular student will be allowed to attend the meetings of the council and address the chair on his own behalf. The other article will permit the introduction of an amendment to the constitution upon the presentation to the Council of a petition signed by at least ten percent of the Villanova student body.

The final significant change

IT'S ALL OVER NOW; CAMPUS AGAIN CALM AFTER JUNIOR WEEK

The calm that settled down on the campus this week was as much due to the successful outcome of Junior Week as to the employment of much needed rest on the part of the class of '51. With activities taking place each day it was a tremendous success despite the weather.

On a foggy Monday morning last week, the Junior Week activities were begun with 300 mothers present for the annual celebration of Mother's Day. One of the nicest traditions, it was marked by Mass, luncheon, and an afternoon concert.

Tuesday evening, the Band and Glee Club gave their annual Spring Concert which was tendered to the Junior Class. The informal Blazer Ball saw two hundred couples dance to the music of the Villanovans on Wednesday evening.

"Piper Heidsieck '98" Opens Friday; Gay Nineties Setting For Musical

Show to Run Four Days; Features Fresh Music and Dances

On Friday evening at 8:30 sharp, the Turf and Tinsel Club will raise the opening curtain on its annual spring musical comedy. The show, this year, derives its name from a famous gay ninety vintage champagne, "Piper-Hiedsieck '98."

The musical score is original and stems from the pen of Bob Whelan, the genial athletic secretary of the college. Bob also wrote the book which promises to give the audience its share of laughs. Mr. George Noake, of Jenkintown, is directing the production assisted by Don Straeker and Mr. Whelan.

The plot centers about a notorious couple who are trying to crash into society along the fabulous Main Line of Philadelphia. In the course of a gigantic party, the family jewels are stolen and a large part of the plot consists of a world-wide hunt for the jewel thief. A surprise ending caps the sequence of events and the show ends in grandiose fashion.

No Whistles Now, Please! Save them for Friday when the "Boys" open up in "Piper-Heidsieck '98"

The would-be socialites are aptly portrayed by Joe Dugan and Jack Kelly as Mr. and Mrs. Murphee. Jim Clarkin and Herb Mathews provide the romantic touch in the roles of the Murphee's son and Kitty Randolph. Bob Resnick is the Countess Gavotsky and John Rowe and John Bauman round out the cast as Ryan, the private eye and Morticia, the Murphee's maid.

A skilled dancing chorus and harmonious glee club will display their musical wares throughout the production in numbers calculated to provide fun and frolic for everyone.

A vocal octet comprised of well-known Villanova athletes will take part in the show as a group of Keystone Lifeguards and later on as the "Rise and Shine Anti-Alcholic Society."

The curtain will rise promptly at 8:30 P. M. each night and a special rate has been extended to students who purchase tickets prior to production nights.

For the convenience of the students, the tickets for the Turf and Tinsel production, "Piper Heidsieck, '98," will be sold in the dorms to the Resident students and in the Pie Shop and Mendel Hall for the day hops. Tickets will be one dollar apiece for students and will be limited to two tickets per student.

Rugo, Pasha, Sollami Win In Races For Class Presidents, At Thursday Elections

A clean sweep for the Fair Representation Party in the elections for the Senior officers of the Class of '51 was made known at the Junior Prom held last Friday night. The members of this party drew comfortable margins over all opponents in the elections last Thursday that polled 60% of the Class enrollment, 291 out of a possible 486 ballots.

Joseph F. Rugo was given the presidential reins of this class by a run-away victory over his two opponents, Bill Creamer and Herb Matthews. In the vice-presidential race, the FRP can-

Seventy-four per cent of the sophomore class turned out last Thursday in the biggest election in many years. 447 out of a possible 603 students cast their ballots in Alumni Hall to elect student officers for the coming year.

Thomas Pasha polled 207 votes, more than twice the number reached by his nearest opponent, James Plunkett, to take over the presidency of the Sophomore class.

Joseph Driscoll polled 167 votes to lead three other opponents in the race for the Vice-presidential post. John Conklin had more than a 2-to-1 edge

Paul Sollami, rolling into office by almost a 2-1 margin, was elected president of the Freshman class in the class elections last Thursday. He headed a list of victorious Frosh candidates that included Robert Radcliffe, Vice-president, Harry Quigley, Secretary, Dan O'Connell, Treasurer, and, Jim Moser, Student Council representative.

Sollami, amassing an early lead, tallied 120 ballots, while his closest rival, Jack Famigletti, had but 63. Radcliffe was elected via 96 votes, but he had a tight race all the way, edging Bill Reynolds by only two. Quig-

NFCCS Plans May Day Rally On 14th

An outdoor May Day prayer rally will take place next Sunday, May 14th., at two o'clock in the afternoon, at St. Joseph's College, under the sponsorship of the Philadelphia region, National Federation of Catholic College Students. In the event of rain, the celebration will be held in the St. Joseph's Field House.

The rally will be the Catholic answer to Communist May Day rallies throughout the world. It will consist of Rosary and Benediction in reparation to the Immaculate Heart of Mary for the sins of the world, for the return of Russia and all nations to God, and for world peace, as requested by Our Lady at Fatima.

Sunday's celebration has the approval of the Archbishop of Philadelphia, and the general public as well as all college students are invited to participate.

Sympathy is extended by the student body and the staff of the Villanovan to Phillip Sentner (Phy. Se.-II) on the death of his sister. Mass has been offered in the College Chapel for the happy repose of her soul.

Care To Gripe??

At a recent meeting the Student Council adopted several changes and additions to its constitution which directly concern every student with any interest in student government which should mean you and you and you.

We picked out the three most significant additions for your consideration and now we would like to elaborate a bit on them.

Article III, Section 1

All regular students of the College shall be members of the Student Council. "Regular students" refers to those students carried as "regular students" by the Registrar. The members empowered to cast a vote in the Student Council shall be restricted to the following three classes of representatives.

The above article means that no longer should you gripe to Joe Schlunk down the hall, but you should take your gripe to the Council personally. You can not only address the chair, but you should. The Council will thrive in the beams of student interest manifested under this rule.

Article VIII, Section 1-b

An amendment may be introduced by presentation to the Council of a petition signed by at least ten per cent of the Villanova student body.

Again an opportunity to have your voice heard, but this time through the medium of the petition for an amendment of your constitution. If you feel strongly enough about a situation which concerns a sufficient number of the students, you may introduce an amendment by presenting a petition signed by at least ten per cent of your number. No excuses can be made if your gripe gets no further than the usual bull session.

Article VI, Section 12

The Student Council shall, with a two-thirds, vote, be empowered to impose a small fine on any student of this College for infractions of rules as set forth by the Council. The fine is not to exceed one dollar.

The above addition is the most radical of all since it will empower the Council to wield a club which it never before has had at its disposal. The necessity has always been with us, but only the administration has been able to speak with authority previously. You all know you are far from a group of lily-whites, in fact, some of the action in the chow-lines is down-right aggravating to one and all. Maybe getting hit where it hurts — in the wallet — will wake you up to some of your thoughtlessness.. Any other infractions which the Council finds to be overly prevalent will be handled in the same manner.

So there it is. The Student Council is you. The Constitution of the Council provides opportunities for any student to be heard either through his representative or personally, and most important of all it gives the Council the punitive power it needs to attain a position respected by both student and administration.

It is May already, swiftly running into June. And with June comes graduation and another group of Villanovans will take their places in the world. With them will go the tag of "college men" on more accurately "Catholic college men."

What Difference?

Actually, in most cases there is very little need to add "Catholic", for what difference in there in fact? True, they will have marks of education: culture, poise, skills; but Yale or MIT could do the same for anyone, so that in this respect they will be no different from any other kind of college man. True, too, they will be Christians and Catholics; but, many Columbia graduates will be good Christians and good Catholics so that it is hard to say that this alone will distinguish them as CATHOLIC college men rather than just plain college men. Indeed, it is difficult to detect any basic difference between graduates of Catholic colleges and those of other colleges; and such difficulty amounts to an indictment against the graduates themselves.

But There Should Be

For in a Catholic college they have been taught the elementals of realty and the importance of eternity, and such t r a i n i n g should ex facto set them apart from any other class of college men. And yet after graduation they blend almost inseparably with the swirling currents of the modern world, and any mark of uniqueness loses itself in their quest for material progress.

One Explanation

Perhaps one cause of this is the failure of most Catholic college graduates to realize the responsibility which they owe to God for their education. They fail to appreciate that it was with a definite purpose for good that God permitted them to graduate from a Catholic college, and that in return he expects from them what He could not expect from the untrained Catholic. God has destined us to do special work for Him, or we would not be at Villanova, and this destiny is not a matter of preference, it is a matter of obligation.

Nothing Week

By Bill Breninghouse

With the frenzied fun and frolic of Junior Week now a thing of the past everyone can look forward to that week of weeks, Exam Week. Starting today Oscar Twomp is celebrating Nothing Week. In the sterling Junior Week edition of this paper a fellow columnist whose name is forgotten at the moment mentioned something about various weeks. It might be said that the aforementioned columnist reached his peak in said column. No more Weeks for Oscar, this is Nothing Week.

Prepare to do Nothing

To celebrate Nothing Week with Oscar one must be prepared to do nothing. Opening books is forbidden; studying at all is strictly taboo. All Oscar will do is walk around with a blank stare and do nothing. He will not gripe about the food for there is nothing indeed. When they tow his car away to the Wayne Garage he will do nothing. Little do they know that his car is rigged up with a time bomb that will blow the Wayne Garage and all its employees into nothingness. The next time they rob him of his last five bucks to line the company's coffers nothing will be done; he'll pitch a tent on the P&W tracks.

As can easily be seen Nothing Week could turn into a National Nothing Week but it must start somewhere, so why not here at nowhere. Oscar Twomp wants no fame from founding this week. He just wants everyone to pitch in and do nothing.

If you are given a questionaire to fill out which says that it must be filled out in two days or else grave penalties will be inflicted, do nothing until they say "pretty please." Sometimes doing nothing can be very effective. For instance buying nothing that sells for exorbitant prices at the campus razor blade and toothpaste monopoly might lower the prices into the realms of reason.

Maybe Nothing Month

Yes, Nothing Week may even turn into a Nothing Month in which everyone just rests for thirty days, a time in which doing something would be a criminal offense. As long as this Nothing Campaign is going so well why not make the last year of this present century a Nothing Year. Just think of a whole year with nothing as its theme. The world is too busy doing things, a Nothing Year is just what it needs.

Nothing Week is a time to prepare for these other nothings. This week should begin a tradition that will spread throughout the entire civilized world. What could be more original than a week for nothing and where would we find a better starting place than here at Villanowhere? If it is given the support it deserves Nothing Week might even surpass Junior Week and National Doughnut Week as great events of the year. It is up to the men of Villanowhere to set this great experiment into motion.

Letters To The Editor

Open Letter From The Class of '51

On behalf of the Class of 1951, I should like to express publicly our sincere thanks for the wholehearted support and co-operation manifested in conjunction with the activities of Junior Week. The spirit of those working on the various committees was equalled by the enthusiam with which the members of the student body responded to the various functions.

The VILLANOVAN is to be congratulated and thanked for its generous publicizing of Junior Week and, in particular, for the splendid issue released for it.

The Junior Class is extremely grateful to Fr. Tuohy and those members of the Class of 1953 who donated their time and efforts to assist us in the Mother's Day ceremonies.

Fr. Handran, the Band, and the Glee Club deserve our praise for the splendid entertainment provided at the Informal Concert presented on Tuesday night and, also for assisting at Mother's Day. Turf and Tinsel and the staff of W.V.I.L. also provided excellent entertainment at the Mother's Day activities.

In all, the Class of 1951 extends its deepest gratitude to all who helped in making this Junior Week the gratifying success that it was.

GEORGE A. KEENLEY
Chairman, Junior Week

Dear Editor,

Once again the class elections have been held, and once again the members of the Class of '52 have shown the spirit characteristic of them for the past two years. The men of this class have shown their stuff, and as a result, polled 447 out of a possible 603 votes, an amazing total of 74% of the class. Yet this is not so amazing when you reflect on the effort they put into this election to make it outstanding as a display of class interest.

I would like to take this opportunity, as the successful presidential candidate of this class to express my thanks to the class as a whole, and to my own running-mates and the other candidates in particular, for showing the school that our class is to be considered as one of the most spirited ever to be at this college. We will have a big job to do in our Junior year, but with the kind of spirit and activity that was shown in these elections, I feel assured that our Junior year will match the success that this class has had in all of its activities so far. You can be certain that your new officers will go all out for the class and for you.

Thanks a lot for your support in the elections. We hope you will keep up the spirit for next year.

Sincerely,
THOMAS A. PASHA

SYNCOPATTER

By Mayer and Taten

With the post-Prom let-down still prevailing on Campus, I doubt if any of the local B.T.O.'s will be interested in places to go, but just in case a few hardy souls still survive the weekend carnage and might like to hear some good Dixieland jazz, Max Kaminsky and his combo are presently holding forth at the Rendezvous and doing a rather commendable job of bringing good Jazz to Philadelphia.

Lay Down And Listen

For the vast majority who would just rather lay down some where and listen, until they regain their strength, there is much to say for several new records being played around.

From the new and controversial Stan Kenton "Innovations" album, "Theme for Sunday" is pleasantly toned down from the usual Kenton overpowering delivery. Sounding like a rather serious effort in the light classical field it gives us a look at another side of the multi-talented Mr. Kenton.

It would seem that the final epitaph of Bop was written recently when Charley (formerly the Yardbird) Parker, brought out his new, upbopped album. For instance one of the nicest numbers was "Everything Happens to Me" with Charlie taking a very sweet and very subdued sax solo and with a background of string, yet!

Not that it's necessary, but the final coup de grace probably came with the waxing of one of Shearing's latest called "Georgie's Boogie" also completely unbopped. And so as the flatted fifth fades quietly from the great American musical panoroma we bid a fair adieu to nothing. Don't think it hasn't been nice 'cause it hasn't.

Once again I feel that the Villanovans deserve credit for a job well done. Their musical background for the Blazer Ball was well done and enjoyed by all. What struck me most forcibly however, was their use of bop. Vince Palmer has the boys playing together as they were wont to do in the past and his adaption of bop to a more danceable beat was an appreciated effort. The jump tunes were well done and some of the dancers will probably be surprised to learn that they were jiving to bop.

British And Us

One of the main reasons for the many superficial disputes in the music world today, disputes that degrade everything and help not at all, shows up clearly in the British production, "Red Shoes". One of Ted Heath's swing groups was featured for a few brief minutes as background music. Mr. Heath, possibly the English Tommy Dorsey, was most considerate in not forcing us to watch his face on the screen for the duration of the scene. Were the same situation to occur here I am quite sure we would have been treated to numerous shots of the leader smiling, waving a baton, taking a few solos and exuding personality all over the place. It's a pity that the English who are so far behind us in the development of jazz should be forced to show us the idiocy of all the futile name calling in the musical profession.

Having met one of the Immaculatans charming columnists I am very sorry to have said all those nasty things . . . it wasn't worth it!!!

Sense And Nonsense

By Tom Pasha

Have you ever noticed the various positions into which the fleet-footed ballroom ballerinas of today are gradually becoming addicted? Well, gents, you had better take heed because the dance stylings of this day and age are no longer light but just fantastic. The only way in which one can make an impression on the dance floor now is to take a few instructions in the contortionistic arts and have absolutely no sense of rhythm.

When you enter a dance hall just make a quick observation of the individuals who are endeavoring to keep time with the sweat-and-sway stuff that is being produced by today's crop of musically inclined mechanics, you'll notice that many of the bunion-beaters can readily be divided into three classes. These are: the Arthur Murray graduate, the rambunctious rambler, and the dancing dilemma.

The first of these, the Art Murray man, is perhaps the most striking of these melody-maniacs. He is the who has mastered all of the inticate steps of the dance and enjoys giving an exhibition of his ability to perform the Tangle, Rumba, and the Sammbah. The truth of the matter is that he looks more like a novice angler trying to grab his first catch with a tea-strainer than he does a member of this exercise alumni. He's usually exercising the fem's arm as though it were a water pump, forgetful of the biological fact that it is attached to her shoulder.

In the rambunctious rambler, we have a very peculiar type of dancing enthusiast, this bouncey ballroom Benny consists of approximately five elbows, four feet, and three parts of shoulders. He has a hidden talent for finding your backbone, ribs, and shins along with his ability to cut in on your date just when things begin to get rolling.

The dancing dilemma is rather a sentimental character who may be found doing the elevator dance (no steps) during the romantic strains of "No Name Jive". Just when the rest of the crew are kicking up their heels to the tune of "Boogie Blues", this Don Juan of the boards is telling his buck-toothed baby what a doll she is, and how much she reminds him of an epicurean during the corn season.

Around The Town

By F. A. VARALLO

A delightful comedy, "Champagne for Caesar", stars Ronald Colman in his first screen appearance since he won the Academy Award for the best actor of the year in "Double Life", three years ago. And, Mr. Colman's return is welcome, indeed. In fine form, he gives a sly, tongue-in-cheek portrayal of a walking encyclopedia blessed with a keen sense of humor.

This new film at the Goldman is a sprightly satire that gives quiz shows and Bib Business quite a going-over. Ronald, or rather, Beauregard Bottomley, plans his own revenge against the Milady's Soap Company when he loses out on a forty-per-week research job with them.

Jackpot

Claiming that he "knows everything" — and apparently he does — Bottomley appears week-after-week on the Milady's "The Soap That Sanctifies" television program and proceeds to answer all the questions and run the jackpot into the fabulous sum of $40,000,000. Meanwhile, Vincent Price, the worried soap tycoon is frantically trying to hit upon a scheme to rid himself of Bottomley, the mental giant, before he bankrupts the company. To this end, he plants beautiful Celeste Holme as a nurse in cold-sufferer Bottomley's sickroom, thereby exposing him to all sorts of hazards designed to keep his mind off the jackpot question. Imagine the excitement when the genius appears for his last double-or-nothing chance before a packed Hollywood Bowl — the fans across the nation sitting on the edge of their chairs before their TV sets — the sponsor sitting on the edge of his window sill, ready to jump out!

Providing the romantic interest in this yarn are Beauregard's sister, Barbara Britton and Art Linkletter, popular quiz master of the "People are Funny" radio show.

Incidentally, in case you're wondering who "Caesar" is — he's a talkative, champagne drinking parrot who is quite a comedian in his own right. For film fare in a humorous vein, you'll certainly enjoy "Champagne for Caesar".

Mirth And Melody

"The Daughter of Rosie O'Grady" is one of those film-musicals of bygone days, giving forth with the old song and dance routines of the late '90's. Hampered by a plot which Hollywood has worn rather thin, this gaudy Technicolor celluloid depends for interest on lavish sets, familiar songs and colorful costuming.

James Barton plays the role of Papa O'Grady, a stubborn man who refuses to let his daughter, June Haver, go into theatrical work because he blames the death of his wife on overwork on the vaudeville stage. He's equally strict with June's sisters, Debbie Reynolds and Marsha Jones — telling them that he'll be the one to decide whom they will marry.

By Hevey and Keiss

We have returned! Broke, bleary-eyed and suffering from nervous prostration. Yes, we too were swept along by the storm of events which bombarded the campus last week. How do you Juniors feel? Like a cop's clodhoppers at the end of a perfect day? Well, it's all over and now we can all settle down to a few weeks of quiet, uninterrupted study. Just think, exams will be on us soon and we certainly have been looking forward to them. Oh, for the sound of a proctor's feet pounding in your ear!

As we reeled through the Blazer Ball, Junior Prom and Dinner Dance, it was brought to our weary eyes that all the socialites were gadding about having a dandy time. Among these big Mohofs were Dave Hanlon and Nan Glackin, Willy Huber with Gerry Colyer and the Incomparable Robert Q. Resnick accompanied by Miss Jerry McNutt of the College of Chestnut Hill. These few, and multitudinous others appeared to be enjoying themselves immensely. They should, it cost enough. As for ourselves, we will spend the next few weeks evading our numerous creditors and setting up pins in a local bowling alley in order to recoup our losses. Seriously, though, these various affairs were well-planned, well-attended and socially successful.

Murgatroyd Wilburham Van Slurb, VIII has written a charming little epistle to our Gripe Department lately. It se" s that Murgy, for a slight monetary consideration, had been assured that his girl friend from Copper Creek, Ophelia Ploughhorse, would be selected as Junior Prom Queen. According to the grapevine, all she got was a sip of stagnant punch and a moldy pretzel. All we can say Murgy dear, is: "Ain't it a shame!"

There are rumors circulating hereabouts that there is a paper shortage. Judging by the rapid rate that the election posters were being torn down by parties unknown, the situation must be acute. Let's all help out the paper conservation drive and contribute old worn-out dollar bills and matric cards to help ease the lack of pulp. By the way, have you noticed the new "No Thoroughfare" signs in Good Counsel Hall? Truly artistic masterpieces!

The Turf and Tinsel Club will present its annual shindig at the Field House, starting Friday night and continuing through till Monday evening. Even though we were battered and bruised in a rescue attempt by eight lifeguards in ridiculous costumes, we are nevertheless going to attend every performance. We have to, we're in the show. Really though, the show is good, and each and everyone of you will get a bellyful of laughs. Don't miss it.

In conclusion, we would like to say nothing. Cheerio!

P.S.: Larry Gallen and Margie Hogan, Skip Keenley and Ro Ginther, and Dave Rothman — these people we also noticed at the various Hoe Downs last week. (O.K. Skip?)

Bussolari Club Members Hear World Affairs Discussions

Paul Hoffmann, of the E.C.A., spoke on "The Dollar Gap in Europe and Asia" before a luncheon at the Bellevue Stratford recently. The National Association of Manufacturers and the World Affairs Council of Philadelphia sponsored the affair which Leroy Kendall and Roger Hanafin attended as representatives from Villanova.

At Bryn Mawr College, a World Affairs Council meeting was held with Porter McKeever, a U.N. delegate, who spoke on American foreign policy in the far east, western and eastern Europe, Russia and South America. A series of round-table discussions were held afterwards. Joe Tyszkiewicz, Charles Butler, Roger Hanafin and Ed McClancy attended from the Bussolari Society of Villanova.

Thursday was taken up with elections and the track and field day with the evening devoted possibly to study.

Blue Barron amidst a beautiful Southern setting played for the Prom on Friday. A crowd of twelve hundred was on hand to witness the crowning of Miss Anne Touey as Prom Queen.

The Dinner-Dance at the Ben Franklin was the culmination of the week as the class marked the completion of three years at Villanova.

NROTC To Celebrate Armed Forces Day At Barry Hall

Villanova's unit of the NROTC will hold its annual Spring Review on Armed Forces Day, Saturday, May 20th. The day will be marked by drill competition, presentation of awards, display of the equipment in Barry Hall and inspection of the battalion formation.

Drill competition between the three companies will probably decide the winner of the company competition award. To the Company Commander of the winning company Miss Margaret Duffy, chosen "Miss NROTC" at the Annual Spring Ball, will present the colors. Rifle, pistol and swimming trials up to this time have put Company C in the lead, but only by a small margin.

The general public is invited to witness this competition and review and also to tour the Naval Science Building. The modern electronic equipment, including radar, guns and other training aids will be in operation Midshipmen. On display in the Armory will be numerous types of bombs, shells, torpedoes, depth charges and other weapons. There will be a continuous showing of Navy motion picture films.

The judges for the company drill will be Captain Harold R. Stevens, U. S. Navy, Professor of Naval Science, University of Pennsylvania, Lt. Col. Henry S. Taylor, U. S. Air Force, Professor of Air Science, University of Pennsylvania and Major Thomas F. Spencer, U. S. Army Corps of Engineers, from ROTC Drexel Institute of Technology.

Wildcat Mile Relay Wins in 3:22.8; McKenna Takes Quarter, Ross, Mile

Manhattan's track and field powerhouse ran roughshod over the Wildcat cindermen to a tune of 98-42, Saturday. The visitors equalled a 13-year-old track record and put two additions to the record book.

Record Broken

Mercurial Bob Carty aided by a strong wind won the century in the great time of 9.6 to tie the mark of John Maher of Villanova's 1937 track team. Carty managed to win the 220 and broad jump to pace the Jasper's victory. Tom Irish and Joe McCreary folowed the green and white speeldster to the tape in the hundred. The 120 high hurdles saw Manhattan widen the gap as they placed Jim Harrington and Terry O'Brien one, two. Jake Patrick of Villanova ended up a close third.

Harrington Double Winner

Jim Harrington won his second event as he took the 160 low hurdles leading Terry O'Brien of Manhattan and Larry O'Brien of Villanova to the finish stripe. Bob Carty of the New Yorkers turned in another fine performance in winning the 220 in the respectable time of 22.3. Joe Ciancibella and Tom Irish battled it out for second place with Manhattan's Ciancibella winning out.

Close Mile

In a teaming rain George Thompson and Pat Duffy waged a sensational duel in the mile. Manhattan's Duffy managed to nip Thompson by a matter of inches in a 4.27 clocking. The two-mile saw no contest at all as Browning Ross the Wildcat distance star won by over 70 years leaving Bill Lucas and Bob Petch of Manhattan yards behind.

McKenna, Reardon Win

Jim McKenna took the lead in the quarter at the gun and was never headed as he turned in a 49.6 time on the sloppy track. Dean Noll of Manhattan and Bob Cunjac of Villanova staged a photo finish for second with the honors going to Noll.

Jim Reardon dominated the half-mile as he ran his usual steady race. Jim's time of 156.6 was excelelnt despite the bad

Rehak Sets Pace With Wins in Javelin, Shot

The first annual intramural track meet was held last Thursday and its debut was a smashing success. The Freshmen took top team honors by amassing 50 points. Second place went to the Sophs who scored a close 48 points, followed by the Juniors with 22 and the Seniors who racked up but 9.

Individual scoring honors went to big Frank Rehak of the Frosh who won both the shot put and the javelin. Frank heaved the iron ball 41'6" and the spear 138' to score 10 big points.

Soph Relays Win

The sophomore relay teams won both the 440 and 880 relays. The quarter mile team of Joe Till, Nick Liotta, Dick Van de Beryhhe and Joe Rilo won their race in 49 flat. The halm-mile quartet of Till, Van de Berghe, Rilo and Fred Georgi also won in the time of 1:44.5.

Late Blue - White Rally Falls Short

Coach Art Mahan's baseball Wildcats ascended Rose Hill last Saturday afternoon in quest of a victory over the Fordham Rams, only to be thwarted by the five-hit hurling of the home team's Jack Daley. The game was just as close and exciting as the 3-2 score indicates, highlighted by tight pitching and a number of fielding gems by both teams.

Deadlocked

For the first five innings, Villanova's Bob Sexton and Fordham's Daley were hooked up in a scoreless pitcher's duel. The visiting Wildcats drew first blood in this half of the sixth inning when big John Weglechi

Intramural Softball Now In Third Week Of Play

By MONDSCHEIN, INC.

The beginning of Spring brought that old cry of "Play Ball" to the Villanova campus as the Intramural Softball League got underway. Inclement weather and Jhnior week activities have kept down the amount of play thus far, but things should really get into full swing this week. There were a number of games played the past two weeks that showed just a little of the potential strength of teams in the different sections of the league.

In Section I, the Engineers rapped the Oocytes 14-9 as the winners exhibited great power at the bat and good defensive work. Leading the attack was Melconian with 3 hits including a homer and a double. Veith also cracked a four-bagger for the victors. The winning chucker was Ed Linck and the loser was Jim DeLuca.

69'ers Lose

The warriors had to go into an extra inning before they could emerge victorious over the 69'ers, 13-12. The 69'ers rallied for 8 runs in the top half of the seventh to take the lead, but the Warriors knotted the score with a run in the bottom half of the inning. The big man for the Warriors was Niccolo with 3 bingles, one of which drove in the winning tally. For the 69'ers, Weigand and Creedon also collected 3 hits.

The 69'ers were handed their second setback by dropping a 13-9 verdict to the Sweat Sox. A five-run outburst by the Sweat Sox in the fifth inning broke up an 8 to 8 tie and paved the way to victory. Kerabinus collected 3 hits including a round tripper in the Sweat Sox attack. McDermott was the winning hurler.

Braves On Top

Tony Ausso's Alumni Braves and Emil Borgers' Doms took the lead in Section II as they both copped two wins apiece. The Braves slaughtered Bks. III, 16-1 and edged the Barracks Barons 8-7. In the first contest the Braves crossed the plate 12 times in the first inning and coasted in from therein. Bill Scharle pitched a great game as he allowed but two hits. Bks. III scored 6 times in the top of the seventh to notch the score at 7 all, but Bobby Oelz's single with a man on third in Alumni's half of the inning brought the Braves their second victory. Gallin got the decision over Garvey of the Barons.

The Doms showed terrific terrific power at the plate as they trounced Fedigan 22 to 7. The winners rapped out 20 hits with Mueller getting 4 for 4. Fred Heigl was the winning pitcher.

In their other contest, the Doms held off a last inning rally to shade the Alumni Yankees 4 to 3. Morrissey bested Griffin on the mound. Harry Postupack got the big blow of the game, a booming home run. McCoy clubbed in three runs with three singles in four trips at the dish.

Yankees Win

The Yankees got on the winning ways in their next tilt as they conquered the Cavaliers 8-6. Don Griffin tossed the win for the Yanks as he allowed 14 hits but was effective in the clutches. Rugged support by his teammates proved the downfall for Nugent, the losing twirler, who allowed but 8 hits. The Cavaliers lost their third consecutive game when they dropped a 13-8 decision to the Fedigan Fools. J. J. Thompson gained the triumph.

In the only contest played in Section III, the Vets defeated the C&F Wild Geese 6 to 3. The game was featured by a tremendous home run by everybody's All-American Paul Arizin.

Volly Ball

The Championship I. M. Volley Ball Game will take place today at 4 P. M., pitting the strong Faculty squad against an equally powerful Cavaliers outfit.

The Faculty combine was able to cinch a playoff berth by virtue of their two victories last week with the Krowcats being the victime both times. The winners, minus two reghlars—Fr. Dunne and Fr. Purcell—proved much too experienced thus grabbing the important and decisive games.

yards short of the tape was fourth.

In the half John Gillman of the Freshmen put on a kick that brought the crowd to its feet to win the gruelling two lap grind in 2:20.6. Donovan of the Sophs trailed the fleet freshman in. Dick Spence and Bill Brenninghouse hit the tape together for third, and on a coin toss the medal went to Spence.

The quarter-mile relay was won of course by the second-year club. The Juniors who ran with Mal Sutherland, McDonough, George Scanlon and Johnny Geppin were second. The Frosh were third and they ran with Melconian, Denti, Brown and Matton.

Half Same

The results of the half mile relay were the same in order. The Sophs won followed by the Juniors running Sutherland, Scanlon, Geppi and Cooney. The Frosh were third and ran O'Connell, Rehak, Denti and Tibbets. The Senior team was fourth and was made up of Phil Snyder, Dom Pendino, Dave Rothman and Ralph Pasquariello.

Rehak's sensational heave of 41'6" in the shot won that event for him and the Sophs. Second went to the Frosh in the person of Al Shannon who therw 37'7". Till of the Sophs was third and his best effort was a 37'1" toss.

Rehaks 138' spear throw was good enough to give the javelin to the frosh. His teammate Al Shannon again came through with a heave of 130'. Chris Sickler of the Seniors was third.

The Freshmen also added five more points to their pile when Mullen soared 5'4" to win the high jump. The Sophs got in the act too with Bill Cullen doing 5'3" for second. Brown also of the Frosh was third and he cleared the bar 5' 2".

Frosh Takes Broad Jump

The broadjump was also a first year affair. Jake Melconian did 18' 6½" to win his gold medal. Bud Holland of the Sophs was second at 17'11", while classmate Ken Margiotta was a very close third, leaping 17'5".

Juniors Present Medals

Some facts about the meet itself are in order now. It was the first meet held under the direction of the Intramural Committee in recent years. The Junior class sponsored the affair and it is hoped that each Junior class will, in the future, sponsor the meet as part of Junior Week activities. Incidentally the sharp medals awarded were presented by the Juniors.

Mr. Powers, the Intramural director, was the guiding force behind the meet. He was assisted by Pete Simigan and Artie Klepper. Joe McCreary was starter. Joe Deignan, Bob Brick, Bill Curran and Paul Curran were finish judges; while Marty Panczner, Bob O'Neill, Pete D'Alonzo and Paul Becote judged the field events.

Cummin Clancy and Dick Torpey coached and managed the winning Frosh squad. Jimmy Reardon and Jake Patrick were Sophomore prexys. Jim McKenna and Bill Cooney headed the Juniors, and Browning Ross and genial Tony Russo led the Seniors in their losing battle.

weather. Jim Cavanaugh took second for the Jaspers.

Mile Relay

The Villanova mile relay quintet of Jack Holmes, Pete Simigan, Bob Cunjac and Jim McKenna ran a 3:22.8 race to win easily. Pete Simigan ran a fine second leg as he gained 15 yards to give Villanova a 10-yard lead.

Manhattan's victory can be traced to their power in the field events. The discus, broadjump and hammer throw were swept by Manhattan. Bob Ogle won the shot and discus, he threw the 16-lb. ball 52 feet for a new record. Jack Gilchrist won the high jump for Manhattan beating Mart Panzer of the mainliners. Jim Harrington edged out Joe McNulty of Villanova in the pole vault to wind up the meet.

Fordham Edges Cats

led off with a single to center, stole second and went right on down to third as the Fordham backstop threw wildly to second. Daly settled down and retired the next two batters, but Bob Sexton gave himeslf a one-run lead with a mighty triple. The Wildcats hurler blasted one high and far over the right fielder's head, Weglichi scoring easily from third. Benny Moskal followed with sharp rap to third, but Sexton was tagged out coming down the line, and the score stood temporarily at 1-0.

Fordham did all their scoring in the bottom half of the seventh inning. A lead-off single and a free pass put runners on first and second. An attempted sacrifice down the third base line rolled crazily along the muddy basepath, stayed fair and went for a base filling single. A passed ball on the next pitch tied the score, and, with the infield drawn in, a smash past third sent two more runners across the plate. John Morris pulled Sexton out of a hole with a beautiful throw to Jones at second, preventing the runner from stretching his base-hit into a double.

Cats Come Back

The Wildcats came back with claws bared in the eight but the rally fell short. Hartmett, batting for Frinze, reached first on an error. Bellace hit for Sexton and was safe as Fordham's infield failed to get either end of a double play. Moskal bunted foul twice, then hit into snappy double play, third to second to first.

A council member will have the power to levy a small fine (not to exceed $1) on any student for infractions of such rules as chow-line bucking, cutting across lawns, etc. The article was added to answer the age-old need for teeth in the rules which particularly concern student relations.

These measures are part of a rebuilding program on the part of the Student Council which will make it a truly representative group.

DeltaPi To Hold Elections For Next Year's Officers

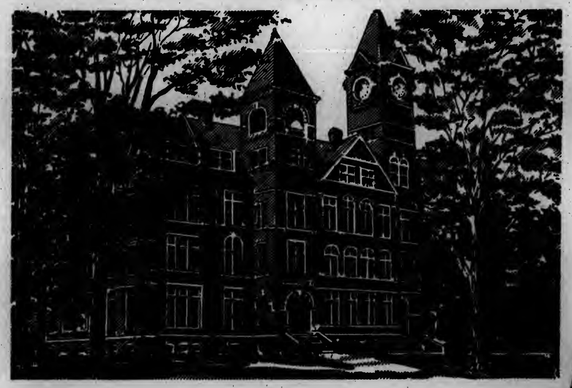
President John Weglicki of Delta Pi Epsilon, the Commerce and Finance fraternity, presided at the regular monthly meeting of the group last Thursday evening in room 215 Mendel.

The president announced that as soon as nominations for the various offices in the frat are approved, a special meeting will be called in order to go through the process of elections.

Two new committees were formed, one to compile a file of alumni members of the group in order to provide a stronger background for the members. The other committee is to delve into the past, and write a history of the fraternity to augment the D.P.E. archives.

The annual Delta Pi Epsilon Mass for deceased members of the brotherhood, and for the intentions of the brothers will be celebrated May 11th. in the college Chapel by Rev. William Gordon, O.S.A., moderator, at 12 noon.

Since its post-war revival, the fraternity has progressed rapidly. A "Big Brother" system for pledging was inaugurated along with a complete Pledge Manual for the general information of prospective members. A new and flexible constitution has been ratified by the brothers to facilitate the handling of all meetings of the group. Two new fraternity songs have been written, and, along the same vein, the Fraternity Mug tradition has been instituted recently. The annual Mass is a recent addition to the group's yearly activities.



Notices concerning the special election meeting will be posted in the near future.

The Library Corner . . .

It was easy to tell that all the works entered in the Library's current art contest were good, but it proved to be a difficult task for the three judges of the contest to decide that the photograph by George Winters and the painting by Shane Creamer were the best and deserved the first-place prizes. If you were over in the Library last Friday afternoon you would have noticed the judges, Father McShea, Father Vrana, and Dr. Quam, pondering for hours over the relative merits of the eleven photographs and seventeen paintings that had been submitted. Admittedly, the choice was a difficult one, but after much consultation and examination of all the works, they agreed on Winters' "Red River Valley", and Creamer's "Winter Scene".

The standards for their judgments were basically the same for both the paintings and the photos, and included evaluations of composition, unity of expression, vitality, and the overall consistency of the context. For the paintings perspective and color consistency were also taken into account, and for the photograph section, lighting and detail played an important part in the judging. The works were judged on a point system, with each of these factors being considered individually.

Honorable Mentions

Chosen for honorable mention in the photographic portion of the contest were the works, "Oh My", submitted by Francis Wegener, and Campbell Anderson's shot of a tugboat at dock. Philip McKay took two of the four honorable mentions in the painting division with his water color, "Notre Dame", and his oil, "High Seas". The other two honorable mentions went to Bill Shilling, a member of the art staff of the VILLANOVAN, for his oil entitled, "Still Life"; and to Edward Lawton for his water color, "Ruined House".

The two winners in this contest will be awarded their prizes at the merit award convocation to be held later in this month. These prizes, five dollar merchandise certificates, were donated by the Photo Shop, 37 East Lancaster Avenue, Ardmore, and the Gordon - Lamberg Camera Shop, 6930 Market Street, Upper Darby.

Shane Creamer, the winner of the painting contest, is a Junior in the Arts school. George Winters, photography winner, is a Senior Accounting major and also a member of the photo staff of this paper. Their winning works, as well as the other entrants in this contest will be on display in the Library for the next few days, in the showcases of the lobby.

"Ten Years" of LIFE

Another exhibit currently being displayed by the Library is the pictorial review of the best pictures that appeared in LIFE magazine during the first ten years of its publication, from 1936 to 1947. Prepared by the editors of the magazine, this display is entitled, "Ten Years", and gives in its review an illustrated account of world and internal affairs during that ten-year period. This is the latest of the series of LIFE exhibits that have been displayed by the Library during the current school year. It will remain on display in the top floor corridor in the Library building for the remainder of this week.

didate; George Keenley, tallied more than twice the number of votes than either of his competitors, John Denuel or Tom Grady.

By another landslide Paul McMenamin tucked away the office of Class secretary into the party fold, defeating John Currie, Edward Glackin, and Paul Henry. The Fair Representatives completed their victory in the executive posts as Richard James edged out James Boyle and Herman Wittig for the office of Treasurer.

The party extended the all-out victory into the selection of Student Council representatives by placing into office John Moran, Arts; James Wright, Education; Dick Spence, Engineering; and Shane Creamer, Arts and Science.

Frank J. Pitocchelli completed this landslide by winning the office of Alumni Representative with a wide margin.

In the vote for Student Council representative, Thomas Delaney received 170 votes, outdistancing opponents McDermott, Gilboy, and Quinn, for the Commerce and Finance School. John Patrick received 306 votes to win as representative from the School of Education, while Carl Koenig polled 232 votes to become representative from the School of Engineering. James Gallagher received the highest total number of votes, 312, to become the Arts and Science School representative.

ley was a runaway choice, having a 195-vote edge. O'Connell coasted in as Treasurer on a 20-vote margin, while Moser made it as representative by 19 votes.

Two hundred and eighty-four members of the class went to the polls, representing a respectable 44% of the 646 eligible Frosh.

Thus, Sollami, an unsuccessful candidate for the Student Council earlier in the year, will be the first to take the reins of the budding Class of 1953.

Moser, the new council representative, will join Steve Hamas and Jim Mooney, the two Frosh already serving on the Council.

New Representatives To Be Welcomed By Council

Seventeen Seniors to Receive Gifts in Recognition of Service to Council

At the final meeting of the year the Student Council will greet the representatives-elect and at that time all Seniors who have served on the Council for at least one year will be presented with a gift.

Those men who will be officially welcomed to the Council by Chairman Brian McLarnon are: Jim Moser, John Moran, James Wright, Dick Spence, Shane Creamer, Thomas Delaney, Carl Koenig, and James Gallagher. Other representatives will be elected this week by the various clubs who have representation. They also will be in attendance.

Seniors to Get Gifts

Seventeen Seniors will receive initialed cuff links in recognition of their service to the Council. It is hoped that this custom will be continued through the years. The presentation will be made by Rev. George McLaughlin, O.S.A., Dean of Student Activities.

Regular business to be disposed of at the final meeting includes the ratification of the new constitutions for the Delta Pi Epsilon fraternity and for the Student Council. In addition to introducing the representatives-elect, McLarnon will present the new honorary members of the Council. These men are the newly elected presidents of the different classes — Joseph F. Rugo, of the Senior, Thomas Pasha of the Junior, and Paul Sollami of the Sophomore.

STAFF HOLDS DINNER DANCE AT BARCLAY

As the final story of this year's VILLANOVAN goes to the press, the staff of the campus weekly will celebrate the finis with a Dinner-Dance at the Barclay Hotel in Philadelphia. An informal affair, it will take place this Saturday evening and will be the last social event of the year.

As one of the highlights of the evening, Rev. John A. Klekotka, O.S.A., moderator of the paper, will award the gold keys to those Seniors who have performed meritorious work on the paper during their years at Villanova. After the editors are introduced their successors will be announced.

Dancing will follow the dinner and speeches, and will last until twelve. The Mirage Room of the Barclay, located in Rittenhouse Square, is one of the most beautiful in the entire city and as such represents one of the most elaborate socials in the history of the VILLANOVAN. Frank Gobes, Managing Editor of the paper was chosen by the Editor-in-chief to be Chairman for the event.

RADIO STATION GOES OFF THE AIR WAVES UNTIL SEPTEMBER

Radio station WVIL, the voice of Villanova College, wound up its third consecutive year of broadcasting last Friday evening. The station thus closed its second year activities on its present site, the rear of the Barber Shop building. Founded in 1947, the station operated from a linen closet in Austin Hall during its first year. It was a greatly improved, expanded unit that began broadcasting from the present location last September.

Gave Varied Programs

Over fifty announcers and engineers composed the staff of the station this school year. Presenting a variety of programs that ranged from sports and music shows each night to special productions, the station met with wide popularity on campus this year.

Highlights of the year were the several dramatic productions that were presented. Written by students, and produced, directed and acted by Villanova men and Rosemont women, the shows proved highly successful.

Five Day Broadcast Week

The station was on the air weekly, Monday through Friday evenings during the past year. Several special presentations, such as the Christmas program, joined with the periodic dramatic productions to make each listening night an enjoyable one.

The Martin McLaughlin Memorial Medal for the most Merit Awards attained in four years will be presented to Seniors, beginning in 1952.

Belle Air For '50 Out Tomorrow

Tomorrow afternoon the 1950 edition of the Belle Air will arrive on campus, and distribution of the book will begin immediately in the Belle Air office in the basement of Mendel Hall. This date is the earliest on which a yearbook has been available for distribution to the student body in recent years.

Editor's Thanks

Many changes and additions to the book have been made in order to present a more modern and attractive format. New layout techniques and distinctive art work have been used, and contribute greatly to the overall effect of the yearbook. Much of the credit for the fine book and the early delivery date belongs to Paul B. York, retiring Editor-in-chief of the Belle Air. In a statement to this paper, Editor York said that he would like to thank publicly all those who were in any way repsonsible for the publication of the Belle Air. He especially wants to express his thanks to the Moderators, Fathers Falvey and Sullivan, to Mr. Solari and Mr. Cooke, of Campus Publishing Company, and to Miss Anne McCarthy and

Record TNT Crowd Rocks Field House With Applause For Gay Nineties Hit

By Jim Gallagher

"Gee, I'll say." I'll say that the rafters of the Field House are still echoing this morning with the laughter and applause that acclaimed "Piper-Heidsieck '98" as the latest and greatest production of the urf and Tinsel Club. During its four-night run last weekend this show proved to be two and three-quarter hours of laughter and melody, and worth every minute of it.

It presented an unbeatable combination of original songs; a subtle, yet good-natured blast at Main Line society; and a cast of Villanova gentlemen attired quite realistically as chorus dancers, can-can girls and bathing beauties of eighteen-ninety vintage.

The dancing chorus shown above was one of the hits of the Piper Heidsieck, '98 show which closed last night after a four day run.

The comedy centered around Mrs. Murphey, originally of the Brooklyn Murphey's, a character played by Jack Kelly to the last broad "a" of her affected Main Line drawl. Joe Dugan, as Mr. Murphey, the other half of this Jiggs-and-Maggie combination, was the man who inherits the fortune with which his wife hopes to crash society in "that new, fancy place, the Main Line." But despite her money, Mrs. M. finds she just isn't the type to step right into "A Listing in Who's Who".

As a last resort, she connives a plan of marrying her son, Jim Clarkin, to nobility, the amazonian Countess Gavotsky (who is really Bob Resnick in colorful disguise). But true love in the form of Herb Matthews, Mrs. Murphey's social secretary, enters into the picture to thwart her plans. This is but a minor complication, since a jewel theft shows Countess Gavotsky to be as phony as Mrs. Murphey's pretensions, and the petite secretary turns out to be the real royalty.

Summer Sense . . .

By this time in the month of May the entire campus seems to be aware of the proximity of the days of judgement. No matter how earnestly we wish that the time were further off, before we have much time to think about how horrible the whole arramgement is, that day will pass in a fleeting moment and become buried by more pleasant memories. In three weeks the college will close another year of work and the majority of us will look forward to new or at least different endeavors for the summer vacation.

It is more than a slight temptation for most of us to take books, pens, paper, — anything that might remind us of study, and lock them in an old trunk in the attic and forget about the whole nasty business. However we feel that you ought to try to avoid yielding to this temptation. Make no mistake about it because it is mighty easy to fall into the habit of taking things easy.

The summer may be a time when you get out in the sun more; a time when you build up flabby biceps; or it may be a time when you get a chance to work or to travel; but certainly it is not a time to let our intellects develop lazy habits. When could we find more opportune moments to do the reading or reviewing that never seems to fit into schedules at college? Yet our extra-curricular education need not be confined to books or to the indoors. It may manifest itself in the form of work, travel or hobbies.

No matter what form of enterprise we find ourselves taking up we should remember to apply all that we have learned in college to what we do. For it is the functional value of knowledge that determines its worth.

Though many work during the summer, this should not alone be offered as some sort of acromplishment for the time spent. Even work should be accepted as a means to widen our scope of knowledge.

If you are fortunate enough to travel, as many will this summer, don't be like the rather untutored gentleman who returned to his home in the Bronx from a tour of the western United States and remarked, "It was okay, but I'd take New York anyday." Travel is reputed to be one of the best ways to develop a more interesting personality. But then the traveler sees only as much as he wants.

For those who, due to the scarcity of work this summer, will spend their time at the shore or in the mountains or even at home, we offer this advice: Don't let the entire summer slip by on you. When things like exams and teachers don't threaten it is easy enough to do just as you please. There is a wealth of money in those three months, and though we grant that it may be not easy digging you never regret it.

The type of life you lead in the summer is very likely the type of routine that you will work yourself into after college. If you waste all your spare moments now in idle pursuits do you expect to suddenly change upon graduation? Develop good habits now while young. It is the plugger, the fellow that does the extra work, or even the regular work extra-well who makes good.

But although to what you will do this summer. You can make it enjoyable and profitable. At least you will be happier in the end if you make it worthwhile.

What is wrong with Catholic college graduates? Why is it that you can find some Catholic lawyers as crooked as the worst, and Catholic business men who don't hesitate to sell ideals for shiny green? Why aren't they the exceptions that their religious training should inevitably make them?

Another Reason

One obvious answer is that they don't appreciate the obligation which a higher education in a catholic college entails. Perhaps another factor might be the fact that all through that college education when they were supposedly being developed into "whole men" very few of them ever actually took the time to clarify for themselves just what were their aims. They went through their courses one after the other with a vague idea that they should always remain good Catholics, that they shouldn't get in the habit of missing Mass, etc. But they never actually stopped to classify the values which they attached to their various purposes.

Solve Now's Problems Now

In view of this it is hardly other than one might expect to see that very often the immediate and pressing problem of money and material sways them over the more important but also more vague principles which they hold for morality. For material things demand attention, and the man who does not evaluate them carefully and accurately as they come along finds himself going hungry very soon, or at best falling short of his aims. The spiritual, on the other hand, is a thing which calls for attention, but, when attention is denied it, does nothing immediate or drastic.

And Pay Later

This is no excuse, however for an intelligent Catholic who knows full well, although he might choose to overlook it, that in the long run the scales of justice must balance, and the debt to God must be paid. And it is indeed no creditable reflection on the man whose whole education has been slanted towards the true values of the spiritual, that he allows himself to forget that eternity is forever, that he can choose transient substance at the price of eternal reality.

MAYTIME

By Bill Breninghouse

The grass is green, the birds are tweetling, twittling in the blossoming trees, the sun is shining warmly and Oscar Twomp has a class in Elements of Early Egyptian Hieroglyphic. There is nothing Oscar would rather do than listen to a lecture on Elements Etc, nothing that is, except cut it. Alas and alack, his cuts are full up, and he must suffer through it all.

If modern educators would only realize the small volume of work accomplished in the waning weeks of the academic year, classes would end in January. May is a beautiful month, too beautiful to spend in classrooms. Oscar advocates nothing but field trips for these last weeks. Lakes, rivers, picnic grounds, and shady groves make much better places for meditation than a stuffy classroom. Classes in botany could hold a lab in the middle of a rhododendron patch while engineers could prance around an old covered bridge. English students would find stimulation in seeking bits of literary art in country graveyards. C&F men would be happy watching dandelions multiply. Yes classes in May could be very enjoyable.

Becomes Maniac

To Oscar this Maytime class idea became a mania, and he finally convinced his doubting Marblerolling professor that they could best pursue the study and recognition of Marbles out under the canopy of the sky. So with hearts singing and eyes sagging the class took off for the greensward. Professor Scruggly agreed with Oscar that this was the only way to have a class. They had just set up their marble rolling table when the skies darkened and the unsuspecting students were most violently precipatated upon.

Fails Flat

This setback did not dampen Oscar's spirits although it did an awful job on his tweed jacket and white bucks. As soon as the little old sun peeked from behind a feathery cloud he twinkletoed down the meadow, slipped on some unknown something and fell flat on his face. Recovering from this fall, Oscar rose with dignity and tripped over to a gurgling, bubbling brook. When he pulled himself out of the brook, he ran back to the marble rolling table to continue his studies. The class was now experimenting with the possibility of a six marble collision with the eight ball in the side pocket. This was too much for Oscar so he once again embled into the woods scratching his poison ivy as he walked. He was startled as he saw a strange black animal with a white stripe down its back. So was the poor little animal. It was awful. Oscar hasn't been able to go to Marble-rolling Class since.

Spring is wonderful and May is too. Oscar doesn't know what he's doing these days. Rambling on and on and on is a disease he can't escape. Just a few more days and he'll be able to enjoy the weather for a couple of weeks before the summer grind starts. Oh well . . . .

Quickies . . .

By Joe John

A big problem arose last week with regard to the attempt of the railroad brother hood to "feather bed" the payrolls with extra men in the jobs of engineer and fireman. From the Rail Road point of view it was difficult to say what loco-motive drove the union on. For a case involving feathers very few concerned were tickled. The union men were evidently well trained. It steamed that they didn't know when to give up. One PRR representative was quoted as saying, "Diesel be the end of me yet."

Beach fashions have hit the spring headlines, and from the look of them military men have invaded the designing business. (Only the strategic spots are covered.) On the other hand we may be wrong, because tacticians don't very often leave their backs exposed.

We red last week where a Mosinee took a day of Communism. The optimists of the Comintern local got all stirred up when the population of the town suddenly tripled, but the heads were just as red as ever.

The mob scene in Kansas City hit the headlines again with the federal investigation of the murder of a couple of the big timers Chas. Binagio and Chas. Gargotta. With this Kansas City has changed its theme song from "I'm just wild about Harry" to "I'm just wild . . . . "

A recent Villanovan back from a news gathering tour said that that he felt odd using money when he stopped in K. C. Seem the fad out there is to use poker chips. That explains why your better off there if you have the blues.

Thursday is Ascension Thursday, a Holy Day of Obligation. Masses in the Chapel will be the same as on Sunday: 6, 6:45; 7:30; 8:20; 9, and 12 o'clock.

Confessions will be heard Wednesday evening from six to six thirty o'clock.

SYNCOPATTER

By Mayer and Taten

Seems that we have talent on the campus. Jack Roland, brother of one of the Sophs, plays very pretty piano with the Dave Appell Trio, recorders of "Sugar Baby". Perhaps we can get the boys out here some time, it would probably be a vast improvement over Blue Barron. The Gibbons boys tell me that they were forced to fumigate the field house next morning.

Woody Herman

Those of you watching Ed Sullivan's show on TV Sunday night certainly got an earful, only the best talent in the land. Woody Herman has long been one of the driving forces behind music in the modern vein, jazz. Not quite so radical as Kenton, he has achieved one of the most difficult of musical feats.

Consistently presenting the best in jazz he first caught the ear of a large proportion of the public with such memorable tunes as "Amen" and "Golden Wedding". Keeping up with the times the maestro has lately recorded some more worthy efforts, "Summer Sequence" and "Rhapsody in Wood".

More Talent

This isn't so surprising when we review the men who have been associated with Woody over the years. Chubby Jackson and Shelley Manne were members of the driving rhythm section. On the more melodious end we have Bill Harris, possibly the best trombone available,; Flip Phillips, dynamic tenor sax man; Buddy Childers, a master of the high windy trumpet and of course Woody on his clarinet. Typical of the top arrangers who have written the book for the band is Ralph Burns, one of the foremost men in his field today. Take good jazz, combine with the vocal abilities of one Woodrow Wilson Herman and add the personality of a really nice guy and you get one of the best.

Thank you Bruce. I tried to get the editor to go along with Bill Breninghouse on his Nothing Week and forget about this edition but no soap, so here goes nothing.

Trend

In the way of new platters, have you heard Tommy Dorsey's instrumental of "Coming Through the Rye"? I'd say it is one of the best things T. D. has waxed in years. Arranged by one of Glen Miller's old staff, it has the solid Dorsey beat plus the type of brass and reed work that made the Miller music so popular. Could be a trend and a good one at that.

Did you know that Dave Rose's original number "Gay Spirit", which incidently is used on several record programs as theme music, is note for note "Holiday for Strings" backwards. Talk about economy. Just how much can you get out of one song?

Oldies

Have you ever noticed how certain perennial favorites seem to revive every now and then and become popular all over again? Sometimes it can be attributed to the season as in the case of "White Christmas", "Easter Parade," and the revival over the past month of "April in Paris" and "I Remember April" a couple of numbers that I could take all year around. On the other hand "Bewitched" seems to have come up from nowhere for no apparent reason except that it is a great tune.

Sense And Nonsense

By Tom Pasha

This week the writer thought that it would be most appropriate to devote this space to that long awaited period of relaxation, summer vacation. Yes, after months of grueling study, beer drinking, and social climbing, the season of unrestricted recreation looms in the immediate future with only two weeks remaining in which the industrious students of this fair institution can display their academic abilities. Taking these few facts into consideration, the men now matriculating at Villyknowva are giving much thought to the activities which will occupy their minds, time, and wallets this summer. In planning the balmy-weather days, many things must be taken into consideration, these run into various catagories and, at times, develop into numerous complications.

About this time every year, one finds his roommate exhuming the picture of the girl he left behind last September. This, in itself, can develop into a conglamoration of confusion because of events which have taken place in the absence of the high-school lover.

The girl by this time has probably found someone much more interesting, far more understanding, more culturally superior, and, without a doubt, more financially stable than her former suitor who is nothing but a broken-down college man endeavoring to gain knowledge sufficient enough to enable him to make an enormous amount of lucre when he graduates. Of course, having scrutinized these facts, the young lady in question has decided that it is much better to have a man with some means of employment who will insure her of domestic tranquility and financial security than to take a chance on a future engineer or society reporter. Roomy, therefore is apparently out of luck.

Another aspect of summer planning which must be given some recognition is the one which involves the little fem whose acquaintance was made at one of the local tea sessions. This little gal has probably invited her boy up to her palatial country estate for the summer with the guarantee that a boat, Cadillac, and swimming pool are available for his own private comfort. This is definitely the most promising offer received and will probably get the most attention.

Around The Town

By F. A. VARALLO

Dick Powell and June Allyson, husband and wife in real life, certainly prove that they are a good team on the screen, too, as they turn in fine performances in "The Reformer and the Redhead", bright new comedy at the Randolph.

Dick plays a progressive young lawyer candidate for mayor on a "reform" ticket; June is the talkative, hot-tempered red-headed daughter of the local zoo keeper who has recently been ousted from his position. Especially fond of all kinds of animals, June lets goats, monkeys, and lions run loose all over the place. In a hilarious climax, Dick mistakes Caesar, a vicious lion, for Herman, the tame lion, who wouldn't hurt a fly.

Political Victory

In a romantic vein, the plot which brings Dick and June together concerns her efforts to get him to bring about her father's reinstatement as the zoo keeper. Dick is able to do this, and meanwhile becomes really sincere about his campaign reforms. In fact, he becomes so strong for reform and so honest that he even exposes his crooked political backers on a Chamber of Commerce broadcast. Dick's zeal and oratory wins not only the election, but June as well.

Superb in supporting roles are David Wayne who plays Powell's law partner and campaign manager; Marvin Kaplan, as the very funny office boy; Ray Collins, and Robert Keith.

Gay and witty, "The Reformer and the Redhead" is one of the best pictures of the month.

"Under My Skin"

This action-packed film at the Fox is based on Ernest Hemingway's short story, "My Old Man", about a crooked jockey and his adoring son. John Garfield is cast in the role of the jockey; Orley Lindgren, a blood youngster plays his son. Micheline Prelle, newest Hollywood personality, makes an auspicious screen debut.

At the Post

All of the action takes place at exciting European race tracks. Having been barred from American tracks because of his unscrupulous deals, Garfield continues throwing races in Europe. Although most of the people he has double crossed have taken no revenge on him, Luther Adler, a powerful racketeer, doesn't intend to let him go so easily. He demands that Garfield lose the 'Grand Prix' race on purpose, so that he has a chance to win a pile of money. Adler warns Garfield that he will kill him if his horse comes in first. But John is riding his son's horse in the race and, not wanting to destroy his son's faith, he decides not to go along with the "fix".

In the final scene, Garfield rides to glory, wins the race and his limp-dead body is carried off the track — Adler's words had been no idle threat!

Strange as it may seem the better half of this column, the Keats half, has come to the end of the line (it says here). This, therefore, is the last of our endeavors for Villanova's lowest paying weekly. We could go on for days concerning the mental attitude of the prospective graduate but since nostalgia fills a great part of our daily lives we would like to retrospect a bit.

There are many things that have happened during 17 semesters, or four years at Villanova. Names and events come to mind that were important at the time and have since been buried deep in the past. The numerous dances, parties, ball games, and yes, even exams.

Many changes have been made in the last four years, many bad, some good. In '47 WVIL opened its studio in a closet on the second floor of Austin Hall. Before that the barracks were erected to provide education's counterpart to Shanty Town. Even the Villanovan was given new quarters. These were all good moves, not to mention the transfer of the Pie Shop from its Mendel Hall habitat to its present building. The prices didn't change much but the name was given "class".

On the sports scene the names in the headlines changed, but a few will be remembered. The list of remembered names that affected us most is long and includes Paul Arizin, George Guida, and Browning Ross, our two Olympians; then of course there was Tow-Head-Ned and his Garden Gools; Kentucky; the N.C.A.A. and worst of all Army.

All good things must come and for those of us who are leaving (it says here, again), we can just offer our best to those who will follow. We say look to the future kiddies. There will be other changes and other names. Instead of having just a few do-nothings on the Student Council everyone will be a do-nothing. The coffee urns in the chow hall may someday be cleaned and there will be only three men in room instead of two.

News about former sports editors making the big jump . . . Matt Kearney (also Editor-in-chief) said "I do" with Moira Waldron a week ago Saturday in Trenton Hugh Johnson engaged in January . . . Jim Plunkett well on his way . . . Bill Canino still taking numbers in Vineland.

That seems to be all your Old Timer can think of at the moment so lets be off to graduation. Lots of everything, Keats.

This is Kuhn speaking and since I still have 14 more semesters to go it would be inappropriate for me to indulge in an orgy of nostalgia. So before I return to that chamber of horrors the Villanovan office, I'll give Keats a friendly pat (?) on the back, wave a tear-stained football pool card in farewell, and wish him well in his wallow across the soggy sands of time.

Our hot wire tells us that a certain brand of smokes is sponsoring a contest in Yelta and Ben's Tea and Pinball Room. Chestersmokes took a revealed number of their product, dumped them in a bowl and asks you to guess the number. Valuable prizes (in trade) will be awarded. Oscar Twomp even took time from Nothing Week to venture a guess so you can see the frenzy caused.

Enough of this nonsense. Its spring and my lawyer says I'll soon be sprung. Keats and I therefore, in this our last attempt for the year, leave the Fifth for our readers, for our editors and for the birds.

Accountants Hold Banquet At Wynnemore Inn

The Accolnting Society held its second annual banquet last Wednesday evening at the Wynnemore Inn, in Wynnewood, with more than 100 accounting majors and their guests present. It was easily one of the most successful affairs of the society since its founding, from both a social and entertainment angle.

Howard Hansen, Chartered Accountant with Peat, Marwick, Mitchell and Co., the guest speaker, was introduced by Joseph Dugan, Society president. Mr. Hansen's alk delivered in a light manner, dwelled on some of the more interesting aspects of public accounting work as it applied to the novice.

Arizin and Moderator Honored

Master of Ceremonies Dugan, on behalf of the society, presented gifts to Paul Arizin and Moderator Joseph Linsalata. Paul was commended for his fine scholastic and athletic work, and the credit he brought to Villanova. Mr. Linsalata was thanked for his untiring efforts in behalf of the Society in all its activities.

One of the high points of the evening was an entertainment featuring specialties by Wally Dietrich and Jim Galen. Wally made with the repartee while Jim featured his hilarious reading of the mythical letter from his brother in the Army, in Berks County Dutch dialect.

Other guests were Mr. Thomas Carroll, C. P. A. of Peat Marwick, Mitchell and Co., Mr. Leo Schaefer, Head of the Accounting Department of Villanova, Mr. Harry S. McCaffrey, Faculty, Mr. Edward Jonik, Faculty, Rev. George McLaughlin, O.S.A., Dean of Student Activities, and Mr. Edwin Kaschenback, Faculty.

C. & F. FRAT HOLDS SPRING INITIATIONS DURING WEEK

Delta Pi Epsilon, Commerce and Finance fraternity, is holding Spring initiations for eligible Sophomores this week. The "Hell Days" began Monday and will continue through Thursday evening when "Hell Night" will climax the initiation proceedings.

All pledges, as has been evidenced during the past two days, are required to wear certain "regs". This attire includes, among other things, the traditional straw hat, a pair of spats or leggings, a 12" by 15" sandwich sign, and a two-foot red ribbon bow tie.

The fraternity's annual Mass for deceased members and for the intentions of the brothers was celebrated last Thursday at noon in the College Chapel by the Moderator, Rev. William Gordon, O.S.A. The Holy Sacrifice was well attended and many of the members received Holy Communion.

Elections for the various offices in the society will be held in the near future and will terminate the 1950 program of the fraternity's activities. Notices will be posted shortly indicating the time and place of the special election meeting.

Engineering Frat To Dine And Dance Saturday

Phi Kappa Pi, the engineering fraternity, will hold its annual dinner-dance tomorrow evening at the Bala Country Club. The guest speaker of the evening will be Mr. Victor L. Barr, Director of Engineering at the Roller Bearing Company of America, Trenton, N. J.

Mr. Barr is a Villanova graduate of the class of '34 and majored in Mechanical Engineering. While attending Villanova he was a member of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers for three years and was elected chairman in his Senior year. Mr. Barr's talk will be very informal and promises to be very interesting.

Other guests will include Prof. J. Stanley Morehouse, Dean of Engineering, as well as several other members of the engineering faculty.

Favors and Programs

Michael J. Nowlan, president of the fraternity, has revealed that there will be favors and programs for the girls and there will be presentation of keys to the senior members of the fraternity by Rev. John O'Leary, O.S.A., Moderator. Nowlan will also introduce the new officers who were elected last evening.

Bruno Uberti, chairman of the dinner-dance, committee, who has made all arrangements said that dinner will be served promptly at 7:30 P. M. Gene Valerio has contracted a popular small combo to provide the music for the evening.

Library Assoc. To Meet Here

Rev. D. P. Falvey, O.S.A., Villanova librarian, and Chairman of the College and Reference section of the Pennsylvania Library Association, has announced that there will be an all-day meeting of the Eastern division of this section on Saturday, May 20th. The sessions will be held in the new Villanova College Library.

Walter A. Wright, Service division, University of Pennsylvania library, will be chairman of the Eastern meeting. The general theme will be "Cooperation Among the Libraries of the Area."

The morning session will open with a welcoming address delivered by Very Rev. Francis X. N. McGuire, O.S.A., President of Villanova College, and will include speeches by Miss Lucy Fay, formerly a member of the Columbus University School of Library Service, and Miss Janet Agnew, Librarian of Bryn Mawr College.

During the afternoon the session will be given over to a talk by Miss Eleanor Campion, Director of the Philadelphia Bibliographical Center, who will speak on the services of the Union Library Catolog.

A panel discussion led by Dr. Harriet MacPherson, Dean of the Drexel Institute School of Library Science, will conclude the meeting.

QUEEN OF JUNIOR WEEK

Anne Touey

Alvin Clay, Junior and Accounting major, from Springfield, Pa., was probably the happiest fellow at the Junior Prom. The reason? Al's date, the beauteous eighteen-year old Anne Touey, of Lansdowne, was chosen "Queen of The Junior Prom."

When "MC" Harry Range introduced the four judges — Oscar Neufeld, Blue Barron, Mrs. Philadelphia—1949 (Mrs. Doris Mooney) and Miss Philadelphia—1949 (Miss Betty Schmitt) — there were twelve hopeful girls in the wings of the Field House stage and as many hopeful escorts in the crowd on the floor. But, Anne, who had never before entered a beauty contest, made an auspicious debut in this one. After the twelve contestants had walked before the judges, and three, including Anne, had been called back, she was crowned "Queen of The Junior Prom."

Anne graduated from Notre Dame Catholic Girls' High School, Moylan, Pa., in 1949. Her favorite enterprise in high school was dramatics, and she played the lead in the Senior Play. She is at present a working girl, employed as a stenographer for the Prudential Life Insurance Company in their Philadelphia office.

Wildcat Nine Loses To Rutgers, Loyola; Trackmen Crushed By Army In Duel Meet

RUTGERS SMASHES MAHANMEN; 12-2 FOR 15TH WIN

Scarlet Explodes For 6 Runs in 6th

By W. Jay Kay

The Wildcats of Villanova invaded New Brunswick, N. J. last Wednesday and absorbed a 12-2 shellacking from the Scarlet of Rutgers. Rutgers is almost certain to receive the District II bid for the NCAA playoffs and now boasts a season's record of 15 wins against two defeats.

For the first six innings the 'Cats were very much in the ballgame, trailing 3-2 at that point. Then the roof fell in on Art Mahan's proteges as a combination of four walks, two wild pitches, a hit batsman, two errors and ONE SINGLE produced six runs and assured the Scarlet of their eighth straight triumph. A home run with two on by winning pitcher, Herb Hering, in the next frame was just icing on the cake. Three Wildcat pitchers took the mound in a futile attempt to stem the Rutgers parade of batsmen. John Maroney started for the Wildcats and retired at the end of three innings with a sore shoulder after giving up the first three runs.

Wildcats Fight Back

In the top of the sixth, Tom Jones, Villanova second sacker, led off with a solid single to center and scored the first Wildcat run on Shy Raiken's triple to deep left. Raiken scored on Aigeldinger's fly to left and the Main Liners were within one run of a tie. This situation was quickly changed in the aforementioned sixth. Sexton, who relieved Maroney, suddenly lost his control after pitching fine ball in the fourth and fifth. After Monahan singled and Sabo struck out, Sexton began issuing the free passes that led to his downfall. All the runs were scored after two were out. Gene O'Donnell relieved Sexton with the bases loaded and four

BARRY INVITED TO COLOSSEUM RELAYS AT LOS ANGELES

Villanova's Freshman miler John Joe Barry has been invited to participate in the Colesium Relays on May 19. This relay carnival, held by the University of Southern California, will take place in the huge Colesium in Los Angeles.

This is the second outdoor invitation mile that Barry has been invited to run. The first was the Benjamin Franklin Invitation mile at the Penn Relays at Franklin Field.

In the Franklin Mile, Barry held the lead for the first half but after the three-quarters mark he had been passed by three men. Barry was then forced to drop out of the event which was won by Fred Wilt of the New York A. C.

Blue - White Takes Running Events As Five Records Fall

By Bill Cooney

Villanova's runners completely outclassed Army thinclads, but the Cadets steamrolled the 'Cats in the field events to defeat the Mainliners 91-49. Five meet records and one track record fell in the meet held last Saturday at West Point. Browning Ross set a new track record for the mile in the best individual performance. Jim McKenna set a new meet mark in the 220; while Jimmy Reardon posted a new meet standard in the half. Army men Charles Shira, Don Novak and Sam Luterlak set meet records in the shot, javelin and hammer respectively.

Lowers Duffy's Time

Ross' new mile mark 4:16.6 lowers by two full seconds the 4:18.6 track record set by Paddy Duffy of Manhattan earlier this season. Brownie had a good 15-yard lead over Army's Dick Shea and teammate George Thompson. Ross was also third behind Jim Tompson and Dick Lewandowski in the two-mile which went in 9:38.7.

Jim McKenna lowered his own meet mark of 22.3 to 22 flat in the 220. Tom Irish was second for 3 more Wildcat points, followed by Tandler of Army. McKenna also snagged the quarter in 49.6 for the only double victory of the meet. Jack Holmes and Bob Cunjak tied for second behind McKenna to make the one lap grind a Villanova sweep.

Reardon Clocks New Time

Jimmy Reardon also got in the record act by pacing the pack in the 880 all the way to finish with a 1:55.6 clocking. This mark breaks the 1:56.8 standard which Villanovan Browning Ross set last year. Bill Curran of the 'Cats was a close second to the flying Irishman followed by Crichton of Army.

Tom Irish won the century

'CAT LINKSMEN WHIP DREXEL; FACE RIDER TODAY AT PAOLI

This afternoon at the Chester Valley Country Club, Villanova's undefeated golf team will go after its fifth straight win against the linksmen of Rider College. The matches start at 2:30 P. M.

In their last outing, the 'Cat linksmen shut out Drexel Tech 9 to 0 with John Trayer taking the low medal with a 77. The matches took place in Paoli last Monday as the Villanovans had had little trouble making the clean sweep.

Tomorrow, the three top members of the golf squad, namely, Don Weiland, John Trayer and Gus Murray, leave college competition for an invitational medal play (36 holes) against the better players of the Philadelphia area. This will take place at the Old York Road Country Club.

WILDCATS LOSE TO LOYOLA 9-6 AFTER LEADING BY SIX RUNS

Jones and Raiken Lead Nine Hit Attack

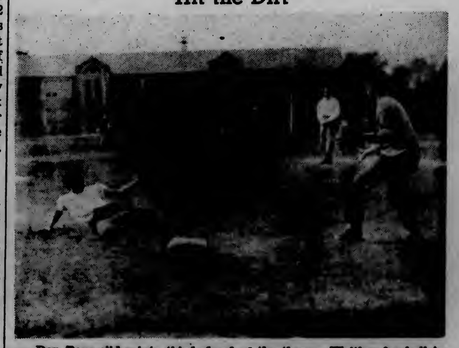
By George Scanlon

The Villanova Wildcat nine was handed its sixth defeat by Loyola at Baltimore, Saturday afternoon by a 9-6 count. Once again it was the Blue and White's pitchers who gave the opposition the ball game by their liberal free passes which have totaled 25 in 2 games.

'Cats Score

The 'Cats started out like a house afire. The first inning began with Charlie Hartnett drawing a walk and Tom Jones tripling him. Shy Raiken followed Jones' example by clouting a triple to center to score Jones and give the 'Cats a 2-0 lead. Jones and Raiken each had 3 hits apiece. Loyola went down in order in the first. Villanova exploded again in the second inning. John Weglicki doubled, Red Wright walked, Sexton sacrificed and Charlie Harnett walked to fill the bases. Hard hitting Tom Jones singled sharply to center to score two runs and the 'Cats increased their lead to 4-0.

Sexton Strong



Bob Sexton held the Greyhounds scoreless through the 4th inning where the main liners scored again Bob Sexton and Charlie Hartnett walked and advanced on a wild pitch. Tom Jones then slashed a single to score both men and the score read 6-0.

'Cats Lose Lead

Going into the last of the fifth with a comfortable 6-run lead Sexton blew up. Two walks and a single produced 2 runs for Loyola to lessen the gap to 6-2. In the sixth Loyola tied the score. The Greyhounds scored 2 runs off of Sexton by taking advantage of free passes. With

Doms, Braves Set Pace In Sec. II; Sweat Sox Lead I

By Mondschein, Inc.

The Intramural Softball League completed another week of play with the Alumni Braves and the Doms still remaining undefeated in Section 2. In Section 1, the Sweat Sox copped two more wins to keep their slate spotless. Mendel and The Vets lead the Section 3, with two wins apiece without a loss.

The Doms under the leedership of Emil Borgers edged the Schenley Aces 7-6, in one of their victories the past week. Although the Doms were able to get only 4 hits off the slants of Lefty Mondschein, they took advantage of the numerous miscues by the Aces to insure the triumph. Fred Heigl tossed the win for the Doms.

In the Doms other win last week, darkness halted festivities after 4 innings of play with the Barracks Barons on the short end of the count 15-10. The Doms rallied for 9 runs in the bottom half of the third inning to put them in a commanding lead that the Barons could not overcome. Regan and McElvoy had two hits each for the losers.

The Alumni Braves made it three in a row in the victory column by topping Fedigan 2-1. The game was a beautiful pitchers' battle between Bill Scharle of Tony Russo's Alumni combine and J. J. Thompson erstwhile twirler for Jack Fox's Fedigan five. Each pitcher allowed but 5 hits. The winners scored the winning tally in the bottom of the fifth inning, when Bobby Oelz doubled and was brought home by Stefanik's long single.

Fedigan bounced back in its next contest to top the Alumni Yankees 9-7 in a game called after 5 innings because of darkness. J. J. Thompson was credited with the triumph. The game was featured by the terrific clouting of Bill Gerold, who hit for the circuit twice.

Don Griffin's Alumni Yankees broke into the victory column by drubbing the Barracks 4 Barons 9 to 5, in another abbreviated contest that was called after 6 rounds because of darkness. Griffin was the winning chucker and was tagged for numerous hits but was aided greatly by some alert defensive play by his infield. Carl Steffan of the Barons led all hitters as he collected three hits. Peterson led alumni with 2 hits.

In Section 3, the Alumni Athletics defeated the C&F Wild Geese 15-11 in a slugfest. Barth of the Wild Geese led the slugging with a hom run, double and single in four trips to the plate.

Medel took over the leadership in Section 3 as they were victrious in the three games that they played during the week. They trounced the Alumni Athletes 9 to 3, edged Bally Shannon 14-12, and soundly massacared Good Counsel 23-7. Oddly enough Manny Rubin was the winning pitcher in all three contests. In the game against Alumni, Joey Billera was the big man for the victors with a homer, double and single in four trips to the plate. Bob Forsyth and Jim Briggs also had two hits, Rubin allowed his opponents seven hits and was aided by some great defensive play by his teammates.

Against Bally Shannon, Mendel piled up an early 9 to 1 lead and staved off late inning rallies by Shannon to come out on the long end. Billera, Grodovich, Prendergast, and Rubin of Mendel chipped in with two hits each. Prather led the loser with 3 bingles while teammates Flahrty, Brydon and Cambell each had 2 bingles.

In other contests played during the course of the week, the Schenley Aces split in two tilts, drubbing the Barracks 3 Cavaliers 10-2 and just falling short in a last inning try 12 to 11 to Fedigan. Fred Heigl notched another win as he pitched the Doms to their fifth consecutive win. The victory came over The Barracks 3 Cavaliers 7-6 in a game shortened by darkness.

The Vavaliers became the Volley Ball Champions as they defeated a game Faculty aggregation in five games. The scores of these games showed the Cavaliers winning the final tilt 15 to 9, the highest score of the five games. The Cavaliers won with scores of 15-11, 14-16, 15-13, 10-15, and 15-9. The members of the winning combine are B. Rigney, R. Roland, C. Carroll, G. Langdon, A. McCready, P. Pirhalla, J. McCarry, and B. Roland.

O'Donnell Wild

Before the side was retired O'Donnell walked 2 men to force in 2 runs which tied the score. The Green and Gray wrapped the ball game up in the seventh frame as a walk, single and a home run by Mike Zedalis made the score 9-6 and the gall game was all over.

Play Georgetown

The 2 and 6 record of the club is due mostly to the weak pitching. Tom Jones, John Morris, Larry Aigeldinger and Shy Raiken have shown fine hitting at the plate. The club will strive to break their run of bad luck against Georgetown tomorrow at Washington.

Bussolari To Plan Regional Programs For NFCCS

Villanova College was chosen to conduct the International Relations Commission of NFCCS at the last meeting of the Board this month. The foreign affairs society on campus, Bussolari, will plan next year's programs for eight Catholic colleges in the Philadelphia area. A member of the club will be chosen Chairman before the concluding meeting of Bussolari on May 16.

The Executive Board is made up of the officers of the individual colleges; the organization's activities consist in planning and sponsoring joint meetings and general conferences.

Announce Three Winners Of Scholarship Competition

The IRC regional organization has drawn up a questionaire of ten questions on current day affairs whose purpose is to provide the organization with a poll that will discover exactly what the average college student knows about current affairs. A diversified group of Villanovans has been selected to fill out 300 of the questionaires. The results will be sent to the State Department.

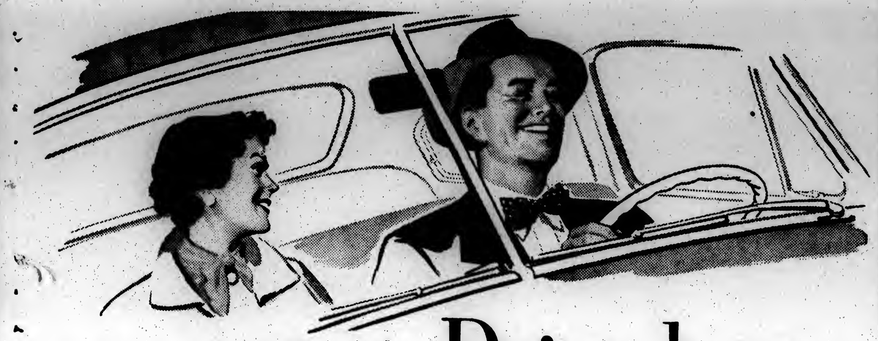
Eight members of Bussolari attended an all-day conference May 12th, at Penn on the subject "Struggle for the Mind of Man". Henry Steele Commager, noted historian, Carl Schorske, Hans Kohn, and Ales Babler, Yugoslavian representative on the Security Council were the principal speakers. Charles Butler, Francis Duffy, Roger Hanafin, Leory Kendall, J. J. Riera, Joe Tsyzkiewicz, Tim Molloy and T. Wright attended.

One New York and two Philadelphia students were awarded scholarships to Villanova College on the basis of the annual competitive scholarship examination, held here this year on Saturday, April 29, the registrar's office announced last week.

Terence F. Cooke, of Glenwood Gardens, Yonkers, New York, and a student at Cardinal Hayes High School in the Bronx, was the Empire State winner. Daniel J. Kerrisk, of 4807 Springfield Avenue, who attends La Salle College High School, and Charles J. Noel, of 812 47th Street, who is a student at West Philadelphia Catholic High School, were the two local recepients of the awards.

The three winners have accepted and intend to enroll at Villanova in the Fall of 1950. As yet their applications are not in and their courses are unknown.

One hundred and fifteen students from 28 schools competed for the three awards presented each year in a competitive test. The schools represented in the examination cover a large part of the East, including Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Connecticut, and Washington, D. C.



Dr. Goulet Plans European Tour

Dr. Alexander Goulet, Professor of Modern Languages at Villanova College, announced late last week that there still remain several openings for Villanova Students on his third annual tour of Europe.

The Professor, who has successfully conducted two previous tours, stated that this will be his first since the war. The tour will embark from New York, in early August, and the tourists may travel abroad by either ship or plane. Consuming what proves to be an interesting forty days, the tour will end in early September.

Any Villanova student interested in going on the tour is advised to contact Dr. Goulet at the Modern Language Office, second floor of Belle Air Hall.

It is requested that anyone knowing the names of Villanova grads who were killed in the First World War turn the same to Mr. William Friel, III, at the Alumni office.

The Library Corner . . .

It is a generally accepted fact that what this country needs is not the proverbial good five-cent cigar, but rather, a better understanding on the part of the people of the workings of their government. To bring this knowledge to the attention of the students of our college, Dr. Harold Hartman, Chairman of the Political Science Department, has prepared an interesting documentary exhibit on that same topic, and is displaying this exhibit in the lobby of the Library building.

Four-Case Display

The various pamphlets, charts, diagrams and newspaper clippings are so arranged that they may be viewed and studied at the convenience of the students from now until the end of the school year. The exhibit comprises the four display cases in the lobby, with each case being devoted to one particular phase of the Exhibit.

Featured in the first case is a large map of the city of Washington, the seat of all the departments treated in the rest of the display. Points of particular interest are indicated on this map, and below it are shown pictures of the city that were taken on the field trip by Dr. Hartman's Political Science class.

Government Review

The other cases are devoted in order to reviews of the legislative, and executive departments, and several regulatory committees. Material contained in them is timely, having only recently been secured by Dr. Hartman especially for this display. This exhibit should be of interest to all students, and is listed as required material for the History majors.

SANCTUARY SOCIETY ELECTS ANTHONY

Annual elections were held by the Sanctuary Society last Tuesday evening in 215 Mendel. The occasion was the final meeting of the year.

Elected to office for the next scholastic year were David Anthony (Jr., Ar.), President, Donald Wilson (Jr., M.E.), Vice-President, and Charles Peters (Jr., M. E.), Secretary.

As a final word Fr. Purcell, moderator, and Ray Raclawski, retiring President, thanked all of the members for the services which they so freely extended this year. The Collegian acolytes did more than just serving at Mass in the Sanctuary, they also played very important roles in the annual Retreat, Cana and Pre-Cana Conferences, and several other functions.

Retiring officers, in addition to Raclawski, are Edward LeBlanc and Paul Tirrell.

Business Students Hear Sales Talks

On last Thursday evening the first program in a series of three in connection with sales as a career was presented at a meeting of Delta Pi Epsilon Fraternity. The three programs have been planned by the Sales Managers' Association of Philadelphia.

The speaker last Thursday was Mr. W. H. Megary, Executive Director of Buttrick & Megary, Placement Consultants. Following Mr. Megary's talk, which was entitled "Requirements for Selling as a Career, and Opportunities in Various Fields", was a question and answer period.

On Tuesday, May 23rd., at 8:00 P. M., in the C&F Auditorium, Mr. M. F. Foeller, Division Manager of American Telephone & Telegraph Co., will speak on "Public Utility Sales."

Mr. O. G. Kennedy, Manager of Eastern Sales Division, of Johnson & Johnson Co., will speak on May 25th at 8:00 P. M. in the C&F Auditorium on "How the Manufacturer Assists the Retailer."

Although these programs are being sponsored by Delta Pi Epsilon, any student interested in the topic to be discussed is invited to attend.

Last Literary Lecture Heard

The last in a series of lectures sponsored by the English Department was given by Rev. John Simons last Tuesday evening, May 9th., in the seminar rooms of the Library. The lectures dealt with the Catholic literary revival in the world today, and in his last talk the lecturer gave specific attention to the movement here in the United States.

Father Simons, a priest in the Philadelphia diocese, is well qualified in this field, being a contributor to America, Commonweal, and as the Assistant Chaplain to the University of Pennsylvania's Newman Club.

The main field in which the revival is most marked is that of poetry, Father Simons stated. Such men as Thomas Merton and Robert Lowell have done much in their works to further the spirit of Catholicism in the literary field.

TNT Review

"All's well," declares Mr. Murf., because it ents in a wedding, and a healthy slap on his wife's plentiful posterior.

It is hard to criticize "Piper-Heidsleck", for what may have been lacking in the book was overshadowed by the rest of the production. The lavish stage settings and costuming drew applause in themselves. The dance routines showed practice and precision. The seventeen original songs ran from the smooth "For a Moment" to the bright and typically Ninetyish "Who'll Guard the Life of the Lifeguard's Wife." In this latter number the varsity octet gave a performance matched in audience appeal only by John Bauman's encore-drawing redition of "Six Times a Bridesmaid."

In brief, this show had all the sparkle of the champagne for which it was named. To sum it up, I'd like to use the words of the traditional TNT curtain-closer, and agree with the record-setting audiences in saying, "It's sure been nice."

With the graduation of the Senior members of the staff of the VILLANOVAN, several changes will take place in the editorial board of the paper, to become effective with the first edition in the fall semester. The most important of these changes will be the succession of Frank Gobes to the position of Editor-in-Chief, held for the past three semesters by Al Abreu.

The three other posts which will be vacated because of graduation are: Copy Editor, now held by George Szymanski; Feature Editor, which Michael Nowlan is leaving; and Picture Editor, filled for the past year by Dan Haflinger. Harry Range, although he is not graduating this year, has also announced his resignation as Sports Editor.

Abreu to Get B. S.

Al Abreu, the retiring Editor-in-Chief will receive his B.S. in Economics, Accounting major, at the graduation exercises to be held on June 5th. In the second semester of his Junior year succeeded Frank Guzikowski as Editor-in-Chief.

Our new Editor-in-Chief, Frank Gobes, is at present a Junior Arts Student, majoring in English. A four-year man on the staff, he rose through the ranks to Managing Editor at the end of his second year, and will assume the responsibilities of Editor-in-Chief for the two semesters of his Senior year. FINAL EXAMS BEGIN FRIDAY; MAY 26 END ON JUNE 2ND

Announcement of the dates, times, and places of the second semester final examinations has been made by the Dean's office. The first test will be held at 8 A. M. on Friday, May 26th, and the last will take place at 12 Noon on Friday, June 2nd.

As was done for the first semester examinations, the Field House will again be utilized to accommodate many of the larger departmental tests. The C & F auditorium and classrooms in the Commerce and Finance Building, Commodore John Barry Hall, the Chemical Engineering Building, and Mendel Hall will also be in almost constant use during the days of the examinations.

There will be three tests each day — at 8 A. M., 12 Noon, and 3:15 P. M. On Saturday, May 27, only one test will be held. There will be no examinations on Tuesday, May 30, because of the Memorial Day holiday.

Those students who have conflicts in their examination schedules should see Father Boyle as soon as possible to clear up their difficulties.

This is the earliest time in the past four years that the examination schedule has been made available to the student body.

Sympathy is extended to Gerard Fyne, class of 1949 (EE) by the faculty and student body of Villanova College on the death of his father. Mass has been celebrated in the College Chapel for the happy repose of his soul.

Dan J. Haflinger Named Class Valedictorian

Secretary of the Navy, Francis P. Matthews, will receive an honorary degree of Doctor of Letters from Villanova College at the annual graduation exercises to be held June 5th. The cabinet member will be the chief speaker at the ceremonies, and the only dignitary to be presented with an honorary degree at the commencement.

Six hundred and ninety-seven graduates are scheduled to receive their degrees as a climax to the two days of ceremonies that will begin on Sunday morning, June 4th., with the Baccalaureate Mass in the Field House at 10 A. M. The program for Monday, the day of graduation, is scheduled to begin at 11 A. M. when exercises will take place in front of the Library. The awarding of degrees will take place on the patio of the Library building, an innovation added to the ceremonies this year. In the case of rain, the program for the day will be shifted to the Field House.

Secretary Matthews will receive an honorary degree as a part of the ceremonies for which he will be the chief speaker. He has held the position of Secretary of the Navy for one year since his appointment last May after the resignation of Secretary John L. Sullivan. This Navy assignment was the first public office held by the 64-year-old lawyer. Previously he had been a banker, corporation director, and vice-president of radio station WOW in his home state of Nebraska. Secretary Matthews has for many years been a prominent Catholic lay-

A former Supreme Knight in the Knights of Columbus, he was made Papal Chamberlain with Cape and Sword by Pope Pius XII in 1944. The Secretary also holds membership in the Order of St. Gregory, and Knights of the Holy Sepulchre.

According to his listing in a late edition of "Who's Who", Matthews was born in Albion, Neb. in 1887. He was graduated from Creighton University in 1910 with a Bachelor of Arts degree, and one year later received his M. A. from the same

"Hasty Heart" Planned Belle Masque Production

"Hasty Heart" will be the next play to be staged by Belle Masque, next year. Announced by Father William J. Krupa, moderator of Belle Masque and Director of their plays, Father said that the staging of this modern comedy will continue the society's policy of alternating a period, or "costume", play with a modern play. "Hasty Heart" will be the seventh play in the comedy-costume series.

Written shortly after the cessation of hostilities of the last war, "Hasty Heart" first had its success as a Broadway play. At present it is now one of the outstanding pictures in Hollywood's "pictures-are-better" entertainment improvement campaign.

Father Krupa also released this week that Bryn Mawr College has offered a full scholarship for the Bryn Mawr College Summer Theatre to Ted Doyle for his outstanding work with Belle Masque. Ted held starring roles in "Cyrano de Bergerac," "Jacabowsky and the Colonel," and the recent production of "The Knight of the Burning Pestle." Mr. Doyle has accepted the scholarship.

A partial scholarship was also offered to Dick Lauman for his dramatic work at Villanova, most outstanding of which was his title role portraials in last year's Turf and Tinsel production of "Cleo Was A Lady," and in Belle Masque's staging of "Knight of the Burning Pestle" this year.

The Summer Theatre gives scholarships to only eight deserving students in the United States who compete with several

The Library Corner . . .

It is a generally accepted fact that what this country needs is not the proverbial good five-cent cigar, but rather, a better understanding on the part of the people of the workings of their government. To bring this knowledge to the attention of the students of our college, Dr. Harold Hartman, Chairman of the Political Science Department, has prepared an interesting documentary exhibit on that same topic, and is displaying this exhibit in the lobby of the Library building.

Four-Case Display

The various pamphlets, charts, diagrams and newspaper clippings are so arranged that they may be viewed and studied at the convenience of the students from now until the end of the school year. The exhibit comprises the four display cases in the lobby, with each case being devoted to one particular phase of the Exhibit.

Featured in the first case is a large map of the city of Washington, the seat of all the departments treated in the rest of the display. Points of particular interest are indicated on this map, and below it are shown pictures of the city that were taken on the field trip by Dr. Hartman's Political Science class.

Government Review

The other cases are devoted in order to reviews of the legislative, and executive departments, and several regulatory committees. Material contained in them is timely, having only recently been secured by Dr. Hartman especially for this display. This exhibit should be of interest to all students, and is listed as required material for the History majors.

SANCTUARY SOCIETY ELECTS ANTHONY

Annual elections were held by the Sanctuary Society last Tuesday evening in 215 Mendel. The occasion was the final meeting of the year.

Elected to office for the next scholastic year were David Anthony (Jr., Ar.), President, Donald Wilson (Jr., M.E.), Vice-President, and Charles Peters (Jr., M. E.), Secretary.

As a final word Fr. Purcell, moderator, and Ray Raclawski, retiring President, thanked all of the members for the services which they so freely extended this year. The Collegian acolytes did more than just serving at Mass in the Sanctuary, they also played very important roles in the annual Retreat, Cana and Pre-Cana Conferences, and several other functions.

Retiring officers, in addition to Raclawski, are Edward LeBlanc and Paul Tirrell.

Business Students Hear Sales Talks

On last Thursday evening the first program in a series of three in connection with sales as a career was presented at a meeting of Delta Pi Epsilon Fraternity. The three programs have been planned by the Sales Managers' Association of Philadelphia.

The speaker last Thursday was Mr. W. H. Megary, Executive Director of Buttrick & Megary, Placement Consultants. Following Mr. Megary's talk, which was entitled "Requirements for Selling as a Career, and Opportunities in Various Fields", was a question and answer period.

On Tuesday, May 23rd., at 8:00 P. M., in the C&F Auditorium, Mr. M. F. Foeller, Division Manager of American Telephone & Telegraph Co., will speak on "Public Utility Sales."

Mr. O. G. Kennedy, Manager of Eastern Sales Division, of Johnson & Johnson Co., will speak on May 25th at 8:00 P. M. in the C&F Auditorium on "How the Manufacturer Assists the Retailer."

Although these programs are being sponsored by Delta Pi Epsilon, any student interested in the topic to be discussed is invited to attend.

Last Literary Lecture Heard

The last in a series of lectures sponsored by the English Department was given by Rev. John Simons last Tuesday evening, May 9th., in the seminar rooms of the Library. The lectures dealt with the Catholic literary revival in the world today, and in his last talk the lecturer gave specific attention to the movement here in the United States.

Father Simons, a priest in the Philadelphia diocese, is well qualified in this field, being a contributor to America, Commonweal, and as the Assistant Chaplain to the University of Pennsylvania's Newman Club.

The main field in which the revival is most marked is that of poetry, Father Simons stated. Such men as Thomas Merton and Robert Lowell have done much in their works to further the spirit of Catholicism in the literary field.

TNT Review

"All's well," declares Mr. Murf., because it ents in a wedding, and a healthy slap on his wife's plentiful posterior.

It is hard to criticize "Piper-Heidsieck", for what may have been lacking in the book was overshadowed by the rest of the production. The lavish stage settings and costuming drew applause in themselves. The dance routines showed practice and precision. The seventeen original songs ran from the smooth "For a Moment" to the bright and typically Ninetyish "Who'll Guard the Life of the Lifeguard's Wife." In this latter number the varsity octet gave a performance matched in audience appeal only by John Bauman's encore-drawing redition of "Six Times a Bridesmaid."

In brief, this show had all the sparkle of the champagne for which it was named. To sum it up, I'd like to use the words of the traditional TNT curtain-closer, and agree with the record-setting audiences in saying, "It's sure been nice."

More Than 2500 Guests And Graduates To Hear Secretary Of The Navy Matthews

Gallagher Succeeds Abreu As Editor-in-Chief Of Paper

Gallagher, Micallef, Taten, Regan, Gallo and Cooney Take Posts for Coming Year

With the graduation of the Senior members of the staff of the VILLANOVAN, several changes will take place in the editorial board of the paper, to become effective with the first edition in the fall semester. The most important of these changes will be the succession of Frank Gobes to the position of Editor-in-Chief, held for the past three semesters by Al Abreu.

The three other posts which will be vacated because of graduation are: Copy Editor, now held by George Szymanski; Feature Editor, which Michael Nowlan is leaving; and Picture Editor, filled for the past year by Dan Haflinger. Harry Range, although he is not graduating this year, has also announced his resignation as Sports Editor.

Abreu to Get B. S.

Al Abreu, the retiring Editor-in-Chief will receive his B.S. in Economics, Accounting major, at the graduation exercises to be held on June 5th. He has been a member of the staff of this paper since his second year at Villanova, and appointed Managing Editor at the end of his Sophomore year. In the second semester of his Junior year succeeded Frank Guzikowski as Editor-in-Chief.

Our new Editor-in-Chief, Frank Gobes, is at present a Junior Arts Student, majoring in English. A four-year man on the staff, he rose through the ranks to Managing Editor at the end of his second year, and will assume the responsibilities of Editor-in-Chief for the two semesters of his Senior year. Gobes is a regular in the campus NROTC unit, and has had

FIVE STUDENTS TOP MERIT LIST WITH FIVE AWARDS

The annual merit awards were distributed to Villanova students at a special convocation held last Tuesday, May 16, in the Field House. 363 students received 511 awards in a traditional ceremony that dates back to 1934.

The following men received five awards each: Edward LeBlanc, William Miller, Frank Pitocbelli, Raymond Raclawski, and Robert Quinn.

There were special merit certificates distributed to individual students for work in specified lines. R. J. Olds received an award as the most valuable player in intra-mural basketball, while special recognition was accorded Bill Klucsarits and George and Ray Mondschein for their work in promoting intra-mural sports.

William Carroll was honored as the representative of Villanova College in the New York Journal-American oratorical contest held two weeks ago.

A special presentation was given to Bob Whelan for his eighteen years of service at Villanova.

The winners of the library-sponsored contest for paint and camera work were also announced at the convocation. They are Shane Creamer for art and George Winters for photography.

FINAL EXAMS BEGIN FRIDAY; MAY 26 END ON JUNE 2ND

Announcement of the dates, times, and places of the second semester final examinations has been made by the Dean's office. The first test will be held at 8 A. M. on Friday, May 26th, and the last will take place at 12 Noon on Friday, June 2nd.

As was done for the first semester examinations, the Field House will again be utilized to accommodate many of the larger departmental tests. The C & F auditorium and classrooms in the Commerce and Finance Building, Commodore John Barry Hall, the Chemical Engineering Building, and Mendel Hall will also be in almost constant use during the days of the examinations.

There will be three tests each day — at 8 A. M., 12 Noon, and 3:15 P. M. On Saturday, May 27, only one test will be held. There will be no examinations on Tuesday, May 30, because of the Memorial Day holiday.

Those students who have conflicts in their examination schedules should see Father Boyle as soon as possible to clear up their difficulties.

This is the earliest time in the past four years that the examination schedule has been made available to the student body.

Sympathy is extended to Gerard Fyne, class of 1949 (EE) by the faculty and student body of Villanova College on the death of his father. Mass has been celebrated in the College Chapel for the happy repose of his soul.

Dan J. Haflinger Named Class Valedictorian

Secretary of the Navy, Francis P. Matthews, will receive an honorary degree of Doctor of Letters from Villanova College at the annual graduation exercises to be held June 5th. The cabinet member will be the chief speaker at the ceremonies, and the only dignitary to be presented with an honorary degree at the commencement.

Six hundred and ninety-seven graduates are scheduled to receive their degrees as a climax to the two days of ceremonies that will begin on Sunday morning, June 4th., with the Baccalaureate Mass in the Field House at 10 A. M. The program for Monday, the day of graduation, is scheduled to begin at 11 A. M. when exercises will take place in front of the Library. The awarding of degrees will take place on the patio of the Library building, an innovation added to the ceremonies this year. In the case of rain, the program for the day will be shifted to the Field House.

Secretary Matthews will receive an honorary degree as a part of the ceremonies for which he will be the chief speaker. He has held the position of Secretary of the Navy for one year since his appointment last May after the resignation of Secretary John L. Sullivan. This Navy assignment was the first public office held by the 64-year-old lawyer. Previously he had been a banker, corporation director, and vice-president of radio station WOW in his home state of Nebraska. Secretary Matthews has for many years been a prominent Catholic layman, active in such works as Fr. Flanagan's Boys Town in Nebraska, of which he was one of the directors. A former Supreme Knight in the Knights of Columbus, he was made Papal Chamberlain with Cape and Sword by Pope Pius XII in 1944. The Secretary also holds membership in the Order of St. Gregory, and Knights of the Holy Sepulchre.

According to his listing in a late edition of "Who's Who", Matthews was born in Albion, Neb. in 1887. He was graduated from Creighton University in 1910 with a Bachelor of Arts degree, and one year later received his M. A. from the same

"Hasty Heart" will be the next play to be staged by Belle Masque, next year. Announced by Father William J. Krupa, moderator of Belle Masque and Director of their plays, Father said that the staging of this modern comedy will continue the society's policy of alternating a period, or "costume", play with a modern play. "Hasty Heart" will be the seventh play in the comedy-costume series.

Written shortly after the cessation of hostilities of the last war, "Hasty Heart" first had its success as a Broadway play. At present it is now one of the outstanding pictures in Hollywood's "pictures-are-better" entertainment improvement campaign.

Father Krupa also released this week that Bryn Mawr College has offered a full scholarship for the Bryn Mawr College Summer Theatre to Ted Doyle for his outstanding work with Belle Masque. Ted held starring roles in "Cyrano de Bergerac," "Jacabowsky and the Colonel," and the recent production of "The Knight of the Burning Pestle." Mr. Doyle has accepted the scholarship.

By Mayer and Taten

Since this is the end of things for the year and everybody else seems to be looking back, I see no reason why I should fight the trend, especially since the end of this term writes finis to all things Villanovan for yours truly.

It seems no more than a century or two since I started this final year wondering where I would ever dig up enough musical information to pad two semesters worth of columns. Many times there just seemed to be nothing to write about and here and now I would like to ask forgiveness from one and all for offering so much of that aforementioned commodity via the printed word throughout the year.

Good Year, Musically

All in all, it was a good year musically with many fine bands showing up around that metropolis down the road apiece. Artie Shaw, for instance, or that Kenton man with his ever faithful, ever terrific, girl Friday, La Christy. No doubt the biggest thing in music (or shall I say in my favorite kind of music) was the almost complete disappearance of Bop and the final recognition of Dixieland Jazz. Even Philly has gone Dixie with some of the best groups in the business traveling down from New York to spread the joy. Sidney Bechet, Max Kaminsky, and Sid Catlett were all great while in town and you can bet that you'll be hearing them more often from now on.

Now I'll turn you over to my fellow deadline dodger, Bruce Taten, who isn't a bad guy in spite of his radical leanings towards Bop.

Sense And Nonsense

As the last issue of this collegiate tabloid goes to press, the writer is somewhat moved by a touch of nostalgia, ever lingering in the memory of those events which made this school differ in some way from those of previous years. It is with a deep respect for those individuals concerned in the foregoing recollections that this humble journalist devotes this week's col'm.

It is only fitting that some recognition should be given to the former blue-beanied boys, the freshmen who cooperated so wonderfully with the white-capped Orientation Committee. Until they discovered that they controlled the majority and that the members of their persecuted group were much larger in stature than the spindle-legged soph, these men were faithful in keeping the excess trouser material neatly rolled. So much so, in fact, that the cuffs had to be severed due to the constant creasing.

A wholesome bouquet of dandylions to the Sophomore class for their strict enforcement of the Orientation rules and their wonderful presentation of the Cotillion. The members of this crew were the first in the history of this institution to wear their white caps to bed and, of course, sleeping on the bags of leaves which were used to carry out the Autumn theme did give them quite an unusual distinction.

A bundle of social credits should be strewn in the path of the energetic Juniors whose Dixieland prom theme was so cleverly instigated that the patrons of this annual affair made their exits in a cloud of G'night ya all, it sho hayas bin delitetful."

In conclusion, it is most appropriate to extend our hardiest congratulations to those socially and academically fatigued seniors who are venturing forth into the cold, cold world in search of employment or fulfillment of their professional pursuits. It is from these men that we receive the example of mature Catholic manhood, and the encouragement to renew our scholastic endeavors so that some day we too may receive the parchment and cap 'n gown of our Alma Mater.

So long for now, see ya when the leaves begin to turn.

It is requested that anyone knowing the names of Villanova grads who were killed in the First World War turn the same to Mr. William Friel, III, at the Alumni office.

Around The Town

By F. A. VARALLO

Every now and then a film comes along that is crammed with authentic details. "The Big Lift" is one of these. It is the gripping drama of the Western Powers' airlift to war-ravaged, cold and hungry Berliners. George Seaton, writer-director, went to Germany months before the picture was scheduled for production. He wanted to get realism in his script and if we consider the many fascinating incidents and scenes of the picture, we must admit that he was very successful.

Montgomery Clift and Paul Douglas are the only American stars featured in the picture. Except for two German actresses, Cornell Borchers and Bruni Lobel, making their American debut, and O. E. Hasse, an amusing German, spying for the Russians, the cast is non-professional, consisting of actual air-lift men of the Air Force.

Important Lesson

Marty and Paul play a couple of GI's whose job it is to help run the airlift which must deliver coal and food to Berlin daily, in spite of the Russian blockade. Monty falls in love with Cornell, a former Nazi, who almost deceives him into marrying her so that she can join her real lover in America. Paul, who is not so gullible as his friend, is bitter about the "krauts". He learns a few things about democracy from Bruni, a German girl. These incidents serve to convey a moral — the Germans are people, both good and bad. It is a grave error to judge a whole nation on the basis of the actions of a few of its citizens. This is the lesson that Marty and Paul learned.

A realistically exciting film, "The Big Lift" rates a gold star for good entertainment.

"The Outriders"

Here is a treat for horse opera fans. Filmed in Technicolor against a background of beautiful scenry in Knab, Utah, it has all the ingredients of a good Western — Indians, covered wagons, law-abiding citizens and ruthless outlaws.

Wagon Train

The opening scene shows three Confederate soldiers, Joel McCrea, Barry Sullivan and James Whitmore, escaping from a U. S. stockade near the end of the Civil War. Shortly afterwards, they are captured by an infamous band of guerrillas, led by Jeff Corey. They are given the job of posing as "outriders" for a wagon train led by Ramon Navarro, who is escorting lovely Arlene Dahl, as well as a million dollars in gold to the Federal Treasury in St. Louis. At a prearranged spot, they are to ambush the train and steal the gold.

Several scenes are especially exciting—the stampede of ponies, the fierce battle with the Indians and the tragedy on the rain-swollen Arkansas River.

By HEVEY & KEISS

Alas! All good things must come to an end. Therefore, as the Villanova social and educational season nears its close, we have before us the task of composing the epitaph for the '49-50 version of the Fifth. Before we leave these hallowd halls for the vacant doldrums of vacationland, we needs must leave a few words of mischief behind us.

Many eventful events meet the eye while looking back o'er the past school year. Jack Schaffer looking all over Philly for his Junior Prom date, Bob McRoberts falling into the manhole in front of Mendel Hall, Gene Pilot's plaid tie at the formal Belle Aire dinner and Joe Brogan's car at rest in the Wayne Garage. We see many names to be remembered, such as: Arizin, Pasquariello, Tulsa, Louisville, Ned Irish, Ford's (R. I. P.), the Greek's and many others.

On the other hand, as we peer into our crystal ball, we see finals next week, a Sugar Bowl triumph for an undefeated Wildcat grid outfit, All-American selection for several prominent Villanova athletes, a classic series of social events, straight A's for everyone and reinstatement by a repentant N.C.A.A.

Now, as the haze in our crystal ball clears, we return to the present. According to Varsity Magazine, the current trend in collegiate apparel for young men is grey flannel knee-length shorts. We predict that next year, kilts and hair ribbons will replace these simply ravishing morsels of wearing apparel and that all hardy Villanovans who are guilty of sporting them will be put in the deep freeze and shipped to the salt mines of Siberia.

The N.R.O.T.C. embryo mariners will embark for their annual cruise shortly and to them we bequeath our supply of seasickness pills and life preservers. To the Platoon Leaders at Quantico we donate Jack Row's collection of National Geographic magazine copies.

The Turf and Tinsel show last week was a smash hit. Bob Whelan's music was sensational and the whole production is worthy of great praise. Belle Masque also deserves a good pat on the back for their terrific productions this year. "Jacobowsky" and "The Knight of the Burning Pestle" left little to be desired in the field of dramatic entertainment. The crystal ball reveals that both these theatrical organizations will enjoy a gala season come the fall.

After a brief skirmish with finals, most of us will embark for the shores of der fatherland in order to partake of a brief three and a half months of rest. Many will go to work to save up some dinero for Junior Week but there will also be the playboys who will roam the country side in the old man's Rolls Royce and have a jim-dandy time. For all of these, we have but a few words of cheer. "School starts in September."

And now as we have drained the last drop from the final Fifth, this is Murgatroyd Phelps Hevey and Throckmorton Quincy Keiss saying "Au Revoir" to our rummy roomies and "Don't drink, don't drown, don't dine, don't dance." In short, "Have a good time."

Retrospect....

Here is the issue we've been looking for since last October. The last one for the school year of 1949-50, and we can't help feeling that we've been cheated out of several months somewhere along the line. Seems like only last week that we made-up our first dummy sheet. And so it is for almost every senior who suddenly realizes that it's time to hit the road after a fleeting sojourn of four years absorbing an education which prepared him materially and spiritually for the trip ahead.

We'd like to remind the Seniors of the year 1946. It was another year that we had a Railroad strike, the Red Sox played the Cards in the World Series; many of us listened to the radio broadcast (no TV) down at the Field House where more than 150 of us were quartered for a month or so. It was the year of the first big influx of veterans to Villanova. The class was 90% veteran, 10% non-veteran. Paradoxically, it seems long ago and yet the time seems to have gone so fast.

Now, many classes and exams later, we find ourselves on the verge of graduation. Our average age is above the norm for graduating classes due to the intervention of a war which meant the difference between going and not going to college for most of us. At the present stage, experience is our forte. Consider an average stint of two to three years of military service plus four years of college and it all adds up to what should be a mature group of Seniors.

We've seen material changes on campus. Whether we realize it or not; we have witnessed a few of the outstanding pages in Villanova's long history. The opening of one of the finest libraries in the East, a Chemical Engineering building, and a well-appointed Naval Science building has helped develop Villanova from a small college with an enrollment of 1000 to an institution with an enrollment well over 2000. We are seeing the average age of the freshmen classes come down to normal. In other words, we have been fortunate enough to see progress being made in the brief span of four years.

The underclassmen should realize that they are a manifestation of the development of Villanova, enrollment-wise for then they would have a more personal concept of why it is important that they put there best foot forward. They have many of the kicks of college life to look forward to, the ball games, dances and parties. They have the attainment of real maturity to look forward to—intellectually and spiritually.

The newspaper office is the center of information, the hotbed of activity and oftentimes a complete madhouse, but always there have been many laughs and there certainly has been great satisfaction each Tuesday. The newspaper is a weekly record of what the student is thinking and doing. It performed this function years before us and will continue years after. So it is that we publish our last VILLANOVAN for this school year saying goodbye to the Seniors who have come to Page 8 and say hello to the underclass men who will make future front page headlines.

By Jim Griffin

June 5th, Graduation Day. And another group of Catholic graduates will leave school to take their places in the confusion that we call the modern world. But in this confusion they are a group with very distinguishing characteristics. For they are the one whole group of all the others who should be able to rise above the melee and the mob scene, for they have no reason to be confused. They have been educated, and they have been educated over a master pattern laid on the unchangeable basis of moral law. They know the truth, and with the truth they can be free of the dilemma and doubt which pervades the atmosphere of present day thought.

But will they meet the obligations which their education entails? Have other Catholic college men who have gone before them shown themselves as different from the world as their educations were different from the world's? We are not trying now to question the probabilities that they will remain good Catholics as far as the laws of the Church require them to be good Catholics. Rather, we are asking whether or not they will be good Catholic college graduates, whether they will meet the extra obligation which their education imposes and rise to fill the positions in moral leadership which the world needs so badly.

It is disappointing to note the lack of leadership which college graduates at times illustrate. How often do you find Catholic activities being run by active non-college men, while well-trained Catholic college graduates linger in the background unwilling to accept the responsibility or to sacrifice the time which more active participation would require? Or to frame a better question, how many times that you do not notice do the efforts of Catholic action groups fall short of their inherent possibilities because the Catholic college men who should have been pushing them were too indifferent to contribute anything of themselves? And how many times do such efforts find themselves frustrated from the very beginning for a dearth of the talent and ability necessary to make them function?

That such questions can ever be asked is an indictment of the graduates themselves, since they are the only ones upon whom the blame can be fastened. They have the raw material; if they do not deliver the finished product in the form of a contribution to Catholic action, only they may be held responsible.

HAPPY NEW YEAR

By Bill Breninghouse

To tell a Villanovan that the school year is coming to an end would be like telling Tom Dewey that he ought to give up running for anything. Oscar Twomp who is about to embark on his third summer from captivity would rather look at this time of year as a beginning not an end, a time of promise for things to come. He has let some people know what he wishes would happen in the next year. Through much politics and bribing his plans can now be told.

Next year will see the end of the five dollar room reservation fee. In its place will be a ten-dollar deposit which will be unreturnable but will go into a fund to buy something that will be beneficial to the students, like a new company Cadillac. The towing away of parked cars will become a thing of the past. The fall semester will see them blown to bits by hand grenades thrown by student council members. Speaking of the student council that august body will become wealthy by means of fines imposed on chow line buckers and grass cut-acrossers.

The football team, now a member of the Southern Conference, will wow them in New Orleans, San Francisco, and Boston. The powder-blue jerseys of our gridiron stalwarts will sparkle all over the nation but the opponents will find that powder to be gunpowder. Basketball will miss the one and only greatest Paul Arizin but will show themselves capable performers. The team that plays the prelims in the Palestra will realize that they are still in the minor leagues. The track team will continue to break records while the boys from Ireland will be featured in every national sports magazine and eventually in every newspaper and magazine in the nation. Within the baseball team there will be discovered a new Babe Ruth who will clout his way to fame by hitting seven home runs in one inning. It won't be easy.

Belle Masque will miss Ted Doyle but will continue to produce the finest in collegiate drama. Turf and Tinsel will reach a new climax with next year's show. Oscar has the inside word that it will be the funniest thing this side of the NCAA. Most of the other campus groups will continue on in their usual apathetic manner with the radio station and the Villanovan being the exceptions. WVIL will be heard around the world and Stalin will quote some of the analysts who write for this newspaper.

This, our farewell issue, marks the beginning not the end of a new year. Next year will bring the same old dirty Pie Shop and the same mud and the same highway robbery as former years but there is no need to despair. Things could be worse. Happy New Year.

Villanova Graduate

This is the last leg. In two short action-packed weeks the hustle and hum will die, and Villanova will acquire a hushed summer mood, and a sprinkling of reserved nuns to accentuate the quiet which will suddenly take possession. And the Villanovans we know will be scattering in all directions.

This sort of thing happens every year in June, and every year in September the place wakes up again and digs in for another nine busy months. But always there is a new bunch coming up who will have to learn what it is to be a Villanovan; and always there are the best wishes to be extended to the graduating class, who should know what it is to be one, for they have spent four years to learn.

And what is a Villanovan? Is he a rah-rah boy? Is he a book-consuming genius? Is he a "Joe College"? He may be any of the three, or none; at any rate these do not make him a Villanovan. It seems that a Villanovan is a man who has been successfully educated by the college. He is a man with codes, both in the natural and in the supernatural order, and his codes are delicately tuned to the invariants of the moral law; he is a man who can, and does, live by his belief, for he has an intellect that chooses well, and a will that follows his best choice; he is a man equipped to contribute his share to humanity in the natural realms of business and science, to assume confidently his duties in his community and in his country. In short he is a "whole man".

These are high standards, but they are a full reward for the efforts which they demand. And they are a good target to keep trained upon, especially after we have left the influence of Villanova, and need something concrete to help us keep ourselves in line with the standards which will be set for us by the degree we will carry with us.

Yearbook a Hit!

We would like to congratulate the editorial staff of the Belle Air on the publication of one of the most popularly received yearbooks in recent years. The layout and photography was the finest and most attractive we have seen in the past four years. The books was distributed in the basement of Mendel Hall last week but if anyone has not yet received his copy he is urged to do so by applying at the Belle Air office in the basement of Mendel Hall off the E. E. Lab.

Senior Accounting Majors To Take Professional Test

More than sixty Senior accounting majors will take the American Institute of Accountant's Professional Accounting test this week. The test will be proctored by Mr. J. J. Linsalata, Accounting instructor and Accounting Society moderator on an evening which will be announced.

This examination has become recognized in the profession as an indication of an Accounting student's general aptitude for accounting. Basically it is an appraisal test, the four main areas of appraisal being (1) general Mental fitness for accounting, (2) achievement in the principles and practices of accounting, (3) interests, and (4) personal qualities. The exam itself is in three parts with the first part, orientation, taking one hour, the second part, achievement, taking four hours and finally a vocational interest questionaire.

Free of Cost

The burden of cost is being assumed by the Accounting Society in order that the Seniors will have an opportunity to take this exam free of cost. Mr. Linsalata has been named official examiner by the Institute of Accountants and he has decided that one evening should be taken for the test. The results of the testing program are reported to the school with extra charts indicating the relative position of our scores with those of others. The individual may obtain his own score by writing the Testing board.

Belle Masque will holds its final meeting of the year Thursday evening at 7:30 P. M. in the Commerce and Finance Auditorium. Important business will include elections and discussions about next year's productions.

'SHAKESPEARE' TOPIC ARTS FRAT LECTURE

"We like Shakespeare, are in a time of extreme change when the people have great feelings of insecurity. It is that which has brought Shakespeare into the light of the theatre, and into the view of literary critics. Shakespeare is a portal through which we can look back to see the inner workings of the inner mind."

Rev. Robert M. Sullivan, O.S.A., Chairman of the English Department, lectured before the Delta Pi Mu fraternity on the importance of William Shakespeare, last Wednesday evening. Prior to the guest lecturer's introduction eorge Keenley, retiring president, of the fraternity conducted elections for the coming year at which Jack Muratori was chosen by a slim margin.

As it was the final meeting of the organization for the present school year the members in the person of eorge Keenley presented Fr. Bresnahan, fraternity moderator, with a set of cuff links as a token of appreciation for his work with them.

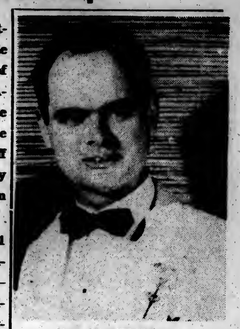
In his lecture Fr. Sullivan stressed the importance of the study of Shakespeare by art students today. He touched upon Shakespeare's towering over others of his period as Marlowe and Johnson. Shakespeare's need for practicality in his work to satisfy Elizabethen audiences gives an insight into the likes and dislikes of the people that made up the audiences of the time.

Before the lecture, in addition to the election of Jack Muratori, Dave Hanlon was chosen Vice-President, Paul Jannuzzo, Treasurer, Bernard Sheran, Recording Secretary, Dan O'Connell, Corresponding Secretary, and Robert McRoberts Student Council Representative.

poor year for jazz and the financial element is extremely important, almost as important as the music. There is always good music around as talent is not so rare as many of the artists would have us believe. Money, however, is rather scarce.

MIDS'PMEN PREPARE THEMSELVES FOR SUMMER CRUISES

This June two groups of N. R. O. T. C. students from Villanova will participate in the annual summer cruises required of all regular members of the program.



The first cruise will be a combined Naval Academy-NROTC operation and will leave from Norfolk, Va. on June 5th. The itinerary will include stops at New England, and Caribbean ports, New York City and Guantanamo Bay Cuba. Disembarkation will be at Norfolk on the 14th of July. The Villanova contingent, sailing on the U. S. S. Missouri and ships of destroyer divisions 101 and 102, will be comprised of 66 men from the sophomore and senior classes. Of this number 37 will be sophomores and 29 seniors. A new procedure is being inaugurated this year whereby 19 seniors will be assigned to Junior Officer billets. These men will perform the regular duties of commissioned officers aboard ship.

The cruise is the major operational training phase of undergraduate naval education. It's main characteristic is "learning by doing". Active midshipmen participation is required in all phases of the training and the cruise is not an academic classroom on board ship. It also provides an opportunity for a general broad education in the field of association with peopleboth foreign and domestic.

The other cruise being participated in by 31 Villanova Midshipmen is the Aviation-Amphibious Training program. This summer course starts on the 24th of June and will be completed on the 5th of August. Pensacola, Florida will be the scene of operations until July 22nd when the midshipmen will be shifted to Little Creek, Virginia. The period at Pensacola will be devoted to a brief basic training program in Aviation incorporating physical fitness, lectures in Aerology, weather, and flight engineering, and actual flying. At Little Creek the emphasis will be placed on actual amphibious operations with the midshipmen participating in realistic invasions from the sea. The invasions will be effected from several types of landing craft and every effort will be made to indoctrinate the men in the various duties required of officers in a successful land-sea invasion.

The summer training phase of the N. R. O. T. C. program is being carried on over two eight week periods during the months of June, July and August. The only differences in the two will be some changes in the itinerary of the Combined cruise.

Ray McWilliams Assumes Yearbook Editorship

Ray MacWilliams

Ray J. MacWilliams, Assistant Editor of the 1950 Belle Air yearbook and a member of the copy staff of The VILLANOVAN, was announced as the editor-in-chief of the 1951 Belle Air at the dinner for the staff of the book, held last Tuesday evening, at the Whitehall in Haverford.

The dinner, an annual affair for the staff of the publication, furnished an opportunity for the Moderators to give deserved praise to the staff of the 1950 Belle Air. Among the guest speakers at the affair were: Rev. F. X. N. McGuire, O.S.A., President of Villanova College; Edward Jonik, editor of the 1940 edition of Belle Air; William T. Ed Krieg served as "MC," and Paul York, editor-in-chief of this year's book delivered a few words.

The 1950 Belle Air made its appearance on campus last Wednesday, and the long lines that immediately formed leading into the Belle Air office in Mendel Hall attested to its excellence.

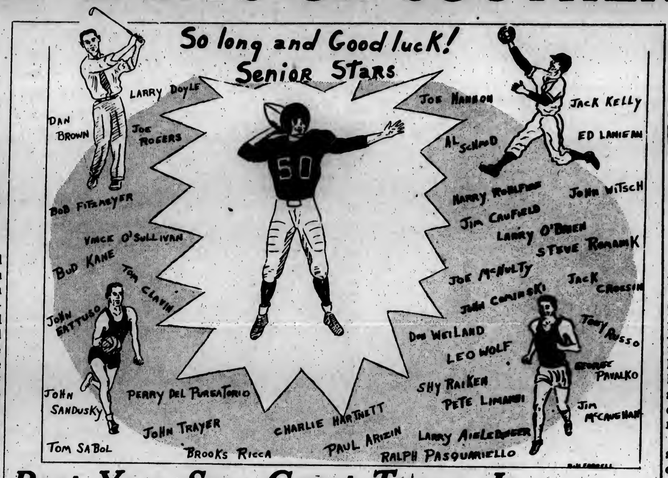
Sexton Scatters 7 Hits Against Hoyas

W. JAY KAY



The victory-starved baseball Wildcats came through with their third triumph of the seson last Wednesday when they edged eorgetown on the latter's field by a 3-1 score. This win avenged an early season setback by the Hoyas. Bob Sexton, sophomore righthander rang up his first victory of the year as he held the Washington crew to seven well-scattered hits. Sexton, whose chief trouble in the past has been lack of control, issued only one free pass and set six Hoyas down swinging. Flynn, his mound opponent struck out five Wildcats and walked the same number.

Big John Weglicki led the attack on Flynn with two singles and a double in four trips to the plate. The lanky first baseman batted in the first run in the first inning, when his single scored Jones, who had walked and advanced on Raiken's hit. He also doubled in the sixth and scored on Frinzi's single for what proved to be the winning run. The 'Cats scored their final run in the seventh when Hartnett and Jones led off with singles, advanced on a sacrifice by Morris, and Hartnett scored on Raiken's long fly. The Hoyas scored their only run in the fifth on two singles and a wild pitch. Only one other Georgetown runner reached second, when Surman doubled with two out in the eighth. Hartnett and Moskal each had two hits apiece off the offerings of Flynn.

Lose to Bolling Air Base

The Wildcats remained in the Capital city for another game with Bolling Air Base's baseball team on Thursday afternoon. The game was called with the airmen batting in the bottom of the fifth because of rain. Since the servicemen had a 2-0 lead at the time, the game goes down as a defeat for the Wildcats. John Maroney started on the mound

Past Year Saw Great Teams In Football, Basketball At Villanova

Fahy, Mondscheins Canino Graduate From Sports Staff

Come graduation day four veteran VILLANOVAN sports writers will be leaving the staff for what they hope will be bigger and better things. These men are four year men Neal Fahy, and Bill Canino and George and Ray Mondschein who have been on the sports staff for three years.

Neal Fahy, also known as Nails and O'Neal, came to Villanova from Fairfield Prep in Connecticut. Besides his work as a sports writer he has been a sportscaster for WVIL since the stations inauguration as well as writing for the Belle Air for the past three years. Nails also did some singing during his stay, performing with the Glee Club and the Turf and Tinsel. He has been best known for his manipulation of the King's English in his sports writing and has come up with such phrases as "casaba

GEORGE SCANLON

The old proverb, "all good things must come to an end," is the swan song of the 1949-1950 sports year. It was one of the greatest sports era in main line annuals, the thrills were countless, the heart breaks few. In an attempt to name some of the great thrills of the season we begin with autumn's great game, football.

Football

Jim Leonard's Wildcats were dynamite, their 8-1 record was one of the best in the country. The Texas Aggies were first blood and the Cats kept it up against highly rated Penn State which was the game of the year, a 27-6 victory led by Steve Romanich and Johnny Geppi. Detroit and Saint Mary's fell beneath the Wildcats claws. Romanick's touchdown pass to Joe Rilo in the dying minutes of the first half in the St. Mary's game was this writer's choice for the pigskin thrill of the year.

Tulsa?!

Ah, yes, the Tulsa game, the score, 21-19, Tulsa on top, this was a real heartbreaker to the hard fighting Blue and White. This game showed the fight and determination of a great Villanova eleven who refused to say quit. Duquesne who had hoped to catch the Cats "down" for their tussle were rolled over by a 20-0 score. This was Pete D'Alonzo's game as he rampaged through the second half along with his team mates.

Seek Revenge

For the seniors the Boston College game was sweet revenge for the previous 3 defeats. Big Ralph Pasquariello was a running nightmare to the Eagles. Final beautiful marvelous score, Cats 28, Bee Cee 14. Georgetown provided the opposition to the winning Leonardmen and fell to a 29-14 decision. The season finale for 12 seniors saw a great comeback in the 45-21 victory over North Carolina State. Everyone got in the act, Rambling Ralph Twidge Frinzi, Joe

Golfers To Face U. of P. In Season Closer Tomorrow

By NEAL FAHY

Villanova's Golf Team goes in quest of its sixth straight victory tomorrow afternoon when the members of the squad square off the University of Pennsylvania's sextet on the latter's home course.

If the locals are successful in this their last match of the season, it will be a fitting climax to an undefeated season. Unfortunately, it seems very unlikely that the 'Cat linksmen would even be considered for the NCAA Tournament.

Last Wednesday, the star mainstay of the team for the last three years, Don Weiland, tied for first place in the Old York Road tournament competing against the best golfers in the Philadelphia area. Don shot a 75 in the morning round and fired a 71 in the afternoon to end up tied with Bill Hyndamen of

TWO RECORDS FALL AS VIOLETS TOP WILDCATS 82-48

Ross Takes Mile; Thompson 2-Mile

By BILL COONEY

New York University's powerful track squad overpowered Villanova's cindermen 82-49 last Saturday afternoon in a meet held in Villanova stadium. The New Yorkers took ten firsts in the fifteen event program to hand the Wildcats their fourth loss in as many starts this season. The meet also marked the end of the dual meets for the current season.

In winning the Violets showed superior power in running events, taking seven of the nine races. Villanova's field squad which has not fared too well this season took three firsts to split that card with N. Y. U. Each squad made a representative showing in all events, and there were no sweeps by either team.

Ross, Thompson Good in Distance

For the losing cause victories were turned in by Browning Ross inthe mile, George Thompson in the two mile, Johnny Furlinger in the broad jump, Marty Pancyner in the high jump and big Ed Coughlin in the discus.

Ross won the mile easily in 4:25.9. Running behind for the first half, he gradually stretched his lead to win by 15 yards. Artie Klepper put on a great stretch drive from fifth to take third behind N. Y. U.'s Bob Grenninger. Thompson also treated the fans to a good show. He ran with the pack until the last lap when he gave his kick which took all the fight out of second place Grenninger. George's time was 9:54.

Furlinger Wins Broad Jump

Johnny Furlinger sailed through the air, 21 feet 3¼ inches to be exact, to win the broad jump. It was a well earned victory for him, because in spite of his great jumping at Army last week he was forced to take fourth. Joe McCreary was second to add more Wildcat points. Marty Ponizner also did a nice days work in the high jump, win-

From The Sidelines . . .

By Harry Range, Sports Editor

We're down to the wire now and in this issue our last as sports editor, there are many things we would like to say and many people to whom we'd like to give the nod. So, lest we use too much grace on a needless introduction we'll get on with the words.

For the past year and a half it was our privilege to be the "Jimmy Powers" of the VILLANOVAN. We sincerely hope that in this time the sports pages have met with the approval of all. Naturally, there have been occasional blasts from individuals but that's to be expected. But we feel that the sports coverage has been complete and interesting to all hands.

We were extremely fortunate to have a top-notch staff that really has the goods when it comes to sports writing and know how. We wish to thank a great bunch of guys to whom the greatest amount of praise must go for a job well done. They were always dependable and have the most necessary asset for writing, talent.

Between selling football pools and the mumps our predecessor, Bill Canino, always had a new idea or good word. We wish to thank Bill and the four other graduating seniors, Neal Fahy, George and Ray Mondschein and Leo McLaughlin for their cooperation. Neal was always good for a new angle or some kind of a contest, Ray and George were indespensable for their work on the sometimes-not-too-glamorous intramurals, and Leo could always be counted on in a pinch.

To the other members of the staff, Bill Cooney, Jim Gallo, Bill Kluczarits, George Scanlon, and cartoonist Bill Farrell we extend a sincere thanks and feel sure that they will do an even better job next year. To our successors, Bill Cooney and Jim Gallo, we wish all the luck in the world.

We also wish to extend our thanks and good wishes to other members of the VILLANOVAN who have helped us for the past three semesters. Our relationship with Editor Al Abreu has always been a pleasant one and we'd like to give Al the praise he well deserves for a terrific job as Editor-in-Chief. Also a nod to the photographers who came through when we needed pictures, especially Al Dallago who was always the number one sports photog.

To our moderator, Father John Klekotka, we extend sincere thanks for his guidance and assistance in making our position pleasant.

Further appreciation goes to our very good friend, Bette Leonardo, of the Long Publishing Company who has pulled us out of a hole on numerous occasions and has been a valuable asset to the paper.

We've also had unlimited cooperation from the athletic powers of the school and to them we say thanks for without them our work would have been far more difficult.

Father McKee, Moderator of Athletics, has been a real friend and his advice and information in countless conferences is truely appreciated A second source of much information and help has been another good friend, Gene Ruane, Publicity Director, who has given far more than his share of cooperation to the sports staff and editor.

Further appreciation is extended to Bill Connolly, Director of Athletics, and Bob Whelen, Athletic Secretary, who both have always given us any help needed. More thanks to Football Coach Jim Leonard, Track Coach Jumbo Elliott, Basketball Coach Al Severance, and Baseball Coach Art Mahan for their fine cooperation.

A special word of thanks and best wishes goes to our good friends, Coaches Bud Kane and Tony Russo of the 150's who are both graduating in June.

To Mr. Powers, the new IM Director, we say thanks and wish him lots of luck on Intramural Sports next year.

There are several personal friends and acquaintances from the various teams that are graduating or hope to graduate this June and to each of them we wish to extend a verbal send-off via the newsprint.

From the football team we say so long to All-East End Dan Brown, Herald-Tribune All-American Tackle John Sandusky, extra point specialist Tom Clavin, and half-back Jim Caufield.

Best wishes to cagers Perry Del Purgatorio, Tom Sabol, Shy Raiken Jack Crossin and John Weglicki who helped to give us so much to write about for the past two seasons.

We also say good by to the great captain of the 150's, Bob Fitzmyer, to Larry O'Brien and Joe McNulty of the track team, and to former catcher Charly O'Malley of the baseball team.

To anyone we may have overlooked we're sorry and we hope you understand that we nevertheless appreciate your cooperation and friendship.

We know that next year will find more great teams at Villanova and we extend our best wishes to our classmates of the class of '51 who will make up the nucleous of another fine sports year for the Wildcats.

Ed Coughlin of football fame wone the discus with a heave of 133'9". Some fans thought he was a decathalon man because he was third in the high jump too, in addition to competing in the javelin, low hurdles and broad jump.

Violets Set Two Marks

N. Y. U. runners also set two new track records. Hugo Maiocco won the quarter in 49.2 to lower Jim McKenna's standard of 49.6 which he established against Manhattan this year. Their mile relay quartet also did 3:21.8 to break the 3:22.3 clocking set by Villanova in the same Manhattan meet.

I-M LEAGUE OVER; PLAY-OFFS WILL BE HELD TOMORROW

Undefeated Warriors Win Section I

MONDSCHEIN, Inc.

The curtain was drawn on the I. M. sports in a climatic fashion as two upsets were registered in the final week of the regularly scheduled I. M. softball league. This is the first in the school's history that students took such keen and extensive interest in I. M. sports, thus bringing about the three section set-up. By virtue of first place ties in Sec. I and III play-offs were necessitated for representation to vie for league titles.

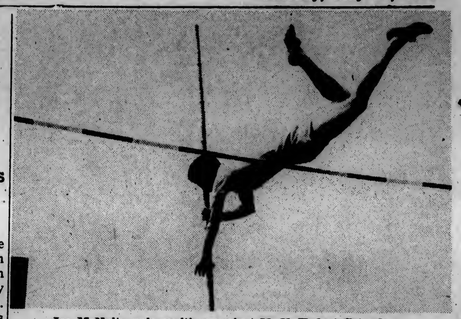
Upsets

The first surprise of the week saw a mild upset featured when the two undefeated Sec. II leaders —the Doms and the Alumni Braves—clashed on Tuesday with the Doms coming out on top 4-2. However the following day the big upset of the I. M. league too kplace when the winless Cavaliers nine threw Sec. II once again into tie by tumbling the Doms 8-7. Actually the Doms are a few percentage points ahead in the league standing since the Alumni Braves have a tie which resulted from a previous game with the Schemly A. C. This game was replayed yesterday and if the Braves win they will play the Doms today to decide the Sec. II league Entry, but if the Braves lose the Doms will automatically be Sec. II representatives. Another tie is featured in Sec. III between Mendel and the Vets and the winner will have been decided by yesterdays play-off. The winner of this game will then meet the Warriors who were the league winners of Sec. I at 5:30 P. M. today.

Championship Tomorrow

The I. M. softball championship will be decided tomorrow when today's winner of the Sec. I and III clash, will face the winner of the Sec. II play-off.

The Doms - Alumni Braves game saw a pitchers battle ensue between Fred Heigl and Bill Scharle and although Scharle held the Doms to five hits they managed to take the 4-2 decision. Alumni only managed to get seven hits, one of them being Bobby Oelz's double which was the only extra base hit of the game.



In the Cavaliers — Doms contest, Phil Brennen was the hero as he hit a round tripper with the score tied at seven all in the last inning to give the Cavaliers their first win of the season. This was the Doms only set-back of league play.

gonfalon" to add color to stories. After graduating Nalls will pursue a journalistic career with Fairchild Publications in New York City.

The dynamic mite from Vineland, New Jersey, Bill Canino, has been one of the best known sports writers, sportscasters, and sports fans at Villanova. Bill, who will finally receive a B. S. in Economics this une, served very capably as sports editor of the paper during the fall semester of 1948, succeeding Jim Plunkett. "Little Noodnik" has had much experience in sports work having written for the Belle Air and announced for WVII as well as working in the publicity department. It can finally be eold that the "Ray Keats" who has had so many by-lines in the VILLANOVAN is in reality little Bill who has used that pseudonym for the last few years to cover his identity. Bill is now doing sportwriting in Vineland.

For the past three years the Mondschein twins, George and Ray, have shared the thankless task of writing the intra-mural sports column. In addition to treir writing chores, they have also served on the Intra-mural Committee. The boys came to Villanova in 1946 after having spen two years with the navy in the Pacific theater. They hail from Coplay, Pennsylvania and graduated from Allentown Central Catholic High School.

George (Lefty) Mondschein played right fied for both CCHS and the Coplay Junior Legion state championship team, which also produced the Phillies' brilliant southpaw, Curt Simmons. Here at Villanova, George has confined his diamond activities to softball, serving as a one-man mound staff for Mendel Hall and Barracks 1 & 4. The other half of Mondschein, Inc. was a high school infielder and has shortstopped the teams for which his brother has hurled. Both will return to Coplay with B. S. degrees in Education as English majors. The twins hope to continue in the field of journalism. The VILLANOVAN can hardly hope to discover another double-barreled writing team to perform so capably and unselfishly in a job that never rates the big headlines, but is indispensable to a college paper because of its reader-appeal.

GREAT YEAR

150 Champs

Not to be forgotten are the 150 champions who's great game against Penn to clinch the championship was the glory day for coaches Bud Kane and Jack McConville.

Basketball

Twenty-five wins against four losses and the greatest collegian basketball player of the year, that's what the 1949-50 Villanova courtment accomplished. The Cats played fine ball throughout the season led by Joe Hannan and Del Purgatorio's sets, Brooks Ricca's rebound work, Tom Sabal's hustle, Leo Wolf's captaining and a guy named Arison or Arisen or something like that, he only scored 25.4 points per game.

The club was unbeatable during the final stages of the season as North Carolina State, Toledo and Duquesne found out. The basketball thrill of the year was Paul Arizen's all all-American performance against Duquesne in the finale who ended the career of the big six, Arizen, Hannan, Del Purgatorio, Wolf, Sabol and Recca.

Track

The track team hung up a world's record for the sprint medley as Jim McKenna, John Furlinger, Jack Holmes and Joe McCreary's names went into the record book. The Cats had a great running team which had a touch of old Erin here and there.

Well, it's all over, good luck to the departing athletes and thanks for all the victories you gave us to write about and until September, so long.

A home run with the sacks loaded in the bottom of the fifth by Linton of the flyboys was wiped off the books when the game was called before the inning was completed. Maroney pitched good ball in the intervening frames, striking out three and walking two. Meanwhile, the 'Cats had a tough time solving the deliveries of Noonan, the Bolling hurler. Tom Clavin hit a single with two out in the fifth for the only Villanova hit. Noonan also fanned three batters and walked the same number. The Wildcat season record now stands at 3 wins and seven losses.

enough journalistic experience to competently fill the position vacated by Abreu. He supervised the publication of the well-received Junior Week edition of this paper as one of the more important duties of his Managing Editor job this year.

Further Changes

To fill this position of Managing Editor vacated by the rise of Gobes to Editor-in-Chief, Jim Gallagher has been named for next year. A Sophomore Arts student, he now holds the position of News Editor on the staff of the paper.

These changes are the only shifts within the present editorial staff. The remainder of the changes consist of the succession of members of the staff to the various editorial positions. Filling the post left vacant by the rise of Gallagher to Managing Editor, Jerry Micallef has been named from the news staff to the position of News Editor for the next publication year. To succeed Harry Range as Sports Editor, Jim Gallo and Bill Cooney have been named from the sports staff to be co-editors of that department.

Jack Muratori will be the new Copy Editor of this paper when you see the next edition in September, and Bruce Taten, the new head of the Feature staff. To complete the roster of new editors Bill Regan will be the man behind the men behind the cameras on the Photo staff. Barry and Jack Gibbons will remain next year as Business Managers of the paper, as will Mario Piazzola and Ralph Skowron still hold their positions of Circulation Managers.

Announced at Dinner-Dance

These staff changes were announced publicly last Saturday night at the annual VILLANOVAN staff dinner-dance in the Mirage Room of the Hotel Barclay. At this time gold keys were distributed to the Senior members of staff whose work on the paper during their years at this college has merited such rewards. This informal affair, under the direction of Frank Gobes was attended by over one hundred members and friends of the staff of the paper. Chesterfields were donated by the campus representatives.

hundred other students for the honor. Villanova is fortunate, therefore, in having two scholarships offered to students of the college.

Mr. Frederick Thorn, Director of the Summer Theatre, told a meeting of Belle Masque that it is hoped that Villanova will receive at least one scholarship each year. This will depend, of course, on available talent.

Last Thursday afternoon initians were held for new members who were accepted into the Alpha Psi Omega fraternity, a chapter of a national dramatic fraternity by which Belle Masque represents Villanova College.

There were three new members accepted into the fraternity, John Gray, Al Scarcelli, and Frank Pitochelli in the Field House due to rain.

Belle Masque held its annual picnic last Thursday, on the Atwater estate, near Havertown. Rosemont members of the Jest and Gesture club who took part in this year's Belle Masque productions were also present.

The final meeting of the year for Belle Masque will be held Tuesday evening at 7:30 in the Commerce and Finance Auditorium. All regular members should be present since elections will be held and plans for next year's productions will be formulated.

Other students interested in joining the club for next year's activities should be present to make that fact known. This year's freshmen, especially, are invited to show interest in the organization.

LABOR STATISTICS SHOW OPPORTUNITY GOOD IN BUSINESS

The largest single career field open to college graduates is in the management and operation of business firms according to a study by the U. S. Department of Labor's Bureau of Labor Statistics. The number of graduates from university business courses has risen very rapidly in the past 30 years. During the war, enrollment and graduations fell substantially, but after the war, the tremendous flow of veterans into business courses was reflected in the record figures of 38,000 graduates in 1948, and more than 60,000 in 1949. Even more will graduate this June. The great rise in training in business has made collegiate business education the second largest field after teacher training, placing it ahead of engineering, agriculture, law, and medicine. What are the employment prospects for these graduates?

It is likely that total business employment will continue to grow over the long run, causing a moderate increase in the number of executive jobs.

Although the demands for graduates of collegiate business courses are expected to increase in future years, there will continue to be severe competition for the better jobs which lead to executive positions. During 1947 and 1948, there was a strong demand for business graduates by business firms making up their wartime deficit of administrative and professional trainees. In 1949, a decline in business activity caused many companies to curtail their recruitment programs. As a result there was keen competition for available jobs among the record crop of more than 60,000 business graduates, and many were not immediately able to find jobs which matched their qualifications. It is too soon to tell definitely whether this situation means that the number trained has only temporarily outrun the long-run demand and immediate replacement needs, or whether business cannot normally absorb this many graduates in executive trainee jobs or in beginning jobs in specialized fields such as accounting and advertising.

The main source of new job opportunities for graduates of business schools will be in the replacement of executives now employed as they die or retire from business.

Will graduates of university business courses be hired for executive positions in preference to those without degrees, other qualifications being equal? Present indications are that a growing proportion of both top level jobs and specialized operating jobs will go to these business graduates. Educational requirements for business executive positions are being increased, in line with the trend toward higher educational requirements in many other fields of employment. Eventually college graduation may be required for most jobs at the administrative level.

Graduates To Hear Secretary Matthews

institution. In addition to the LL.D he will receive from Villanova, he also holds honorary degrees from Marquette University and John Marshall College.

Since his appointment to the Navy post last year, Secretary Matthews has been active in working for the unification of the Armed Forces, in conjunction with Defense Secretary Louis Johnson, who was given an honorary degree from this college at the dedication of Commodore John Barry Hall last year. Matthews' home is listed as Omaha, Nebraska.

Valedictorian for the graduation exercises this year will be Dan J. Haflinger, a graduate in the School of Engineering. Haflinger is an active student from Maywood, N. J., and at present, Photo editor of the VILLANOVAN.

The office of the Vice-President has announced that each graduate will receive three tickets for reserved seats at the commencement. If the ceremonies are held as planned in front of the Library, there will be no limit on the number of people who can attend. However, in the case that inclement weather forces the commencement to be held in the Field House, only those having invitations will be admitted to the exercises. This is necessary because of the limited seating capacity of the indoor auditorium. The invitations will be available for the graduates during this week in the Belle Air Bookstore.

Of the 697 graduates who will receive their degrees at the commencement, over 170 are men who completed their requirements for graduation at the end of the Fall semester in February but who have had to wait until this time for the formal presentation. Of the graduates completing their work this semester, there are 197 Commerce and Finance students, 185 Engineers, and 137 Arts and Science Men.

The NROTC has announced that there will be five commissions awarded at the graduation exercises to four regulars and one contract student who have been members of the program during their studies at Villanova. Three of these men will be commissioned into the Navy and two will receive their commissions in the Marine Corps.

C&F Frat Holds Election; Initiates 35 Pledges

Delta Pi Epsilon, the Commerce and Finance fraternity, held elections for the coming year and spring initiations on Wednesday and Thursday evenings of last week, respectively.

The election meeting was presided over by Vice President Guy Kingree as President John Weglicki was unable to attend. Officers elected for the coming scholastic year were: William Knecht, President; Peter Curley, Vice President; Peter Dooner, Secretary; Warren McDermott, Treasurer and William Creamer as Student Council Representative. After the elections, initiation plans were discussed and, before adjourning, it was announced that the next speaker from the Industrial Representatives Union would be Mr. C. Foeller who will discusss Public Utility Selling on the evening of May 23rd at 7:45 in the C&F auditorium. All fraternity members are urged to attend this lecture.

Initiations on Thursday

The following night, initiations were held in the C&F building for thirty-five prospective fraternity members. The initiation committee, under the leadership of Bob Ham, Chairman, presented a well-planned program which kept all the brothers and pledgees occupied throughout the evening.

The termination of these two activities just about marked the close of the fraternity's activity calendar for the current school year. Under the direction of Father Gordon and President John Weglicki, the frat has gradually overcome its shortcomings and at present is fast becoming one of the most active organizations on the campus.

After reading the editorial in this paper last week urging the students to make profitable use of the summer vacation, you, too, probably decided to make this summer a different one. Usually first in the list of the summertime resolutions is the one about reading more good books. We'd like to commend such activities, and encourage all the students to keep such a resolution this summer. And so that you won't find it too hard getting started, we'll give you this boost in the right direction, and suggest some summertime reading that would be both profitable and pleasant.

Each month the magazine "America" publishes a "booklog" of the currently best-selling volumes, and it is some of these that we think you would find enjoyable during your vacation. They aren't all available at the College Library, but you should have little trouble finding them at the public libraries, or even on the book shelves in your home.

Shepherds in the Mist, by Boyd Barrett. A sincere and moving account of a priest's wanderings, soul torment, and return to the Church.

Three Minutes a Day, by James M. Keller. A book in which the founder of the Christophers offers some helpful maxims for each day.

Road to Damascus, edited by John A. O'Brien. Fifteen famous converts to Catholicism tell their own stories.

The Cardinal, by Henry Robinson. The much publicized and popular story of a Boston priest's rise to the hierarchy.

Great Mantle, by Katherine Burton. The inspiring biography of the cobbler's son who became Pope Pius X.

Vessel of Clay, Leo Trise. A parish priest's own account of a day in his life, told in a manner particularly appealing to the laity.

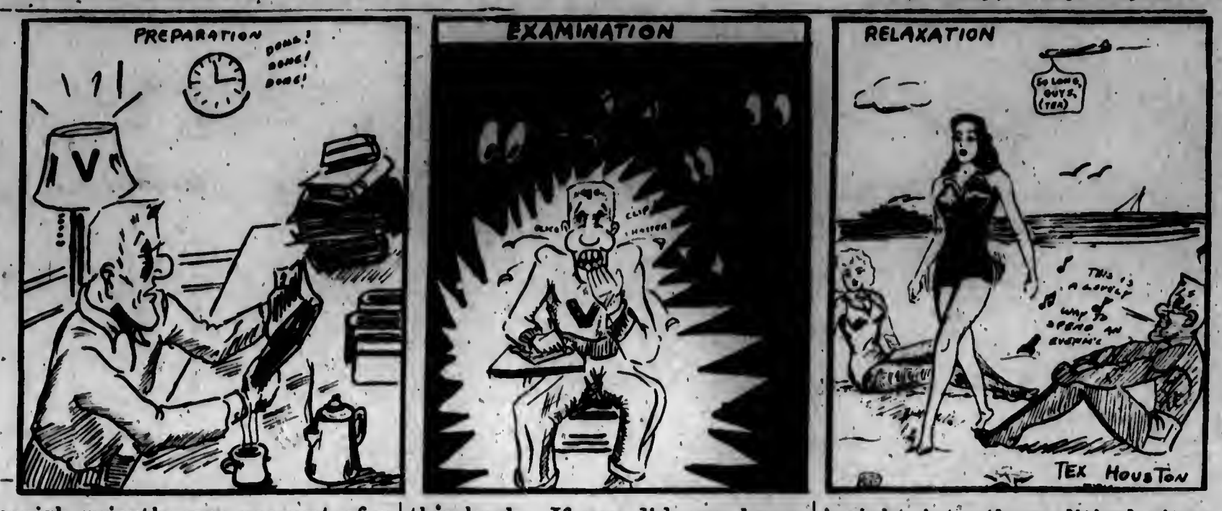
And if that's not enough to keep you busy for the four months of vacation, here are some more selected by our College librarian which would surely prove of additional interest to any student.

The Coming Defeat of Communism, by James Burnham. A calm and plausible exposition of the problems we face.

Science is a Sacred Cow, by Anthony Stanley. Perhaps some of you read in LIFE several weeks ago the condensation of this book. If you did, you know about this refutation of the theory that science can settle anything. If you didn't it's worth reading the book to find out.

The Bump on Brannigan's Head, by Myles Connolly. No, this isn't a supplement to a grammar school primer, but rather a humorously written tale of what can happen if love is given half a chance.

The Wager, by Daniel Corkery. Sixteen short stories chosen to win many more readers for this popular Irish writer.



The World Is a Bridge, by Christine Weston. An enjoyable novel which gives the reader an insight into the political situation in India prior to 1947.

The Wall, by John Hershey. A singularly impressive story of the annihilation of the Jews in a Warsaw ghetto under Nazi occupation.

Certainly I'm a Catholic, by Thomas McDermott. A young lawyer explains his faith and offers Catholocism as an antidote to modern despair.

The Town, by Conrad Richter. The last of a trilogy telling the story of a pioneer family in a growing Ohio community.

Have a good summer with good reading!

Catholic high school journalists as the keynote speaker for the publications conference held on this campus last Saturday. Semester Begins With 17 New Faculty Members Various changes have occurred in the faculty this year. Among these are the addition of three new members to the Villanova family.

The Rev. Robert E. Regan, O.S.A., S.T.D., a native of Staten Island, has assumed the post of Associate Professor of Religion. Father Regan has come to us from the Augustinian Theological School in Washington, D. C., where he has taught for the past 17 years. He has been appointed counselor of O'Dwyer Hall and will conduct the Cana Conference this year. He will teach Religion.

The Rev. Louis A. Rongione, O.S.A., will be the Moderator of Villanova's Radio Station WVIL and is counsellor of the second floor of Austin Hall. Father Rongione, a native of Philadelphia, graduated from Villanova and has been teaching at the Augustinian Academy at Staten Island for the past 6 years. He will also teach Religion.

The Rev. John Blethen, O.S.A., originally from San Diego, was ordained in 1949. He received his

FR. SHERMAN HOLDS RETREAT THURSDAY IN FIELD HOUSE

The annual Fall Retreat will take place this Thursday, Oct. 5, the office of the Chaplain announced. This annual event will be held in the Villanova Field House, with Rev. James Sherman, O.S.A., as the retreat master.

Rev. Sherman comes to Villanova from the Augustinian Academy at Grymes Hill, Staten Island, N. Y. Fr. Sherman should be no stranger to Villanova upper classmen, as he conducted the Fall retreat in 1948.

Three Conferences to Be Given

The retreat activities will commence with the offering of the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass by Fr. Sherman, at 9:00 A. M. in the College Field House, and will be followed by a short conference. At 11:00 the student body will meet for a second conference, and again for a third at 2:00. Exercises will be terminated at 3:30 with Holy Hour.

Confessions will be heard at 9:30, 11:30, 2:30, 4:30. All students are urged to take advantage of the many opportunities to confess that are presented to them.

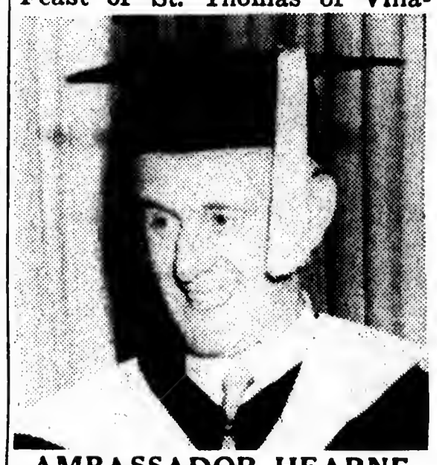
Classes will be suspended for the day, attendance cards will be passed out at the doors, and must be presented at each exercise. All Catholic students must attend.

Convocation, Mass Begin Year, Draft, NROTC In Lime Light

Early registration figures indicate that Villanova's enrollment has dropped twenty per cent from last years record of twenty-six hundred students. This is probably due to the fact that the backlog of Vets has finally been caught up with and also many high school graduates have joined the services or are waiting to be drafted.

Over twenty-one hundred and fifty students registered, including more than 550 Freshmen. Official figures have not been collected as yet, but it appears that in addition to the Freshmen enrollment, being two hundred students lower this year than last, the college enrollment has dropped by five hundred persons.

Does Uncle Sam Want You?



Most of this year's undergraduates are liable to be drafted. Therefore, each one is interested in knowing how he stands, and what are his chances of finishing his college career as he would in normal times.

As announced by the National Headquarters of the Selective Service System, the policy of deferment will be as follows: "A student who receives instructions to report for his physical examination from his local draft board during the school year must report at the time and place specified. Should the stu-

Villanova Forum To Begin Winter Series With October 17 Lecture

The "Villanova Forum," under the chairmanship of Mr. Charles P. Bruderle, Assistant Professor of History, announced this week its schedule of lectures for the 1950-51 series. This year's theme will be: "Human Rights and Natural Law", a topic chosen because of its timely interest in an age which has witnessed in many different ways, the denial of human rights.

Among this years guest speakers will be: the Rev. Francis J. Connell, Dean of the Sacred Theology School, Catholic University of America on October 17; Frank J. Sheed, noted author, publisher and lecturer, on January 22nd; Rev. Robert C. Hartnett, S. J., Editor of the Catholic Weekly, on February 19th; and Brendan F. Brown, Dean of the Catholic University Law School, on March 15th.

All lectures will begin at 8:30 P. M. in the Commerce and Finance Auditorium. Student tickets for each lecture will be sold for $.60, including tax. Villanova students will be admitted free from presentation of matriculation cards.

Third Series of Lectures

This series of lecture constitutes the third in the history of the "Villanova Forum". Last year The Lecture Program, under the general theme: "Church and State," brought to Villanova such distinguished Catholic scholars as Father John Courtney Murray, S. J. and Jacques Maritain.

The purpose of the "Villanova Forum" is to continue this practice of bringing to the students of Villanova outstanding Catholic thinkers who are capable of applying the message of the Gospel to the confused world in which we live.

Plans Started For Kentucky Week

For the uninitiated who haven't realized due to the press of studies and schedule changing, that the weekend of October 21st will be the biggest social highlight of the fall, we will explain. First we have the Senior Prom, Friday evening, October 20th.

Saturday afternoon finds the Wildcats of Villanova challenging the 'Cats of Kentucky at Franklin Field. All students have been provided with a ticket, and regular tickets will go on sale shortly at the Athletic Office. This is probably the team's toughest clash of the season.

Navy to Parade

Next we have the Villanova NROT unit's first public parade of the year. The three companies of Midshipmen will march onto the field before the game and then at halftime a special platoon will give a display of fancy drill.

Tony Pastor To Play At Senior Prom, October 20

The 1950-51 social season of Villanova will get underway on Friday evening, October 20th, in the College Field House when the Senior Class will present their annual Belle Air Ball. Music and entertainment will be provided by the famed Tony Pastor organization.

This, the last open dance held by the Class of '51, has been moved up in the calendar to the October date to avoid the past conflicts of mid-November, the Ball and mid-semester exams. The traditionally formal affair, coming on the eve of the Kentucky game, will provide the first big week-end of the year.

Although the ball is open to all students, regardless of class, the new Freshman class is more strongly invited as this is the first social function of their collegiate careers.

Tickets are now on sale throughout the confines of the campus at six dollars per couple. The various committees are now hard at work to provide an enjoyable evening for all. If Tony Pastor turns in the same type of job as he did at the Junior Prom in May of '49, the Senior Class will remember with pleasure a highly entertaining evening.

War And College

After a summer which saw radical changes in the world situation the return to school has taken on new meaning. Those who have been lucky enough to begin another semester of college fully realize the good fortune which is theirs. Many have been called into the service either by reserve units or the selective service act. And even those who continue their education wonder what the future brings to them.

Actually the increase in the armed forces will affect only a small percentage of college students. Yet, being a threat to all, we have become very conscious of our very precarious situation and of the international situation which the nation faces. However, should present mobilization plans be maintained a good three fourths of us will experience military life through the draft, reserve status or following graduation from ROTC courses.

This brings several things to mind as now important on beginning a college year. The first is our course of studies. Reading of the deferment program of the selective service we realize the value of plugging for marks. Upon classification in any branch of the armed forces will depend in a good measure the aptitudes exhibited in college. Your value as a member of any service will then be reflected in your rank.

In the melting pot that is the war time service you meet all types of sordid and selfish philosophies. If the religious and ethical principles you hold now are not strengthened by practice and understanding now they will be mighty hard to follow then. You cannot hide with a job, a home, and a family as in civilian life. Be prepared to stand on your two feet in the future, both physically and mentally.

A second thought that occurs to us includes all the extra curricula and social activities offered by college. The time and opportunity are offered to everyone. In fact there are more activities on campus than anyone could hope to be attached to in four years. Each of them offers a world of satisfaction in its own field. Each of them helps build a more interesting, a more memorable college career.

Frosh . . . .

Contrary to the manner in which our "white hats" of the orientation committee deign to look upon Frosh, we are happy to welcome to Villanova, the newest group of men who, collectively, seek recognition as the class of '54. We of the upper classes are happy to pass on to this class the Villanova tradition.

Though you must suffer for a while the indignities of the orientation period we feel sure that if taken in the right spirit it will serve you in good stead during your four years both as a class and as individuals. The dink and the button provide a common bond between you and your classmate. And upon this bond will start and thrive many lasting friendships.

During this period you will be asked to display spirit and enthusiasm for the college of your choice. You will sing the songs and shout the cheers at all our games and rallies this fall with the attempt to outdo all others. After watching you for a while we think you probably will. All of it is designed so that you might feel a devotion to your school and might more easily become Men of Villanova.

Good luck to the class of 1954!

I See By The Papers

By Jim Mullin

These are indeed perilous times in which we again start classes. The news from the outside world is grim. The dispatches from the Korean front state that the battle weary divisions that have born the brunt of the Communist assaults are soon due for relief. The fox holes will soon be filled with overcut Logic students, Villanova's contribution to partial mobilization.

Statistics

While scanning the papers, we ran across an article from the Bureau of Statistics that states that marriages are on the increase. The number of marriages has increased some 18% since the outbreak of hostilities. Further on, the article states that the motion picture industry reports that attendance at movies has declined some 23%.

Students

Of interest to all students is the item that the Army has announced a new draft quota of 90,000 men to be inducted before October 30th. Collegiates former worries along these lines were limited to the draught at the neighborhood recreation centers.

The Navy Supply Corps has placed an order for 50,000 pairs of new assault boots with the Endicott Johnson Shoe Company of Endicott New York. It would definitely seem that these are times that try men's soles . . .

SMOKE RINGS AND THINGS

By Bill Brenninghouse

Consider the plight of Oscar Twomp, a social outcast, a man without friends, a suspicious character. Classmates avoid him; fathers don't trust him with their daughters; people whisper about him in church. Why does the world shun him? B.O.? Halitosis, Borderline Anemia, Dandruff? Ah if it were only that simple. Oscar Twomp's one sin is that he doesn't smoke.

And What's More

Not only does Oscar not smoke, but he has no reason for not smoking. Never has he considered the ethics concerning nicotine, nor is he in training for the tiddly-wink team. He is not worried about smoker's hack or other diseases attributed to the cigarette. In other respects, he is perfectly normal, just a shade under an alcoholic, he beats his mother and steals candy from little girls. He just doesn't like to smoke.

The first realization that he was sub-normal came during his freshman days at some college. One of the boys, Waldo Shamshocker by name, casually asked for a cigarette. When Oscar informed Waldo that he didn't smoke, Waldo walked away mumbling nasty words under his breath. From that day on people started avoiding him. He could hear whispered appelations, "Cheapskate, Sonandsoandso." There was no escape. He was marked as a niggardly bore.

On A Date

On his first date at college with a pretty young thing from Roseland, his abstinence from nicotine caused him a miserable evening. She forgot to bring her cigarettes, and when she discovered that he didn't smoke, she treated him as though he were a leering wolf. She was sure that something was wrong with him.

And so it went. Campus cigarette representatives started campaigns to have him expelled for undersiable tendencies. The testimony of athletes, movie stars, and successful men had no effect on him. He didn't try the 30-day taste test, or the famous nose test. He didn't care for a treat or a treatment, and he never did find out just how mild a cigarette could be. To Oscar ABC meant Alcoholic Beverages Commission and LSMFT was a type of Navy landing craft. A lucky strike meant a happy uranium prospector, old gold could be found in sunken Spanish galleons; a chesterfield was an overcoat, and Phillip Morris was Icky's older brother.

Amendment? No.

Will Oscar ever take up smoking? How does he feel about cigars? Has he ever tried seeing his psychiatrist about his abnormal behavior? These questions and many others will remain unanswered until Lucky Streak green comes back from war, or until one case of throat irritation due to smoking Llamas occurs. Until that time, Oscar will have to continue with his vile habit of not smoking and bear the brunt of the attacks of the world's normal population.

"What cigarette do you smoke, doctor?"

Political Hexogons

The Franco Enigma

By Herb Mathews

At times the inconsistency of our government's foreign policy is amazing. In view of our expanded military program and the need for strategic bases the present status of relations between Spain and the U. S. is somewhat baffling. The policy makers scream out loudly at Soviet aggression and totalitarianism; and at the same time we get real chummy with one of the most totalitarian countries of Europe, namely, Tito's Yugoslavia Why? Because it behooves us, militarily speaking, to have friends in the Balkans on the Eastern side of the Mediterranean. Now, following the same line of reasoning, if we are to control the Mediterranean and the supply lanes that cross it we must of necessity control the western approaches. One side of the Western entrance is guarded by the Spanish State controlled by the so-called "enemy of democracy", Franco.

Enemy? Or Friend?

The U. S. is the outspoken foe of Communism, that is in some countries, but when we think of Spain we cannot help recall the days of the Spanish Revolution when Americans fought on the side of the Communist "Loyalists". These Americans had the blessing and help of certain members of the political hierarchy of the country. These same people will also tell us that Spain gave assistance to the axis powers during the last war; that we can't trust this nasty old conniver who controls the Iberian peninsula and hence the eastern end of the Mediterranean. They also seem to forget the Air Department reports of Spain's assistance to downed flyers who escaped from the Nazis, crossed the Pryenees, and found refuge in Spain. But it seems only fair that these miserable international thinkers should be reminded that Franco could easily have fallen in line with Hitler and Mussolini. He could have knocked out Gibralter, crossed over to Africa and prevented our landings there. Meanwhile, Rommel might have rolled across the Sahara unchecked, and in union with this great friend of Hitler's prevented our landings at Salerno and Anzio. But, political idealists who backed the Loyalists in carrying out their orders from Moscow still say that Franco is a naughty boy from whom we should stay away.

Let's Hope

Someone in our State Department seems to have very definite motives in blocking any attempt to make friends with Franco. Maybe Senator McCarthy got off base on some of his charges but if a closer look had been taken regarding Spanish-American relations, something interesting might have resulted. Can anyone disagree with out opinion that U. S. foreign policy is confusing? Time will tell whether or not it will be straightened out.

Lady . . . smile upon us.

Watch us shake our silver bells and whistle at our plaster ponies. Watch us running gaily round and round, bouncing up and down, then down and up, ever pleased with the variety waving to the faces which we pass around the ring.

And then the slowing down, the sudden pang of sorrow. We dig into a pocket and find a shiny coin. Someone is coming to take it from us. We look at it long and slow, we smile at the pleasure of posession. It is so bright, so round, so silver. And then the sad parting, the child-like tears . . .

. . . the grinding sound of gears, the struggling flats from the organ, the feeling of slow motion and acceleration. And once again the merry beat of melody, the gaily waving tassels, the gleam of jeweled harnesses. And once again the ever changing circle, ever the same but ever changing . . . for is not our pony prancing up and down?

And sometimes we stand up, and reach for the little ring, which taunts us, just out of reach. If one can catch a silver ring, his ride is free, or so they say. But each time our finger stretches far enough, each time the cool metallic touch is felt, we look into our palm and find that it is only bronze we have.

And sometimes we change our ponies. Sometimes we choose a great white stallion, and then we stiffen our shoulders, for have we not great armies at our backs, looking to us to show the way? And sometimes we choose a stately chestnut mare, and a polished carriage, with yellow wheels flashing in the sun, for we are gentlemen and elegance becomes our station.

And so we go, round and round, and seldom do we look beyond our course. If we did so now and then, perhaps we would be different. One thing is sure: One day we came here, and one day we must go away. And if we were very wise we would remember always, and prepare, and perhaps not be at all concerned for silver rings, and things.

Lady, smile upon us, thy children.

Rome

By Jack Gibbons and Dave Hanlon

(During the summer many Americans and several Villanovans had the opportunity of visiting Rome. Dave Hanlon and Jack Gibbons were two of these, and this article is in the way of sidelight on the pilgrimages.—Editor).

The year 1950 found the roads to Rome well traveled by students from the United States. These students found that Rome offered eve.ything that could be desired by a visitor. Religious, cultural, historical, and social elements combined to make Rome one of the most fascinating cities to visit on the Continent.

Rome—Religious

During the Holy Year one of the primary desires of the visitor is to gain the plenary indulgences which are obtained by visiting the four major basilicas of Rome. St. Peter's, of course, is the first church visited by any traveler. On August 27, one thousand Catholic College students had an audience with the Holy Father in St. Peter's. It is difficult to describe the vastness and the beauty of this holy place and the impression which the audience leaves upon the pilgrim. The other three basilicas are St. Paul's Outside the Walls, St. Mary Major, and St. John Lateran. Of these churches, St. Mary Major is one of the most interesting. The ceiling of St. Mary's is constructed with the first gold brought back from America by Columbus.

The catacombs used by the early persecuted Christians are still in existence and open to the public. Thirty-five masses are said daily in these historic tunnels, and the ride to the catacombs along the famed Appian Way affords an excellent view of Hadrian's Tomb, The Coliseum, The Roman Forum, Qua Vadis Church, and Victor Emmanuel's Monument.

Rome—Commercial

We found the streets of Rome deserted between the hours of 12:00 noon and 3:00 because of the intense heat. It was most convenient, therefore, to do our sightseeing in the morning and to shop in the evening. There are many wonderful things to buy in Rome, and the prices are reasonable. But it was cheaper to hire a horse and carriage to travel around the city than to go by cab.

Rome—Entertaining

Rome offers a variety of entertainment that is not found in the United States, and the prices would amaze the entertainment-seeking tourist. For example, the famous open air Opera located in the ruins of the Caracalla Baths costs no more than the price of a movie in America. On a huge stage framed by awesome ruins and moonlit cypresses as many as 500 persons-pairticipate in these operatic spectacles. Because of the great influx of Americans in Rome, most places catered to American tastes, and almost any nightclub you e n t e r e d, the strains of "Slow Boat to China" and "Rag Mop" were being sung in broken English.

Rome—Enjoyable

Anyone in Rome will tell you that the only place to eat is Alfredo's, lorded over by Alfredo himself. Flaming creppe suzettes and the specialty of the house, fetuccini (noodles cooked in butter and cheese) are served in the exhuberant Italian style with gold service, dimmed lights, and violins playing.

Rome—Companionable

And Rome has something else: the Romani. These are the city's tolerant, volatile, endlessly cheerful and always appealing people. An American traveler is as welcome in the humblest trattoria as on the fashionable terraces of the best restaurants. Romans live lustily, busily and enthusiastically and for Americans the feeling is infectious.

'The Footlighter'

By Ed Fesco

Our return to school coincides with the return of the many professional summer stock theatres to their respective glitter-lit haunts, the cessation of amateur troupe activities and the beginning of a new theatrical season after a three-month run playing to audiences all over rural and suburban America.

Just what comprises a summer theatre group is hard to say. It may be a group of college students thirsting for theatrical familiairity, or it may be a group of professionals wearied by a grueling season on the town. It may be a community affair with local talent or a large touring company. What ever it is, it's wonderful. A time for experimentation and study in a "take off your shoes" atmosphere. Whether the stage be a barn in Punxsutawney or a movie theatre in a substantial suburb, the accent is on relaxation.

The Phila. Season

The new theatre season has come to Philadelphia and with it there will be the usual crop of flops and successes and flops that should have been successes and vice-versa. Who knows, with four plays on the theatrical menu this week, we may see a flop or two. No matter what you say about the theatre-loving peoples in Philadelphia, there are not enough of them to support four plays; one or more will have to go.

Here in Philadelphia we are fortunate in having the opportunity to see for the first time productions which are destined for Broadway — the ULTIMA THULE of theatrical endeavor. The idea being, if the play has a fairly successful run here and the critics do not pan it unmercifully, the producers will rick the expense of moving it to New York where it usually stands or falls.

As You Like It

This week will see four footlight attractions in our fair city, the greatest selection since early last spring. Of these, the best bet is "As You Like It" fresh from Broadway with Hollywood's long-stemmed, nasal-twanged Katherine Hepburn playing Rosalind. The play, written by Shakespeare in 1600, will have seen its longest run in it's 350 year history with the present Theatre Giuild company.

The English born producer-director, Michael Benthall, has introduced a few innovations. He has combined the material into a well-turned two acts instead of the usual five peculiar to Shakespearian p r a c t i c e, and has worked in a little casual music and song to give the play a touch of originality.

A Shakespearian play is a rare tid-bit in this day of the well-heeled m u s i c a l comedy especially when performed by the Theatre Guild with the help of such a capable personality as Miss Hepburn. It would be regrettable to miss this chance.

Some Music

The return of Eugene Ormandy and the Philadelphia Orchestra from an exciting summer in Europe, will usher in a new concert season beginnig Oct. 6 at the Academy of Music with a program of Beethoven and Wagner.

REGISTRATION REMARKS—Much more systemized, although it requires the approval of twenty new forms, it distributes the students much better . . . No longer will Father Dunne have 150 matriculators in his religion class . . . If your name isn't on the official attendance list, you don't belong in the section—has anyone bumped into the prof. who belongs in Public Speaking 112, Section 03? The confusion which previously marked registration has disappeared with only a few exceptions . . . After obtaining his revised schedule, WHITEY SCHNEIDER was seen standing outside the Dean's office . . . it seems that he had been overcut in five courses . . . Asked why he came back to school, he replied "Ah, all the beaches were closed."

SURE SIGNS OF FALL: The football-pool husksters setting up their offices in the shadows of the administration building . . . The pipe end humidor sales in the Pie Shop with frosh Hugh O'Donnel attempting to purchase the collegiate look—Does your mother know you smoke, Hugh? . . . The blood-thirsty attitude on the part of the Villanova fans toward Duquesne's big, rough, and slightly unethical "Get 87" O'Neil . . . DICK CONNOR carrying the nose of a DUKE off the football field . . . The campus fashion plates adorned in the new fall fads featuring clan plaid jackets . . . This brings to mind the fact that TOM FUCIGNA is quite conspicuous without one—H-m-m-m!

RENOVATIONS AND EXCAVATIONS: Villanovans were shocked to see an old familiar Main Line landmark disappear in Bryn Mawr. The Ole Meetin' House 'cross from the firehouse has finally been lost to the forces of Carrie Nation—they had it closed in other years but this time a thorough job was done. It's rumored that a service station will replace the ancient picturesque structure . . . As one optimistic character phrased it "At least we can still get our tank filled" . . . The tunneling of the campus has become quite a familar sight to the old timers since this is the second time in three years that the boys have had an opportunity to fall into a trench . . . According to plans, this maze of pipes and trenches is supposed to terminate at a proposed central heating plant, however, judging from the absence of such a building, the contractor's field engineer PHIL TERRANOVA advised this writer that the pipes will be connected to the pot-belly stove in the Penn Railroad Station . . . The gang that moved to a distant dorm in order that they might get away from it all were surprised to find a new regime standing fast within those hallowed walls . . . "Everybody up, you have only an hour-an-a-half before the convocation."

VILLANOVA VARIETIES: The engineering class basking in the fatherly smile of CARL KOENIG since his Missus presented him with a blue-bootied bundle . . . The DON SWEDA'S will infantize in November . . . TEX WINTERS, last year's bicycle ridin' Oklahoman was showered with rice last Saturday and will settle in a Main Line Ranch instead of his much talked about Tulsa hacienda . . . The tea house at Rosemont proved quite successful with many of the Frosh finding fresh game . . . Roger Hannifin was seen talking to MARGIE CASSINI while MARGIE was talking to JUNIOR LARKIN . . . The Rosemont affair brings to mind the fact of the Chestnut Hill Kindler which is to be held this coming week . . . Kindler usually implies heat but the only heat at the Hill is in the radiators . . . Well, they're better off than we are . . . All foolin' aside, gang, let's get up to the country and let the gals know that there are still a few Villanovans alive . . . What happened to the Orientation Committee—too bad that it came to an end so quickly after such a fine start . . . That's about all from this end for now, so I'll leave you with this sobering thought . . . BLACK COFFEE.

Don't hand me that, you Frosh are all alike!!

Campus Criss-Crossed By Bigger And Better Ditches

Steam & Water Pipes to Connect Halls to New Heating Plant

Those trenches around the campus are really not meant as a defense measure against the North Koreans but are to hold the steam and water pipes that will connect the different halls with a new central heating plant. This new steam plant will be located on the far side of the Pennsylvania Railroad tracks.

This new plant will heat all of the buildings on the campus except Delurey and Gallberry Halls, both of which the maintenance department eventually hopes to tie into the central system. According to Dean Moorehouse of the Engineering Department the new plant will utilize the most modern equipment available. There will be two steam boilers both of which will deliver 30,000 pounds of steam per hour which will be constructed by the Combustion Engineering Co.

The actual construction of the steam plant itself is to be started in the immediate future. At the present time bids are out for the building itself and for the electrical and mechanical equipment necessary for its operation. The plant is expected to be ready for operation late in the spring although the actual changeover from the individual heating plants to the central system will not be made until the summer recess in order to maintain an uninterrupted heating of the buildings on the campus.

Father Keller

In the keynote address, entitled, "The Christophers and the Press," Fr. Keller praised the work of this conference and pointed out that its expressed purpose, to encourage a better Catholic student press, is entirely in accordance with the methods and aims of the Christopher movement. This point was explained in his book "You Can Change the World" which brought him fame when it hit the top of the best-seller lists a year ago. In this work journalism is named as one of the professions into which Catholics should be encouraged to enter if the forces of evil at work in the world today are to be combatted with success.

Father Keller's speech marked the opening of the afternoon session of the day-long series of lectures, forums and conferences. This program began at 9 A. M. with a general meeting in the Field House of all the students participating in the conference. At this meeting Ray MacWilliams extended his welcome as Editor of the Belle Air, and presented Rev. F. X. McGuire, O.S.A., President of the college, and William Cooke, representative of Campus Publishing Company.

Meetings in Field House, C & F

The Reverend Joseph G. Cox, J.C.D., Principal of St. Thomas More High School then delivered the initial speech, "The Place of Publications in School Life." Fr. Cox is also the President of the Board of Governors of the Catholic League, and President of the Secondary Dept. of the National Catholic Education Association.

Following this session the group was divided into classes for the panel discussions, lectures and clinics that were held for the rest of the morning. Conducted simultaneously on topics dealing with newspapers, magazines and yearbooks, these smaller groups met in the Field House and in the classrooms of the C&F Building.

After Father Keller's talk the concluding sessions of the panel discussions were held. After these were completed, a dance in the Field House topped off the program for the day, and closing ceremonies were held at Benediction in the College Chapel.

BAND PERFORMS AT CONVOCATION AND BALL GAME

The blue and white of Villanova's bandsmen have already made two major impressions on the campus this semester. The opening achievement was a masterful performance at the occasion of the annual convocation. The band was right on the job with an array of Irish melodies in honor of the first ambassador from the Free State of Ireland to the United States.

Included in the afternoon's program was a medley of well-known Irish tunes as: "The Wearing of the Green", "The Low-Backed Car", and "Come Back to Erin". But the high spot of the afternoon was the rendition of the Irish national anthem. Ambassador Hearne was not alone in his pleasure at hearing the tune as any Villanovan can affirm.

At Duquesne Game

The second display of talent came at Goodreau Stadium. In the pre-game and half-time maneuvers, the band displayed the results of two weeks of hard work, both in music and in their special forte of marching. Their formation saluted the freshmen and alumni, as well as Duquesne and the 'Cats.

"Hasty Heart" For Belle Masque

The Belle Masque Dramatic Society held its first meeting last Tuesday evening in the Commerce and Finance Auditorium. The meeting was called to order following an invocation by the Club's Moderator, Rev. William J. Krupa, O.S.A., John Rowe, President of the organization, presided. In his opening remarks, John Rowe introduced the Officers of Belle Masque; William Brenninghouse, Secretary, Joseph Maiale, Treasurer, and Al Hevey, Student Council Representative. The new fraternity officers elected last May were also introduced to the membership. They include: Robert Resnick, Cast Director; Frank J. Pitocchelli, Cast Business Manager; and William Brenninghouse, Cast Stage Manager.

Father Krupa announced the Fall production to be "The Hasty Heart", and tryouts for casting were immediately scheduled. The Moderator impressed on all members the limited time remaining for rehearsals.

POWERS CAGE COACH AT WEST CATHOLIC

Mr. Eugene Powers, Director of Intramural Athletics and, for the past two semesters, a member of the Education Department, has been named head basketball coach at West Catholic High School in Philadelphia.

Well known to sports fans, Mr. Powers came to Villanova from Gannon College in Erie where he served in the capacity of Director of Athletics. He also coached basketball and football.

In his undergraduate days Mr. Powers was a star distance man on the University of Pittsburgh track team and upon graduation began work in the Pittsburgh Public School System. He is well known in the Education field for many new developments in child training.

Since his arrival at Villanova Mr. Powers has done a great deal for the Intramural sports set-up and plans bigger things for the coming year. He can be found almost any day in Alumni Gym, not only refereeing but playing ball himself.

He is married and the father of a prospective sports star who hopes to fill his father's track spikes.

STEP THIS WAY, PLEASE — Halfback Franny Dunne is rudely ejected off the playing field by two burly Dukes after he had snagged O'Boyle's pass. His jaunt down the field was not in vain for it set up one of the Wildcat's touchdowns.

Dukes Shock Wildcats But Are Clawed 39-28

IN THE ENEMY CAMP

By George Scanlon

The boys from the Blue Grass State of Kentucky are flying high, wide, and handsome with three impressive victories under their belts. The Southern Wildcats warmed up at the expense of North Texas State and on September 23rd faced highly-rated L. S. U. All-American candidate Vito Parilli's passes and fullback Bill Leskovar's 55-yard run were too much for the Bayoumen who came out on the short end of a 14-0 score. Last weekend Mississippi was an easy 27-0 victim for Parilli and company. Kentucky has proven itself to be one of the top elevens in the country.

Detroit Rampages

The University of Detroit has shown a high-powered offense in its first two games this season. Hillsdale College and Wayne University fell before the Titans by scores of 40-0 and 34-0, respectively, stamping the Detroiters as a dangerous outfit.

Boston College's Eagles opened their season with Wake Forest on September 22nd and held the Deacons to a 7-7 tie. Quarterback Dick McBride was the offensive standout for the Maroon and Gold. B. C. forced formidable Oklahoma last Saturday and lost 28-0, while displaying plenty of gameness against the mighty Sooners.

Louisiana State, having lost their opener to Kentucky, snapped back last weekend by crushing College of the Pacific 19-0. L. S. U. has one of the strongest lines in College ball.

Georgetown Falls

Penn State had little trouble in defeating a fumbling, wild-passing Georgetown eleven, 34-14. The Hoyas are capable of playing much better ball and must do so as they face a tough schedule.

Duquesne is still looking for its first victory. The Dukes lost to Florida Saturday night by fumbling away scoring opportunities, ending up on the wrong side of a 27-14 final count.

Miami Strong

Miami sported a fine aerial game in lacing the Citadel 21-0 last Friday night. Jack Hackett's passing will be a constant threat to all opponents of the Hurricane. Miami, with its great stadium and big-time schedule, is an ambitious club which has its sights set on a post-season bowl appearance.

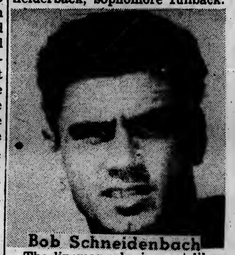
D'Alonzo and Haner Gang Gang Up to Rescue Victory

For a game that was supposed to be a "breather", the tussle with Duquesne had a lot of Villanova rooters holding their collective breaths . . . The Dukes had a 21-19 lead at half-time, which was the final score in the Wildcats only defeat last year . . . But the 'Cats roared back with 20 points in the second half to rack up their 9th victory in 10 games under Coach Jim Leonard's tutelage . . . The Mainliners weren't the only one fooled by Duquesne's strong showing; most of the football "pools" gave the Blue and White from 19 to 21 points . . . Looks like the bookies were the biggest losers.

Although the defense was somewhat leaky, Villanova showed it had an array of backs that ranked with the best in the nation . . . Pete D'Alonzo was especially impressive and proved what the team's supporters had contended all along — that Pete would ably fill the shoes of Ralph Pasquariello . . . In fact some fans observed that the biggest difference between the teams was that we had D'Alonzo and the Dukes did not . . . The outstanding work of the sophomores, both on offense and defense came as a pleasant surprise to the fans . . . Bob Haner stamped himself as a future Villanova great by his outstanding play throughout the afternoon . . . The second year man from the Blue Grass state did a terrific job in backing up the line and also spelled D'Alonpo on the offense .

Second Game To Be Real Test For Wildcat Gridders

Southerners Touted to Have Best Eleven in Years; Aerial Attack Expected



Bob Forsyth

Following a two week respite, the Villanova Wildcats resume their seasons' operations when they invade the alien shores of Miami, Florida this Friday night to tangle with the Miami Hurricanes. The game, expected to draw forty thousand partisan fans, will be played in the world famous Orange Bowl and will feature a resumption of the intersectional rivalry which, at present, is stalemated with one victory for each school and one tie. On their last visit to the "Friendly City" in 1948 the Wildcats secured a 19-10 victory.

The game, which many Villanova rooters tend to take lightly, cannot be considered so. An indication of the Hurricanes' potentiality can be observed in the past record of their wily mentor Andy Gustafson. Gustafson is best known in this area for his coaching of Army's dream backfield in the Blanchard and Davis era. Since he took over in 1948 Gustafson has brought his team along rapidly, and, after posting a 4 and 6 record in 1948, the Hurricanes enjoyed a 6 and 3 season last year against tough intersectional opponents.

Many Miamans feel that this is the year for their heroes and with just cause. Only six lettermen have been lost from the 1949 squad and the sophomore prospects more than make up for this deficit. The Hurricanes play Southern football, featuring a wide-open passing attack. Gustafson introduced the Army style T formation in 1948 but made the necessary changes to it to inject added power to his aerial offensive. Thus the Wildcats will most likely face split-T and wing-T formations. The squad, which is manned by many New Jersey and Pennsylvania stars is comparatively light but strong in one essential of the T formation, namely speed.

The key position in the attack is, of course, the quarterback and, in this position, Heading the list is Jack Del Bello, an All Scholastic star from South Philadelphia. Originally a halfback Del Bello was converted to quarterback by Gustafson and supervised the bulk of Miami's offense in his sophomore year. Last year he received additional help from diminuitive Jack Hackett of McKeesport, Pa. Hackett, known as "Mighty Mouse" to his teammates, excells in all departments including running, despite the fact that he weighs only 150 pounds. Supplementing the aerial attack are such speedy veteran backs as Mike Vacchio, Jack Brasington, Jim Dooley and Dick Czaplinski, a former end. An unknown quantity is Bob Schneiderback, sophomore fullback.

Bob Schneidenbach

The lineman who is most likely to trouble the Mainliners is Leo Martin, rangy pass catcher and the team's punter. Gustafson has six veteran tackles all weighing over two hundred pounds. The guards are led by Ray Arcangeletti, a 190 pound Pennsylvanian, and Pete Mastelone will handle the center post and back up the line on defense. Though the Wildcats will not have to give away any weight to this line, the Miamians will have the edge in depth and experience.

Coach Jim Leonard, meanwhile, has been conducting daily drills to correct the flaws observed in the Duquesne game. No one can complain about the Wildcats' ground attack which, as expected, was devastating. Despite some ragged blocking, D'Alonzo, Haner, Geppi and Frinzi ground out yardage often times making their own holes.

The Wildcat passing attack, supplied by Neil O'Boyle, was not tested fully in the Duquesne encounter. O'Boyle's short passing was effective when the yardage was needed but none of the few long pass plays he tried worked. Judgment will have to be reserved on this offensive threat until later tests.

Leonard's main task will be sharpening up the blocking and pass defense. In respect to the former the big difficulty lies in the lack of weight and experience in the line. The only remedy for these deficiencies is hard work and the Wildcats are doing plenty of that in the scrimmages. As for the pass defense indications are that Micky Frinzi will assume the safety post to sharpen the defensive backfield. Frinzi, who starred in this position during the past two seasons, is sure to add strength. Coach Leonard's other prescription is pass defense drills and, considering the fact that much of the loose defense could be due to opening game jitters, the Wildcat rooters can expect a much sharper defense on Friday night.

Since Miami won its season opener against the Citadel on last Friday night 21-0, this game will bring together two strong teams in quest of their second victories.

In The Sportlight

Almost before they had taken a good look at their various classrooms, Villanova students were given a glimpse of the 1950 Wildcat gridders. And almost before the Frosh could yell a good old "locomotive" for the Blue and White, Pete D'Alonzo had grabbed Duquesne's opening kick-off and chalked up a quick 70 yards in the new season's legend. Referred to by the pre-season crystal-gazers as "the boy who must fill the big gap left in the Villanova backfield by Ralph Pasquariello's graduation, the Orange Bull has his work cut out for him. That is, of course, to make us all forget about the feats of Big Ralph. On the strength of last Saturday's performance, we don't think we're running out of bounds when we say that Pete is well on his way to doing just that.

When it comes to filling gaps, let us not forget to mention Bob Haner, the other half of Coach Leonard's one-two fullback punch. The sophomore star from Louisville, Kentucky, started the game backing up the left side of the line and before the final whistle was blown, had proved his versatility by kicking off, adding two extra points, and scoring a couple of touchdowns.

One seldom hears a football player complain about the long, hard hours of practice, the many lengthy road trips, or the pains and bruises that are bound to result from constant head-banging. But mention the Senior Prom to a Wildcat gridder and you'll get an earful! Somebody fumbled the ball by excluding the footballers from the first of the two main social events of the school year.

Some half a hundred hopeful candidates answered Coach Severance's first call for basketball practice. Of these, about thirty are freshmen. Evidently the basketball flame of Villanova has reached the high school set and the boys have responded.

Congratulations are in order for . . . Mr. Powers on his appointment as basketball coach at West Catholic High School . . . "Maj." McDonnell, freshman court mentor, for his uphill struggle with the Fightin' Phils . . . and, finally, to Jim McKenna, Villanova's fine quarter-miler, who recently announced his engagement to Miss Maureen Murphy of New York City.

INTRAMURALS

Expansion and reorganization are the keynotes of Villanova's intramural program for 1950-1951. Expansion will come in the form of a bigger, more comprehensive, and in all ways better system, with more teams and players competing than ever before. Plans for reorganization include a new constitution and governing body. This body, known as the Council, will consist of the I-M Athletic Moderator, two resident representative two dayhop representatives, the Villanovan I-M reporter, the WVIL I-M reporter, a Student Council member and two Senior Managers, with the director of actvities as an advisory member.

Mr. Powers, the I-M director has drawn up a constitution which he plans to present to the Council for its approval as soon as it is formed. He urges all men interested in Intramural activities to drop into his office in 112 Alumni to discuss the formation of this group with him.

In addition to the above men there are also openings in the I-M program for underclass managers. These men will serve as offocials in the various events throughout the year . . . They will, after serving their underclass apprenticeship, finally make Senior Manager. As a reward for their service they will then receive a minor sports letter. The need for these underclass managers is particularly great in order to conduct properly the heavy schedule of the coming year.

Biggest I-M Program Planned

The Intramural program this year is certainly more extensive than in any year previous. According to Mr. Powers, the following program is on top. In the fall there will be touch football, tennis badminton and as a special activity the hall decoration contest which will be under the direction of the I-M Council. The Council will also sponsor "MUFF" day. Muff translated means Move Up Further Freshman. The Frosh will endeavor to move up by defeating the Sophs in a series of interesting if somewhat weird tests of skill and prowess.

In the winter there will be, of course, basketball in addition to a foul shooting contest and the swimming championship. A new note this year will be the formation of "A", "B" and even "C" leagues among the dorms so that a maximum number of students can play.

The spring will bring volleyball, softball, golf and the track championship. Dad's day is a new feature this year and an important part of the program will be the boxing championship.

Touch Football, Tennis Start

Football season at Villanova doesn't have to mean attending Saturday's Varsity games and football pools in between. As always the Intramural touch football league will be going full blast. Play will begin as soon as enough teams are entered to form a league. There will be nine men on a side and play will be governed by Intercollegiate rules.

All men interested should report to the office at 112 Alumni for entry blanks, rules, etc.

GRID

THINK YOU CAN BEAT THE EXPERTS?

A carton of Chesterfields will be given away to the one who knows his grid game beter than the sports staff. Write out your selections and submit to Villanovan office on or before Friday of each week. Winner announced next week.

SLIM'S PICKIN'S

By Slim Keats

Everybody likes to pick the winners, although most college students prefer to be given odds or points plus a payoff for the better guessers. This scribe, however, has been doing it for kicks, year after year, Saturday after Saturday. So, with the 1950 model of the Crystal Ball in hand, the incomparable Keats presents his fearless forecast for Saturday, October 7th.

Army to march over Penn State in the East's top contest.

Alabama to clip the Commodores of Vanderbilt.

Boston U. to keep Duquesne out of the win column.

California to dampen Penn's soaring spirits.

Columbia to humble the Harvards in an Ivy League tussle.

Cornell's Big Red to outshine the Orange of Syracuse.

Tennessee to bounce back against Duke.

Georgia Tech to gain their first win at Florida's expense.

Holy Cross to bump Brown. Quite a difference from last year.

Indiana gets the nod over Iowa in a Big 10 contest.

Kentucky to wallop Dayton; a breather for the Wildcats.

Michigan State to topple Maryland. Should be a sizzler.

Minnesota to better Nebraska.

Mississippi State to overcome Baylor.

Mississippi U. to bounce Boston College. Rebs over Yanks.

Ohio State to outscore Pitt's Panthers.

Southern Methodist to maul Missouri.

Yale to whip Fordham. Bulldogs will bring grief to Rose Hill.

Tulsa to tumble Georgetown's fumbling Hoyas.

Campus Interviews on Cigarette Tests

Number 1...THE PUFFIN BIRD

"What's all the huffin' and puffin' about?
I've been a Puffin all my life!"

You may think this "bird" is funny — but he's no odder than many of the cigarette tests you're asked to make these days.

One puff of this brand — one sniff of that. A quick inhale — a fast exhale — and you're supposed to know what cigarette to smoke from then on. The sensible test doesn't have to rely on tricks and short cuts. It's a day-after-day, pack-after-pack tryout — for 30 days. That's the test Camel asks you to make! Smoke Camels regularly for 30 days. Your "T-Zone" (T for Throat, T for Taste) is the best possible proving ground for any cigarette. After you've made the Camel 30-Day Mildness Test, we believe you'll know why . . .

Campus Appoints Chesterfield Men

New York, Oct. 1—The Campus Merchandising Bureau has just announced the appointment of two Villanova College students as representatives for Chesterfield Cigarettes. William Lemmer and Frank Gobes will work in cooperation with CMB in the promotion of sales of the Liggett and Meyers product.

The two men were chosen from among several candidates for the position. The appointments are good for the entire fall semester. Both Mr. Lemmer and Mr. Gobes are seniors and are students in the Arts School.

In connection with the national advertisement they will conduct the mildness test with students on the campus and will work with the newspaper throughout the year.

If the man is a regular full-time student he will be deferred.

With regard to the men in the NROTC, as far as the draft is concerned there is no worry. At present, any regular student or contract student of junior or senior status is exempted and receives a 1-D classification. Contract students who are freshmen or sophomores are deferred by practice.

This year the Naval program at Villanova has expanded to its full quota of 330 men, as alloted by the Navy Department. At present, no plans have been announced as to what will happen to these men in case of another national emergency such as another world war.

This year many Villanovans, especially the members of the Senior Class, are missing one of their most popular friends, the Rev. Thomas Purcell, O. S. A., former moderator of the Class of '51 who has been transferred to new duties at the Augustinian Academy in Staten Island, N. Y.

Besides his duties as Class moderator, Fr. Purcell was the Assistant Chaplain, moderator of the Sanctuary Society, and instructor of religion and history during his stay at this college.

At the Staten Island school Fr. Purcell is slated to teach history and religion and coach the Academy's basketball team. He is being replaced in his campus duties by the new Assistant Chaplain, Rev. Joseph Kemme, O.S.A., and Rev. John Blethen, O.S.A., who is now also associated with the Chaplain's Office.

peace, Christian democracy and the rights of the indivdual. The Irish Ambassador was a member of the Assembly from Ireland at the League of Nations, a framer the Constitution of Ireland, holder of numerous posts in the Irish Cabinet and for the past eleven years High Commissioner of Ireland in Canada.

Mr. Hearne presented his credentials to President Truman in March of this year and assumed the position of first Irish Ambassador to the United States. Prior to his arrival both Ireland and the United States had mutally agreed to raise the positions of their delegates to ambassador status.

The Ambassador was born in Waterford, a seaport town in the south of Ireland, where his father had established the first boot and shoe factory in that country. Mr. Hearne, the father of four children, was admitted to the bar in 1919 and now holds the title of Senior Consul which permits him to wear the shoulder length wig in court.

Junior Class Gets Early Start With Selection Of Ring Chairman

Off to an early start in planning the business of the Junior year, the Steering Committee of the Class of '52 named Paul Pirhalla chairman of the Ring Committee at a meeting last Wednesday evening in 202 Mendel. Called by Tom Pasha, President of the Class, this meeting was intended to set into motion the wheels of the Class to plan and organize the various activities scheduled for this school year.

As Chairman of this committee, Pirhalla has formed a group who are now contacting a number of ring representatives. Aiming to get the best ring at the most reasonable price, the committee will select several specimens for presentation to the Steering Committee. Their choices will be put for a class vote at a meeting later this month.

Besides the naming of the ring chairman, the business of this meeting included planning of the schedule for Junior Week next May, and the naming of chairmen for the various functions to be held that week. It was also made known that the planning of "Operation Yule", the Christmas party is the permanent job assigned to the Junior Classes, and that preliminary plans for the party this year have already been put into operation by the Class of '52.

WANT TO BE A WHEEL?

Well, we can't guarantee that exactly, but we can promise that we'll have you going around in circles if you become a member of the VILLANOVAN staff. The call is now out for new staff members, so if you're journalistically inclined we'd be glad to give your best efforts a try. The Junior NROTC midshipmen received a "well done" from Captain J. R. Edwards USN, for their excellent work last summer aboard his ship, the USS Algol (AKA-54). The Junior midshipmen were serving aboard the Algol as part of their summer training.

Captain Edwards said, "The conduct and bearing of the midshipmen impressed me so favorably that I desire to inform you of the pleasure that it was to have these young men on board."

BETWEEN RETREAT CONFERENCES

Fr. Sherman and two students exchange ideas as they wait for the next session to begin at Llast Thursday's Retreat. J. Brown and Edward Corr were two of the students who attended the annual one-day retreat.

Students Hear Fr. Sherman At Annual One-Day Service

Second V. C. Appearance

The sun was beaming for the first time in years at the annual one-day retreat that was held last Thursday. Rev. James Sherman, O.S.A., Retreat-Master for the day, led some two thousand students in various activities.

Held in the Field House as usual, due to the number attending the meetings, the retreat was planned and guided by the College Chaplain, Rev. Edwin Grimes, OSA.

Papal Benediction Given

In a series of conferences throughout the day, Fr. Sherman emphasized the necessity of being ready to meet the inevitable end of all human life in his talks. Besides the sermons of Fr. Sherman the day was taken up with a morning Mass, and a Holy hour in the afternoon to conclude. At that point the Papal Benediction was given to the assembled students.

Confession was offered to the men by some twenty priests who heard during the recess periods. Classes were suspended for the entire day in order that such a retreat would be possible and were resumed on Friday.

Collection Taken for Shrine

A collection was offered by the student body in order to decorate the Field House in a manner that would better portray the picture of a chapel. Fr. Grimes said that he would begin the construction of a shrine that would be put in the rear of the building.

This retreat, although important, is designed to fill in until the four day retreat that is held following examination period of the first semester and prior to registration for second semester.

Catholic University Dean Will Speak At First Of Forum Talks On Oct. 17

Rev. Francis Connell to Lecture in C & F

October 17th is the first night of the new Villanova Forum series. The Rev. Francis J. Connell, Dean of the Sacred Theology School of Catholic University, will be the featured speaker.

"Villanova Forum tonight", has become a familiar sound on the Main Line since its inauguration here a few years ago. Since its inception, upon the order of the President of the College, it has been under the chairmanship of Mr. Charles P. Bruderle, and has brought many famous speakers to the C & F Auditorium.

Interest Heightened in Talks

The purpose of the Forum is to bring to students of Villanova outstanding Catholic thinkers who are capable of applying the message of the Gospel to this confused world. Student interest has been very low in the past years, but late in the past season this interest began to quicken and rise to its proper height. The trend is expected to continue with the continuance of outstanding lecturers.

All lectures will begin promptly at 8:30 P. M. in the Commerce and Finance Auditorium. As in the past, Villanova students will be admitted free of charge upon presentation of their matric cards.

Council Plans Activities For New Session

Villanova's student legislative body held its initial meeting Tuesday evening, October 3rd. The session was opened without delay with a prayer by Father McLaughlin, the moderator. Those members of the Council chosen to lead the organization for the year are: President, Paul Davis; Vice-President, Shane Creamer; and Secretary-Treasurer, Jack Moran.

After the prayer, Paul Davis gave a short address to the assembly stating the aims of the organization. He paid particular attention to the attendance question. He then asserted that all members were such because they wanted to be and he therefore expected prompt and regular attendance with wholehearted cooperation.

Chow Line Discussed

The question of cutting in on the chow line was then brought up and the suggestion made that anyone caught "in the act" should be relieved of their matriculation card and forced to appear before the Council. The Council would then use its own discretion as to the fine or punishment of the offender.

Bill Creamer was then appointed Chairman of the Spirit Committee. It will be his duty to see that all rallies and social events are publicised and, in general, made a success. Shane Creamer, the Chairman of the Orientation Committee, appealed to the Council for cooperation and they stated that they would do their best.

DANCE SUNDAY OPENS OUR SOCIAL SEASON

Sunday will mark the presentation of the first of a series of Sunday afternoon dances to be sponsored by the Student Activities Office. The dance will be held in the Field House from 2 P. M. to 5 P. M. Girls from neighboring colleges have been extended an invitation to attend.

The dance will open a week of social activities that will get up full steam in mid-week, and come to a roaring peak with the Kentucky game Saturday afternoon. Wednesday, October 18, will be the date of a band concert in the Field House. Thursday is the date on which the Connelly Award will be presented to the best decorated dormitory, the presentation preceeding a football pep rally. The Senior Prom will follow on Friday, the twentieth.

Prom, Rally, Concert PreludeKentuckyGame

The traditional Belle Air Ball will highlight a week of social activities, climaxed by the big Kentucky - Villanova game. A band concert on Wednesday night, October 18th, will start the five-day "week-end", and the following evening, the Connelly Award, for the best decorated Hall, will be presented at a football rally in the Field House.

On Friday evening, October 20th, the Class of 1951 will present the Belle Air Ball. This has always been one of the outstanding dances of the social season, and from past records the Senior Class expects that it will be the highlight of the winter season at Villanova.

Grady Named Chairman

Tom Grady has been appointed Dance Chairman by President Joe Rugo, and both are highly confident of an oversubscription for the dance tickets.

Dancing will feature one of America's foremost vocal stylists, Tony Pastor and his Orchestra, with vivacious Kay Little as featured vocalist, and will be from 9 P. M. until 1 A. M. Now at the peak of his career, the Columbia recording star is nationally known for his waxing of "You Started Something." This is just one of the many hits he has recorded. Many other ballads, rhumbas, and "jump" numbers will add up to an evening of dancing pleasure.

TOM GRADY

Ticket Co-Chairmen Larry Gallen and Al Jacobs have placed booths in Mendel Hall, near the information desk, and one is also located in the Pie Shoppe. They will be staffed by Seniors during noon hour every day until the supply of tickets is exhausted.

Decorations Chairman George Smith and his committee are presently gathering material for the realization of their plans — A Villanova Mardi Gras!!

Other Chairmen

Chairmen for various committees pertaining to the Belle Air Ball are John Green, Publicity; George Schuster, Orchestra; Bill Gormley and John Currie, Programs and Neil Carter, Refreshments. All these men, and their helpers, will deserve sincere congratulations for a dance to be

Juniors Meeting Thursday To Pick Class Of '52 Rings

One of the biggest Junior year issues will be decided at the first Junior Class meeting on Thursday, Oct. 12, at 7:30.

Already a ring committee, under the leadership of Paul Pirhalla, has been formed. This committee has collected price data and ring specifications from the various companies in order to present it to the class.

One of the aims of the committee has been to insure delivery of the ring before the Christmas Vacation. Many of the Juniors expressed a desire to have the rings at the earliest possible time, and the utmost is being done to make this possible. Many of the Companies interviewed have offered to deliver by the specified time.

All Juniors to Attend

At the Oct. 12 meeting, rings will be presented to the Class, and the final choice will be made. All Juniors are requested to attend the meeting as the question of rings is an important one. The vote of every member of the class is necessary in order to insure the purchase of the most suitable ring.

The meeting will commence at 7:30 sharp, in the Commerce and Finance Auditorium. Prompt attendance is requested by all Juniors.

J. Stanley Smith, '93

It seems to be a quirk of human nature that the deeds of a good man go unheralded during the course of his life. Only after his death, in retrospect, do we realize the value of his friendship and service. And it is then that we feel most deeply the loss of a true friend.

To our recollection the name of J. Stanley Smith has seldom appeared on the pages of this paper. Yet Mr. Smith was one of the most active members of our Alumni, and a Villanova gentleman who carried his regard for this college through the 76 years of his life. With deepest humility, then, and with sincere sympathy, we mourn the death of one of the greatest friends of Villanova, J. Stanley Smith, Class of '93.

The position of Mr. Smith as one of the oldest members of our Alumni would be enough to rate our respect. But besides this, he served us a member of our Board of Trustes, president of the Villanova Alumni Association and Philadelphia Alumni Club. In 1933 he was the second recepient of the Loyalty Award, presented to the outstanding Alumnus of the year.

A successful business man, a loyal servant to his friends, Mr. Smith completed his life last week as a credit to his training. May we only hope that there will be others who follow his example and serve our school as well as did J. Stanley Smith, '93.

One Way

Three months ago, during the warm days of July, the communist forces of North Korea were slashing down through the countryside of democratic South Korea. The two forces that had been continually at odds since the Potsdam conference were influencing opposite ends of this tiny Oriental country. Poverty as usual was the excuse that red-backed armies swarmed down upon their southern brothers.

It was by no means a surprise maneuver and military minds the world over had their eyes on that country as well as Eastern Europe. However, the US, with an economy that thrives heartily on peaceful trade, could not stand the burden of being prepared. As a result, two of our divisions were hacked apart and the south Korean forces were sent reeling as General MacArthur fought to gain time. Fortunately MacArthur gathered troops enough in that time so that United Nations victory was strategically possible. The UN forces have now won their victory.

Two things should now be obvious. We, the United States, are not interested in Korea itself. It would in no way increase our financial standing. It was a set-up war to test the US stand and a move which left no other possible answer for the State Department and the President.

The second thing is that we must accept this as a lesson. A third World War is possible. The way toward peace if we wish to travel that path is not by empty State Department threats and cajoleries. We must maintain an armed force which will be fit to meet world situations.

Now that the Korea battle draws to a close the tendency will be to cut service appropriations, decrease the ranks of the regular forces and return to our peaceful lethargy. Economists will have good reasons for cutting back. They will claim that support of the wartime service is financially unsound. Certainly it is no easy burden. But then like any insurance it will never be appreciated except in emergencies. The Congress must plan to keep the armed forces on a practical footing. It must be strong enough to meet any world situation.

With the signing of a Mediterranean pact between Greece and Turkey last week, a further link was created in the Atlantic bloc of nations. It is important the US lead the way in all these armament measures for we are the soundest nation of the Atlantic bloc.

The way toward peace today is to make the communist forces of the world feel that victory for them would be impossible. Then time, by the grace of God, will wear away this totalitarian government just as it has all other governments based on false ideals and oppression who have tried to control the world. As Theodore Roosevelt said, to keep the peace we must "speak softly, but carry a big stick."

IMPERIALISM, COMMUNISM, DEMOCRACY AND YOU — A MODERN ENIGMA

by Bill Brenninghouse

Last week, a modern classic, appeared giving the reader an insight into the political, social and cultural background which has produced one of the world's greatest thinkers. Well versed in the geo-politics of Haushofer and Walsh, he has arrived at a solution to the world's problems. He carries the metaphysics of his poetry into his political theories and spices these theories with a large amount of Restricted Caucasian Liberalism. These facts, however, are evident to even a little-interested political spectator. We must go deeper into his personality to pry out the facts that make him the world's elder statesman, besides the fact that he is one hundred and thirty-two years old.

19th Century

First, a look at some of the books authorized by this genius will show his international political versatility. At the age of twenty, in 1838, he wrote The van Burean Enigma. This he followed with the famous, The Victoria Enigma. As a result of the latter book his name linked romantically with the famous English regent. The Civil War found him in Washington leading draft riots. He, then a pacifist, refused a commission in the Mexican artillery. The War between the States brought out his notable works, The Lincoln Enigman, The Lee Enigma, The Grant Enigma, and the Davis Enigma. It was at this time that his name was linked romantically with that of Harriet Beecher Stowe, occasioned by the publication of his first novel, Uncle Tom's Enigma.

And More Modern

Throughout the remainder of the nineteenth century his thinking colored world politics. In The Bismark Enigma he outlines the development of Prussian beer. He served under Dewey in the Spanish - American War, which he termed "a Spanish and American Enigma." Inactivity, due to severe inflammation of the armpits forced him into temporary retirement until 1937 when he published his monumental work, The Roosevelt Enigma, after which his name was linked romantically with that of Elesnor Roosevelt.

Prediction

The Second World War was unforseen by him but he was aware of tension in Korea as far back as 1841 when he wrote The Korean Enigma. His solution of the world's problems can be found in his soon-to-be released work, The Twomp Enigma, an autobiography, replete with witty anecdotes and truly . . . an enigma.

Political Hexagons

Politics

By Herb Mathews

In the Presidential election campaign of 1948 Mr. Truman accomplished what no one but himself thought he could do. He won that election on his own graces, his sincere approach to the little man's problems. And at the same time, so that we will not be considered naive, Mr. Truman used his political training of the old Pendergast machine days to good avail. Harry Truman showed the experts and the politicians that he knew how to garner support and votes.

Exit Johnson

But, from a look at last month's various activities in the Executive Mansion one would find good cause to say that Mr. Truman has lost that touch of a politician. For some strange reason Harry Truman was not able to keep the support of his greatest campaign-fund raiser, Louis Johnson.

On the surface it seems that policy differences between Johnson and Acheson were the cause. But, why would Truman's own cabinet members not be able to settle their own differences within the party circles rather than carry on this political throat-cutting? Of course Johnson was ousted and the Democratic National Committee heaved a sigh of relief.

Enter USMC

The feeling of complacency was short-lived, however. Harry gave vent to his fury again, this time in the form of a rather explosive letter in which he reaffirmed his idea that the Marine Corps shall continue to be relegated to a minor roll within the Defense Department. Mr. Truman is an old Army man. The Army and the Marine Corps have never been the greatest of friends, especially during peacetime. The former master politician of the Democratic party pubic, showed that he is a party to the inter-service rivalry; and as Commander-in-Chief of all the Armed Forces he should not have displayed this evident lack of discretion. It would not be very discreet if we on our part labeled Mr. Truman as having gone a little power-crazy. Undoubtedly he is the party leader and as such can do more or less as he chooses. But when he permits this petty political wrangling to enter into issues that are above the party politics level, we must take issue with his methods.

First Things First

During tense times like these when world affairs are governed by what happens in Washington, we cannot afford to allow small thinking to overshadow more important matters. We think that the administration should settle its differences behind closed doors and not allow them to clutter up the front pages of the daily newspapers.

Harry Truman was a smart politician a short time ago, it would be well if he kept family quarrels in the background, and once again displayed that talent for government which in no small way influenced the voters in 1948.

"Peace is everybody's job."

Do you recall when everyone was saying that? It was on the radio, in the newspapers. You could expect to hear it from a presidential candidate or from a bartender. It was really quite a fad.

And yet there were comparatively few people who ever really understood what it meant. Everybody believed it, surely, but very few ever stopped to wonder about it. And I wonder sometimes whether some of the statesmen who quoted it so often really did believe it.

And now it seems that we never hear anything like that. Trouble has come in the east, and with the Washington clamor and the clanking steps of mobilization we have in a matter of months been transformed from a nation sincerely hopeful for peace to one resigned more or less to war. We have been mesmerized to the point where peace is an item of wishful thinking, a vague hope entertained by children and dogs.

But that statement is still as true as it ever was, and it is more vital now that its truth be understood than it ever has been in the past. Peace IS everybody's job. And everybody means every individual, you and him and me.

Perhaps the point we're driving at is not too obvious to some. To make it more so, count the months since January . . . nine, ten: October, when school gets serious, and leaves begin to fall in driveways, and . . . when the Church turns its attention in a very special way to the rosary.

The rosary . . . a little circle of beads . . . the connecting link between peace and everyone. Peace is ours for the asking, for Mary has promised it to us. But we all must want it badly enough to ask, and we all must ask sincerely and repeatedly.

What better way could there be to approach Mary, to flee to Mary, than with her rosary twisted in our fingers? And what better time to begin than now, today, in the month especially set aside for devotion to the rosary?

Peace is everybody's job. And there is one sure way of getting it. It has been promised us, if we but ask. How can we hesitate?

Florence

by Paul Jannuzzo

Of all the cities visited on the pilgrimage to Rome, Florence was by far the most unique. No other city could compare with its distinctive Old World flavor that dates as far back as 500 B. C. The tightly formed Florentine pattern of streets and buildings has an ancient and musty odor about it which must be as old as its culture.

Tradition

During the day, the proud city of Florence is a busy leather, silver, and cameo market. But at night the streets are rapidly deserted and protective shutters, covering the entire fronts of the little shops, transform the city into an awesome monument with only the memories of time remaining. Florence is not a night-life city. But yet a few modern hotels that rise above the small shops provide ample enterainment for the night-life seekers. But such places hope to compete with the traditions and art of a Firenze that boasts a romantic past of Dante, Boccaccio, Michelangelo, Savonarola, Machiavelli and Galileo.

Strolling through the diametrically confused streets of Florence, the visitor may encounter monuments erected by the Medici family, amazing prizes in leather and cameos, white-garbed policemen, or the oldest remaining bridge in Florence, the Ponte Vecchio. The Ponte Vecchio (Old Bridge) was built in the fourteenth century, and under its arched passage can be found silver and goldsmith shops that line both side of the bridge.

Maria del Fiore

Situated in the center of the City of the Lily is the towering and magnificent Cathedral of Florence, Santa Maria del Fiore. Unfortunately, the interior does not equal the beautifully blended exterior of red, green and white. Nor, for that matter, does the fervence of the Italians seem to match the gorgeous exterior of the Cathedral. Santa Maria houses, among other works of art, Michelangelo's unfinished Pieta, the tragic masterpiece of the Lord's Descent from the Cross. Opposite the Cathedral is St. John's Baptistery with its renown doors of bronze. Two of the bronze doors depict scenes from the lives of Christ and the Baptist. The third and most famous door is called, "The Golden Gate of Paradise."

Precious mosaics in hard stones inside the Medici Chapel serve as a reminder of the wealth and sumptuousness that once was the Medici's. The Chapel consists of the Baroque Mausoleum of the Medici Grand Dukes, and the celebrated "New Sacristy" by Michelangelo. Florence with its fascinating history, culture, and captivating names like the Pitti Palace, Uffizi Galleries, Palazza Vecchio will not soon be forgotten by its visitors from Villanova.

FLICKERS

NO WAY OUT

This picture is one of the best of a current rash about the Negro problem. Heading the cast is Richard Widmark as Ray Biddle, a psychopathic, Negro hating, hoodlum. Widmark's one aim in the picture is to get even with Dr. Brooks, a Negro played by Sidney Poitier, who he believes has killed his brother while treating him for a gunshot wound. Aiding him, is his girl Linda Darnell, Edie, who foments a race riot. Brooks is cleared by an autopsy of the dead brother which further inflames Widmark. The movie reaches a climax as Ray, wounded in the leg, traps Brooks in the empty house of Dr. Wharton, Stephen McNally, and threatens to kill him.

Climax

D. E. Zanuck has done a superb job of directing this one. Using blunt language, he builds up the feeling of the idiocy of Negro hating on the part of Ray Biddle. Besides the Negro theme there is the terrific suspense of the plot that progresses to Widmark's facing the Negro doctor alone with a crazed look in his eyes and murder in his gun. A host of supporting actors both colored and Negro make this an above average picture; one that should be very timely, today with Negroes fighting in Korea.

CITY LIGHTS

Charlie Chaplin is back in a revival of his first full length comedy. Actually the word comedy is misleading for Chaplin as the little tramp is pathetic. Briefly the plot concerns itself with his befriending a blind girl. The meat of the story is contained in Chaplin's trying to pose as a millionaire and get money to pay the girl's rent and send her to Europe to have her eyes resored. When the girl returns to find what she has pictured to be a dashing millionaire, is a tramp, one of the most heart rending scenes that I have ever seen occurs.

Ageless

The fact that the movie is all silent does not detract for Chaplin is a master at pantomine. There are many hilarious scenes where Chaplin lives up to every bit of his reputation as a comic. Comedy without sound is very difficult for there can be no jokes, but the audience roared all through, proving that good mimicry has not age. We who are accustomed to sound may find lack of it strange at first; yet after the first few minutes the viewers of today enjoy it as well as the audiences of '31 must have.

This picture should make everyone have a lump in his throat at its conclusion. Chaplin, the greatest, makes you cry one minute and laugh the next. Every movie-goer, if normal, leaves City Light fully satisfied that he has seen a good show.

Frosh To Endure Trials Till Day Of Kentucky Game

"White Hats" Set Date of Freedom

A ray of sunshine broke through the hazy skies of the Orientation Period for Freshmen last week, when it was announced that the orientation would come to a close with the Kentucky football game at Franklin Field, October 21.

The number of Freshmen enrolled for the semester is considerably lower than the number of recent years. Neverthless, the Frosh are still a problem for the Orientation Committee. The committee stated following a recent meeting that it felt Frosh had been lax in wearing their "Regs."

To Enforce Rules

The White Hats promised the remaining weeks of the orientation period would see strict enforcement of Freshman Regulations. "Classroom Raids" will be employed by the committee to inspect Frosh for "Regs." Matriculation cards of delinquent Frosh will be seized. The first day of this new strictness saw the seizure of twenty-five matriculation cards, the committee reported.

BRENNAN NAMED AS JUNIOR PROM HEAD

With the announcement of Phil Brennan as Chairman of the Junior Prom, the Class of '52 is wasting no time in its plans for Junior Week. The Class Steering Committee has also appointed Bud Conklin, Chairman of Mothers Day; Kevin McCrane, Blazer Ball Chairman; and Stan Karminski, Dinner Dance Chairman.

Other men now holding the reins in various functions are: Bob Roland, Chairman of Publicity, Jack Kelly in charge of "Operation Yule", the St. John's Orphanage project; and Paul Pirhalla heads the Class Ring Committee.

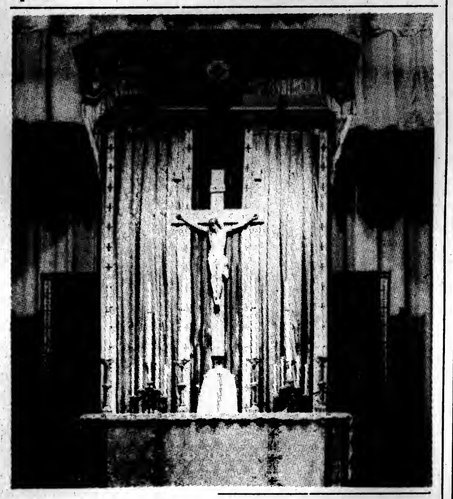
Junior Week Plans

Also presented by the Steering Committe was the tentative schedule for Junior Week. It is planned as follows: April 30th, Mothers Day; May 1st, Band Concert; May 2nd Blazer Ball; May 4th, Junior Prom; and May 5th, the Dinner Dance.

Soph Cotillion Moved To November Date

Sophomore Class President Paul Sollami made the official announcement last week that the Sophomore Cotillion will be held Friday evening, November 17.

Changing the dance to this date to the last weekend before the Thanksgiving recess is expected to make it easier on the students, Sophmores in particular, to attend and finance attendance to the big informal. The Field House will be the site of this first Sophomore social affair.



The "Villanovans" will provide the music for the dance, as tradition dictates. Other arrangements for the affair will be under way shortly. Chairmen have not been appointed to all committees as yet, but president Sollami is expected to do this shortly.

There will be an important meeting of the Sophmore Class on October 17th to discuss further plans for the dance. The place of this meeting has not yet been announced.

SPANISH CLUB MEETS

The Spanish Club, one of the most active organizations on campus, is once again planning a banner year of events. Under the capable direction of Father Lozano, moderator, and Jack Roesgen, president, the club will hold its first meeting Wednesday evening of this week in the C&F auditorium at 7:30 in the evening.

The group plans to present their annual play in Spanish near the end of November, but no date has been definitely set.

NEW ALTAR

The Chaplain's Office has acquired a new portable altar for use in the Field House. The new altar, technically known as a liturgical altar, was designed by Mr. Joseph E. Wilkias of Philadelphia.

The new Crucifix, six feet high, was carved by the Daparto Studios of New York City. The new cylindrical tabernacle bears the inscription: "Gift of the Class of 1949, Villanova College."

Campus Interviews on Cigarette Tests

Number 2...THE BLOW FISH

"Shucks—I blew in when I should've blown out!"

Pity the poor Piscis! He's been making all those trick cigarette tests you've been reading about! He's taken one puff of this brand — one sniff of that. A quick inhale of cigarette "A" — a fast exhale of cigarette "B" — and he's still confused! Seriously, isn't the sensible way to test a cigarette to smoke pack after pack, day after day?

That's the test Camel asks you to make — the 30-Day Mildness Test. Smoke Camels — and only Camels — regularly for 30 days. Your "T-Zone" (T for Throat and T for Taste) — is the real proving ground for any cigarette. After you've tried Camels as your regular smoke, you'll know why . . .

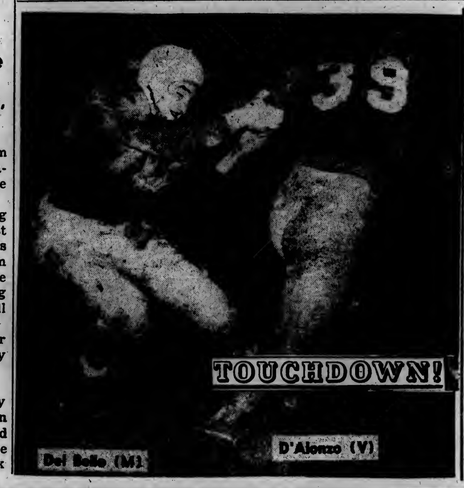
'Cats Out To Gain Revenge On Tulsa; Sunk By Miami 18-12 In Ocean Of Mud

D'Alonzo Scores Twice In Hard Fought Game

O'Boyle's Passing Outstanding, Smith Is Great for Victors

Rain, mud, and an inspired Miami team combined forces to hand a hard fighting Villanova squad an 18-12 defeat before 36,000 in the Orange Bog last Friday night.



Old man weather in the form of a week long pre-game downpour was probably the biggest single factor in the game's outcome. Villanova's lightning fast ground attack just couldn't seem to get underway. Yet Neil O'Boyle cracked the Hurricanes vaunted pass defense by connecting 12 out of 18 times with an extremely slippery ball for a 102 yard total.

The liquid sunshine also prevented either team from making a single conversion after any of the five touchdowns scored.

'Cats Strike First

Villanova drew first blood after Tony D'Alessio recovered a Miami fumble on their own 29. The Wildcats then clawed and scratched their way to the four. From there Wildbull Pete D'Alonzo crashed over to score. Haner's kick

Golden Hurricanes Strong In Early Season Showing

Oklahomans Lost Annex, Have Graves - Whitman Returning

For the second straight week the Villanova Wildcats haveto face the elements in their severest form as they journey out to the midlands to combt another Hurricane, this one being the Golden Hurricane from the University of Tulsa. Well do Wildcat players and rooters alike remember how this unheralded Golden Hurricane blew into Shibe Park last year and left in its wake a bewildered and defeated crew of Wildcats. That 21-19 loss turned out to be the only black mark on the Leonardmen's 1949 record.

Revenge to Spur Wildcats

Consequently it will be a determined band of Wildcats who will entrain for Tulsa this week; determined not only to avenge last year's lone defeat, but also to make up, in the form of an overwhelming victory, for the insult heaped on them by the Miami Hurricanes in last week's "water football"

To a certain extent conditions will be much different when the Mainliners and the Tulsans engage this year. For, while the Wildcats are admittedly weaker this year particularly in the line depth, The Golden Hurricane will present its strongest contingent since its pre-war days. As a result of five years of rebuilding effort, they are favored in most pre-season polls to cop the Missouri Valley Conference this year.

Annex is Gone

Coach Buddy Brothers has a truly veteran squad. Pete Annex, the wily Indian, who did most of the tomohawking last year, is gone, but Tommy Dickerson is expected to fill the quarterback post. Backfield lettermen include Dub Graves, Jake Roberts and the Whitman Brothers. Most of the pre-season raves concern a sophomore fullback, Howard Waugh, who starred in last week's Georgetown defeat. Coach Brothers' eyes really light up when he surveys his veteran line headed by Captain Jim Grahm at center and bolstered by Dave Rakestraw and Russ Frizzell, 220-pound tackles, guards Tom Alexander and Jim Launders, and end Fred Smith, a pass-catching whiz.

The Wildcats returned from Miami with only their prides injured and everybody is expected to be in shape for the game. It should be easy to get the boys up for the game considering the opponents' identity and it is only too apparent to Coach Leonard that the players will have to be in top mental condition. All in all it will be a tough contest.

In the Enemy Camp

By GEORGE SCANLON

TULSA

The Golden Hurricanes swept into the nation's capitol to smash a Georgetown eleven by a 21-7 count as Tulsa's scampering backs ran a game Hoya team into the ground. Tulsa's blistering ground attack paced by Howie Waugh accounted for their three scores, Gene Paglucia scored Georgetown's lone tally in the second quarter from the two yard line.

KENTUCKY

The Kentucky Wildcats continued their reign of terror at the expense of Dayton University who fell before the Cats 40-0. Kentucky unleashed a tremendous attack and coasted home remaining unscored upon and undefeated. In three games the Blue Grass boys have amassed eighty one points to their opponents nothing, and are rated inthe first 10 teams in the country.

GEORGETOWN

Georgetown has yet to taste victory and must face powerful Maryland this Saturday. The Hoya offense has been hampered thus far by sloppy ball handling. The Blue and Grey are faced with a tough list of opponents and must find themselves to salvage a few wins.

DETROIT

Detroit was belted out of the undefeated ranks Friday nite by University of Wichita who pulled a 21-13 upset. The Titans slate now stands at 2 wins and one loss. They hope to improve it as they face their traditional rival, Marquette, Friday night.

BOSTON COLLEGE

Heads are bowed in Beantown as Bee Cee was disgraced by Mississippi who rolled up a 54 to 0 pasting which is the worst defeat ever handed to the Eagles. In three contests the Eagles have only 7 points to show for their offensive efforts while their opponents have totaled up 89 markers. The Eagles will improve though, they are gaining experience and play their remaining seven games in their home grounds.

LOUISIANA STATE

L. S. U. fell before a high-powered Rice Institute 35-20, Rice's passing game was too much for the Bayoumen to counter. This week State must face Georgia Tech in what promises to be a bang up ball game.

DUQUESNE

The Dukes are still looking for a victory as they absorbed their third defeat at the hands of Boston University 21-7.

Villanova's opponents have won 12, lost 11 and tied twice, with Kentucky leading the pack with an impressive 4 and 0 record.

150's Preparing For Opener With Middies

WILDCAT HARRIERS FACE MEETS WITH NAVY; NYU SETON HALL

By TED FERNANDES

The first meet of the 1950-51 Wildcat Cross Country team is now history. Army defeated the Main Liners 38 to 17 at West Point on Sept. 29th.

The Cats have a good substantial squad, but sorely miss their great Olympic star, Browning Ross. The team has wide potentialities and a great deal can be expected from them in future meets.

One Senior

The mainstay of the Villanova team is George Thompson, a veteran senior. George has great talent and the know-how that goes hand in hand with victory. His running mates are good, there is no doubt about it, but they have yet to stand a real test. Thompson is the only senior on the squad, the rest of the material coming from the Junior class, including Bill Curran, who has seen some action; Larry Patturzo a definite possibility; Pete Simigan, and Art Klepper. The main problem is, can Thompson fill the swift shoes of the fabulous Browning Ross?

Navy Next

With the Cadet meet a thing of the past, the Villanovans are out to sink the Navy team on October 14th, Navy being the only team the Cats whipped last season. This lone victory was shattered, however, for Manhattan placed first in the triangular meet. Seton Hall is next on the agenda, October 21st at South Orange. The final contest will be on October 28 with NYU

Last Year's Champions Suffer Losses; McConville at Reins

By HARRY RANGE

Some fifty candidates for Villanova's 150 pound football team are now in their third week of practice in preparation for the Eastern Intercollegiate Football League opener with Navy on the 20th of this month.

Though hit hard by line losses, Coach Jack McConville has been giving the squad hard workouts, and he figures the Kittens to be in shape for the tough contest with the Middies. Last season the Navy handed the championship lightweights their only setback by a 28-13 count at Annapolis.

Formerly End Coach

Last season McConville served as end coach for Bud Kane as the former Wildcat star led the Kittens to their first EIFL pennant. In '48 the 150's hadn't won a game.

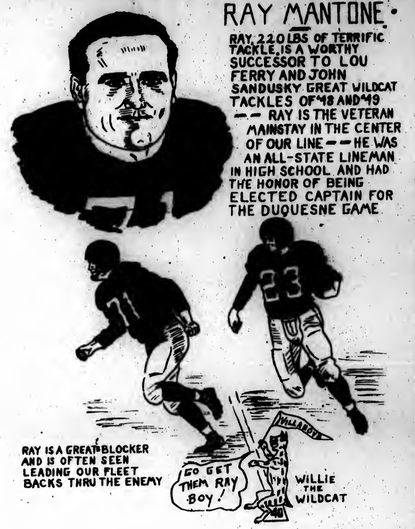
As in previous years the Kittens are well stocked with a wealth of talent in the backfield. Only loss was Quarterback Jimmy Moore, who has moved up to the varsity for punting duties.

Joe McCreary, speedy fullback who romped into paydirt 10 times in '49, is back along with burly halfback Charley Bottino, and veteran halves Frank Neri and Lou Maiero.

QB a Toss-Up

At present the quarterback post is a toss-up between Bill Lemmer and Ed Wolf. Last season Lemmer was used exclusively on the defense but could turn out to be another offensive standout.

Biggest loss in the forward wall was three-year captain and center, Bob Fitzmeyer. In each of his three campaigns Fitz was named as All-league pivot man.



Three men are now angling for the offensive center position, Jack Rowe, Frank Alter, and Ken Lowe. Rowe saw all his work on the defense last season; while Alter was used in a reserve offense post.

Ends Weak

Both defensive ends, Harry Rohlfing and Jack Loughlin, as well as offensive end Leo Schreiber, have been lost to the Kittens, and, according to Coach McConville, this will be the weakest point unless replacements can be found. Veteran Jim Gallo is the only holdover.

The tackles are comparatively

MILTON'S MADNESS

By "Milton" Keats

Well Brother Slim batted exactly .800 in his Pickins of last week. We Keats, being a fearless clan, pride ourselves on being right all the time so we have packed Brother Slim off to Allentown, never to be heard of again, and I, Brother Milton, will bear the family's standard this week. I hereby do decree that the following will do the following:

Army-Michigan. The Black Knights consider the Wolverines a bunch of North Koreans and will treat them accordingly.

Fordham - Boston College — Fordham all the way.

California - Southern California. Another victory for the North over the South.

Pennsylvania - Dartmouth — Pnn's back in their own league and will take this one.

Cornell - Harvard. Ho - Hum, Cornell.

Maryland-Georgetown Prayers will be said for the Hoyas.

Ga. Tech-L.S.U. The Bayou Tigers will feast on Engineers.

Ohio St.-Indiana. Ohio St. has too much.

Purdue-Miami. The Hurricanes will be blown out to sea by the red-hot Boilermakers.

Northwestern-Minnesota. Minnesota will win one yet but not this one.

Princeton - Navy The Tigers have a big submarine and will send Navy down for the third time.

No. Carolina-Wake Forest. A close one, with N. C. having a slight edge due to defense.

Notre Dame - Tulane. Mr. Leahy expects a close game so the score will not be more than N. D. 55, Tulane.

Texas-Oklahoma. A clash of Southwest titans with Texas to end Oklahoma's victory streak.

Stanford-Santa Clara. Stanford is headed for the Rose Bowl and the Broncos won't stop them.

Also Yale to tame the Columbia Lion, Georgia to down Miss. State, Illinois to bounce back against U.C.L.A., Vanderbilt to surprise Mississippi, and S.M.U. to make the Oklahoma Aggies sorry that they ever showed.

150's Football

strong with the only loss being Jim McCaughn, via the diploma route. George Strohlein and Jerry Battle stand out as dependable lineman with Jack Nugent and Bill Dwyer in reserve.

The guards will be filled by hold-overs Charley Laughlin, Tom Parisse, and Dolph Hoch but there will still be room for one or two good men.

Cross Country

affording the opposition. This will be the only meet held at home.

The Cats show tremendous endurance and as already has been stated, they definitely have the ability to come through with a fairly successful season. Off to a bad start with Army, an extremely good outfit, they may have better going with Navy but will meet rugged competition with the Seton Hallers. The '50 season cannot possibly be worse than the previous year, so there is only one direction in which they can go.

GRID

CONTEST
THINK YOU CAN BEAT THE EXPERTS?
A carton of Chesterfields will be given away to the one who knows his grid game better than the sports staff. Write out your selections and submit to Villanovan office on or before Friday of each week. Last week's winner—Jack Rowe

SPORT LIGHT

By BILL COONEY

When the Wildcats of Villanova used to take on the Black Knights of Army a few years back every loyal son of the Blue and White would bellow "Beat Army" until the farthest corner of Michie stadium would echo and reecho. The traditional unhappy result never semed to daunt the Villanovans, though, because they always had plenty of fervor for next year.

We doubt, however, if anyone them had more desire to win that ball game than every Wildcat player, student or just plain fan has to win this one with Tulsa. The Golden Hurricanes' shocking 21-19 upset of the Cats last year leaves a deep scar that needs erasing. In other words Tulsa has to be rubbed out.

While we were taking a quick look at the trophy case down at the Field House the other day, we noted that the two most current mementoes of Villanova prowess were conspicuous by their absence. Where, for instance, is the famous number 11 Jersey which Paul Arizin wore through many hoop campaigns? While it's true that even the great are one day forgotten, let's not hurry up the process by neglect. How about putting the shirt in there for Freshmen to gape at, and for upper classmen to recall one of the game's greatest.

The other blank spot in the display should rightfully belong to the Snavely Trophy, symbol of supremacy in the Eastern 150 pound football league. The Wild Kittens won it way back last season, and to our knowledge it has never been on display. Even some of the players themselves have never seen it. Considering the fact that the worst might happen, it could mean that some of the boys might never get to see the prize for which they struggled so hard.

While on the subject it may be a good idea to mention that the 150's open their athletic semester on Friday the 20th at Villanova stadium. Their first opponent will be the consistently strong Navy club. Last year the Kits bowed to the Middies 28-13, but went on to win the crown by virtue of their better record. Needless to say the sailors are howling for revenge.

The kittens will also provide most of the gridiron action around these parts this year. What with our traveling varsity putting into the home port but twice all season, the "small group" will satisfy the Mainline's football hunger with three home tilts and one with Penn in Philly. Besides Navy, they will meet Cornell and Rutgers at home. Everybody likes a winning club and a winning club needs a lot of support.

MIAMI GAME

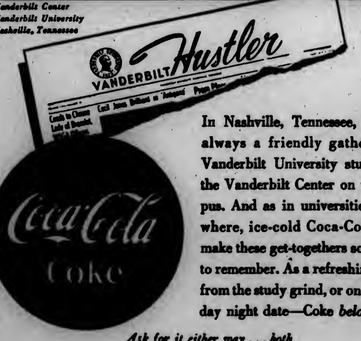
slithered off wide.

In the closing minutes of the first period the Hurricanes shifty litle quarterback Jack Hackett flipped a short pass to Bob Schneidenbach. The big boy with the bigger name almost made it, but was halted on the one by Dan Scott and Joe Till. Jack Del Bello actually dove over the slippery pile of players to score on his second try.

Miami Scores On Break

The Big Wind scored again in the second period. Villanova's captain Mickey Frinzi, forced to punt from his own end zone, couldn't get a good one off, and the 'Cones took it on the Mainliners 14. Smith scored from the one which was as far as Mike Vacchio could get.



O'Boyle Hits in the Air

The great second half started with a freak 3 yard kickoff by Miami. O'Boyle flipped to Rilo and Bogan for eight yards apiece. Frinzi went 15 more to the twelve. From there the Wildcats battered the Miami forward wall which finally crumbled as Big Pete again went for six points.

With the score tied the home team's Frank Smith went hog wild. Running like greased lighting he sparkled a drive which carried his team to the Villanova one. From there he blasted over.

Thrilling Final Bid

Then in the most thrilling moments of the game the fighting Wildcat squad drove all the way to the 2 foot line. With fourth down and less than a yard to go, 36,000 held 36,0000 breaths as Pete D'Alonzo charged he forward wall but there was no hole and he was stopped.

LCDR. ALEXANDER ASSIGNED TO NROTC AS EXEC. OFFICER

The NROTC Unit here at Villanova is welcoming aboard a new executive officer, Lieutenant Commander Alexander. Mr. Alexander is replacing Commander Nienstedt, who has left us to take command of a Landing Ship Dock.

LCDR. Alexander started his career as an Apprentice Seaman in 1938. He was sent to Northwestern College under the V-7 program where he received his commission in 1942. His Naval career has been interesting and varied. He served aboard such ships as the Arkansas, Essex, and the Belleau Wood. Aboard the Belleau Wood, one of the Navy's larger carriers Mr. Alexander saw much of the Pacific War from Baker Island and Okinawa to the Japanese surrender. It was also during the time he was aboard the carrier that she received the Presidential Unit Citation and eleven battle stars. Since then he has been to the General Line School and served as navigator on destroyers and the heavy cruiser Columbus.

Other additions to the staff are Chiefs, Roberts and Mineo; Sergeant DeSpegal; and Gunners Mate First Class Steere. These men will assist the officers in instructing Midshipmen.

PHYSICS CLUB

Rev. John J. Crawford, O.S.A., Moderator of the Physics Club, recently announced that elections for club officers would take place at the next meeting. Joe Tyszkiewicz who presided over the club last year appears to be an outstanding candidate for re-election.

THE LIBRARY CORNER

It's an old, old story, and a most common one, that the busman's holiday has no counterpart in the life of a student. We know from personal experience, and probably you do too, that in spite of the good promises we made last June about reading a lot of good books during the summer, things just didn't turn out that way. A daily glance at the sport page to see how the Yanks were doing, and a quick look at the latest short story Colliers had to offer, and the intellectual inner man was satisfied.

Well, that sort of thing is allowed for the student while he is a summertime day laborer, Navy officer, or drugstore clerk. But now we have returned to school, seeking knowledge on a full-time basis. And if we may paraphrase Scripture," . . . as students, we take on the things of students." Surely one of those things is books.

Making the Complete Man

With the return of the natives to this campus many old friendships from former years were renewed, and even more new acquaintances were struck up. To draw a parallel, these first few weeks of school are also the time for the student to get on reading terms with the books he has found useful for his course, and (to use a favorite library term) browse around in search of (another favorite) reading for pleasure and profit.

To come right down to facts, one can get a college education out of six or eight textbooks a semester, but that is about all. Reaching the ideal, and becoming not only a college graduate but also an educated man entails a familiarity with a certain amount of extra material. And even if you don't desire to be able to spout Horatian odes or read Chaucer in the raw, this outside reading will give you a better understanding of the things you are required to know as a holder of a degree.

During the next few weeks we'll introduce to you through this column some of the different departments that make things work so smoothly in the newest building on campus. But for now, here are a few suggestions we'll leave with you that may help your return to the habit of reading:

Men Without Faces—the inside workings of the Communist Party, written by Louis Budenz, the famous Communist who turned Catholic.

The Cardinal by Henry M. Robertson — If you haven't read this yet, you're behind the times, and won't have a thing to talk about at the next meeting of the Arts Fraternity.

John Adams and the American Revolution, by Catherine Bowen —something like work, but easy to read.

The Bump on Brannigan's Head, by Myles Connelly — Father O'Donnell recommends it.

Tony Pastor Plays For Annual Belle Air Ball

Kay Little, Vocalist, Blue Notes Work at Intermissions

Friday night George Smith and his crew of decorators will take lil ol' New Orleans and move it right into our own Field House. The occasion for this momentous operation is the Belle Air Ball presented by the Class of 1951.

The gay and danceable music of the much-in-demand maestro, Tony Pastor, will be featured against the gaudy background of the festive Mardi Gras.

Kay Little Featured

Charming Kay Little, the featured vocalist for the Pastor aggregation, will provide the night's warbling. Pastor's last visit to Villanova, when he played for the Junior Prom in 1949, proved him to be every bit the showman. The noted band leader has had a record of unbroken successes since his early days with Artie Shaw.

To add to the carnival spirit of the Senior Prom the perennial Blue Notes will take over the bandstand during Pastor's intermissions. The Blue Notes have

Fire Delays Opening Of Campus Radio Station

A testing day flash fire has temporarily delayed the initial broadcast of Radio Station WVIL. According to Bill Brenninghouse, WVIL's Program Manager, several vital parts of the station's costly equipment were destroyed therein.

When asked how long he thought it would take to make the necessary repairs, Brenninghouse declined to comment. He did say, however, that the staff is trying to enlist the aid of students talented in electronics to help remedy the derangements. He further indicated that no worthwhile offer will be turned down.

Sophs Meet To Plan Cotillion

To further plans for the forthcoming Sophomore Cotillion, the Class of 1953 will hold a class meeting in the Commerce and Finance Auditorium Wednesday, October 25th, at 7:15 P. M. The Cotillion is to be held November 17th.

President Paul Sollami announced that plans had been mapped for the affair at a meeting of the class steering committee last week.

All Sophs were urged to attend the meeting, as President Sollami pointed out that this is the social highlight of their year.

Band-Glee Club Presents Concert In Field House Tomorrow Night

Fr. Handran Conducts Evening's Program

The combined band-glee club will offer a concert to the student body tomorrow evening in the Field House as its contribution to the week of activities preceeding the Kentucky game. Under the direction of Rev. Ralph Handran, O.S.A., the group has planned present concert favorites as well as popular marches.

Glee Club's First Show

The concert will mark the first appearance of the newly expanded glee club. Miss Joan Barrett, of Immaculata, and Moe Green are scheduled to sing solos. The glee club's program will also include: "The March of the Musketers", "The Rosary", "Selections from the Red Mill" and a medley of College Songs.

New arrangements of our Alma Mater and the March of the Wildcats will be presented for the first time. These, procured from one of the nation's top arrangers, Paul Yoder, are a great improvement over the former versions.

Thanks to the acquisition of the arrangements, the band will be able to accompany the students in "College Days." The evening will close with the singing of old time favorites in which everyone will join with the band.

PLANNING FOR CONCERT

Fr. Handran, band and glee club conductor, talks over plans for concert tomorrow with Edgar Mueller and William Drolet, both of the glee club. The concert will be presented in the Field House.

Keystone State!

Give a cheer all you loyal Pennsylvanians. And all you adopted Keystoners, too. This is Pennsylvania Week, and a time for a hearty pat on the back for our native state.

You've probably heard a lot about this state-wide celebration. There's a tour of famous Pennsylvanians visiting every county of the state, clambakes, parades, and even Alexis Smith to add to the festivities.

We'd like to add the voice of Villanova to the acclaim. As one of the oldest educational institutions in the state, this school is certainly an integral part of the history of the Commonwealth.

So it's with the voice of an old-timer of these parts that we can say, "Congratulations to the Keystone State!"

Take Five . . .

Take five days in any ordinary school week, schedule spectacular activities on each of them, and what do you have? A week like the one we are spending now. Something different every day. Something exciting every day. Something to break up the humdrum of class schedules and give the students the opportunity the relax, and "take five."

The Forum tonight, Band Concert tomorrow. Thursday the pre-game rally and the Connelly Award. Senior Prom Friday. And a climax Saturday with a victorious (we hope) Kentucky game.

How about backing these activities? How about "taking five."

The Story Of A Bell

By Jim Gallagher

Any newsman will tell you that an ordinary happening just doesn't make the headlines. Ordinary people doing their ordinary jobs in an ordinarily reliable manner seldom gain fame in print. It's the old case of faithfulness going unrewarded, and it's ben true for years.

This maxim of the journalist was brought to our mind yesterday when Villanova's "Old College Bell" was placed on exhibition in the Library for Pennsylvania Week. The bell, and many other items concerned with the 108-year history of our college are now being displayed as a part of the statewide celebration.

Independence

Its story goes all the way back to the Revolutionary days, when, as a since disproven legend tells us, the famous Liberty Bell was rung so loudly in proclaiming the Declaration of Independence that it cracked. We have been led to believe that this happened from the vigor with which it was rung on this momentus occasion. And because of this it has risen to fame.

But there is more to the story than that.

Actually, in the belfry of the Philadelphia State House that day in 1776, there were two bells that rang together, announcing the proclamation of independence. The one that did crack, we know from the fame it incurred as the Liberty Bell. But about the other one, the one that did its job well, we hear little. It is this faithful courier that is now known to us at Villanova as the "Old College Bell."

The full story of this bell is traced in history back to 1753, when it was hung with the Liberty Bell in the tower of the State House. Ours proved to be the more durable one, and rang clear and true, announcing occasions of state for more than 75 years.

Sold

Repairs on the State House in 1830 included the removal of this public servant, and the city sold it to the builders of old Saint Augustine's Church in Philadelphia. Hard luck remained with this nearly-great bell, as evidenced by the fact that it almost came to its end 14 years later. The year 1844 was a time of religious uprisings in Philadelphia, and during one of these riots St. Augustine's Church was burned to the ground. Fire razed the belfry and when it tumbled to the ground the bell inside was shattered to pieces.

Recast

For many years it was thought that this had been the end of the bell. But we now know that the broken remnants were recast three years later, and the bell sent to ring atop the chapel at Villanova College.

Here it remained for seventy years, performing not the grandiose task of proclaiming liberty, but the more humble duty of tolling the hours of the day and the changes of classes. In the early 1900s the bell was transferred once more, this time to a new church, St. Nicholas of Tolentine, in Jamaica, N. Y. Still it had to perform the chores of any ordinary bell, but as this bell chimed the Angelus, never before had the prayer been sounded so well.

Miss Mary Jand Kuhn, secretary to the librarian, and student, Peter Meehan, look over the college bell sister to the Liberty bell, which will be on view in the library this week.

Mechanical Man?

By Jim Griffin

Have you ever watched a robot operate? Some can walk, sit, stand, pickup small objects, etc., all in much the same manner as a human might. In fact, it is very difficult to detect upon mere superficial observation any essential difference between a robot and a human. The pattern of operation is obviously much more complex in the human, but it is by no means obvious that it is carried out as a result of different causes.

But People Think

"But", you may object, "people can think for themselves, mold their surroundings. They have intellect and free will." True enough. And apparently people use these faculties continually, making judgements and acting upon them. But very often the same effect could be achieved by a mechanism. Even what seems to be decisions could as well be explained by instinct. Squirrels gather nuts, but that does not prove intellect or free will. And if human faculties go effectively unused, they might as well not exist, for to the same degree as they go unused, the person who fails to use them eliminates the difference between himself and a robot.

Only One Reason

There is one real point, and only one, which makes it necessary, or profitable, for men to have intellect and free will. That point is man's relation to God. Except that by means of intellect men can appreciate what they are and why they are, and that by free will they can take the steps such thoughts indicate, men might just as well be squirrels and gather nuts by instinct instead of intellect.

Therefore One End

But there is a God and we know him. If we are wise, therefore, we shall consider first purposes, and orientate our minds and wills to operate ideally with respect to God. Then and then alone are we justified in considering ourselves on a level above the robot, the automaton. He is the purpose for the very existence of these faculties; He, therefore, is the only logical end for their operation.

JUST A SIMPLE LAD

By Bill Brenninghouse

He's just a simple lad, enjoying the simple things in life. Oscar Twomp may be a college man but he's still a simple lad. Through his simpleness he was talked into buying a ticket to the Senior Prom. Now poor Oscar, being a simple lad, had never gone to a prom before so he knew little about the intricacies involved in such a matter. When he was finally convinced that he should ask a girl he began to get worried, for since he was a simple lad girls were much to complex for his simple mind.

The Choice

Girls, ah! There was Trudy Trompleman, the tea dance temptress and Matilda Munchausen, Miss Roseland of 1947 and Bridget McBridget, young intellectual. Oscar knew hundreds of girls. His final choice, so simple was he, was Matilda. Now Matilda is a sweet thing but her six years on the field hockey team have made her as tough as concrete and as hard as steel. Oscar was no match for her but he was just a simple lad.

Ready

The night of the Prom found Oscar just running over with excitement. He had decided to wear his brown tweed suit even though the sleeves were much longer than his arms. Just to be sporty he put on his orange huaraches and since it was formal wore his roommate's dress shirt, a green T-shirt compliments of USMC. To get that collegiate look he wore his regimental striped sox.

Matilda seemed surprised when he called for her. She was all decked out a dream of a gown, an off-the-back burlap job. The rest of the girls snickered when they saw Oscar but Matilda knew he was just a simple lad and they flitted out the door. Oscar suggested they take the short way across the tracks, a result of which they were nearly smeared by the Spirit of St. Louis.

The Entrance

Oscar's huaraches began to hurt him so Matilda carried him the last few yards to the gym. The men at the door didn't want to let Oscar into the dance but Matilda explained that he was just a simple lad and they finally relented. The decorations were beautiful, Frankie Fosdick and his Fourflushing Five played dreamy music and Oscar drank punch and nibbled cookies.

Calamity, Oh Well

Then it struck him. After looking around the gym he realized that he didn't belong there. He was out of place. He had pulled a fox pass. Why didn't someone tell him? Why didn't someone save him from this humiliation? Once again he looked around. It was true. He was the only one there without a bow tie. And he had tried so hard to do the right thing. But after all . . . he was just a simple lad.

By Ed Fesco

Everything about the theatre, especially the advent of a new play, involves so much showmanship — introductory announcements to the press, long and costly rehearsals, the elaborate ritual of first-night ceremonies, dress clothes and tiaras, aisle-acting and the expectant hush as the lights dim, the whispers fade and the curtain goes up. The die is cast. Another play has made its bid for renown or obscurity.

The critics, who, with pained expressions have been squirming in their seats, dash up the aisle as the last syllable of dialogue brings the curtain down.

Definition of a Critic

A critic, according to the classical definition, is one skilled in judging the qualities or merits of some class of things. A secondary definition is: one who judges captiously or with severity; one who censures or finds fault. Although the first definition is the ideal, the second seems to be the reality in many cases as far as theatrical critics are concerned.

Todays theatre critics have a tremendous influence on the production of new plays and they hold an almost absolute power over the success or failure of a new play. A few reviews "panning" a hopeful production is in many cases enough to doom it to failure and bankruptcy.

Stifling

This combination of the possibility of unfavorable reviews and the huge expense involved in producing a new play, stifles experimentation and any type of radical originality and tends to keep new plays conforming to definite prosaic trends established upon standard patterns. When an experimental gamble comes along, (i.e. — Saroyan's plays) reviewers are split. Some are devastating in their condemnation and others exuberantly enthusiastic. This paradox does not hold too well with the definition above, in that, if a play has definite merits they should be recognized as such by all or at least the great majority of the critics.

Blame the Public, Too

However, the critics are not all to blame. The public, that vast shadow that is the ultimate judge, at times relies on noted critics to a dangerous degree, and before the public gets a chance to judge a new play, it may have folded after three performances due to an indifferent or unobjective review.

Yet, like the umpire and the Un-American Activities Comm., the critic too, is an irksome necessity.

Note Well

This coming week, Philly will be literally bursting at the seams with worthy entertainment. The Opera, Philadelphia orchestra, plays, and an uncommonly good motion picture at the Trans-Lux.

SNEAK PREVIEW: The curtain will be raised on this week's Senior activities tomorrow night when FR. HANDRAN and his Musical Depreciation Clan move into the field house . . . Many Villanovans are going to take a field trip to the neighboring potter fields in order that they might watch composers turn over in their graves.

TONY PASTOR and his crew arrive Friday for their dance engagement with the Seniors and their drags—what a vocalist that man has . . . Rumor has it that she can sing TOO . . . The Mardi Gras theme appears to be very popular with the Class of '51 'cuz they used it for their Soph Cotillion in '48 . . . Don't be fooled by the curtain, gang, it is filled with polka-dots . . . The only jack that will remain 'round these parts is the one in the box which the Decoration Committee will use for a center piece.

The big games with the contingent from the hills will take place on Saturday . . . Confusion should reign supreme at half time with the Villanova Band and NROTC team competing with a 145-piece high school band from the Blue Grass State . . . Why don't the boys in the front offices get together?

FOOTBALL RALLY—REALLY: The Tulsa send-off was something of which the 'Cats can be proud, it certainly took long enough for the students to realize that the team is one of the most representative bodies in the school . . . Notre Dame up until last Wednesday had bigger turn-outs in defeat than Villanova had had at a send-off . . . The improvement was REALLY great—let's keep it up.

SMILIN' THRU: That rumor concerning the Army taking four-a-day has been a thorn in everyone's side . . . You can breathe again—it jes ain't so . . . DR. HARTMANN blushing after the announcement that the Missus presented him with another history major . . . The chef in the pie shop putting himself up for criticism by asking "May I help you?"

DANCE DANDIES: "She has a peaches and cream complexion —wet and fuzzy" . . . "He has beautiful hair—Yes, too bad that it's on his face instead of his head" . . . "It's the little things I like about her—her little home in the country, her little yacht, her little Cadillac, and her little bank account."

TELEVIEWING: JACK KELLY breaking into the television field with his characterizations on the "Stars In Your Eyes" program . . . Anyone with a four-inch screen missed half of the show . . . MOOSE MULLINS coming home with a pair of bloodshot eyes after watching his little fem go through her antics on banaza to barrooms . . . She didn't do too much acting—then again she doesn't have to be dramatically inclined . . . She was good but Dagmar still has the upper hand.

CAMPUS QUICKIES: The sober-faced man in the brown suit who keeps a vigil at the Mendel parking lot . . . Peno's successor being evicted from various classes for giving more intelligent answers than the stewdents . . . Freshmen looking skeptically at the barber shop apparently influenced by the rumors from the upper-classmen . . . These, of course, are true.

One of the books in the English Lit section of the Library has written on the title page "With the compliments of the author". Looks great, but the book is an edition of poems by William Wordsworth . . . An Arts man looking very quizzically at the DPM meeting poster on Mendel bulletin board. Date, and time were indicated, but the boys didn't say where the meeting was going to be.

Mr. Charles Moore Speaks On Aspect Of Selling

A speech on the "Emotional Aspect of Selling", by Mr. Charles Moore, Marketing Research Director of SKF Industries, high-lighted the initial meeting of the newly formed Marketing Association last Wednesday afternoon.

Mr. Guy Matteo, temporary president, addressed a short welcoming speech to all students, and then introduced Rev. William J. Gordon, O.S.A., the Moderator, who gave the Invocation.

Research Director Speaks

Mr. Langen G. Haynes, Research Director of S. W. Wilkerson & Associates, was then introduced and gave a brief talk on the relationship between student Marketing Clubs and the American Marketing Association. Mr. Haynes was quite influential in establishing this branch of the A. M. A. at Villanova College.

Speaking as an authority of 30 years experience, Mr. Moore told his audience of the diplomacy and enthusiasm needed in the field of selling. He also stressed the point of the buyer's self-interest, which the young salesman should definitely take into consideration when approaching a prospect for a possible sale. Mr. Moore continued by emphasizing the advantages of the Marketing field and also the thoughfulness that should be given to traveling when entering this vocation.

There will be a very important meeting of the Belle Air Yearbook Staff on Thursday, Oct. 19th at 4:30 P. M. in 215 Mendel. All members must attend.

Dieges And Clust Ring Chosen At Junior Meeting

In an overwhelming landslide, the Dieges and Clust class ring swept the voting of the Junior class Thursday night. With over fifty-five percent of the class in attendance, this major issue was decided by a vote of 243 to 13.

Final fittings for the ring will take place on Thursday and Friday of this week in the card room of Austin Lounge. They will begin at ten o'clock each morning.

President Tom Pascha chairmaned the meeting and introduced all the chairmen for the various Junior Week functions. He also presented the chairman of the Blazer committee, Harry Mason. With more organization in this department, the Juniors will be assured of early measurement and delivery of the Blazers.

The class Moderator, Rev. Gioralmi, O.S.A., spoke to the class in regard to the large turnout, and asked for a continuation of the enthusiasm shown at the meeting.

Pasha also congratulated the class for their show of interest and urged them to continue the show of spirit.

"Operation Yule," the St. John orphanage project, was outlined by it's chairman, Jack Kelly. The exceptional turnout insured the project to be a success. Setting the goal at $1,500, Kelly urged the utmost in cooperation from the class.

The dates for carrying out the operation are December 9, the Christmas outing for the orphans, and December 19, the Christmas party.

Spanish Club Plans For Activities Of The Year

"Spanish Night," "Cervantes Night," Topic of Talks

"Spanish Night" and "Cervantes Night" will again be the main features of the Spanish Club, announced Jack Roesgen, president, at the initial meeting last Wednesday. He also explained the aims of the club and its plans for the year.

All announcements were made in Spanish and then translated to English.

To Present Moderator's Play

Speaking in the C&F Auditorium, Roesgen explained that this year the Club, biggest on the campus with over 215 members, will present "Adelita Wishes To Learn English", written by Rev. Lorenzo Lozano, O.S.A., Moderator, on "Spanish Night". A dance will follow the play. Many prominent guests will attend. A glee club will sing Spanish songs, he said.

On "Cervantes Day", tentatively scheduled for April 22, at the Elks Club in Norristown, Pa. a medal and a diploma will be given to the student judged to have written the best prose in Spanish. The prizes have been donated by the Spanish Institute at Columbia with which the club is affiliated.

Club to Write Letters

Writing to students in Spanish-speaking countries, a campaign sponsored by the International Society of Spanish Students, is another activity of the club.

By participating in all these activities, the club hopes to promote a better cultural understanding of the Spanish people.

Louis Lamanna, winner of the diploma and medal last year, and Thomas Flynn, an active member, were nominated by Fr. Lozano for the positions of Secretary and Vice-president, respectively. Leon Kazmierzak is the Treasurer.

Meetings will be held once a month. Announcements will be made in the Villanovan and on the bulletin boards.

DELTA PI MU OPENS WITH TALKS BY THE PRES. & MODERATOR

Jack R. Muratori, president of the Delta Pi Mu, set forth at the initial meeting of the Arts Fraternity last Monday night plans for an exciting and fruitful year. Smokers, lectures, films, and a dinner-dance in the near future were some of the many planned activities for the forthcoming social and academic year.

After a welcoming talk on the part of the president, the Moderator, Rev. John E. Bresnahan, O.S.A., gave a short talk setting forth the aims and purposes by which the society operates.

Officers Introduced

Mr. Muratori then introduced the newly elected officers to the group. They are: David Hanlon, Vice President; Bernard Sheran, Recording Secretary; Dan O'Connel, Corresponding Secretary; Paul Jannuzzo, Treasurer; and Bob McRoberts as Student Council Representative.

Meeting Next Monday

The next meeting will be held October 23rd in the C & F auditorium at 7:30 P. M. The guest speaker is as yet unannounced, but the meeting will be in the nature of a smoker with refreshments and cigarettes. It is hoped that the attendance will be as large as at the initial meeting of the year.

ENGINEERS TAKE FIELD TRIP

Starting off on what they hope will be a successful year of activities, ASCE embarked on its first field trip of the season.

The trip was planned by the Engineers Club of Philadelphia and occurred last Tuesday afternoon. All students from Villanova who made the trip left by special bus.

The following were some of the interesting places which the group saw: The Queen Lane Water Treatment Plant, Wingohocking Rock Tunnel for relief of flash floods in Northeast Philadelphia along with the Frankford Creek Flood Control Project, the Walnut Lane Bridge, and the Northeast Philadelphia Sewage Treatment Works.

Before returning home, the students attended dinner as the guests of the Engineer's Club.

KENTUCKY TO SHOW STUFF ON SAT. FROSH WIN, 150's OPEN WITH NAVY

150's Battle Navy Friday

Sailors Will Be High Hurdle for Kittens

The Eastern Intercollegiate Champions of last year are winding up their preparations to play host to the Middies this Friday. Whether they will get Navy's goat is another matter.

One of the main reasons the Wild Kittens moved from last to first place last year, is their coach, Jack McConville. Jack has been working with his charges for four weeks, whipping them into shape. Alongside of him as assistants are Dominic Pedino, Backfield coach and Joe Restic, End Coach, both former varsity players. Their help has been invaluable to McConville.

This game may prove to the most difficult, if old records count, for we have not beaten Navy once since the league began in 1934. Last year it was Navy who gave us our only loss, drubbing us soundly 28-13. This year Navy will be out for revenge because, in spite of that loss, we went on to win the Eastern League Championship, which Navy had held three years previously.

A repeat championship can only come from an aggressive spirit, for the team lacks depth and experience. In spite of the excellent coaching, the spirit is not equal to that of last year. Men like Bob Fitzmeyer, a great player and inspiration to his fellow teammates, will be sorely missed. Bob was All-League center for three years, inspite of the injuries he suffered his last two years. In all, half the team was lost, six out of seven ends, four tackles and four guards.

The line as a whole is inexperienced, with the ends the weakest spots. Returning men who will form the backbone of the team are Jim Gallo the only end to return; George Strohlein, Gerry Battle, Jack Nugant, and Bill Dwyer, once again take over at tackles. At guards, a work horse is Tom Parise, with him Charlie Loughlin. At the center position are Jack Rowe and Frank Alter. New players who standout are Dick Miller and Joe Matton, at guards; Ken Lowe is in there fighting for the center position; Dominic Possilico and Bill Landis bolster up the ends, along with Gene Rosenquest.

The backfield seems to be in better shape with key veterans returning. At fullback is fleet Joe McCreary who should repeat his fine performance of last year. At left half, Charles Bottino, a hard pile driving runner, aiming for his last and best year. Lou Maeiro and Frank Neary are eyeing the other half. At quarterback, there is no proven material. Ed Wolf will see if he can hold off Bob Heller, who came out late, but shows promise of being a good passer. Bill Lemmer looks good for defensive

KIT'S TO TEE OFF ON NAVY FRIDAY

Here is the offensive backfield which will face a strong Middie team. The boys are shown getting the word on a little strategy designed to sink the sailors but good. From L. to R. are backs Neary, Bottino, Bolero and Wolf; Center Jack Rowe, Coach Dom Pendino and Halfback Lou Maiero.

Clash Of Wildcats To Be Held At Franklin Field

"Blue Grass Boys" Unbeaten in Five Games Feature Parilli in Aerial Offensive

By Bob Forsyth

This coming Saturday two cages will be borne into Franklin Field under the watchful eyes of thousands of anxious fans. At exactly 2:00 P. M. a whistle will be blown, the cage doors will be released, and two Wildcats will emerge to contend on the field of battle for the laurels of victory.

A close inspection of the two Wildcats will offer an interesting study. The one, indentifed by the Kentucky banner, will be proud and confident carrying into combat a string of five consecutive victories, none of which taxed him to the limit of his capabilities. The other, the underdog Villanova Wildcat, will be marked with the scars of two previous defeats, but, true to his name, will enter the contest ferocious, and determined to claw his haughty opponent into submission.

Thus will be the setting for this Saturday's forthcoming struggle between the Villanova and Kentucky Wildcats. From any angle Coach "Bear" Bryant's chargers have the edge. To date they have engaged in five contests, winning all with comparative ease. Only one team, Cincinnati, has managed to dent their defenses for a score. Ironically, Coach Bryant's chief concern about his club is the defense.

Parilli Key Threat

Any lack of concern Bryant has for his offense is justified for it is supplied most ably by the gifted right arm of Vito "Babe" Parilli. As a sophomore sensation, Parilli led the Southeast Conference in aerial offense last year, completing 54 percent of his tosses for 1,081 yards. This year Parilli has eclipsed his sophomore performances. In his last two games he has accounted for ten touchdowns, passing for nine and running one. Against Cincinnati he broke the Southeast Conference record for a single game by passing for 338 yards.

BABE PARILLI

Nor is Kentucky's offense limited to their versatile T quarterback. Hard runners like Bill Leskovar, Emory Clark and Co-Captain "Shorty" Jamerson give the Wildcats a well-rounded attack. The line is headed by one of the best tackles in the nation, Co-Captain Bob Gain, unanimous pre-season choice for All-American honors. Assisting Gain at the tackle posts are 200-pounders Bob Pope, Walt Yawarsky and Wendell Vance. The guard posts are manned by Pat James, Bill Wannamaker and sophomore sensation Gene Donalson while Doug Moseley and Bill Schaffnit anchor the line at center. Ben Zaranka, Dom Fucci and Al Bruno provide Parilli with able receivers at the end posts. In all Coach Bryant has a formidable array of linemen to supplement his backfield power.

FROSH BREEZE PAST NAVY PLEBES 38-19

A scrappy, hard fighting Villanova freshman team handed the Navy plebes a 38-19 licking last Saturday at Annapolis.

Scoring in ever period including a three touchdown orgy in the third quarter, the little Wildcats made a virtual track meet out of the tilt.

Individual scoring honors went to McNicholas, the rifle armed little quarterback, who heaved two touchdown passes, and went over on an sneak for the third. Both his scoring flips were to Addigeo, who also did a lot of fancy running on his own from the halfback position.

Grief Scores First

The Catlets drew first blood after flying down via a long pass to Addigeo which brought them to the Navy 46. Kenney came in and flipped a long one to Grief who scored.

The rest of the first period and most of the second featured a lot of hard play. The hard charging Villanova line several times broke up the sailors pass plays by nailing the qurterback way behind his line.

Navy finally clicked in that frame when Blackard threw to Fullam to score. With the score tied late in the first half the Frosh struck back when McNicholas heaved to Addigeo who went all the way.

Cats Regain Lead

Navy tied the score in the third period when Perkins ran 22 yards to score, but again the McNicholas - Addigeo combo clicked to put Villanova out front.

McNicholas scored again after a long Wildcat ground march, when he sneaked over from the two.

Again in the period Tortorella intercepted Blackard's pass to make still another Villanova touchdown. The final Cat score

Harriers Bow to Navy 22-33 Despite Win by Thompson

Navy, by taking seven of the first ten places, defeated the Villanova cross-country team 22-36 in a dual meet, last Saturday, at the Naval Academy campus.

The one bright spot for the Wildcat harriers was captain George Thompson's first place finish. Thompson took first spot honors with a timing of 22:08 over the four mile course. Pat Tacke, Tom Trout and Charles Cooke, all midshipmen, finished before. Art Klepper of the Wildcats who garnered fifth position. Navy took the next four places and Larry Paturzo, Jim Brown and Joe Buck were tenth, eleventh and twelfth, respectively.

The course, which circles the Annapolis grounds, was dry and good despite the recent bad weather.

Order of Finish

Thompson, George V.	22:08
Tacke, Pat, N.	22:16

Oklahomans' Power Too Much, as Cat's Revenge Try Fails

Fumbles, poor line play, lack of backfield coordination, a pass defense hardly worthy of the name, and a heads-up Tulsa club brought the Villanova eleven its second defeat of the 1950 campaign by a 27-7 count.

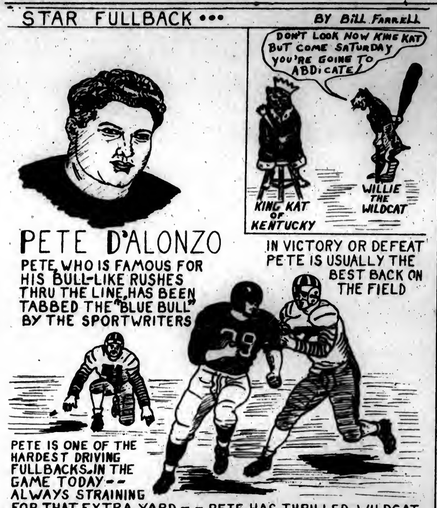
Only bright spots for Wildcat cans were the running of Villanova's All-American fullback, Pete D'Alonzo, and the final period touchdown pass from Bill Brannan to Soph halfback, Dick Bedesem.

D'Alonzo Great

In the defeat the "Blue Bull", D'Alonzo, played his usual great game, gaining 167 yards in 21 carries causing Tulsa Coach Buddy Brothers to remark after the game, "D'Alonzo's the best fullback I've seen this year."

Morris Paces Attack

Otherwise it was all Tulsa. With Ron Morris setting the pace with 16 passes in 22 attempts the Hurricane scored easily after eight minutes of the first period culminating a 78-yard touchdown drive.



With almost no Wildcat pass defense Morris was able to hit consistantly and Tulsa moved on to two more tallies in the second quarter. All of Cliff Boucher's conversions were true and at the end of the half the Golden Hurricane was ahead, 21-0.

Drove 79 Yards

Tulsa drove 79 years after the opening kickoff of the second half and would have scored had it not been for a fine tackle by safetyman Paul Tomko on the one.

Morris passed 34 yards to S. J. Whitman in the final period for their last score. Boucher's attempt for the extra point was

IN THE ENEMY CAMP

By GEORGE SCANLON

KENTUCKY

Wow!! That's the word which describes one of the top teams in the country, Kentucky's blazing Wildcats who continued their rampaging at the expense of a hapless Cincinnati eleven by a final tally of 40-7. It was Kaintuck's fifth straight as All-American Vito Parilli passed for 350 yards and five tee dees in the Blue Grass romp. Cincinnati had the honor of being the first team to penetrate the Wildcat's end zone this season.

GEORGETOWN

Georgetown's fighting Hoyas gave highly - touted Maryland quite a scare before falling to the Terps by a 25-14 margin. Frank Mattingly's magic arm and Gino Paglucia's hard runnings tabs Georgetown as being a tough ball club. The Hoys face Boston College this week in Beany Town.

DETROIT

Marquette put the skids under Detroit, Friday nite as they rolled to a 27-14 decision. Three Hilltopper's scores in the second period decided the fate of Detroit who now have a 2 and 2 record.

BOSTON COLLEGE

The once potent Boston College was trampled for the third time in this campaign by Fordham who had no trouble with a hapless Eagle eleven as the 26-6 final indicates. The lack of a quarterback and costly injuries has hamepered Denny Myer's charges this season. The Eagles have scored only 13 points in four encounters and are plagued with severe cases of fumbleitis.

LOUISIANA STATE

The big tough L. S. U. line, one of the nation's best is still looking for ball carriers to work behind them. Georgia Tech can be thankful for this condition as they edged out the Staters 13-0. It was L. S. U's third defeat and must face Georgia, Mississippi and Vandebilt on successive outings.

MIAMI

Purdue, the team who upset Notre Dame last week, were the victims of such a shock, being ably administered by the Miami Hurricanes. The exciting 20-14 win was paced by an elusive halfback named Frank Smith, a common name but far from a common runner. Purdue's brilliant attack was stifled by an alert Miami team whose victory has pushed the undefeated Rebels into the national spotlight.

150-LB. FOOTBALL

work. Doug Tibbets is one of the few new men in the backfield along with Ed McKnight, another unproven latecomer.

The team as a whole doesn't have the experience or the sharp spirit of last year's team. Excuses can't make up for sloppy playing; there is no substitute for victory. Whether Villanova beats Navy for the first time and goes on to win another leg of the Snavely Trophy, will depend on greater effort and spirit, especially in the line, for Navy continuous Champions of '46, '47 and '48, play a man's game.

TULSA GAME

blocked by Tony D'Alessio.

Villanova's only score was set up by a nice run back of a Tulsa punt by Wildcat halfback Joe Till which brought the ball to the Hurricane 23. From this point Brannan tossed to Bedesem for the touchdown. Bob Haner's conversion was good.

INTRAMURALS

Ed Mergens' running and Bob Beecott's brilliant passing were not enough last Wednesday as Good Counsel won a thrilling opener from Delury 6-0. The only score was credited to Paul Sollami on a sixty yard jaunt. The losers held the Counsellors without a first down while picking up three themselves, but were halted in the shadows of the goal-posts by the last-ditch defense of the Good Counsel line, led by Paul Markham.

The league this year is divided into two sections, — Austin and Mendel. Mr. Powers, director of I-M, expressed a desire for two Junior managers and a large number of Freshman managers. These jobs will continue through the basketball and softball seasons. Any student interested should apply to the I-M office 106 Alumni, as soon as possible.

A field-day between the Sophomores and Frosh is scheduled for Nov. 1. Among a number of events on the program are a tug-of-war, chariot race, and other novelty contests, topped off by a football game between the two classes. Each man will be allowed to compete in only one event, and the deadline for registration is October 29. Chairman for the Sophs is Paul Sollami, while the Frosh have not yet named theirs.

In preparation for the coming basketball season, tentatively opening November 6, an "Officials' Club" is being formed for the purpose of training students to handle more capably the refereeing chores. Managers of the cage teams are urged to start forming their clubs and to have a player list into the I-M office not later than November 2, along with a schedule of hours the team can play.

The next meeting of the I-M council is scheduled for Wednesday at 4:30.

Shrdlu's Selections

By "ETAOIN" KEATS

Picking at random we see that the wild men of Tennessee will tame the Alabams Tide.

Texas will bounce back from that Oklahoma affair by defeating Arkansas.

Army meets Harvard. Need we ask

Boston College will put Georgetown in the win column at last, while sinking deeper herself.

Princeton will continue on its merry way by slapping Brown black and blue.

California will do even better against Oregon State than they did against Penn.

The Reds along with his ten Blues will beam from the Inquirer next Sunday after the Columbia game.

Cornell will make old Yale blue.

Georgia like their engineering brethren will hold that LSU tiger.

Notre Dame should beat Indiana, but then you never know about these amateurs.

On again, off again Purdue will climb on Iowa.

Maryland will down North Carolina State in a good brawl.

The Miami powercane will blow poor B. U. right out to sea.

Michigan will be way up and league leading Wisconsin will go down.

Michigan State should do just as well against Marquette.

S. M. U. will continue to look good against Rice.

Tulsa over Detroit looks like a good pick to the boys in the composing room.

The now beaten sailors, didn't quit, however. Late in the fourth period Fiedler uncorked an 18-yard pass to Fullam who scored the final TD.

Attention Seniors

Because of the extremely poor response thus far, the deadline for the return of Senior History Forms for the 1951 Belle Air Yearbook has been extended until Wednesday, October 25, 1950. No further extension of the time limit will be granted and those members of the Senior Class who fail to return their forms to either the Chaplain's Office in Mendel Hall or to the Villanovan Office in the Basement of Commerce and Finance Building will forfeit the right to have record of their extra-curricular activities included in the 1951 Belle Air. Extra forms are available to seniors at both locations mentioned.

Salon Contest Planned

An art and photograph contest will be sponsored by the Villanova Library again this year in collaboration with Junior Week.

Prizes of ten dollars, five dollars, and honorable mention will be awarded for first, second, and third places, respectively, in each of three divisions: water color, oil color and photography.

Water and oil color division entries will be graded according to composition, color, consistency, line, infinity of interest, unity of expression, vitality, perspective, and consistency of context. Of course, these, lighting, and consistency of detail will enter into judging of photographic entries.

Subjects are to be limited to anything related to the campus, such as, buildings, grounds, personalities or activities. Only Villanova students are eligible, and all entries must be in before 4 P. M., April 23, 1951, in order to be displayed during Junior Week.

JUNIOR RING FITTINGS

Fittings for class rings will be taken by a representative of Dieges and Clust, Thursday and Friday in the card room of the Austin Lounge. All Juniors who want to order rings are requested to place their orders any time after 10 A. M. on the two days.

C. & F. FRAT HOLDS INITIAL MEETING

Delta Pi Epsilon, the Commerce and Finance fraternity, held it's inital meeting of the current school year last Tuesday evening in the C & F Auditorium with President Bill Knecht.

A special election was held to fill the vacancy caused by Vice-President-elect Pete Curley's call to active duty. Charles Root was named to the office getting the nod over Jerry Coston in a close contest.

Educational Union

Rev. William Gordon O. S. A., moderator, welcomes the members and stressed the point that inasmuch as it is a social group the fraternity is also an educational union. The moderator also named a tentative list of speakers for future meetings.

The various committees of the fraternity were formed for the opening semester and prior to adjournment cigarettes were distributed by Dave Jones, Camel representative on the campus.

tend to redouble their efforts toward solving the technical difficulties. "Until we have straightened out this mess," said Brenninghouse, "no organizational problems will be tackled."

Regarding wider reception, Brenninghouse agreed that it is a necessity if the station is to achieve popular and artistic success.

Rev. Louis A. Rongione, O. S. A. has replaced Rev. Ralph A. Handran, O. S. A. as moderator of the group. The mechanical failures of the apparatus alone have frustrated his plans for a full scale rejuvenation. Several members of the staff are familiar with Fr. Rongione's work at the Augustinian Academy at Staten Island, N. Y.

Seitchick Outlines Year's Work

The Pre - Med. Fraternity, Lambda Kappa Delta, held its first meeting of the year last week in 215 Mendel Plans for the continued publication of the Mendel Bulletin were discussed and members asked to contribute in any way to the publication. All other science majors were included in the appeal for help in contributing.

The first order of business consisted in introducing the officers or the coming year. They are: Murray Seitchik, president; Ed Fesco, vice president; Ed Brunner, secretary; and Neal Carter, treasurer.

Refreshments

The president then discussed plans for the coming year which included, speakers of interest, appointment of the initiation committee, and the replacement of the hoagie with something more suitable at frat meetings.

With a note of encouragement to the Mendel Bulletin, the meeting adjourned until the end of October when initiations will be held.

Jack-in-the-Box Centerpiece

In keeping with the Mardi Gras theme of the decorations, the Field House will be adorned with brilliantly colored, gay floats. All the colorful and weird characters to be found in the traditional New Orleans fantasy will appear in our own backyard. The Prom-trotters will be greeted as they enter the Mardi Gras by the immense, garnishly-attired, haughty Jack-in-the-Box which serves as a center piece.

ALUMNUS' SON DIES AFTER MASS AUTO ACCIDENT

Richard Lynch, 19, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. ("Squire") Lynch, of 18 Arthur Road, Rosemont, was killed last Thursday in an automobile accident at Yarmouth, Mass.

His father, a Villanova alumnus, is the popular owner of the Penn House at Penn Street and Lancaster Avenue in Bryn Mawr. He has been a familiar figure at all Villanova affairs and contests.

Students of Villanova wish to express their sympathy to Mr. and Mrs. Lynch on the unfortunate death of their son. Young Lynch was a Senior at St. John's Prep in Dancers, Mass.

Middies To March On Saturday

As an added feature to the Kentucky - Villanova football game this Saturday the Navy ROTC Unit of Villanova will march before the game. During the half-time their special drill team of the Unit will perform.

This is the second time that the Midshipmen have paraded in their blue uniforms at the football game that is held at Franklin Field each year.

The unit, 320 strong, will be led on the field by their Midshipman Commanding Officer, Gilbert C. Hazard. Midn. Hazard will also lead the drill team in their exhibition.

In their performance the Navy unit will march to the music of the Villanova Marching Band. The drill team, consisting of 36 men, has been practicing since the beginning of the semester for their special performance between halves of the game.

Camel Man

The R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. recently announced the appointment of David F. Jones as its representative for Camels cigarettes. He will cooperate directly with the cigarette company in the promotion of its product.

Mr. Jones was chosen from a group of applicants for the position. This appointment is good for the entire school year. The new represenative is a Junior in the Arts School.

STORY OF A BELL

During the College centennial eight years ago, the bell was restored to the campus by a former Villanova president, Rev. James Griffin, O.S.A., who was at the time pastor of the Jamica Church.

Since then it has been at Villanova in retirement and comparative seclusion, within the shadow of its more famous companion of earlier days, the Liberty Bell.

There you have the story. A famous bell, and a might-have-been famous one. The only difference was—a lucky break.

"Hasty Heart" In Rehearsal, Rowe To Star

Mary Leavy Plays Part of Nurse

For its first dramatic effort of the year, Belle Masque Dramatic Society will present "The Hasty Heart." The production has entered its third week of rehearsal, and the play will be held in the College Field House, November 19, 20 and 21.

The cast for "The Hasty Heart" includes a newcomer to the Belle Masque stage, Mary Leavy of The Jest and Gesture Club of Rosemont College, who plays the part of a nurse.

Veteran Players Starring

Former Belle Masque veterans appearing in the leading roles include: John Rowe who portrays the part of a Scotchman, Lachie, Robert Resnick as Tommy, William Brenninghouse as Digger, and John Gray as Kiwi. The newcomers in supporting roles include Gerald Guarch as the Colonel, James Clarkin as Yank, John Fitzgerald as the Orderly, and Armory Brunot as Blossom.

Modern Dress Play

The play is distinctly modern in dress and of a semi-comical nature. All of the action takes place in a southeast Asia British field hospital and is centered about the personage of Lachie, a Scotchman replete in kilt and bagpipes. Each member of the male cast provides an interesting character study and the humorous dialogue is designed to keep the play moving at a rapid pace.

In addition to their undertaking of "The Hasty Heart," Belle Masque is represented at Chestnut Hill as part of its dramatic group's fall play, "Pride and Prejudice." Belle Masque players participating in this production are Robert Resnick, in the leading role, supported by John Paul Kelly, John Gray,

Dean's List Has 480 Men, Three Get 4.0

Last semester's Honor Roll was the largest in three years. But it lists only three students as having attained the perfect average of 4.0(A).

Listing 480 as satisfying the minimum average of a 3.0(B), thus gaining the personal commendation of the Dean, the new Roll verifies college professors' opinion that students are beginning to pay more attention to their studies.

Topping the list are Robert Nix, Albert Impink and Richard Sullivan. The first semester's Honor Roll of last year also credited three students with perfect records but included only 385 names.

DELUREY DECORATION WON CONNELLY PRIZE

By George Ferguson

Thursday night's spirited pre-Kentucky game rally was highlighted by numerous fireworks, a contagious enthusiasm, and the presentation of the Connelly Award to Delurey Hall.

Featuring a miniature football field and other exhibits, Delurey was chosen after a closely matched contest with Fedigan and Simpson Halls.

Fedigan Takes Second

Fedigan took 2nd place with its original "Spill The Moonshiners" theme, while Simpson's colorful "Kentucky Falls" followed closely.

Favored by a balmy, starlit evening, the ceremonies got under way with a big torchlight parade around the campus. At the Field House, the assembled student body heard rousing speeches by Coach Jim Leonard and Alumni President Marty Gill.

Jim Clarkin as Yank in Belle Masque's fall production, "Hasty Hearts," speaks to Mary Leavy, the Nurse, as Jack Rowe, who plays Lackie, listens during rehearsals.

Fr. Sullivan New Arts Dean

NEW DEANS ARTS, EXTENSION SCHOOLS

Fr. Robert Sullivan, left, assumed his new post as Dean of the Arts and Science School as Fr. Edward McCarthy moved to his new task as Dean of the Extension Department.

Fr. McCarthy Now Heads Extension Departments

Changes in the Deans of Arts and Science and of Graduate Studies became effective yesterday under order from the College President, Rev. F. X. McGuire, O.S.A.

In a directive from the Office of the President, Rev. Robert M. Sullivan, O.S.A. was named Dean of Arts and Science, replacing Rev. Edward J. McCarthy, O.S.A., who has held the office for two years. Father Sullivan, in addition to performing the duties of Dean, will continue in his present capacity as the head of the English department.

Fr. McCarthy New Extension Dean

Father McCarthy was named in the same directive to succeed Rev. Joseph Bartley, O.S.A., as the Dean of Graduate Sudies and Co-ordinator of the Extension Division. Fr. Bartley had held the position for 20 years. He will continue to fill his campus job as Dean of Commerce and Finance.

Arts Dean an Oxford Grad

The new Arts and Science Dean is a graduate of Villanova, Class of 1930. He received his M.A. after three years of study at Catholic University, and has done graduate work at the University of Southern California. In 1947 Fr. Sullivan was awarded an M.A. from Oxford University in England. As Dean, he is locating his office in the Department of Arts and Science, 112 Mendel Hall.

"Man A Rational, Social Creature," Father Connell States At Forum

By Jim Glavin

"Man is a rational, social creature," said Father Francis J. Connell, opening speaker of the 1950-51 Villanova Forum.

Father Connell, speaking to a capacity Commerce and Finance Auditorium audience, stated that those six words form the basis of all Natural Law, completely covering it from a moral standpoint.

Father Connell, Dean of the School of Sacred Theology of Catholic University of America, pointed out that the term "rational" implies the points that a man is possessed of free will, that he is composed of body and soul, and that his soul should be accorded superiority over his body.

"Social," said Father Connell, is the part of the Natural Law that deems it necessary for man to behave at all times for the welfare of the society as a whole in contrast to himself as an individual.

The third key word in the definition of Natural Law, "creature," deals with the fact that man, a creature of God, is subservient to God. "Man," Father Connell continued, "has as his obligation the solemn duty of adoration and love of God."

Reason Shows Natural Law

A liberal translation of Natural Law, the speaker pointed out, could be termed as that which is "the norm between right and wrong, a norm that follows naturally from man's rational nature." Particular stress should be laid upon the fact that Natural Law is promulgated through human reason, and that every human with reason has a knowledge of right and wrong, it was pointed out.

"Conscience," continued Father Connell, "is an act of the human mind whereby we know that a certain act is good or evil."

The address came to a close as the speaker emphasized the fact that, "Natural Law is the only reasonable basis for rights."

Mr. Charles P. Bruderle, Forum Chairman, introduced the speaker and reminded the assemblage that a primary purpose of the forum was to supplement the sound Catholic education of Villanova students.

A Christmas Carol

By Jim Griffin

He was just standing there, watching, watching, watching the parade of Christmas shoppers go by. It was really a sad thing to see, because it was easy to tell that he wanted to be in that parade, right in it up to his neck, weighted down with bundles gaily trimmed in red and white, laughing with the crowd. But he couldn't.

Just Poor . .

It wasn't that he was shabby or dirty. But you could tell that he was very poor. His shoes were polished that day, but through the polish there showed the light marks of scuffs; and the neat patches in his pants spoke chapters about the close budget his family lived on.

Half-Wishing

And suddenly his family was there, from the oldest brother down to the very smallest. And all seemed to have much the same attitude as he. Watching, half-wishing, but not daring to wish all the way, lest they seem dissatisfied. For they were all happy enough, and they thanked God every day for all He had given them. It was just that . . .

College Man

And then a young fellow came along. He was a normal-looking person, just like you or me, comparatively well to do, but by no means wealthy. But he was so much like you and me that he noticed the little fellow, too. And he stopped.

Looking and Laughing

They talked for a few minutes together, and then the little boy smiled, and the pair of them walked through the revolving door together, laughing and looking, having a glorious time. And then another fellow like us came along, and he, too, took a little fellow by the hand, and off they went. And then came another, and another, and another. And they all joined the parade, and they looked at the trains and the bikes, and they even bought a few little things. They had lunch together, and some of them went to the movies.

The Party

And afterwards, oh afterwards! When everyone came back from down down, they all had a party. There were cookies and ice cream, and candy and cake for all the little boy's family. Then it was time to leave; the crowd was breaking up. One by one, the fellows were leaving. But they felt good ,for they had given freely to make some little children happy.

It's Happening Here

And the same thing is happening around here this week. A little boy with scuffed shoes and patched trousers is coming through the religion classes with a cardboard box. Make sure you feel good when it seems time to start home for Christmas. Give freely . . . to make some little children happy.

Our Stand

Three editions of this paper have been published this year and already the staff has met hordes of gripers. These people are troubled with the way the paper is written, managed and the freedom it is supposedly denied by the college.

Before we go too much further, let's get this straight. The VILLANOVAN is a college publication put out by students for students, alumni and friends. It is under the jurisdiction of the college.

The gripers make a hey-day of that, for the most part because they have to gripe about something. The way the VILLANOVAN operates doesn't concern them particularly, but that doesn't keep them from grousing about our lot.

Nor do they realize that the place for legitimate gripes is the student council meeting. It is the duty of that particular organization to voice the petitions of the students to the administration.

Furthermore, we like it here and when you like something you don't spend your time tearing it down. Even if we did have absolute freedom it is doubtful we would try to rip the place apart.

Villanova is a great place and has been good to us. Our policy, therefore, is to work the best we possibl ycan with the hand that feeds us and we possibly can with the hand that feeds us and sheep.

FLICKERS

By Crist

"The Glass Menagerie" currently playing down town is our vote for the best show of the week. With such actors as Jane Wyman, Kirk Douglas, Gertrude Lawrence, and Arthur Kennedy, playing superb dramatic portrayals, this movie has been hailed by the critics as an outstanding contender for the Academy Award. In this fine adaptation of Tennessee Williams prize play, Warner Brothers has made a very close translation from boards to screen. The performance of Gertrude Lawrence, alone, is justification for top movie honors. If this picture is any indication of things to come, this will be a fine movie-going year.

THE MAN IN THE MOON

By Bill Brenninghouse

One day, quite by accident, Oscar Twomp found himself on the moon. He was hit by an unrushing earth beam and carried with the speed of light to earth's glowing satelite. The earth beam came to a screeching halt on the outskirts of the capital city of Mooneapolis and Oscar was unceremoniously dumped into a tank of moonshine.

On the Moon

He managed to crawl out of the moonshine and start toward the city when he spied a group of odd looking animals. These creatures, which Oscar later learned were called Scramplof-fers, had four legs each of a different length, only one of which was long enough to reach the ground, and otherwise looked like the familiar hairy Abyssinian Oryx of earth. He climbed aboard one of these slow moving creatures and headed for the center of town.

Buzzing

Mooneapolis was buzzing with activity. Boys on street corners were singing, "In the Evening by the Earthlight" and "Earth over Moonami." There was a full earth beaming down from the sky above and the Music of Vaughn Moonroe and the Earthmaids floated throughout the city. The moongirls were attractive but since Oscar's Moonese was not too good he refrained from speaking to them.

A Profesor

As he turned a corner, he was suddenly accosted by an old gentleman who stopped him and greeted him in perfect English. At first Oscar was surprised but the old man explained that he had made a rocket trip to the moon in 1945 and has since been made professor of Astronomy at the University of Moonesota. The good professor showed him around the town and although he liked the moon said that he longed to return to earth. Oscar, too, was beginning to wonder about the difficult return trip.

A Ride Home

An answer to their problem appeared as if by magic. It seems that that very night a rocket was being launched to earth. Oscar and the professor hurried to the launching site and talked their way into a ride, the first interplanetary hitch-hikers. They both felt a sense of relief as the rocket neared earth and finally made a beautiful landing in a ditch on the campus of a well-known Main Line College.

THIRD ORDER

Laymen Numbered Among Augustinians

By Dave Jones

As everyone knows, the priests at Villanova are members of the Order of St. Augustine. They belong to the First Order, as do the lay brothers who work side by side with them. The Second Order is composed of religious sisters who do such great work in the world. There are, however, very few Augustianian nuns in this country.

The Third Order

The last, but no less important, division of the Augustianan Order is the Third Order. This group is composed of laymen who live in the world in close affiliation with the rest of the order.

In Canon Law they are known as Tertiaries, and are defined as: "A group of persons living in the world who strive to achieve Christian perfection under the guidance, and according to the spirit of some religious order in a manner compatible with secular life and according to approved rules."

History Shows

History shows that the idea of Third Order is an ancient one, and one which occupies by no means a small place in the minds of the Church. The Third Order in the past and present is an outstanding proof that the Church recognizes holiness wherever it may be, regardless of religious, social or economic rank.

Open to All

The Third Order is open to all laymen, and on campus is especially intended for students who wish to improve their spiritual lives. At Villanova the organization is in its third year.

MODERATOR, FR. EGAN

Humility

In no way can the Tertiaries be considered Pharisees. None of them assume a "holier than thou" attitude, since they strive constantly to develop humility. Some men on campus are leading excellent Catholic lives independent of any organized group. Others feel that membership in such a group is to them a great help in the salvation of their souls.

Christians

Many outside of the Third Order look upon it as a society of religious or semi-religious who live in the world. The group does seek to attain greater Christian perfection under the guidance of a moderator, who is a priest of the First Order. He directs their activities according to the spirit of the order, but in such a way that they will lead better lives as Catholic laymen, husbands, fathers and professional men. They seek to be Christians in the real sense of the word.

Mendel Bulletin Out Dec., Piazolla Heads Staff

First Appearance of Science Magazine Since War

Mendel Bulletin will see light on the campus shortly, possibly before the coming Christmas vacation according to Editor Mario Piazzolla. For the students, it will appear as a new publication, but for the faculty and alumni, its just a homecoming.

The last time the Mendel Bulletin was seen on the campus was in 1943. Publication was interrupted because of the war and now, after seven years it is coming out for the benefit of the Science students.

The publication is the oldest of any on campus except the Villanovan. It was founded by Rev. Joseph M. Dougherty, O.S.A., now a member of the College Board of Trustees.

A quarterly publication, the BULLETIN publishes articles concerning research by School of Science students. Circulation, according to Piazzola, will be about 1500, for the College and for mailing to medical schools in this country and abroad.

ASME MAKES PLANS FOR TRIPS, SMOKERS

Plans for two field trips and two smokers were discussed yesterday at the bi-monthly meeting of the campus chapter, American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

John J. Lopategui, student president, appointed a committee to arrange for the first smoker, which will be held on November 16. The first field trip will take place on the following day.

Power Plant Expert Speaking

The smoker program will include refreshments, entertainment, and a speaker prominent in the power plant field. The topic will be "The Arrangement and Design of Power Stations."

Other plans of the chapter include a field trip to Lancaster, Pa., where the members will tour the Armstrong Cork Co.

Members are also urged to attend the monthly meetings of the Engineers Club of Philadelphia. All students who hold membership in the college ASME chapter are eligible. The meetings give undergraduates an opportunity to meet high-ranking professional engineers, in and about Philadelphia.

Fulbright Scholarships

France, Greece, India, Iran, Italy, the Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, the Phillipines, Thailland, Turkey and the United Kingdom.

Fulbright awards will enable students in all fields of graduate work and those with specialized research projects to study in foreign institutions and universities under renowned professors and specialists. Grants also are available to students with records of accomplishment in such fields as music, art, architecture and drama. A few opportunities in workers' education and social work are provided in the United Kingdom.

The program is not operative in China or Korea. Pakistan is planned for future participation.

Grants are made under public Law 584 of the 79th Congress, which authorized the Department of State to use certain foreign currencies and credits acquired through the sale of surplus property abroad for programs of educational exchange with other nations. These exchanges were made by executive agreements between the countries.

Usual Grants for One Year

Grants are normally made for one academic year and generally include round trip transportation, expenses of a language refresher and orientation course abroad, tuition or a stipend, a living allowance and a small amount for necessary books and equipment. All grants under the Act are made in foreign currencies.

Interested students presently enrolled in Villanova should request applications forms at once from the Mendel Hall office of Rev. Edward M. Dwyer, O.S.A., Dean of the College, who is the Fulbright adviser on the campus. The closing date for applications is October 31, 1950.

Basic qualifications for eligibility are: United States Citizenship, a college degree or its equivalent at the time the award is to be taken up, a knowledge of the language of the country sufficient to carry on the proposed study, and good health.

Marchers Going To Georgetown And B.C.

Two trips to away games are slated for the marching Band during the current football season. Rev. Ralph Handran, O. S. A. moderator of the group has disclosed that the music makers will be "marching in Georgetown" next Friday night, and serenading the Hub City when Villanova plays Boston College on November 18.

Numbering 56 members this year, 16 of whom are men added through freshman enrollment, the marchers have pleased Fr. Handran with their two home performances at the Duquesne and Kentucky games.

Are You Tommy Dorsey?

His only complaint is that two good trombone players are lacking. The moderator has issued a call for "any potential Tommy Dorsey's in the student body" to see him as soon as possible.

The Marching Band is again this year under the direction of Mr. Paul Tiel, bandmaster. Lou Havens has also returned this year to twirl the baton as the drum major. Student manager is Bob Ginn.

After the Boston College trip the group will conclude its marching activities until after December when the concert season begins. Then they trade in their marching shoes for bandstands to go on tour of local college and other institutions. The schedule for the concert season is as yet unannounced.

Wildcats Beaten By Strong Kentucky; Set Sights For Georgetown Saturday

TOUGH GAME ON TAP AS RIVALS CLASH

By Bob Forsyth

Having completed their home schedule for this season the Villanova Wildcats take to the road this week, travelling to the nation's capital to meet the Georgetown Hoyas on Saturday afternoon.

After facing Kentucky the Mainliners must feel that the remainder of the schedule consists only of breathers. However an overall study of both the Wildcats and the Hoyas indicates that the forthcoming contest will have to be rated a toss-up. Both clubs have identical records of one win and three lost, and both expect to improve their records during the rest of the season. The game Saturday, therefore, will determine largely which team will succeed in this attempt.

Hoyas Improving

The Hoyas, in their second season under Coalh Bob Margarita, are coming along steadily this year. They lost their first three games to Penn State, Tulsa and Maryland, succumbing to the superior Maryland team only after a vicious struggle. Last week they posted their first victory at the expense of Boston College.

Coach Margarita has been faced this year with a huge rebuilding problem due to the loss of twenty lettermen from last year's squad. Fortunately some key veterans returned such as quarterback Frank Mattingly, end Bob Noppinger and tackle Bob Fortunato. The first two mentioned constitute Georgetown's dangerous passing attack. Returnin veteran backs are Tom Hardiman, Bugs Thompson and Warren McTague, while Jack O'Mahoney and Gino Pagluçia are the sophomores worth watching. The line, which is very much a question mark, is dependent to a great extent on the sophomore talent.

Wildcats Hope to Rebound

The Wildcats, meanwhile are out to snap their losing streak which has now reached three in a row. Actually no complaints can be registered against the Cats play last Saturday against mighty Kentucky. The Mainliners were outclassed by the Kentuckians, who rate as one of the nation's superior teams, but certainly not outfought and the statistics show that the game was much closer than the score. The deciding factor was, of course, the brilliant passing of Vito Parilli, who is All-American material and had to be just that last Saturday.

The spirited play of the whole line, particularly that of Nick Liotta, Tony Marallo and Bob Haner indicates that the team is coming back. Also the new offensive strategies Coach Leonard experimented with should give opposing coaches additional worries to go along with the problem of how to stop Pete D'Alonzo.

X-COUNTRY MEN FALL TO SETON HALL

The Wildcat cross-country team suffered its third straight defeat of the season last Wednesday when the Corsairs of Seton Hall downed them 21-34, in a meet held at the South Orange campus.

Kittens Drop Opener To Powerful Navy Team, 49-12

Middie Ground and Air Power Overwhelms 150's

By Bud Russo

Last Friday afternoon the Villanova Wildkittens fought Navy here and when the dust cleared, Navy had won again, 49-12.

A new team, like a ships needs to be "shaken down" and this was the Kittens big test. It wasn't till the last quarter that they came through. It was a tough break that the untried Kittens took the field against one of the top League contenders for the first game.

Villanova received first, Joe McCreary ran it back to the 31. Charlie Bottino opened the first play with a one yard gain. Frank Neary then took it to the 44, two plays later the home team fumbled.

Navy Scores Early

With Robinson calling signals for Navy, they crossed the goal in five plays with Cotton doing the honors. Knutson converted.

Bottino took the next kickoff to the 22. The Middies took over again on a fumble the next play and went 28 yards for another T.D., Knutson made it 14-0.

This kickoff was run back to the 34, where the Kits were stymied and Jim Moore kicked to the Navy's 40. Two plays later Robinson threw the first pass which then went all the way for another 6. Knutson was good again.

McCreary returned this kickoff for 17 yards. Then Bottino gained 9 to the 34, Maeiro gained two more and Moore kicked once again. The Middies started this drive on their own 40, and Cotton once again scored. Enter Knutson, exit Knutson, 28-0. The half ended with Villanova on Navy's 37-yard line.

Villanova Drive is Stopped

Bottino opened the second half with a kickoff that was run back by Navy to the 34. Navy was stopped when Joe Billera intercepted Robinson's pass. McCreary then lugged it to the 48. Jim Gallo caught one for eight more, Billera picked up another 4, and then Jim Gallo

D'Alonzo Sparkles in Loss, Parilli's Passes Provide Points

The powerful Kentucky Wildcats kept their victory skein intact by downing a scrappy but outplayed Villanova team 34-7 last Saturday at Franklin Field.

Both teams were up for the game; Kentucky to keep their unbeaten record intact, Villanova to deliver the punch that would add another upset in this season which features upsets every week. The Blue Grass Wildcats struck too hard and too quick for their Northern cousins. Even though Villanova put on a great defensive show in the second and third periods, the three rebel scores in the first decided the outcome early in the game.

D'Alonzo Hits Hard

Pete D'Alonzo provided most of the Villanova offensive action as he played his usual great game. The Blue Bull battered the Southerners for 102 yards in 21 carries, and scored the lone tally for the home team. Parilli of the Blue Grassers lived up to his reputation as expected, but he was forced to share the glory with Wilbur Jamerson who scored three, running from the halfback slot.

Kentucky lost no time in their attempt to wrap up the ball game. When Villanova had punted after the very first series of downs Parilli uncorked a long one to Ben Zaranka on the 15. From there they crashed to the two, and Jamerson went over from there.

Kentucky Lightning Strikes Twice

The second score came when Parilli's pass to Jemerson completed a 53-yard march down field. This drive featured a 20-yard run by Jemerson.

The Kentucky Cats were now roaring. After recovering a Villanova fumble on the Mainliner's 31 the Rebs drove to the 19. A 15-yard penalty against Villanova did more damage and set the stage for a sneak over the stripe by Parilli.

Villanova Checks Rebels

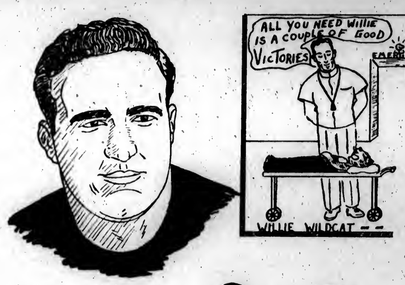
From this point on the Blue and White defense stiffened although their attack never did get under way. The half ended with the home team on the short end of a 20-0 count.

It was the end of the third quarter which told the tale in the fourth, however, Dick Martin intercepted O'Boyle's pass and ran to the 42. From there the Kaintucks steamrolled their way to the three just as the third frame ended.

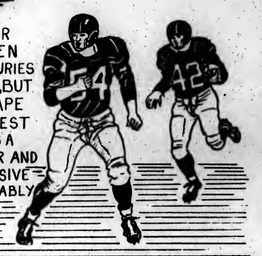
An interception by Wanamaker who ran all the way, was the last tally for the visitors.

Pete Goes Over

The Villanova Cats still tried desperately for that score. They gave their fellow felines a bad pushing around in the last period, and their break came when Teddy Oroski recovered a fumble on the visitors 24. After some nice line bashing by Big Pete, and a Brannan to Banas pass, the Cats were on the 5. A penalty put it on the one, and the Jersey Jolter became the second man to cross Kentucky's goal line this season.



HURRY UP TONY!



Leskovar of Kentucky goes on a jaunt with Marrolo in hot pursuit. Parrili is in the background; while up front Haner and Frinzi also chase Mr. L.

IN THE ENEMY CAMP

By George Scanlon

GEORGETOWN

After absorbing four consecutive defeats the Washington Hoya brought home a victory at the expense of Boston College. The Hoyas rallied for a 20-10 win, giving Bee Cee its fifth setback without a victory. Frank Mattingly's accurate passes paced Georgetown while the Eagles' Ed. Petela was a bright spot in the Beaneaters' attack.

DETROIT

The Titans of Detroit U. rose to great heights Saturday as they tied Tulsa, 13-13. The Golden Hurricanes were a three touchdown choice and favored to replace Detroit as leader of the Missouri Valley Conference. Tulsa was saved from defeat by Bob Royal's desperation passing as the Motor City's team played its best game thus far.

L. S. U.

Kenny Kony, a triple-threat, sparked the oft-beaten Louisiana State Tigers to a 13-13, Southeastern Conference football tie with undefeated Georgia Saturday nite. L. S. U. showed a hard charging line along with the sensational play of Kony who fell a foot short of the winning touchdown on the game's last play. Kony played sixty minutes of great football and would have scored on the final thrust but was completely exhausted.

ST. MARY'S

The Gaels of St. Mary's snapped back into the win column with a convincing 18-13 victory over favored Oregon. The Gaels have been an on-and-off team thus far this sean. Their attack is considered to be an aerial circus which will be tested by undefeated California this weekend.

MIAMI

The high-flying Miami Hurricanes swamped Boston U. by a 34-7 count before 36,000 in the Orange Bowl. Once again Miami was paced by Frank Smith's dazzling runs. The Southerners bring their 4-0 record north to face Pitt this Saturday.

The Wildcats' opponents have posted a total record of 21 wins, 20 losses and 3 ties. Kentucky and Miami lead the pack with 6 and 0 and 4 and 0 slates.

Football statistics compiled by the N. C. A. A. show Detroit 19th in the country for rushing offense and 10th in pass defense. Individual offensive records reveal that Smith of Tulsa is 17th in pass receiving, Pavilli of Kentucky is 7th in forward passing. Villanova's Blue Bull, Pete D'Alonzo is among the leaders in rushing with a six-yard plus average for each of his 85 carries.

picked still another out of the ozone that was good for 22 more. Here on the twenty the locals were stopped with a fifteen-yard penalty. Navy once again took over when the yardage wasn't made. The second play Smith went 58 yards for another 6 points. Knutson made it 35-0.

Navy kicked off, and then took over on the Villanova 37 when Moore wasn't able to get off an intended kick. The Middies lost possession when Miller recovered a fumble. However in three successive losses Villanova dropped 23 yards. Here Moore stepped in to kick again. Navy drove to the 23 where Robinson went around to score on a naked end run. Knutson pushed it to 42-0.

Two plays after Villanova received, Brunkhalter of Navy intercepted for another T.D. Knutson didn't miss. Villanova stood on the wrong end of a 49-0 score.

INTRAMURALS

A new Constitution and a scoring system were adopted at the Intra-mural Council meeting last Wednesday. The Constitution contains the duties of managers ,rules of eligibility, list of awards, and other pertinent matter. A copy of the I-M Handbook, containing the Constitution and scoring system, will be posted in each dorm. All students, particularly managers, should familiarize themselves with this handbook.

Varsity Players Eligible

Article II, Section3 states—"Members of a varsity squad shall not play on an Intramural team in that sport, or any other sport during that varsity season." This is to settle the question concerning the eligibility of varsity players. They are eligible during all seasons excepting the one in which they are on a varsity squad. This applies to members of a freshman squad or a J.-V. squad, also.

Champs Play Extra-Mural

Plans for games between the I-M champs of Villanova and the I-M champs of nearby colleges are being considered. It is stressed that these will be games between the intramural champions of the two schools, and will not be classed as inter-collegiate games. Penn, Swarthmore and West Chester are the teams tentatively lined up.

As many as six divisions of eight teams each are planned for this season's cage league, depending on the number of teams entered. This includs both resident and day-hop teams. At the end of the season, the divisional leaders will play off to decide the league champ. Managers may turn their team rosters into the I-M office (112 Alumni) any time before Nov. 3.

Calling All Freshman

Freshman field supervisors are urgently needed by the I-M Athletic Dept. The job will consist of taking care of the equipment and running the games one nite a week. Anyone interested should apply at the I-M office as soon as possible.

Soph-Frosh Meet

Plans for the Soph-Frosh field meet, scheduled for Nov. 1, at 2 o'clock, are complete. Bob Aissa (221 Alumni) has been appointed freshman manager, and the frosh should register with him for the events, which include a chariot race, tug of war, football passing and kicking, and many other contests, the finale of which will be an inter-class football game. Sophomores should register with Paul Sallomi (337 Good Counsel). C'mon Frosh, here's your chance to prove yourselves. Let's go all out and make this the best yet!

Fedigan Wins Third

The Fedigan gridders won their second and third straight last week, downing the Alumni All-Stars 12-7, and then taking the Mendelcases over the coals 25-0. For Fedigan it was Stefanik, Wright and Watson on the offense, and Big Cummin Clancy on defense. Tom Flynn chalked up the only tally for the All-Stars.

The Mendlecases bounced back into the win column the next day with a 0-0, 4-0 first down advantage win over Good Counsel. Dick Bohling's kicking kept the Counselors in their backyard all afternoon while the Baird to Healy pass combo picked up the decisive first downs. The Counselors featured some nice running by Tom Irish.

O'Dwyer also took a scoreless deadlock from Delurey, by a 5-3 F.D. route. And again passing was the method, as Dick James consistently hit Leo Schreiber. Father Dunne had some consolation, however, in the running of Heigl and Deister.

In a third deadlocked game, Simpson defeated Alumni Ramblers by outdowning them 5-4. The score was 6-6. Simpson scored when Knecht pitched a strike to DiJoe. The Ramblers tallied when Decker scampered the length of the field after confiscating a Simpson aerial. In a disputed game, Simpson won their second, taking a scoreless deadlock from Austin 3 F. D. to 2. The protest is being considered by the I-M council. The dispute arose when Austonion Jack Brosnan intercepted a pass and scored. The official ruled the ball dead before the interception.

In their first game, the Fire House 5&4 downed the Barracks 6-0, on a pass from Westhead to Bogarty. Except for that play, the Barracks played tight defensive ball, but just couldn't get their attack rolling.

KAY'S KORNER

By "W. Jay" Keats

Another of the Keats Klan tries to foresee the outcome of next week-end's gridiron capers in this issue. Gazing into our rather murky crystal ball, we came up with these results:

Army's Kaydets should have little trouble in brushing aside the clawless Lions of Columbia.

Alabama will smack down Mississippi State.

Boston College will still be looking for its first win after meeting Georgia.

California will continue on the royal road to the Rose Bowl, by an impressive triumph over non-conference opponent, St. Mary's.

Princeton will upset the Big Red of Cornell, who have failed to show ability on offense all season.

Yale will rebound from its first defeat by downing Holy Cross.

Kentucky will continue unbeaten by turning back Georgia Tech.

Lehigh, the surprise team of the state, will edge Rutgers to keep their slate clean.

More "Good-by Bernie" signs this week, after Michigan gives Minnesota a thorough going-over.

Penn's ex-water-boy will prove too much for Navy.

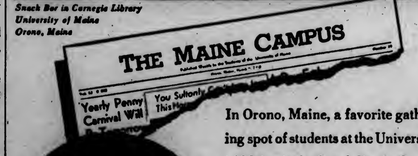
Northwestern will squeeze by Wisconsin in the key Big Ten battle of the week.

Michigan State will hand Notre Dame its second straight defeat.

Oklahoma will continue the longest current win streak among the college elevens, with a decisive win over weak Iowa State.

Temple should have enough to take Penn State into camp, but it will be very close.

Texas, by beating Rice, will keep its championship hopes alive in the tough Southwestern Conference.



Stanford and Washington are both on the rebound. Stanford should bounce higher and hand the Huskies their second loss.

Ohio State might find the going rough, but has enough to take Iowa.

The Panthers of Pitt meet the fired-up Miami team and become the Hurricanes fifth victim.

Coca-Cola Coke

In Orono, Maine, a favorite gathering spot of students at the University of Maine is the Snack Bar in Carnegie Library because it is a cheerful place—full of friendly collegiate atmosphere. And when the gang gathers around, ice-cold Coca-Cola gets the call. For here, as in college haunts everywhere—Coke belongs.

BETA GAMMA SPEAKS —

"Should We Set Up a World Organization Independent of Russia?" is the national debating topic as revealed at a recent meeting of Beta Gamma; Villanova's debating society. According to president Bill Creamer, ten new frosh members have shown interest in the plans for the coming year.

Rosemont and St. Joseph's College will be debated prior to the opening of the season in February. New members are urged to attend meetings held every Thursday.

Outing on Dec. 16

Probably the biggest event of the season for the orphans is the outing. Scheduled for Sat., Dec. 16, arrangements with downtown stores are in progress. Cooperation on the part of the department stores will enable the boys to do and see more throughout the day. The other phase of the project, the Christmas party, will take place on Dec. 19th.

St. John Orphanage houses a total of 432 boys. Of this number 411 are in grade school, 20 in high school, and one college student. Operation Yule is about the only Santa Claus known to these orphans. The project is one of the best of the Villanova Students, and deserves the help of every member of the student body. No matter how small the sacrifice, it will be received with appreciation.

NFCCS Holds Meeting Here This Sunday

Fleming Host as Regional Group Plans for Year

Revival of last year's successful Overseas Service Program will be discussed next Sunday on the Villanova campus at a Philadelphia region meeting of the National Federation of Catholic College Students.

Senior delegate Courtney Fleming expects representatives from the seven Catholic colleges of the Philadelphia area to take part in the discussion.

Last school year the NFCCS program sent large amounts of books and clothing, and $35,000 to displaced students in Europe. In its new campaign NFCCS expects to top last year's figures, and serve even more displaced students by its program.

Dance Planned

Raising money for displaced students, especially those escaped from Iron Curtain countries, is the main objective of NFCCS.

On the campus level, Villanova's NFCCS unit will again campaign to meet its contributions quota for the Overseas Service Program. Immediate plans for raising money call for a Friday night dance December 3, in the Field House.

Two Campus Executives

Rev. George McLaughlin, O.S.A., campus NFCCS moderator, has disclosed the appointments of two Villanova students to executive positions in the Philadelphia regional organization. Thomas P. Abrahams has been named publicity chairman, and LeRoy Kendall, chairman of the International Relations Committee.

The appointment of a General Chairman for the Sophomore Cotillion, and of the various committee chairmen for the dance highlighted the first meeting of the year for the class of 1953.

President Paul Sollami stated that the class steering committee had named Hubert Flaherty, an Arts student, as General Chairman of the Cotillion, to be held in the Field House, November 17.

Committees Selected

Committee chairman selected are: tickets—Daniel O'Connell and Harry Quigley; publicity—Jim Glavin; Entertainment — Al Hennessey and John O'Hara; Decorations — Ed Corini; Refreshments—Bob Radcliffe; and, Programs—Bob Landers.

Council Asks 3 Days More At Christmas

Two Regular Seats Found Empty

An addition of three days to the beginning of the Christmas vacation was proposed at the Oct. 23 meeting of the Student Council in 215 Mendel.

The proposal was made at the request of students who have planned to work during the Christmas holidays. Under the present plans the vacation would begin on Dec. 21. This, it was found, would prevent students from accepting many types of vacation employment.

Asking Dec. 18 Start

According to the plan being submitted for administration approval, the Yule holiday would begin on Dec. 18, a Monday. Under this plan students might leave the campus after their last class on Friday, Dec. 15, ten days before Christmas.

CHOW LINE ACTION

"It won't be long now," says the Student Council about the chow line. In response to student complaints against time being wasted while waiting in the chow line, the Council is taking disciplinary action against "line cutters". Beginning today, three members of the Council will check on the line, and report names of line crashers to the Council. Don't say we didn't warn you.

OPERATION YULE IS REACHING HIGHER

Donations Below Par

Kelly Asks Aid From Parents and Friends

Operation Yule, Villanova's Christmas present to the orphans of St. Johns, pushed its Pie Shop rocket higher this week. With religion class collections continuing, the project is moving toward its goal of $1500.

Although contributions were more than one hundred dollars below par after the first four days of collections, the committee feels that the students will come through with the required amount.

Donation Blank on Page 8

Although the goal set by Chairman John Kelly seems high, he assures that every cent of it is needed to make the program a success. His plans call for a bigger and better party for the orphans. Funds for the project are being solicited from the students, from interested individuals, and from friends of Villanova by the subscription blank on page 8 of this paper.

One of the largest expenditures on Operation Yule is the purchasing of Christmas presents for the orphans. For each boy of grade school age, a gift with a one dollar value is being given. To each high school student, a present worth five dollars is presented. The 411 grade school children, and 20 high school students account for a gift expense at $511.

CHAIRMAN for Operation Yule, JACK KELLY, is the man responsible for getting the money together for the Christmas party at St. John's.

Party Set for Dec. 19

The Christmas party for the boys is the other big expense. Scheduled for the 19th of December this year, it promises to be a big event for the orphans. Everything to satisfy a "sweet tooth" will be on hand. Such things as candy, cookies, sandwiches, soda, ice cream, pretzels, will be made available to the orphans. The food will be supplemented by an entertainment program put on by Villanova students.

With any remaining money, the committee plans to buy items of clothing for the boys. Such necessities as gloves, hats, scarves, will be purchased for the orphans.

The amount asked is little in comparison to the amount needed. Any small sacrifice on the part of the students will not go unappreciated, Kelly said.

Frosh Orientation Lifts As Class Discards Dinks

Fr. Tuohy Pleased at Results of Work

With the end of the Freshman Orientation last week, Rev. John Tuohy, O.S.A., Dean of Freshmen, stated: "The boys were as co-operative as could be expected."

Fr. Tuohy, who is quite pleased with the freshman class, said "The freshmen showed good spirit and have a good conduct record. However, they are not participating in enough extra-curricula activities. It is through these clubs and social organizations that they will meet other people and make themselves known."

Watch Bulletin Boards

The Dean of Freshmen also stressed the importance of watching the bulletin boards daily. "This is important and is a good habit to get into," he said.

"Things are looking brighter for the boys boarding off campus," added Fr. Tuohy. "All of them should be on campus by the end of the year."

Strange as it seems, dozens of newly initiated students recently interviewed do not want any

Annual Football Banquet To Be Held At Ben Franklin

W. E. Schubert Jr. '42 Chairman, Dec. 11

The Villanova Club of Philadelphia will honor the varsity football squad at its 29th annual football banquet on Monday, Dec. 11. According to Chairman William E. Schubert, Jr., '42, the banquet will be held this year at the Benjamin Franklin Hotel.

900 Expected to Attend

Schubert, anticipating the largest attendance in the history of the banquet, has arranged to accommodate 900 guests. Tickets, he said, are $6 each, and may be purchased at the price of $60 for a table seating ten guests.

At least 15 percent of the table space is being reserved for alumni and friends from outside the metropolitan Philadelphia area. The chairman pointed out that a new plan has been inaugurated this year to urge alumni groups throughout the country to sponsor one or more students from their area as club representatives at the banquet.

The chairman said that the following committee has been named for the banquet: Charles B. O'Connor, Jr., '38, program; George Haggerty, '40, tickets; James Haughton, '41; publicity; M. A. Flick, '34, entertainment, and Atty. James Lyons, '38, patrons.

Ticket reservations are now being accepted by class captains and at the office of the college alumni secretary.

Spirit . . .

Saturday the hard pressed Wildcat eleven held a favored Georgetown squad in the closing minutes to pull out their first victory since the Duquesne game. The Leonardmen went into the game with three consecutive defeats against them. It looked for a while as if they were to fall the fourth time. The Hoyas hit pay dirt after eleven minutes of the first quarter.

The fight exhibited by the team when up against some of the best in the country has been superb. But we have been more impressed by the spirit of the Villanova students even in defeat. We were proud to see the backing and to hear the applause both at Franklin Field and at Griffith Stadium in the past two weeks.

Anyone can root for the undefeated, the champion. But they deserve credit who can stand up and cheer for the team in defeat. Keep it up. The team will need plenty of support in the weeks to come.

Answer, Please

Life magazine doesn't often go out of its way to make friends. In fact, it more often prints articles just to stir up controversy.

Perhaps that was the purpose of last Friday's spread on the Assumption dogma. But at any rate, it was well done by an ardent Catholic and a good journalist, Graham Greene. We recommend it to you.

Of course, for Catholics the dogma bears no controvery. But surely we will be called upon to defend it by others who don't accept the teachings of the Church. When the London Protestant Alliance challenges the Pope on the dogma, your own non-Catholic friends will certainly feel free to question you. Let's hope you know the answers.

Mary's Bodily Glorification

ATTENTION: MR. KINSEY

Villanova College joins with the Universal Church in thanksgiving for the public honor rendered Mary the Mother of God and of mankind. Tomorrow, the feast of All Saints, in a ceremony of unprecedented solemnity His Holiness, Pope Pius XII, will proclaim the dogma of the corporeal Assumption of the Virgin Mary into heaven. This important pronouncement has attracted international attention and has been given generous space in the news periodicals of the world. It has provoked discussion that has circled the globe. Proof that faith and theology are still of paramount importance in the lives of men.

In Defense Veritatis

History will record tomorrow's promulgation as one of the greatest events of the century. The doctrine about to be proclaimed was publicly declared at least as far back as the year 451 A.D. when the ecclesiastical council of Chalcedon asserted it as a fact of Our Lady's life. On November the first when the pontiff announces the doctrine of Mary's Assumption he will be merely formulating in definite theological language a belief which has always been part of Catholic tradition. Just recently the distinguished English Protestant theologian, Dr. E. L. Mascall, in a letter to the Anglican Weekly, the Guardian, takes issue with the Anglican Archbishops of Canterbury and York who object to the definition of the dogma. The English Doctor pointed out that the belief has been held hundreds of years in both the West and the East of Christendom, even by those Churches in the East that severed union with Rome. It is impossible, the Protestant Divine continues, that the Holy Spirit should have allowed a universal error in Christendom for hundreds of years.

Not An Addition

The public pronouncement of the dogma tomorrow will add nothing new to the Deposit of Faith. It is a truism to say that the continent of America existed long before it was "discovered" by the fifteenth century navigator. Water had all its attributes before it was "discovered" by the student in the laboratory. The Holy Father defines the dogma tomorrow so that we should see more clearly.

Good For Our Age

The papal definition is timely. It will help counteract the cheap price placed on the human body in our atomic age. The emphasis on the bodily Assumption of the Mother of God will cause us to be more reverent to the human flesh that we share in common with the Virgin Mary. The Assumption of Mary's pure body challenges the Catholic gentleman to increase his reverence for the body of woman. The papal promulgation will combat and tell the lie to such exaggerated and unduly publicized reports as that of Dr. Alfred Kinsey.

November 1, 1950!

by Jim Griffin

"And a great sign appeared in heaven: A woman clothed with the sun, and the moon under her feet, and on her head a crown of twelve stars . . ." (Apocalypse, VB).

It must have been a beautiful day. Possibly it was springtime wnen the sun was yellow in the sky, and the grass was getting green on the meadows. How could it have been otherwise? For Mary was being called . . . to eternity, to her God and her Son.

Behind Her . . .

Mary, the Virgin Mother, the chosen one of all humanity, the single unstained soul in all of time, was leaving the earth. She was leaving the scenes of her birth and her childhood, the scene where the angel came and spoke to her, or where she brought into the world a little child. She was leaving the streets and roads that led through His lifetime, through the countryside of Judea and Gallilee . . . from Bethlehem to Jerusalem, and to Calvary.

And Ahead

But she was looking forward. For her departure was to be her reunion; the end of her time, the beginning of her eternity. And her beloved Son was waiting . . . to welcome her to the place prepared for her; to crown her, Queen of Angels and of Men.

The Assumption

So it must have been a beautiful day. For God was sending His angels for His mother. And they came, and they carried her away, from life to life. There was no need for a grave; the soul had remained uncorrupted, the body should also. And so the angels. They bore her up, and they took her to heaven.

Ex-Cathedra

We have always believed in the Assumption. But until now, it was never strictly defined as a doctrine of belief. On November 1st, the Pope will define it ex cathedra, with the full authority of his Papal infallibility. That day then should be a very special day for all of us; for Mary is our Mother and our Queen.

Let Us Lift Up Our Hearts

Let us then join with the whole of the Church in celebrating this occasion. Let us lift up our hearts with joy, and with gratitude, to God, who so mercifully created Mary, so that his own Son might work our salvation. And let us lift up our hearts full of love, to Mary, for that is what she most wants of us.

As Little Children

Let us be humble, for she herself was humble. Let us be sincere, for her son loved sincerity. Let us ask her for our needs, for she wants to answer our requests. And let us be childlike, for we are her children.

"Lady, smile upon us."

RAH! RAH!

by Bill Brenninghouse

What happens on Fall Saturday afternoons? Everybody plays, watches listens to, and talks about football. Screaming radio announcers scream, teeming mobs of fans teem and all is confusion. Every magazine has its All-American team. This column has picked for its contribution, the player of the year. That player of players that star of stars, that man among men is none other than Oscar "Reds" Twompnell.

Big Season

It was by a strange quirk of fate that Reds became a varsity player at Nepp U. As a freshman waterboy he was caught in a two-platoon shuffle and scored three touchdowns with a water bucket jammed over his head. In his sophomore year Reds was picked on seven All-American teams. Grantland Corum called him the greatest halfback since Gipp. He was hailed as the find of the year. He was injured on the opening kick-off of the first game, stepping in a gopher hole in the middle of Finklin Field, and didn't play any more that season.

Records Fall

In his final two years at Nepp, Twompnell broke every record in the book. He scored more touchdowns, completed more passes, made more fumbles, and drank more water than any other player on the team. He amassed a grand total of 2009 yards in penalties for the team.

And Even More

Too much cannot be said about this athlete. Versatility was his keynote. He could play quarterback, halfback, or fullback depending on who carried the ball on each play. He was the originator of the "give and go" school. "Give me the ball and go to blazes," was his motto. As a quarterback, he was known as the sneakiest quarterback in the country. This was due, no doubt, to his night practice sessions at Finklin Field. His kicking was exceptional, as attested to by conferences referees who were forced to eject him from every game.

His Family
